—A serious accident befell Albert Schlamer, an employe of the Modern Steel Structural Company—one which may yet prove fatal, although he seems to be improving somewhat this morning.
The man was grinding some tools at an emery wheel and was leaning over the machine instead of keeping his head a little to one side, as is customary. The wheel split and a large piece of the stone flew off at a tangent, striking the man in the forehead, inflicting a compound fracture of the skull and making an ugly gash several inches in length.
The nurses at the hospital stated this morning that Schlamer was improving

SOME WONDERFUL CROPS IN WESTERN CANADA.

The Territorial Government Reports Show Results Beyond Belief. Regina, Assiniboia, Canada, January 10.-At the Agricultural Statistics branch of the Department of Agriculture for the Territories, reports are now being received from grain threshers throughout the Territories for statistical purposes. The reports are somewhat delayed this year, owing to the extensive crop and the delay in getting it threshed. The Department of Agriculture is leading the way in a new de-parture, in regard to the collection of crop statistics. In the older provinces, crop estimates are based entirely on Under the warmth and his recent collation William dozed, all unthinking of the doom that awaited him.

Suddenly, with a roar that scattered the young Mulligans, the remnants of the hapless goat shot heavenward, followed at regular intervals by portions of the stove, windows, chairs, tables and dishes.

As a climar the clock which was the dishes.

As a climax the clock, which was the pride of Mrs. Mulligan's life, swept gracefully upward and landed on the roof of the house across the way.

Thus sadly did the innocent morning stroll of William, the goat, come to an stroll of William, the goat, come to an end.

The Mulligan family was inconsolable until Mr. Mulligan comforted them with the assurance that goats were plentiful and that they could have a funeral over what was left of their old playmate.

Ition, it might be mentioned that the department is organizing a system of growing crop returns, which will be in operation next summer. This applies to St. Jacobs Oil used for fifty years. It contains ingredients that are unknown to any one but the manufacturers and their trusted employees. Its pain killing properties are marvellous, as testified to by the thousands of once crippled human beings now made well and free from pain by its use. St. Jacobs Oil has a record of cures greater than all other medicines. Its sales are larger than those of any other proprietary medicine and ten times greater than all other embrocations, oils and liniments combined, simply because it has been Weak and Sickly Children Who, perhaps, have inherited a weak digestion, continually subject to stomach roubles, loss of flesh and general weakness, can be made healthy and strong by the use of Vogeler's Curative Compound. Every doctor who is at all up to date will say that Vogeler's Curative Compound will make the blood pure and rich, bring colour to the cheeks, and put on flesh where health demands it. Children who have been weak and sickly since birth should be treated with small doses of Vogeler's Curative Compound, from two to five drops, twice daily, most satisfactory results will follow. It is the best of all medicines, because it is made from the dishearten our brave lads! Cowardice is catching and will run through an army like the putrid fever."

"Der Feigherzige!" cried Buyse, grinding his teeth. "And the brave countryfolk! It's too much."

"Stand to your pikes, men!" roared Saxon, in a voice of thunder, and we had scarce time to form our square and throw ourselves inside of it, before the whirlwind of horse was upon us once. Where the Taunton men had joined us a weak spot had been left in our ranks, and through this in an instant the Blue guards smashed ther way, pouring through the opening, and cutting in front of them. We had pulled up our horses, and were looking sally and silently back at the fatal plain, when the thud of hoofs fell upon our ears, and, turning round, we found two horsemen in the dress of the Guards riding towards us, and scorched thatch showed that it was hopeless to expect anything from them. Two or three houses stood in a cluster and scorched thatch showed that it was hopeless to expect anything from them. Once or twice I spied folk in the fields for they were riding straight for us with drawn swords and eager gestures. "More slaughter," I said, wearily. "My will they force us to it?"

The burge of the Guards riding towards us, and scorched thatch showed that it was hopeless to expect anything from them. Saxon glanced keenly from beneath his tree marked the meeting of th in a thousand lines and wrinkles.

"It is our friend who set the hounds upon our track at Salisbury," he said.

"This is a happy meeting. I have a score to settle with him."

