William Strother, the negro attendant at the bathhouse, who was on duty last night and who notified Mr. Cooper's family shortly after midnight of the assault, is held by the police.

A diamond ring valued at $1500 and a diamond pin worn by Cooper when he entered the bathhouse were found in the basement of the bathhouse this morning.

They had been concealed under the floor-They had been concealed under the flooring in a crevice above the top of a joist.

A sledgehammer bearing fresh blood stains was found in the basement soon after the police had been summoned to the scene of the assault. The hammer is one which was used in the basement for breaking up coal.

Strother told the police at the time of his arrest that two women and a man

Erastus Fountain, janitor of the Vista block, says that the two women were in Strother's company at 9:30 o'clock when he made his last visit to the premises. The police say there is no other evidence "I think we had better let that resolution of Schley during said battle of Santiago."

Exclusion Bill. Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—Ex-Secretary of State John W. Foster appeared before the Senate committee on amigration today and spoke in opposi tion to the Chinese exclusion bills which have been introduced in Congress. His remarks were directed particularly to the Mitchell or Pacific coast bill, which, he said, was a plain violation of our treaty with China.

treaty with China.

Mr. Foster said that our government had four times asked China to modify existing treaties in the interest of American citizens, and that in every instance China had acceded to our request. He submitted that any law the present Congress which passed by the present Congress which continues the exclusion of Chinese labor-ers beyond 1904 would be not only with-out international authority, but would be in violation of treaty stipulations. He also insisted that the exclusion laws should not be made applicable to all our insular possessions, and said the Ha-waiian islands presented the exact state waiian islands presented the exact state of affairs which was contemplated by the American negotiators of the exclusion treaty when they gave the assurance that to such a condition of affairs the exclusion laws would not apply when all the interests of the islands asked for Chinese immigration and the local authorities agreed that it would not in any way affect white labor.

Mr. Teller (Col.) called up his resolution introduced yesterday providing for the intervention of the United States government in behalf of Commandant Scheepers of the Boer army, sentenced to death by the British South African authorities. Since introducing the resolution, however, he said, he had been informed by the Associated Press that the death sentence upon Commandant Scheepers had been executed last Saturday.

Several senators, Mr. Teller added, had criticised him for introducing the resolutions of the whole matter. The old man and I have been fighting for the past six months and I concluded to quit. I was about to say there had been some errors in the books and some time ago it was mutually agreed to have an expert go over them. Some more errors were found and as a precautionary measure and to indemnify the company, Harlan Cleveland and Joe O'Hara, the attorneys, were appointed trustees of my estate. I have turned over to these gentlemen purely as the Geneva convention to which both the United States and Great Britain were parties means anything it means that we should intervene in such a case as this. "If a shortage is found in the books will you to be blame?"

"Solely because I had charge of the books. I have no desire to shift any responsibility." Mr. Teller read the article of the Ge eva convention applying to the case and "These are rules of warfare which the Czar of Russia would respect; which half-civilized Turkey and semi-barbarous Persia would respect. Under these rules this was a case in which the United States or any other nation, party to the Geneva convention had ample right to intervene. It was the business of this government to have ascertained the facts regarding this case and to have protested against this execution. Are we so pusillanimous, so afraid of offending the susceptibilities of Great Britain as to have refrained from doing our duty in a case where humanity was about to be violated?"

Madison, Wis., Jan. 23.-The secretary of state has just completed the compila-tion of the returns of local assessor showing the total valuation of all taxable property in the state. According to these returns the valuation of all property is property in the state. According to these returns the valuation of all property is $1.082,621,094, or $354,662,906 less than that fixed by the state board of assessment last fall. For the purpose of levying the 1-mill tax for school purposes the state tax commission, sitting as the state board of assessment and equalization last fall, fixed the value of all taxable property at $1,436,284,000, an increase of over 100 per cent, more than it was in 1900. From the returns of the local assessors it is apparent that the state board of assessment will have more work next fall in equalizing the assessments of the various counties.

the Manufacturers.

