Campaigning in Samar. With the exception of a small part of the island of Samar the ground is en-tirely covered with a dense jungle, which it is next to impossible to penetrate, says a Manila newspaper. The trails lead off fairly and after a few miles end in a blank wall of jungle, which is so matted that it takes hours for the soldiers to cut a trail wide enough for the passage of a single man at a time. What the natives call trails in the moun-tains are simply paths almost entirely what the natives can take almost entirely covered with jungle grass, rattan and bamboo, through which the hardy moun-taincers force their way with ease, while the more encumbered and less accusned white soldier cannot get through at all.

VIRGINIA. Richmond, Va., Nov. 6.—Latest returns do not alter materially the election figures sent out last night. The most conserva-tive estimates place the Democratic ma-jority on the state ticket at about 25.-000. The indications are that the Re-publicans have elected 1 senator and 14 members of the House. GAME A NATIONAL QUESTION.

Preservation Difficult Because State Laws Conflict.

The interdependence of states in the matter of game laws may be illustrated by one or two examples. The new Eng-land states, without exception, protect the robin, but their efforts can never pro-duce the best results so long as the bird is treated as game during its winter sojourn in the South and killed for market. Eastern cities now obtain their supplies of quail, prairie chickens and other game of quail, prairie chickens and other game very largely from the distant states in the West. Nebraska finds that her quail are being rapidly killed off to supply the markets of Philadelphia and other East-ern cities, and, for her own protection, prohibits the shipment of birds from the state, while Pennsylvania, finding her supply of quail entirely inadequate to meet the local demand, declares that birds taken within the state shall not be sold at any time.

The Philadelphia game dealers contend that this law cannot restrict sales of game brought in from other states, and game brought in from other states, and accordingly supply their customers, in season and out, with imported qual kept in cold storage. High prices stimulate their agents in Nebraska to evade the shipping law, and their country corre-spondents in Pennsylvania to ignore the local law; and the native birds when placed on sale cannot be distinguished from those imported. Game preservation in Pennsylvania thus becomes doubly dif-ficult. Under the operation of non-export laws the supply of quail from the West is diminshed, prices naturally rise, and a premium is placed on the destruction of native birds. Unless the state can en-force the law with respect to imported game she cannot effectually protect her game she cannot effectually protect her own birds .- Leslie's Weekly.
