Young Plants

Every farmer knows that some plants grow better than others. Soil may be the same and seed may seem the same but some plants are weak and others strong.
And that's the way with children. They are like young plants. Same food, same home, same care but some grow big and strong while others stay small and weak.
Scott's Emulsion offers an easy way out of the difficulty. Child weakness often means starvation, not because of lack of food, but because the food does not feed.
Scott's Emulsion really feeds and gives the child growing strength.
Whatever the cause of weakness and failure to grow—Scott's Emulsion seems to find it and set the matter right.

SOCIETY WRECKED HER HEALTH.

Per-na-nu Restores, Regulates, Restores.

A Pretty New York Woman's Recovery
The Talk of Her Numerous Friends.
Mrs. J. E. Flan, 82 East High street, Buffalo, N. Y., writes:
"Per-na-nu, Columbus, Ohio.
Gentlemen:—A few years ago I had to give up my life entirely, as my health was completely broken down. The doctor advised a complete rest for a year. As this was out of the question for a time, I began to look for some other means of restoring my health.
"I had often heard of Per-na-nu as an excellent tonic, so I bought a bottle to see what it would do for me, and it certainly took hold of my system and rejuvenated me and in less than two months I was in perfect health, and now when I feel worn out or tired a dose or two of Per-na-nu is all that I need."—Mrs. J. E. Flan.

Catarah Causes Female Diseases.

America is the land of nervous women. The great majority of nervous women are suffering from catarah, a form of female disease. By far the greatest number of female troubles are caused by catarah. The women despair of recovery. Female trouble is so common, so prevalent, that it is almost taken for granted. The greatest obstacle in the way of recovery is that they do not understand the nature of catarah which is the cause of their illness.
In female complaint, ninety-nine cases out of one hundred are nothing but catarah.
Per-na-nu cures catarah wherever located.

THE MOTHER-IN-LAW'S NAME.

Proposal to Bestow It Upon the Baby Causes Trouble in the Family.

Strife that grew out of the failure of a husband and wife to agree upon a name for their baby brought Fred Buckland to the attention of the Hon. Magistrate Koehrsperger. Mrs. Buckland testified that her husband had left her on April 23, and had not returned for her support since. She failed to make clear the origin of the trouble, and the magistrate was puzzled. "What's this all about? What did he leave you for?" he queried. "Why he did not want me to name the baby Isabel," she said. "I did not care what else I called it—I could name anything but Isabel." "What's the matter with the name Isabel?" inquired the magistrate. "Ask him," said Mrs. Buckland, curtly. "Backland, appealed to, said: 'I'll tell you, and you see, she and I are not very good friends. I was satisfied that my wife should name the child after something she wanted to, but—' "A roar of laughter from the crowd in the courtroom broke in upon the explanation. Magistrate Koehrsperger said to the defendant: "Naming the baby is a very serious matter. I'll hold you in $500 bail for court." Buckland furnished bail. Philadelphia is an old-fashioned town.

RED BERRIES AND WHITE.

"Won't they shiver in their shoes again tonight?" he muttered as he hurried along. "And by St. Mark! the bells won't be far out for the life of another year. Femeinich is hanging in the balance, either Ernest Walton's or Reuben Cooper's."

After passing across the field, which he had only chosen in order to avoid the company of his employer, he looked round the dreary landscape to see if anyone was in sight, and then doubled back in the direction of a piece of waste and rugged ground, in the center of which stood a deserted house, known as Kenward's Folly.
It had been built years before by a man of that name, coming from no one knew where, but the house was in a decent amount of this world's goods. He had lived there for two years, with only two old servants, seeing no one, and taking no heed of anything that happened in the neighborhood. Then, as suddenly, he went. The old house was left to the mercy of wind and rain, and was gradually falling to decay. The fences were rotten, the garden a wild wilderness, the orchard was a paradise for the youthful thieves of Whitley.
In ordinary weather the place looked like a well-kept farm, but now, with the snow leaped upon it, and the moonbeams casting their weird light over it, it had a picturesque appearance, such as would gladden the eyes of an artist.

It was towards this spot that Carlo the gypsy took his way, and, seeing that the coast was clear, he walked pushing along the deserted front garden, went round by the side entrance, and reaching the rear of the premises, pushed open a rickety door, and entered a narrow passage. He was evidently quite at home here. Taking a little lamp from a niche in the musty old hall, he lit it, and began the ascent of the creaking staircase, as the wood had rotted away and the slight carelessness would result in an ugly fall.

"Where the deuce is that cupboard?" he murmured, holding up the light as he entered a chamber—narrow and low, and where the darkness seemed to have settled, as it were, and become solid.
"Ah, there it is! Now to destroy the evidence of everything," he muttered. Perhaps he did not see the pitfall; but he pressed forward too eagerly.
At any rate, he had not advanced many steps before he felt a strong hand grasp his arm, and he fell, and Carlo the gypsy disappeared into the darkness of the room below, while a second crash told the story of a further mistake.

Then all was still and gloom, for the lamp shivered into atoms and went out, and he had a chance of setting the old lantern on fire.
Not so very far off a different scene had been enacted—a scene of joy and tenderness.
Though the next night had been named as the one which was to see the formal reunion of father and son, Reuben knew well that his claim was to be gladly welcomed, and so he had not been in the old Manor to keep his promise. The meeting of the lovers under these circumstances was a happy one indeed—so that even the day which was to see the banishment from Yuletide festivities at the old Manor at last.

"Red Berries and White" would be too good a reminder of the tragedy at the fancy ball.
THE END.

Home Duties

The real heroines of every day are in our homes. Frequently, however, it is a mistaken and useless heroism. Women seem to listen to every call of duty except the supreme one that tells them to guard their health. How much harder the daily tasks become when some derangement of the female organs makes every movement painful and keeps the nervous system unstrung? Irritability takes the place of happiness and amiability; and weakness and suffering takes the place of health and strength. As long as they can drag themselves around, women continue to work and perform their household duties. They have been led to believe that suffering is necessary because they are women. What a mistake! Pain and restore happiness. Don't resort to strong stimulants or narcotics when this great strengthening, healing remedy for women is available within reach.

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN.

If there is anything in your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. No matter how serious your case, she can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills as she has. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

FOR PROOF READ THE SYMPTOMS, SUFFERING AND CURE RECITED IN THE FOLLOWING LETTERS:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express to you the great benefit I have derived from your advice and the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My trouble was female weakness in its worst form and I was in a very bad condition. I could not perform my household duties, I had backache, I was extremely nervous, and I could not eat or sleep, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. My husband spent hundreds of dollars to get me well, and all the medicine that the doctors prescribed failed to do me any good; I resorted to an operation which the physician said was necessary to restore me to health, but I suffered more after it than I did before; I had hemorrhages, I was weak, but nothing could seem to stop.
I noticed one of your advertisements and wrote you for advice. I received your reply and carefully followed all instructions. I immediately began to get stronger, and in two weeks was about the same as I was before. After taking five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and following your advice, and to-day I am a well woman. Your remedies and help are a Godsend to suffering women, and I cannot find words to thank you for what you have done for me."—Mrs. LOTTIE V. NATHAN, 1328 N. J. Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C.
