The King of Diamonds. A TALE OF MYSTERY AND ADVENTURE.

By LOUIS TRACY.

CHAPTER XIX. PHILIP ANSON REDEEMED. Next morning Mason trudged off to Seaside at an early hour. He ascertained that Green had quitted the Fox and Hounds Inn in time to catch the first train.

He returned to Grange House with the dogcart and drove Green to Seaside with his luggage, consisting of Philip's portmanteau and his own, together with a hatbox.

He touched his cap to Grenier, when the latter smiled affably on him from the luxury of a first-class carriage, and he pocketed a tip with a grin.

A porter was also lavishly, and the station master was urbanely himself as the dogcart and its driver, and the time London would be reached.

Left to himself, Mason handed over the dogcart to the hostler at the inn, paid for his hire, and again walked to the deserted farm. He surveyed every inch of the ground floor, carefully raked over the ashes in the grate, scrubbed the passage with a hard broom and water.

He kept a dog set out, for a long tramp over the moor. Nine miles off the dogcart was brought him to another line of railway. Thence he would book to London, and travel straight through, arriving at the capital at night, and not making the slightest attempt to communicate with Grenier or route.

There was little fear of comment or inquiry caused by the disappearance of the inhabitants of the Grange House. He and "Dr. Williams" were the only residents even slightly known to the distant village. Such stories as they needed for a month from an agent in the county town, and the rent paid in advance. It was not clear why the agent, who had kept it on his books until some one should claim it.

As the murderer walked and smoked his reflections were not quite cheerful. Now that he could cry "quits" with Philip Anson.

His experiences of the previous night were not pleasant. Never had he nor Grenier went to bed. They dozed un- easily in chairs until daylight, and then they admitted that they had committed Anson's body to the deep in a moment of unreasoning panic.

He might be found, and even if he were not identified, that confounded policeman might be moved to investigate the proceedings of the curious visitors to Grange House.

That was the weak part of their armor, but Grenier refused to admit the flaw.

"A naked man found in the sea—and he may never be found—has not 300 feet above sea level, and the sea is so deep that no constabulary brain could conceive it. And who is he? Not Philip Anson; Philip Anson is alive. Not Dr. Williams; Dr. Williams is sane, and that And your best friend, Mason, would not take him for you."

But Mason was not satisfied. Better he buried the body in the lonely farm—in the garden for choice. Then they would know where he was. The sea was too vague.

Of city for his pet him had not a job. Had Philip Anson killed him, or his wife, or his two children? They, too, were dead, in all probability. While in London he had made every sound inquiry, but always encountered a blank wall of negation. John and William Mason, even if they lived, did not know he was their father. They were lost to him utterly.

Curse Philip Anson. Let him be forgotten, anyway. Yet he contrived to think of him during the nine weary miles over the moor, during the long wait at the railway station, and during the slow hours of the journey to London.

On arriving at York, Grenier secured a lodging suite at the station, and entering his name in the register as "Philip Anson."

He drove to the postoffice and asked if there was any message for "Grenier."

Yes, it read: "Family still at Penzance. Persuaded friend that letter was only intended to create unpleasantness, but they took same view and returned to town. Will say nothing."

Unsigned, it came from a town near Beltham. Grenier smiled. He lit a letter tomorrow. Love, "PHILIP."

The second, to Mr. Abington: "Your message through Miss Affair quite undesired. Will explain by letter. Address, Station, York."

Then he entered a bank and asked for the manager.

"My name may be known to you," he said to the official, at the same time handing his card.

"I suppose I can flatter myself with the definite article. I am staying here some few days, and wish to carry out certain transactions requiring large sums of money. I will be glad to set your bank on special terms, of course, for opening a special account."

"We will be delighted."

"I will write a check now for £5000, which kindly place to my credit as soon as possible. Shall we say—the day after tomorrow?"

"That is quite possible. We will use all expedition."

"Thank you. You understand, this is merely a preliminary. I will need a credit larger sum, but I will pay in my next check after hearing from London. I am not quite sure about the amount of my private balance at the moment."

The name manager assured him there would be no difficulty whatever under such conditions.

Grenier obtained his passbook and check book after sitting on London before the other man's eyes.

For a small amount, an introduction would have been necessary. In the case of Philip Anson, the millionaire, a man who handled thousands so readily, it was needless. Moreover, his procedure was unexceptionable—strictly according to banking business.