Appleton, Wis., Jan. 23.-[Special.]-The strike situation in this city has practically resolved itself into a civil war between the members of the local unions and with this state of affairs in existence, continually increasing as has been the case during the past few days, the manufacturers and particularly the Patten Paper company, will experience bu little difficulty in gaining their point and maintaining the present hour schedule which is the sole point of difference Practically all of the union men in the Patten Paper company will have signed Patten Paper company will have signed the petition pledging them to accept the offer of the company involving a raise of 10 per cent. in the wages, together with a vacation of at least two weeks each year, without deduction of pay. Together with the indisposition of the union men to adhere to the wishes of their leaders is the fact that a number of the oldest mechanism tenders and bester.

oldest machine tenders and beater en-gineers in the mill are not members of the union and positively refuse to walk out when a strike is ordered. This makes the situation extremely complicated and difficult for the brotherhood and unless the men increase their membership very materially before the next meeting, which will be held next Sunday afternoon, it is altogether probable that the strike will be a failure for the union. Union's Last Resort.

As a last resort-a committee of broth-crhood men was appointed last night, whose duty it will be to call upon the employes of the Patton Paper company individually and ascertain their true position in the matter of the demanding the concessions asked for. In case the union men who have signed the petition presented yesterday by the company d not acquiesce to repudiate their signa-tures upon request of the brotherhood, their names will be stricken from the list and they will no longer be permitted

DENIES MURDER OF CHILD.

Wife Pleads for Kenosha Man Charged with Infanticide.

Kenosha, Wis., Jan. 23.—Mrs. Polhamus, wife of Leslie M. Polhamus, who is charged with child murder, last evening stated that if she were permitted to testify she would say that her husband was entirely innocent of the alleged crime and that she believed the child died of heart failure. She further said that her family, on her mother's side, were subject to that disease and cited one case in which a niece of 6 weeks of age died of the same affliction. Her sister, Mrs. Knox of Forest, Ill., who is attending her, corroborated her statement.

The man came out of the woods near the house on the farm without so much as one word of explanation to the men of the place, whom he passed, and headed for the residence. He entered unannounced and Mr. Bonesack, who was present with his wife, although thinking it strange, said nothing more than the common salutation of "How do you do?" The stranger paid no heed, but walked up to the stove as if to warm kimself, and then spying a butcher knife took it up and made for the woman. Mr. Bonesack intercepted him and overpowered the man after a desperate struggle. He is now here in jail, still unidentified.

Kaukauna Against Strike.

It has gradually leaked out how the Neenah strikers came to Kaukauna last Sunday and tried their level best to persuade the Kaukauna contingent of the Papermakers' brotherhood into the notion of striking, just for the sake of strengthening the move which they inaugured there last week. But the Kaukauna brotherhood stood firm, and the members held to their own opinions. Reports sent out to certain newspapers were highly exaggerated and lurid. It was stated that over 400 papermakers attended the reason of the state beginning of this year there were less than forty. All reports agreed that a general strike had been ordered at this meeting. This is as far from the truth as the other statement. The total number of insane in the twenty-eight asylums of the state at the beginning of the year was 3582, and in the two state hospitals at Mendota and Oshkosh and the Milwaukee hospital 1462. During the past fifteen months the increase in the class known as chronic insane as those in county hospitals was 188. The total number of this class at the beginning of the year was 3582, against 3394 on October 1, 1900.

It is estimated that the twenty-eight county asylums of the state, in addition to the new one to be crected at Waukesha, will be able to care for the insane at the present rate of increase for four or five years. partment of commerce then was called up by Mr. Nelson (Minn.), who replied to the

Fond du Lac Happenings.

