No movement now visibly in progress among us is so significant, none so fraught with such momentous issues, as the triumphant advance of the Americaus to the first place among the leading The Nincteenth century was the century of the British empire; the Twentieth is the century of the American republic. The headship of the English-speaking world passed with the century from the older to the younger branch. When the last coronation took place the headship of John Bull was uncontested and uncontested by the property of and uncontestable. Next year will wit-ness the coronation of the first British sovereign who has ascended the throne since the primacy of the English-speak-ing race passed from its hereditary to its

The full import of this shifting of the center of international gravity is as yet but dimly appreciated by the citizens of the republic; it is resented rather than recognized by the subjects of the King. We stand, therefore, at the threshold of a new era, which is pregnant with im-mense possibilities for weal and for woe, not merely for these who shad the Fenot merely for those who speak the Eng lish language, but for all the children of men. For there is no island in the far est seas too remote to feel the effect of this change of relative position betwee Britain and the United States. Amor all nations, peoples, kindreds and tongue the slow ascent of the Stars and Stripe over the Union Jack is recognized as portent to some of deliverance and hope to others of decadence and doom. - Re

A Defense of the Flirt. Ruskin advised every girl to have six sweethearts coincidently. It was excellent advice. That misjudged person, the flirt, is most frequently a woman whose heart aches for friendship, but who keeps the richest store hidden for her king when he shall come. Those who were never her king, who never could be her king, call her names by way of rejoinder. They overlook the salient fact that all she gave them was friendly interest, and that give the state of Iowa an extraordinary influence on the finances of the nation, which is the more shigular in view of the fact that is, a woman who conspicuously pretends to love—is as impossible as a conscious flirt—that is, a woman who conspicuously pretends to love—is as impossible as a conscious hypocrite. SHAW'S RISE TO POWER.

From Country Banker to Governorship and is Mentioned for President.

Gov. Leslie M. Shaw is a native of Vermont and was born November 2 1848. He located in Denison, Crawford county, over twenty-one years ago as a lawyer, after graduated from Cornell and the Iowa College of Law. He worked his way through college and began his professional career without means or influential acquaintances. He prospered and became president of the Bank of Denison and also the Bank of Manilla. He was the promoter of the Denison normal college and for three times in succession was elected from the Des Moines conference to the general conference of the Methodist church.

Gov. Shaw's rise in politics has been meteoric. Until 1896 he was simply a country banker at Denison, an unimportant town in western Iowa. His financial activities had been largely limited to lending money on farm mortgages. Daring the first McKinley campaign. to lending money on farm mortgages.

Congress, so far as financial matters are concerned. To cap the climax the speaker of the House, who controls all legislation, including that on financial matters, is also from Iowa.

There is some division of opinion among Eastern men regarding the appointment of Gov. Shaw. Many of them cling to the idea that a banker should be the secretary of the treasury, and by banker 4hey mean the head of some great trust company or financial institution in a large city, and not the medest banker of a small country tewn.

On the other hand, a much larger fraction of the men here believe in the appointment of a man of executive ability, and the financial regularity of Gov. Shaw will reflect great credit on the discernment of the President. Western men particularly believe that in these days of great monetary combinations the secretary of the treasury should always be a man as far removed from the Wall street influence as possible.

"Comparatively, what a man wears does not cost so much during a lifetime when you come to think of it," said an observant citizen, "and as a matter of fact the average I suppose will be surprised by the figures. Of course, the man who attempts to keep up with the procession of the ultra-fashionables must necessarily spend a good sum of money during his lifetime. He must humor the changing moods of the men who set the pace in fashion. He must have the very latest thing out. His coat must be the proper cut his hat the proper to fashion, and hence we may strike an average between the two extremes in

