Despite the lack of information, many Despite the lack of information, many people are convinced that the Japanese government has made substantial concessions, and already are criticising and objecting. Unless the terms prove to be better than were anticipated, it is certain that the compact will prove unpopular and be bitterly assailed by the press and by the diet, which is expected to meet in special session shortly. The radical elements are asserting that cabinet changes are inevitable. The mass of the public is not moved. There, unquestionably, is a feeling of great relief that hostilities have ended and that the men of the great army will return home, be disbanded and re-enter the walks of peace. This feeling however, is without public manifestation. There have been no processions, no display of flags or marks of popular.

Will Last.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 31.—The general tone of the press this morning is one of resignation. The Novoe Vremya is a notworthy exception. The editor, M. Souvorin, refuses to believe in the solidity of peace and contends that it is simply a stage towards a new struggle between Russia and Japan. The Novoe Vremya's article displays further irritation towards President Roosevelt for his mediation, which the paper considers was "regrettable, inopportune and even disastrous for Russia."

The Syn Ontechestva says:

"After a shameful war, Russia could certainly lay no claim to an honorable peace. She should congratulate herself on the cessation of the war, the continuing of which would have cost immensurable greater sacrifices."

Other radical elements are asserting that cabinet changes are asserting that cabinet changes are inevitable. The mass of the public is not moved. "Can it be expected that the influence of the American Jew on public opinion will be exerted to the advantage of the country which exerted to the advantage of the country which systematically degrades his brethren-in-race, making their lives almost unendurable?

Hebrews Always with Them. "No matter how many Jews may migrate there will always remain a minimum of 6,000,000 or 7,000,000 Jews minimum of 6,000,000 or 7,000,000 Jews in Russia, and thus it appears quite evident the Russo-Jewish question must be settled in Russia—settled promptly and thoroughly in the enlightened spirit which your imperial master has shown in so many other instances. This vexatious question will remove at once and forever a factor so damaging to Russia at home and abroad.

Why Legislature Can't Make

Laws for Cities. Racine, Wis., Aug. 31.-[Special.]-At the morning session of the convention of the Wisconsin League of Municipalfollowed by a discussion led by Ald.

In his discussion Ald. Smith maintained that while he served as a member of the Legislature, representing Milwaukee, he had introduced certain bills in the Legislature regarding city affairs, but found they were of little avail, and that he believed the only thing to be done was to eliminate legislation for cities by the Legislature and have a home rule for all cities in the state. Favors Home Rule for Cities.

Favors Home Rule for Cities.

A vote taken on the question of home rule for Wisconsin cities resulted in the motion being passed almost unanimously. The State League of Municipalities will try to have all common councils of cities urge the passage of laws which will give them a right to govern the cities instead of being governed from Madison. It was found that assemblymen from the country knew nothing of the needs of the cities. Ald. Smith told of members on tax committees who did not know what a river dock was, and how he took them to Milwaukee to show them a river dock in order to explain a certain matter brought before that committee at Madison.

Legler, secretary of Wisconsin Free Library commission, read a paper on the administration of library funds and showed that of the 126 public libraries in the state but $172,000 was appropriated annually for their maintenance and of this amount $116,000 goes to fifteen of the libraries and the remaining 111 struggle along on $400. He believed the councils of the cities should contribute more liberally to the library funds. Among the cities represented at the convention eight have 11-braries given by Andrew Carnegie and sixteen have libraries given by former or present residents.

This afternoon at 4 o'clock the delegates and city officials of Racine, numbering 125, will go to Jacobs' island, south of Racine, and will take part in a clam bake.

regulation or prohibition of these various institutions are set and framed in definite statutes or ordinances. The contention that he can be elected upon a policy of law enforcement is illogical and untenable. We do know, however, that cities do openly elect officers who are expected to violate the laws of the state, and even the ordinances of the common council. AT REASONABLE RATES.

Interstate Rate Making. One of the most plausible arguments advanced by the advocates of political rate-making is that if the interstate commerce commission can determine that a rate is unjust or unreasonable, it is equally able to determine what rate would be just and reasonable. This does not at all follow.