SHOPLIFTERS CAUGHT. Fond du Lac, Wis., Jan. 21.-[Special.] The first case of shoplifting in this city for some time was detected last evening by the police. The shoplifters were Mr. and Mrs. Bone, residing at 57 Macy street. They obtained several articles early in the evening, the stolen articles amounting to about $10 in value. They were detected in the act of taking some of the articles and Mr. Bone was arrest-ed and taken to the police station. Mrs. Bone was allowed to go to her home, but warrants were sworn out for both parties. The places from which articles have been taken, as far as the police can determine, were the C. W. Flower jewelry store and the Continental Clothing house. At the jewelcy store a pastel and a gold-headed silk umbrella were taken and a necktie nt the Continental. When the parties were for. Bone was kept at the station await ing a hearing this morning and the residence of the parties was scarched this morning. It is thought by the police that the business of shoplifting has been car-ried on previous to this time to some extent without detection. Mr. and Mrs. Bone pleaded guilty and were fined $10 and cost each. The fines were paid.

Busiest Eight Days in Congress. The great amount of work accomp-ished by the House of Representatives lished by the House of Representatives during the eight days of its present session is shown by a statement just prepared by Thomas H. McKee, the journal clerk of the House, who says the report occupied 175 pages of the journal. Each page contained 1700 words, or a total of 297,500 words which the journal clerks were required to record, being 234 words for every minute—a record unprecendented in the history of Congress. The total number of bills introduced in the House was 7623, an excess of more than 2000 over any other previous session. Of these bills 2970 were referred to a single committee—that on invalid pensions. In the mittee—that on invalid pensions. In the last Congress the total number of bills introduced in the House was 14,339 for Great excitement reigned all over Constantinople the other morning when it was noticed that the British embassy was flying from its flagstaff three ensigns, one above the other. All sorts of rumors sprang into circulation, ranging from declaration of peace in the Transval to the story that the embassy was being attacked and required help from the gunboats. Directly, however, the attention of the embassy officials was drawn to the fact by a host of eager inquirers, the flags were hauled down, and it was discovered that some zealous servant had thought they were damp and that this was the best way of drying and that this was the best way of drying them.—London Telegraph.

CHAPTER XXIV.—(Continued.) After dinner we were all shown into a nall ante-chamber, set round with velet settees, where we were to wait till the duke was ready to see us. In the center of this room there stood several ases, glass topped and lined with silk, wherein were little steel and iron rods, th brass tubes and divers other things, bright and ingenious, though I could they be for what end they had been put together. A gentleman-in-waiting came round with paper and ink-horn, making notes of our names and of our business. Him I asked whether it might

"His grace never sees in private," he replied. "He has ever his chosen councillors and officers in attendance."

"But the business is one which is only fit for his own ear," I urged.

"His grace holds that there is no business fit only for his own ear," said the gentleman. "You must arrange matters as best you can when you are shown in s best you can when you are shown in o him. I will promise, however, that our request be carried to him, though warn you that it cannot be granted." I thanked him for his good offices, and turned away with the farmer to look at the strange little engines within the

"What is it?" I asked. "I have never seen aught that was like it."
"It is the work of the mad Marquis of Worcester," quoth he. "He was the duke's grandfather. He was ever making and devising such toys, but they were ever of any service to himself or to thers. Now, look ye here! This wi' he wheels were called the water-engine, and it was his crazy thought that, by neating the water in that ere kettle, ye These Are Plain Words.

King of this place makes the following statement:

We had scarce taken our seats with the "Last spring, after trying many doctors and every remedy that could be thought of, I began a treatment of Dodd's Kidney Pills. The good results were almost immediate and for the last seven months I have seen more comfort and pleasure than I have for twenty after the other to file into the great man's presence.