"We will put the case hypothetically and assume that a man lives to be 35 years of age. We will assume that he will wear the clothes of a grown man for this length of time. On an average, Il suppose a man will wear out six shirts during a year, or a total of 210 in a lifetime. Suppose he pays 75 cents each for them. This would be $4.50 a year, or $157.50 that he would pay out in a lifetime of thirty-five years. He would wear out 12 collars a year of 10 in wear out 12 collars a year, or 410 in thirty-five years, and if he wore the cheaper grade of collars, 15-cent collars, he would spend the sum of $63 in thirty-five years. Allowing two whole suits of leather a reason of the sum of $65 in thirty-five years. hve years. Allowing two whole suits of clothes a year, he would need in a lifetime 70 suits, and at the average cost of $20 a suit he would spend in this way $1400 in thirty-five years. If we allow him an average of four suits of underwear a year, he would need 140 suits. wear a year, he would need 140 suits, and at the nominal price of $1 a suit they would cost him $140 in thirty-five they would cost him $140 in thirty-five years. Two hats every twelve months would mean a total of 70 hats, and if he total number would cost him $210. His shoes, allowing him two pairs a year, and fixing the cost at $4 a pair, would cost him $280 in a lifetime. Now, on this basis of calculation, a man would spend about $2250 in a lifetime for clothes. There are, of course, many men who spend much more than this amount, and there are many men who amount, and there are many men who spend much less. But this calculation spend much less. But this calculation may be taken as a reasonable average.

"It will be observed that neckties, socks, suspenders, garters and things of that sort are not taken into consideration. Laundry bills, cleaning, mending and other things which increase the cost of a man's wearing appared are not consideration.

But taking all things into consideration, a man's wearing apparel will cost bim less than the food that he eats. Suppose a man is allowed three meals each day at the nominal cost of 25 cents a meal, in thirty-five years he would spend about $9450 for food, or about four times the amount he would spend for clothes."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

PERSIAN CARPET WEAVING. | TO CONNECT LAKES AND SEA. Finest Work Done by Boys Eight to

A replica of the famous carpet from Persian weavers, and so skillfully is the Persian weavers, and so skillfully is the work being carried out that it is stated by the English consul-general that when completed it will be equal in every respect to the original carpet, so faithfully is the work being reproduced, both with regard to coloring and detail. The carpet is being woven by boys ranging from 8 to 12 years of age. They sit in serried rows before their looms. Their method of procedure is to pull the wool from a reel suspended above their heads in their left hands and, with a flat knife provided with a crooked point in their right dash the thread, with three movements, through the web strings, hook it into the desired knot, cut off the surplus ends through the web strings, hook it into the desired knot, cut off the surplus ends and start another knot. The work is carried out with such remarkable rapidity that it is almost impossible to follow the movements of the weaver. Before setting to work the weavers closely study the painted design which they have to reproduce, and then depend entirely upon their memories to enable the work to be completed. Their memories are so reliable that it is very seldom they will refer back to the painted design. When refer back to the painted design. When working upon a complicated pattern the foreman of the loom—a boy about 14 years of age—walks up and down, calling out in a curious monetone the remainder. out, in a curious monotone, the number of stitches and the colors of the threads

Lord Albemarle's presence in this city serves to recall the fact that it was one of his ancestors, the third earl, who captured Havana in 1762, and one of that peer's grandsons still survives in the person of old Admiral Sir Henry Keppel, who, hale and hearty at the age of 93, has just left England alone and unattended on a little trip to Borneo. While all the Keppels now living enjoy in a very marked degree the favor of the reigning house, the fourth earl was an object of particular aversion to the late Queen Victoria, who on a memorable occasion declined to permit him to exercise his prerogative of master of the borse—of riding in the carriage with her. by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

For instance, it is believed that grain can be carried, if competition requires, at a reduction of 3 cents under the present average rate of 4½ cents via Buffalo to New York, or Montreal via the Welland canal. This saving would amount to about $1 per ton. It is proposed to charge a toll of 50 cents per ton, or 1½ cents per bushel. (The rate through Suez canal is 786d per ton.) Tonnage is estimated for traffic in one direction only, and no income is calculated from west-bound freight. On the basis of 7,000,000 tons the gross revenue would be $3,500,000.