The interstate commerce commission

The interstate commerce commission may be perfectly competent to determine that a rate is unjust and unreasonable, while it is unable to say what rate is just and reasonable. The reason for this is that what makes a rate unjust or unreasonable, is its effect upon the commerce of the public, and that is susceptible of proof and relatively easy of determination. But what makes a rate just and reasonable is quite another matter, and involves, besides the negative proposition that it shall not impede or impair the commerce of the people, the very important and vital affirmative proposition that it shall give the carrier his full legal compensation, as well as that no rate shall be imposed upon him that will impede or impair his commercial prosperity.

that will impede or imposed upon him that will impede or impair his commercial prosperity.

The facts are that all rates are so closely inter-related to other rates that it would not be possible for the interstate commerce commission to lay its hands on a single rate or set of rates without upsetting and disturbing hundreds of other rates. It is as impossible to limit the rate-making power, either of the commission or the carrier to the prescribed area of a single rate or set of rates, as it would be to confine the influence of a pebble thrown into the water to a less number of circles than the physical force of its displacement would produce.

It would seem a much more logical solution of the situation to confine the commission to what it can do, rather than impose upon it something that it carried the life the less commerces the commission to what it can do, rather than impose upon it something that it cannot do. If the law empowers the commission to condemn a rate, and gives it ample machinery with which to compel the carrier to speedily and effectively adjust the rate to a basis that is just and reasonable, the means will be provided for doing something which it is possible to do, instead of the attempt being made to do something which in its own very nature cannot be done.

The expression "the curve of health," which was first used by Oliver Wen dell Holmes, himself a physician, indi cates in modern mathematical fashio the fluctuating changes in bodily health, of which all are at times aware and which may be expressed by vary ing curves outlined on paper. Many imagine that the normal state of health is best represented by a straight line. This is by no means the case. There is a rhythmic undulation in the flow of our vital force. The dynamo which furnishes the working powers of consciousness and action has its annual, monthly, daily waves, even its momentary ripples. We have our bad times and good times. Some by careful observation of the rise and fall of this curve, have so adjusted their holidays and times of rest and activity as to conserve their energies and avoid the snares of disease. It is from his knowledge of this curve that the family physician can act successfully.

Dutch Courage. Every one when he speaks of Dutch courage means courage that is induced by the cup that cheers and also inebriates-pot valiancy, in short, the exact opposite of what has been called "two and Erna Arpke, all of Shebovgan, o'clock-in-the-morning" courage. Three different origins of the expression have been suggested. According to some "Dutch" in this case is used simply as the adjective corresponding to the noon "Hollands," as applied to that kind of ardent spirits. Others assert positively that the phrase arose as a sneer at the Dutch troops who showed the white feather of Fontenoy. But rhaps the best explanation is that this uncomplimentary allusion to the count of the serious illness of the for- former times in Holland of encouragmer's brother-in-law, Ernst Wendorf. ing those who were condemned to execution to drink heavily before they

"I took Peruna for a worn-out con-dition. I was so run down that I could not sleep at night, had no appetite and felt tired in the morning.

"I tried many tonics, but Peruna was the only thing which helped me in the least. After I had taken but a half bottle I felt much better. I continued its use for three weeks and I was comrestored to health, and able to take up my studies which I had been forced to drop. There is nothing better than Peruna to build up the system."---Clementina Gonzales.

HUNDREDS STRUCK BLIND. Mysterious Eye Disease Asserting Itself in Central Africa.

in Central Africa.

A somewhat remarkable eye disease is at present prevalent in several parts of British central Africa, northeastern Rhodesia and in Portuguese Zambesia. At first it was noticeable in cattle, sheep and goats and only recently was it found to have attacked the natives. The disease, according to the London Mail, is at present raging from Port Herald, a British station on the Zambesi, right on toward Tete, a distance of over 200 miles, and at this latter place it is reported to be quite an epidemic.

William Arnott, a traveler who recently returned from Tete, states that he observed hundreds who were suffering from the disease, and a large number were totally blind. One of the sights of Tete on tally blind. One of the sights of Tete or tally blind. One of the signis of Tete on a Sunday morning is the long lines of blind people who enter the town to beg, each string being led by a little boy or girl. At first a white spot is observed on the eyeball and this in a short space of time becomes highly inflamed. The or time becomes nighty innamed. The eye then discharges a white, milky fluid and the whole of the eye becomes covered with a white film. This is the critical stage of the malady, and if the disease is very severe the eyeball bursts, thus destroying the sight entirely.