"Methinks his grace is in no very genle temper," quoth Farmer Brown. "Did

"He is an armorer of Bristol," whisered one of my neighbors. "It is likely hat the duke cannot come to terms with im over a contract."
"Nay," said another. "He supplied

Sir Marmaduke Hyson's troop with sa-bers, and it is said that the blades will bend as though they were lead. Once used they can never be fitted back into the scabbard again." "The tall man who goes in now is an

I had been sitting all this time won I had been sitting all this time wondering how in the world I was to cenduct my business amid the swarm of Suppliants and the crowd of officers who were attending the duke. Had there been any likelihood of my gaining audience with him in any other way I should gladly have adopted it, but all my endeavors to that end had been useless.
Unless I took this occasion I might never come face to face with him at all. But how could be give due thought or discussion to such a matter before others?
What chance was there of his weighing feelings inclined him that way, he dared not show any sign of wavering when so many eyes were upon him. I was tempted to feign some other reason for The great soap factories of France, the largest being at Marseilles, have been forced to seek cheaper vegetable oil than that from the cottonseed, because the demand-for cotton oil by refiners who make it a foodstuff has advanced its price to a point at which it cannot profitably be made into soap.

o a more private interview.

I had just come to this resolution when I had just come to this resolution when my name was read out, on which I rose and advanced into the inner chamber. It was a small but lofty room, hung in blue silk with a broad gold cornice. In the center was a square table, littered over with piles of papers, and behind this sat his grace, with full-bottomed wig rolling down to his shoulders, very stately and imposing. He had the same subtle air of the court which I had observed both in Monmouth and in Sir Gervas, which, with his high, bold features and large piercing eyes, marked him as a leadlarge piercing eyes, marked him as a leader of men. His private serivener sat beside him, taking notes of his directions, while the others stood behind in a half circle or took snuff together in the deep circle or took snuff together in the deep recess of the window.

"Make a note of Smithson's order," he said, as I entered. "A hundred pots and as many fronts and backs to be ready by Tuesday, also six score snaphances for the musqueteers, and 200 extra spades for the workers. Mark that the order be declared null and void unless fulfilled within the time appointed."

"It is so marked, your grace."

"It is so marked, your grace."
"Capt. Micah Clark," said the duke, reading from the list in front of him.
"What is your wish, captain?"
"One which it would be better if I could deliver privately to your grace," I provided nswered.

"Ah, you are he who desired private indience? Well, captain, these are my ouncil, and they are as myself. So we may look upon ourselves as alone. What may hear they may hear. Zounds, man, ever stammer and boggle, but out with the control of the work of the control o before ye, with all freedom and with all truth.

My short delay and hesitation had sent a hot flush of anger into the duke's face, so I drew the packet of papers from my inner pocket and handed them to him with a respectful bow. As his eyes fell upon the superscription, he gave a sudden start of surprise and agitation, making a motion a though to hide them in his bosom. If this were his impulse he overcame it, and sat lost in thought for a minute or more with the papers in his hand. Then, with a quick toss of the head, like a man who hath formed his resolution, he broke the scals and cast his eyes over the contents, which he then threw down upon the table with a bitter laugh.

"What think ye, geutlemen?" he cried, looking round with scornful eyes—"what think ye this private message hath proved to be? It is a letter from the traitor Monmouth, calling upon me to resign the allegiance of my natural sovereign and to draw my sword in his behalf! If I do this I am to have his gracious favor and protection. If not, I incur sequestration, banishment and ruin. Four halberdiers who had answered the summons closed in upon me and laid hands on me. Resistance would have been folly, for I had no wish to harm the men in the doing of their duty. I had come to take my chance, and if that chance should prove to be death, as seemed likely enough at present, it must be met as a thing foreseen. I thought of those old-time lines which Master Chillingfoot of Petersfield had ever held up to our admiration:

Non civium ardor prava jubentium

Non civium ardor prava jubentium Non vultus instantis tyranni Mente quatit solida.

Here was the "vultus instantis tyran in this stout, bewigged, lace-covered, ow-faced man in front of me. I had yellow-faced man in front of me. I had obeyed the poet in so far that my courage had not been shaken. I confess that this spinning dust-heap of a world has never had such attractions for me that it would be a pang to leave it. Never, at least, until my marriage—and that, you will find, alters your thoughts about the value of your life, and many other of your thoughts as well. This being so, I stood erect, with my eyes fixed upon I stood erect, with my eyes fixed upon the angry nobleman, while his soldiers were putting the gyves about my wrists.

