Germany.

There is an interesting story connected with Mr. Faulstroh, which few have ever heard. He was born in Germany of wealthy parents and was heir to one-third of a fortune of $30,000. Early in life he had trouble with his parents which for some time resulted in a complete estrangement, the young man complete strengement in this city. For the past fifteen years he has resided here and up to the time of his departure lived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Schmidt, 65 Waupun street. During these years he has been employed in different kinds of work as a common laborer. In recent years he has Washington was killed and two other Americans were wounded in a battle between the Colombian gunboat Bogota common laborer. In recent years he has kept up a correspondence with his mother. In recent letters she has told him of being ill and not expecting to live but a few years longer. For this reason she desired him to come to Germany and he with her during her receiving her the state of the sta tured and the other burned.

The Colombian fleet had captured a boat having on board correspondence showing the whereabouts of the two revolutionary schooners. The government warships headed for the place and on arriving there the Bogota, manned by an American crew and commanded by Capt. Marmaduke, lowered two boats with armed men. As the schooners were aground, the government forces waited shipments had been made to India at still lower prices.

Dr. Brummer further asserted that the customs officials' action was dictated by the interests of the home manufacturers, and he continued: "It is said that we must not offend the United States, but they will respect us more and we shall gain more by showing our teeth than by always giving pleasant words."

Herr Gothein, Radical Liberal, replied that he ran and hid in a hay stack. His father found him, but the lad refused to speak and acted queerly. The day following the funeral methods are the first of the united States, but they will respect us more and we shall gain more by showing our teeth than by always giving pleasant words."

Herr Gothein, Radical Liberal, replied that the ran and hid in a hay stack. His father found him, but the lad refused to speak and acted queerly. The day following the funeral methods are the country for some trace of the child, but all their efforts have proven futile. It is feared that the boy has wandered into the woods and persished of cold and exposure.

MR. AND MRS. MIKE CLIFFORD. (Mrs. Clifford Died Two Years Ago. This Photograph Was Taken a Few Months Before She Passed Away.)

Baraboo, Wis., Nov. 12.-[Special.]-Mike Clifford was 100 years old yesterday and is remarkably vigorous for one who has spanned a century. Like many others who have attained so remarkable an age, he was born in Ireland and has always followed some active vocation.

noved to England where he remained for twelve years. In 1834 he was swept away by that great tide of emigrants from his native land and came with many of his countrymen to the United States.

Mr. Clifford went direct to Milwaukee, where he remained for more than twenty years and during that time followed the trade of a mason. On leaving Milwaukee he moved to the town of Woodland in this county, which was then a wilderness and which was rapidly being filled with new settlers. Since coming to Sauk county he has remained on a farm and has been able to take the active duties of a husbandman until recent years.

While a resident of England he was married to Miss Mary Sims and the wife died one or two years ago, having attained an age of almost 100 years Although his age is remarkable, yet there are other features somewhat unusual. At the age of 30 he was grey and bald. He never sat but once for a picture and the accompanying illustration is a reproduction of that one taken a short time before his wife's death. With the exception of his father, his ancestors lived to a remarkable age. Both of his grandfathers were contentions a short time before his wife s death. With the exception of his father, his ancestors lived to a remarkable age. Both of his grandfathers were centenarians and one of his great-grandfathers was the parent of twenty-one children.

It was the custom a century ago to partake of strong drink on divers and sundry occasions and this has always been the habit with Mr. Clifford, but using the stimulants with great moderation.

A healthy looking plug or a pipe and pouch have been his companions for more than four score years.

A healthy looking plug or a pipe and pouch have been his companions for more than four score years.

When asked as to what he attributed his longevity he replied that it was due to his inheriting a robust constitution, having ancestors with long lives to their credit and for being moderate in all things. Being a hard worker, abstemious of diet and an early riser he says has no doubt been of value in this respect. Although tobacco and beverages have been used yet he always retained control over his physical machinery. He believes that moderation in all things is the open sesame to old age.

He marvels at some of the wonderful things accomplished during the last hundred years. When he was born, a fire was started with a flint, piece of steel and some rotten wood. Railroads, automobiles and like improvements were so remote in the minds of men that to have discussed them would have made the person a suitable subject for an insane asylum.

Mr. Clifford has three children: James Clifford, Wonewoc, Wis.; John Clifford, Longmont, Col., and Mrs. Mary St. John, Oaks, Wis. There are eleven grandchildren, but no great-grandchildren.

Chased by a Whale.

Chased by a huge whale, with nothing but a pair of oars with which to defend himself, is the story told by a fisherman, Fred Campbell of Mainadieu, Cape Breton. Mr. Campbell went out in a small boat. He was not very far from land when he noticed a huge sea monster approaching him. Not wishing to encounter it, Mr. Campbell bent himself to the oars and tried to get in shore before the monster reached him. The whale gained on him, and he soon recognize gained on him, and he soon recognized that his efforts to reach the shore ahead of his pursuer were futile. His means of defense were not of much account, but he made good use of what was at hand. The monster opened his jaws wide and tried to swallow the boat, man and all. Mr. Campbell reached over with an par and for a few minutes succeeded keeeping the whale away. When is looked as though Campbell was doomed a small boat hove in sight, and its oc-cupants, noticing the man's perilous po-sition, hastened to his aid. The whale then disappeared. A contemporary sug-gests that it was probably a descendant of Jonah's.