It was, indeed, the hot-headed young cornet whom we had met at the outset our adventures. Some evil chance behind them. At the same moment a great cry of "Powder! For Christ's sake, powder!" arose from the musketeers, whose last charge had been fired. Again the cannon roared and again our men were mowed down as though Death himself with his scythe were among us. himself with his seythe were among us. At last our ranks were breaking. In the very center of the pikemen steel caps were gleaming, and broadswords rising and falling. The whole body was swept back 200 paces or more, struggling furiously the while, and was there mixed with other bodies which had been dashed out of all semblance of military order, and yet refused to fly. Men of Devon, of Dorset, of Wiltshire, and of Somerset, trodden down by horse, slashed by dragoons, dropping by scores under the dragons, dropping by scores under the dragons, dropping by scores under the rain of bullets, still fought on with a dogged, desperate courage, for a ruined cause and a man who had deserted them. quarter, but at last, scattered, broken, and without ammunition, the main body of the peasants dispersed and fled across the moor, closely for for owed by the horse. Saxon, Bayse, and I had done all that we could to rally them once more, and had cut down some of the foremost of the pursuers, when my eye fell suddenly upon Sir Gervas, standing hatless with a few of his musketeers in the midst of a swarm of dragoons. Spurring our horses, we cut a way to his rescue, and laid our swords about us until we had cleared off his assailants for the moment. "Jump up behind me!" I cried. "We can make good our escape."

He looked up smiling, and shook his head. "I stay with my company," said he.

"Your company!" Saxon cried. "Why, man, you are mad! Your company is cut off to the last man."

"Your company!" Saxon cried. "Why, man, you are mad! Your company is cut off to the last man."

"That's what I mean." he answered, licking some dirt from his cravat. Don't ye mind. Look out for yourselves. Goodby, Clarke! Present my compliments to—" The dragoons charged down upon us again. We were all borne backward, fighting desperately, and when we could look round the baronet was gone forever. We heard afterwards that the King's troops found upon the field a body which they mistook for that of Monmouth, on account of the effeminate grace of the features, and the richness of the attire. No doubt it was that of our undaunted friend, Sir Gervas Jerome, a name which shall ever be dear to my heart. When, ten years after-to my heart is abared and sprang back into the saddle.

"We part here," he said, coldly. "I have twice been on the verge of slaying you, and the third time might be too much for my patience. You are no fit companion for a cavalier of fortune. Join the clergy, lad; it is your vocation." I stible Decimus Saxon who speaks, or is it Will Spotterbridge?" I asked, remembering his jest concerning his aucestry; but no answering smile came upon his rugged face. Gathering up his bridle in his left hand, he shot one last malignant glance at the bleeding officer, and galloped off along one of the tracks, which led to the southward. I stood gazing after him, but he never sent so much as a hand-wave back, rid-ing on with a rigid neck until he van-

Pushing aside the branches, we came upon a man, seated with his back up against a great stone, cutting at his own urm with a broad-bladed knife, and giving forth the Lord's prayer the while, without a pause or a quiver in his voice. As he glanced up from his terrible task we both recognized him as one Holiis, whom I have mentioned as having been with Cromwell at Dunbar. His arm had been half severed by a cannon ball, and he was quietly completing the separation in order to free himself from the dangling and useless limb. Even Saxon, used as he was to all the forms and incidents of war, stared open-eved and incidents of war, stared open-eyed and aghast at this strange surgery; but the nan, with a short nod of recognition.

Some clambered up upon the cruppers of the riders and dragged them backward from their saddles. Others lay upon their faces and hamstrung the chargers with their hamstrung the chargers with their scythe-blades, stabbing the horsemen before they could disengage themselves. Again and again the guards crashed through them from side to side, and yet the shattered ranks closed up behind them and continued the long-drawn struggle. So hopeless was it and so pitiable that I could have found it in my heart to wish that they would break and fly, were it not that on the broad moor there was no refuge which they could make for. And all this time, while they struggled and fought, blackened with powder and parched with thirst, spiang their blood as though it were water, the man who called himself their King was spurring over the country-side with a loose rein and a quaking heart, his thoughts centered upon saving his own neck, come what might to his gallant followers.

Almost at the same moment the cornet dropped from his horse, wounded in several places. Saxon sprang from his saddle, and, picking the soldier's dagger from the ground, would have finished them both had I not jumped down also and restrained him. He flashed round upon me with so savage a face that I could see that the wild-beast nature within him was fairly ronsed.

Jerome, a name which shall ever be dear to my heart. When, ten years afterwards, we heard much of the gallantry of the young countiers of the hoasehold of the French King, and of the sprightly courage with which they fought against us in the lowlands at Steinkirk and elsewhere, I have always thought, from my what manner of men they were.