"Take down this fellow's statement," aid the duke to his scrivener. "Now, sirrah, it may not be known to you that his gracious majesty the King hath conerred plenary powers upon me during warrant to deal with all traitors without either jury or judge. You do bear a commission, I understand, in the rebel-lious body which is here described as Saxon's regiment of Wiltshire Foot? Speak the truth for your neck's sake."
"I will speak the truth for the sake o something higher than that, your grace."
I answered. "I command a company in that regiment."

at regiment."
"And who is this Saxon?" "And who is this Saxon?"
"I will answer all that I may concerning myself," said I, "but not a word which may reflect upon others."
"Ha!" he roared, hot with anger. "Our pretty gentleman must needs stand upon the niceties of honor after taking uparms against his King. I tell you, sir, that your honor is in such a parlous state already that you may well throw it over and look to your safety. The sun is already that you may well throw it over and look to your safety. The sun is sinking in the west. Ere it set your life, too, may have set forever."

"I am the keeper of my own honor, your grace." I answered. "As to my life, I should not be standing here this moment if I had any great dread of losing it. It is right that I should tell you that my colonel hatn sworn to exact a return for any evil that may befall me on you or any of your household who may come into his power. This I say, not as a threat, but as a warning, for I know him to be a man who is like to be as good as his word."

"Your colonel, as you call him, may find it hard enough to save himself soon," the duke answered, with a sneer. "How many men hath Monmouth with him."

I smiled and shook my head.

"How shall we make this traitor find his tongue?" he asked, furiously, turn-ing to his council. "I should clap on the thumbkins," said one fierce-faced old soldier. "I have known a lighted match between the fingers work wonders," another sug-gested. "Sir Thomas Dalzell hath in the Scottish war been able to win over several of that most stubborn and hard-ened race, the Western Covenanters, by such persuasion."

"Sir Thomas Dalzell," said a gray-haired gentleman, clad in black velvet, "hath studied the art of war among the Muscovites, in their barbarous and bloody encounters with the Turks. God forbid that we Christians of England hould seek our examples among the skin-lad idolaters of a savage country."
"Sir William would like to see war "Sir William would like to see wat carried out on truly courteous principles," said the first speaker. "A battle should be like a stately minuet, with no loss of dignity or of etiquette."

"Sir," the other answered, hotly, "I many of Sentinel have been in battles when you were in your baby-linen, and I handled a battoon when you could scarce shake a rattle. In leaguer or onfall a soldier's work is sharp and stern, but I say that the use of torture, which the law of England hath abolished, should also be laid aside by the law of nations."

"Enough, gentlemen, enough!" cried the duke, seeing that the dispute was like to wax warm. "Your opinion, Sir William, hath much weight with us, and yours also, Col. Hearn. Pittsburg a Successful Exception.

In the midst of exposition failures it seems that it is possible for Pittsburg to keep up a show that is profitable. It has an annual exposition, and when the members of the society by which it is conducted held their yearly meeting recently they received the good news that the profits of the last season were over $50,000 This is $10,000 in excess of the profits of the previous best season, which was 1900. This satisfactory result was obtained in spite of the competition of the Buffalo show, and the fact that the weather during the greater part of the season was anything but favorable. Pittsburg is not the largest city in the country, but in an enterprise of this kind it can put the big cities to the blush.—Phialdelphia Press.

"We can preserve your grace from all danger of slander on that point," said an elderly officer, while a murmur of assent from the others greeted the remark.

"And you!" cried Beaufort, raising his voice and turning his flashing eyes upon me: "who are you that dare to bring such a message to Badminton? You had surely taken leave of your senses ery you did set out upon such an errand!"

"I am in the hands of God here as elsewhere," I answered, with some flash of my father's fatalism. "I have done what I promised to do, and the rest is no concern of mine."