Case No. 49,763. Mrs. M. Isted, of 1207 Strand Street, Galveston, Tex., who is proprietor of a boarding house at that address, numbering among her boarders a dozen medical students, what is known as an angel shark, an ugly fish with an eight-inch mouth containing three rows of teeth, has been of September, 1900, and it settled in raught with a hand line at Felixstowe, my kidneys. Despite the fact that I England. tried all kinds of medicine and was under the care of physicians, the excruciating twinges and dull aching across the small of my back refused to leave, and trouble with the kidney se cretions began to set in. From then, ordinary Anglo-Saxon fails to describe the annoyance and suffering I endured. The fearful pain through my body, loss of appetite, loss of sleep, consequent loss of energy, and, finally, an indication of complete dissolution compelled me, from sheer agony and pain, to either lie on the floor and scream, or forced me into spasms. On such occasions my husband called in a physician. whose morphine treatment relieved me temporarily. I grew weaker and thinner, and so run down physically that nothing was left but skin and bone.

I don't know why, but something told me not to go, and I absolutely refused. Now I want the readers to grasp every word of the following: A friend of ours, a Mr.

McGaund, knowing that my kidneys were the real cause of the entire trouble, brought a box of Doan's Kidney Pills to the house, and requested me to give them a trial. I had taken so much medicine that I was more than discouraged, and had little, if any, faith in any preparation. However, I reasoned if they did not do me good they could not possibly make me worse. o I began the treatment. Plants that Cough.

Man has not a monopoly of coughing. Before there was a vertebrate on the arth, while man was in process of evo-tion through the vegetable world, Elado assiens—that is what botanists call him, we know him as "the coughing bean"—coughed, and blew dust out of his ungs. Recently botanists have been giving special attention to this bean, and tell interesting things about it. It is a native of warm and moist tropical counand objects most emphatically to When dust settles on the branching pores in the leaves of the plant and hokes them a gas accumulates inside, blown from its lodgment. And, more strange still, the plant gets red in the face through the effect.—London Express.

Greene Counties are ringing with the news of the wonderful recovery of gave him little relief and less hope. Today Mr. Ayers is as well as man could wish. He tells the following story:

"About a year ago I was at West Camp, sick with Bright's Disease and without hope of ever being better, when an old gentleman from Bath, N. Y., advised me to take Dodd's Kidney Pills, telling me they had cured him of the same disease.

"I had tried so many remedies that I was past hoping and told him so, but when he bought me a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and coaxed me to try them I did so just to humor his whim. "That was the means of saving my life. I took that box and half a dozen Thanks to that old man and Dodd's Kidney Pills, I am cured."

In spite of her pallor there was mething terribly lovely about Theo when at last she was dressed, from the ong white veil to the little slippersbut it was almost like the beauty of leath. Mrs. Warrington looked her over with a cruel triumph which she scarcely cared to mask, and thrust the great bouuet which Mr. Samson had sent into her old, trembling hands. There was something of the air of gaoler about her as he drove the bride out of the room before her, and down to the carriage where Mr. Warrington was waiting to take her to the church, looking furtively comfortable. He had no mind to be a party to the affair, and if he could have et his wife give Theo away in his stead, rould gladly have resigned in her favor. It was to be a quiet wedding, but it eemed to Theo, as her uncle led her up the aisle, that the place was full of eyes. They scorched her, they seemed to surround her, and to prohibit the last faint ope of escape. The fact was that Mr. Pitt Samson had invited all his acquaintnees to come and see him married to the ell-born heiress, and stood amongst them himself, swelling with satisfaction, near the front pews, his large frock coat and white waistcoat conspicuous even from the bottom of the church. Most of his friends were city people, the men made on the same pattern as himself, the omen as over-dressed as Mrs. Warrington, and all talking in loud whispers

Theo's wild eyes were raised to the clergyman's face. She made a movement as if to put out her hand in proest, but dropped it again to her side. "For be ye well assured, that so many s are coupled together otherwise than God's Word doth allow, are not joined together by God; neither is their matriony lawful." There was the usual momentary pause Through the silence a voice spoke, so make them go away, and leave no clearly and deliberately that it rang alone?"

Pitt Samson swung round on his heel, uttering a fierce oath. He forgot the acred building in which he stood, and the clergyman's shocked "Hush!" fell on deaf ears. He showed the cloven hoof under his usual disguise of good manwith some idea of claiming her ried were one and the same, she turned and when it gains sufficient pressure there comes an explosion with a sound exactly like coughing and the dust is as his own, he seized Theo's arm, crushners. With some idea of claiming her ried were one and the same, she turned ing and tearing her veil in his roughness, and faced the interruptor, his face flushed a dark red with passion.