Valuable Pearl in Shoe.

Charles Bresloff of Long Island city Charles Bresloff of Long Island city received a registered package from his brother George, who is staying at Glenwood, L. I., which contained a beautiful pearl about the size of a five grain quinine pill, also a letter telling how it was found in Hempstead harbor by George. While he was clam digging in the harbor he picked up an old shoe entirely encrusted with mussels and oysters, and upon opening one of them discovered the pearl.

For two days he was chosen to act as van boy for a parcel delivery firm. He earned a few meals, but in a fit of aberration induced by the sight of a lady who was dressed in a costume similar to one he remembered his mother wearing at Dieppe, he allowed a ham to be stolen from the rear of the van. This procured his instant dismissal, with threats. Then every good site was jealously guarded by a gang of roughs who mercilessly bullied any newcomer. Personal strength and courage were unavailing against sheer numbers. This good Samaritan had repeated his gift on two occasions, and Philip had a fairly large supply of small coal, sent to his mother by the colliery company, so his position, desperate enough, was yet bearable had he but sought to accustom himself to the new conditions of life. The rain beating on the roofs and on the outer pavements combined with the weird sounds in the inclosed yard to make a terrifying racket, but it was not likly that a youth who attributed his escape from a loathsome death, self-inflicted, to the direct interposition of Providence in his behalf, would yield to any sentimental fears on that account. There was a chance that his wild broodings would have yielded to the necessity to earn a living, and that when next a situation was offered to him he would keep it, but the occurrences of this stormy night had utterly shaken him for the hour. He was on the verge of lunaey. As he passed through the dark archway leading to his abode, the desolate stable yard was fitfully lit by lightning, and in the distance he heard the faint rumble of thunder. The elemental strife was beginning again. This was the second and more disastrous outbreak of the evening of March 19.

While studying in the conservatory at Milan, Francesca Bisceglia, the accomplished and comely daughter of a Chicago garment cutter, has won the heart of the Count Edvardo Viancini of Milan, whom she soon will wed.

Four years ago Miss Bisceglia went to Italy to cultivate her voice, which Chicago musicians told her was of the rarest quality. Her father was a garment cutter, living in a dingy room at 128 Stave street. But he had an Italian's passion for music and a father's pride for his daughter, and he willingly made the sacrifices necessary for the trip.

In May of last year the girl received one of the greatest honors it is possible for the Italian government to bestow. She was admitted to the Verdi conservatory at Milan, being the first American girl to be so elected.

Soon after, at a reception, she met the

"Her faith made her whole," they say, and prove the assertion substantially as

A frail girl, she was taken ill with typhoid fever last March. When, after fifteen weeks, it left her, she was unable to walk without the aid of crutches. The Feast of the Assumption was last Tuesday. Many friends talked to her of the wonderful curative properties of the ocean waters on the day of the feast. Accompanied by her father, sister, and three brothers, she went to Coney Island, took off her shoes and stockings, and waded in the surf with the aid of crutches. Her sister rubbed the invalid's legs with salt water for a few minutes. The crippic then hobbled to shore, threw down her crutches, and minutes The crippie then nonned to shore, threw down her crutches, and walked away, easily, confidently, and

Man Wants to Hang.

Ten minutes after Henry J. Heusack had been hanged for murder at St. Louis, Mo., a man, aged and poorly of dressed, who said he was Chris Becker of St. Louis, asked the sheriff to be allowed to take the slayer's place on the gallows. He said he was tired of living and saw no reason why he should not be hanged. He was greatly down-cast when informed the prisoner already had been executed.

"I am tired of life," he said, "and Heusack wants to live. Why not let me die in his place? He would be better satisfied, I would be better satisfied, I would be better satisfied, and the law that demands an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, would be satisfied. Besides, I do not believe this man is guilty. This looks like a legal murder to me."

The man was locked in the observation ward at the city hospital.