"You shall find it a very close concern of thine," he shouted, springing from his chair and pacing up and down the room; "so close as to put an end to all thy other concerns in this life. Call in the halberdiers from the outer hall!

Perchance the Evil One may desire a second bird out of the same cage, and I so tell you this that you may be on your guard against his assaults."

"Nay, I fear him not," I answered.

"It is well," croaked the captain. "Be not cast down!" His head vanished, and the key turned in the creaking lock. So thick were the walls that I could hear no sound after the door was closed. Save for the sighing of the winds in the branches of the trees outside the narrow

There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbiling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Thus left to myself, I tried to follow Capt. Sinclair's advice as to the keeping up of my heart, though his talk was far from being of a cheering nature. In my young days, more particularly among the sectaries with whom I had been brought most in contact, a belief in the occasional appearance of the Prince of Darkness, and his interference in bodily form with the affairs of men, was wideswrood and the affairs of men, was widespread and unquestioning. Philosophers in their own quiet chambers may argue learnedly on the absurdity of such things, but a dim-lit dungeon cut off from the worl a dim-lit dungeon cut off from the world, with the gray gloaming creeping down, and one's own fate hanging in the balance, it becomes a very different manner. The escape, if the captain's story were true, appeared to border upon the miraculous. I examined the walls of the cell very carefully. They were formed of great square stones cumpingly fitted together. The thin slit or window was cut through the center of a single large block. All over, as high as the hand could reach, the face of the walls was covered with letters and legends cut by many generations of captives. The floor was composed of old, foot-worn slabs firmly cemented together. The closest search failed to show any hole or cranny where a rat could have escaped, far less

CHARLESTON'S BUZZARDS.

While on the spot I determined to investigate and find out for myself about these strange pets of the city authorities. I had always understood that Mr. Buzzard made his headquarters about the Central market, which is situated on one of the principal streets, near the United States custom house, and between the Charleston hotel and the celebrated old Church of St. Michael's. One bright morning I started out. To my great astonishment, I soon walked right up to a big flock of these ebeny birds, or beasts, picking at bones or loose scraps of meat, and moving about on the market pavement in quite a leisurely way and as unconcerned about the life around them as chickens in a farmer's barnyard. The crowds of people going in and out of the market paid no more attention to these feathered monsters at their feet than we do to as many English sparrows on our

I slowly drew nearer and nearer, I slowly drew nearer and nearer, all the time watching them closely, for I had never been so near birds of this feather and odor in all my life. I was surprised to find the sight so bewildering as well as entertaining. To me they seemed not only to be leisurely engaged in eating their morning repast, but were at the same time imitating many of the differtheir morning repast, but were at the same time imitating many of the differ-ent characteristics of the human family. Their actions were so true to nature in many phases of human life that I almost felt I was witnessing a real play, the pavement before me being a stage. Soon it occurred to me that buzzards perhaps first became welcome visitors in the streets of Charleston some hundreds of years ago, not as scavengers, as the mod-ern Charlestonian will now tell you, but simply to entertain the people by their many odd and clever acts.-Knoxville

The cranberry is most essentially a cold weather fruit, and like all of this class it ole or wholesome eaten raw. The cranberry is so closely associated with turkey that we have come to look upon it much in the same light—as an American institution. And we certainly may lay claim to cranberry sauce as a sticked dich.

This acid fruit in such demand in cold weather was first used in Siberia and exported from Russia to other climes. It is found growing wild in every continent of the north temperate zone, the marsh ber-ry being the finest variety. The cran-berry growing interest of this country is a large as well as a very important one. The American berry is easily distinguished from the foreign fruit as it is much larger. The best way to serve it is as a jelly, as this does away with the skine which are not digestible and when cooked hard they are very irritating. There is not waste in this method of cooking, as only the skin which is of no value, is rejected. There is sufficient waste substance absorbed into the system in other foods without adding this matter so easiy separated from the pulp which con-ains all that is useful or pleasing to the
