Mrs. John Steichers and son Peter, Mrs. Joseph Heisler and daughters Johanna and Theresa, were Kirmess guests here. They returned the next day to their homes at Hartford.

Our Kirmess was duly celebrated on Wednesday with six neighboring priests assisting Rev. Baurbach at 10 o'clock mass. The Campbellsport band played the Telemus at the church after which all marched down town for some good refreshments for which our landlords were fully prepared.

In the afternoon a picnic was held at A. Strobel's park, the Campbellsport band furnished the music. All the neighboring towns were well represented and all enjoyed themselves to their heart's content, while the youth amused themselves with dancing until an early hour the next day.

Dr. Ebenreiter, who claimed through the joy and merriment on Kirmess Wednesday and checked all happiness for awhile for the sad news of the death of a youthful member reached here. Louisa Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wenzel Peters, died at 8 o'clock in the morning at the home of her parents. Deceased lived up to the age of 15 years and 8 months. She was only sick in bed one day with measles and died of heart stroke. The funeral took place Friday forenoon at 10 o'clock at the local church yard. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved parents.

Practical Thoughts About Private Funerals.

Probably upon few occasions is there so much useless ostentation and marked degree of hypocrisy manifested as in the conduct of many funerals. In fact, our funeral ceremonies are loaded down with methods more absurd and of bad taste than those of any other part of social life. During all the performance of the last sad rites for the deceased there is an amount of display that is excessive and very unseemly. For instance: The husband and father dies; his widow is distraught with grief and leaves all the care of the obsequies in the hands of some friend. The friend insists upon consulting her as to this and that, and although she has not the means, she is of the opinion that neither the casket nor the flowers can be too costly to sacrifice to the memory of her husband.

The question whether the florist, the undertaker, and the deliveryman can be paid is not considered—the simply decides for the most expensive details. The husband has saved and saved that some supply might be laid up to be used for his children, and now that the blow has fallen, his moderate means are spent in unwise extravagance. Ostentations show is wrong anywhere, but nowhere more than at the last sad rites for the dead. And whoever is favored by the possession of money should have the humanity so to conduct this scene when the call of sorrow comes to him that by his example his humbler fellow-men may not have the added thorn of apparent meanness and neglect, caused by unavoidable poverty in their pillow of pain. And those who have but moderate means have a religious duty to their dependent children.

The funeral of the ordinary individual is in its very nature a private affair in which the public has no part and where its presence should be regarded as scarcely less than an intrusion. Yet the funeral is very generally made an elaborate, formal and often wearisome affair, and a large number of those present are attracted thither through an element of curiosity, an element altogether foreign to the sacredness and seriousness of time and place. And many simply go along "just for the sake of a ride." Would it not be better in many cases if our funerals were private, conducted at the residence in the presence only of the invited relatives and most intimate friends of the deceased? Such a funeral would give opportunity for closer sympathy, religious comfort and consolation, which are needed by the bereaved in the dark hours of trial. Where the deceased has been a man of public spirit, closely connected with the leading interests, if he has been a philanthropist or a statesman, there is some justification of making the event of his burial a public one. Where this is not the case, the less display the better. Simply and obscurely we should lay away our loved ones. What are all the flowers and the multitude of carriages compared with the figure of a heart-broken mother who goes alone to her baby's coffin and lays upon it one fading blossom that she has consecrated with all her tears?—REV. C. RUPPERT.

Your Hair

"Two years ago my hair was falling out badly. I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and soon my hair stopped coming out." Miss Minnie Hoover, Paris, Ill.

Perhaps your mother had thin hair, but that is no reason why you must go through life with half-starved hair. If you want long, thick hair, feed it with Ayer's Hair Vigor, and make it rich, dark, and heavy.

Send for a free sample. If your druggist cannot supply you, send us one dollar and we will express you a bottle. Be sure and give the name of your nearest express office. Address: J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Catarrah of the Stomach.

When the stomach is overloaded; when food is taken into it that fails to digest, it decays and inflames the mucous membrane, exposing the nerves, and causes the glands to secrete mucus, instead of the natural juices of digestion. This is called catarrah of the stomach. For years I suffered with Catarrah of the Stomach, caused by indigestion. Doctors and medicines failed to benefit me until I used Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. —J. R. Rhea, Coppell, Tex. Sold by all druggists.