And now it was every man for himself. In no part of the field did the insurgents continue to resist. The first rays of the sun shining siantwise across the great, dreary plain lit up the long line of the scarlet battalions, and glittered upon the cruel swords which rose and fell among the struggling drove of resistless fugitives. The German had become separated from us in the tumult, and we knew not whether he lived or was slain, though

Wade, Ferguson and others had contrived also to save themselves, while Stephen Timewell lay in the midst of a stern ring of his hard-faced burghers, dying, as he had lived, a gallant Puritan Englishman. All this we learned afterwards. At present we rode for our lives across the moor, followed by a few scattered bodies of horse, who soon abandoned their pursuit in order to fasten man some more easy of the real ways. cither of where he was or how he came there. The officer, too, had opened his eyes and shown other signs of returning consciousness. His wounds were clear-ly of no serious nature. There was no trotted off to join the numerous other riderless steeds who were wandering all over the moorlands. morning's work had already told somewhat heavily upon him.

There were many scattered bodies of horse riding hither and thither over the marshes, but I was able to avoid them, and trotted onward, keeping to the waste country until I found myself eight or ten miles from the battlefield. The few cottages and houses which I passed were deserted, and many of them bore signs of having been plundered. Not a peasant was to be seen. The evil fame of man, with a short nod of recognition, went grimly forward with his task, until, even as we gazed, he separated the last shred which held it, and lay over with blanched lips which still murmured the prayer. [The incident is historically true, and may serve to show what sort of men they were who had learned their soldiering under Cromwell.] We could do little to help him, and, indeed, might by our halt attract his pursuers to his hiding place; so, throwing him down my liask half filled with water, we hastened on upon our way. Oh, war, my children, what a terrible thing it is! How

Two or three striking it at an angle, and had left a broad groove across it. Two or three of the reaches and stars showed where the good sheet of proof steel had saved me. My left arm was stiff and wellnigh powerless from the corporal's stab; but on stripping off my doublet and examining the place, I found that though there had been much bleeding the wound was on the outer side of the bone, and was therefore of no great import. A kerchief dipped in water and bound tightly round it cased the smart and stanched the blood. Beyond this scratch I had no in the place, I found that though there had been well cudgelled, and the slight wound got in Wells cathedral had repended and was bleeding. With a little patience and cold water, however, I was able to dress it and to tie myself up as well as any chirurgeon in the kingdom. Having seen to my injuries, I had now to attend to my appearance, for in truth I might have stood for one of those gory giants with whom the worthy Don Bellianis of Greece and other stout champions were wont to contend. A good deal is said about abandoned farms in New England, but one does not often hear of the sale of whole villages, except prospective ones that are built upon the sand and are given away with packages of tea. The sheriff at Bridgeton, N. J., the other day sold the whole village of Halberton for $1000. It was started in 1893 as a colony for Russian Hebrews from New York, but proved a failure. The property consisted of nearly 5000 acres of land, 200 houses and a large factory building.—Springfield Republican.

In a recent letter from 5900 Michigan avenue, Chicago, Ill., Mr. Moody says the following:

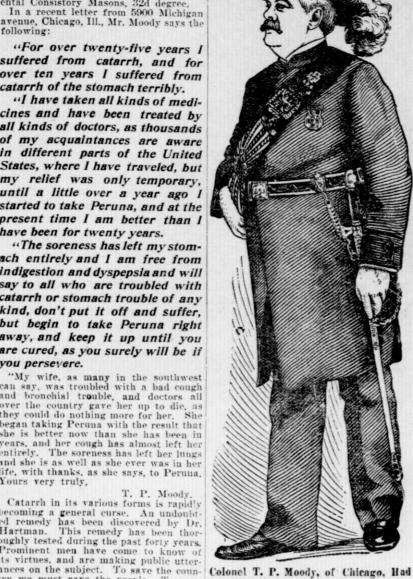

"For over twenty-five years I suffered from catarrh, and for over ten years I suffered from catarrh of the stomach terribly.

"I have taken all kinds of medicines and have been treated by all kinds of doctors, as thousands of my acquaintances are aware in different parts of the United States, where I have traveled, but my relief was only temporary, until a little over a year ago I started to take Peruna, and at the present time I am better than I have been for twenty years. "The soreness has left my stomindigestion and dyspepsia and will say to all who are troubled with catarrh or stomach trouble of any kind, don't put it off and suffer, but begin to take Peruna right away, and keep it up until you are cured, as you surely will be if you persevere. "My wife, as many in the southwest can say, was troubled with a bad cough and bronchial trouble, and doctors all over the country gave her up to die, as they could do nothing more for her. She began taking Peruna with the result that she is better now than she has been in years, and her cough has almost left her entirely. The soreness has left her lungs and she is as well as she ever was in her life, with thanks, as she says, to Peruna. Yours very truly,