Grenier rushed off to the station, caught a train for Leeds, went to the bank of a different company with different London agents, and carried through the same maneuver.

He returned to York and secured the services of the hotel typist. He wrote to Philip's banker, and he had a check for £5000, which he had handed thousands so readily, it was needless. Moreover, his procedure was unexceptionable—strictly according to banking business.

NEW YORK CHAMBER DISLIKES SHAW PLAN.

COMMERCIAL MEN DISAPPROVE OF SECRETARY'S PROPOSED RELIEF OF MONEY STRINGENCY.

Say It Would Prove Hazardous and Ask Repeal of Law Restricting Bank-Note Redemption.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Secretary Shaw's plan for the relief of the commercial stringency of money was disapproved by a committee of the chamber of commerce which made its report today.

The subject was referred to this committee several weeks ago, and a lengthy discussion was had by Jacob H. Schiff before the chamber.

The committee in its report expressed the opinion that the plan would prove a hazardous experiment and recommended the redemption of national bank notes.

The plan proposed by Secretary Shaw, which was submitted to Congress on December 6 and if adopted would permit national banks to issue a volume of additional government guaranteed currency equal in amount to 50 per cent of the amount of currency maintained by them.

They want them, but subject to a tax of 3 per cent, or 6 per cent, until repealed.

THE GLOVE MAKER.
The wearing of gloves is a more ancient custom than it is generally thought to be. Homer speaks of gloves and tells of one who wore them to protect his hands while working in his garden. The use of some coverings for the hands was known to the ancient Persians, and Old Testament writers also mention them. They were in such common use among the Romans that they were worn even in the wild country by the Britons. St. Anne, the mother of the Virgin Mary, was, it has been said, a knitter and manufacturer of gloves, for which reason the glove-makers of France long ago made her their patron saint. At one time gloves had a certain meaning attached to them and were chosen to show the character or occupation of the wearer. There are records of gloves being ordered for "grave and spiritual men." About this time, the sixteenth century, gloves made of chicken skin were used by both men and women for whitening the hands and were worn at night.—New York Tribune.

Three Firemen Injured. Lieut. O'Donnell and Pipeman Shannon Fall at Wilbur Warehouse Fire. MILWAUKEE HAS BAD FIRE. Third Assistant Chief Gunning Cut by Falling Glass in Directing Work of His Men.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Three firemen were hurt in the fire which gutted the stock warehouse of the Wilbur Stock Food company, 173-187 Second street and the plant of Julius Auer, 187 Second street, at 7:30 o'clock this morning.

The fire was one of the most dangerous fires fought by the department in several months. The building stands in the corner of Second and Wilbur streets, and is surrounded by sheds, barns, and more pronounced structures. A spray of fire from the roof of the building, which was about fifteen feet in width, separated it from the adjoining buildings. It was not until about 10:30 o'clock that the fire was under control.

During the battle with the flames, three separate alarms were turned in, and the special calls for engines sent by the chief.

ATE WIRE BY THE YARD.

Thirty-eight Feet of Picture Cord Found in Asylum Inmate's Stomach. Frank Wallace, an inmate of the state hospital for the insane at Norristown, Pa., ended his life by swallowing thirty-eight feet of fine wire, which was found in two sections in his stomach when an autopsy was made to disclose the cause of death.

Wallace, who was 24 years old, was transferred from the Philadelphia county prison. He suffered from delusions, and when he told his caretakers that he was "full of wire," the matter was regarded as improbable by the physicians. He insisted that an operation would confirm his statements, but he was too weak to undergo one, and was informed, by way of an attempt to cure his supposed delusion, that an operation would kill him.

"All right; cut me open when I'm gone," said Wallace just before he died.

The autopsy revealed the presence of a piece of wire three feet long rolled into a ball. The other piece was thirty-eight feet three inches long and was partly rolled into a ball, although twelve feet of this had unwound and had worked and pierced through the intestines, causing peritonitis. With the mass of wire was found a piece of brown straw four inches long. The case is the oldest in the history of the hospital, and the physicians' experience of Dr. D. D. Richardson. The wire was the kind used in hanging pictures.

Tumors Conquered Without Operations

Unparalleled Success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in Cases of Mrs. Fox and Miss Adams. One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy, Tumor.

Another Case of Tumor Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Dear Mrs. Pinkham: About three years ago I had intense pain in my stomach, with cramps and raging colic, and I was unable to eat or drink. I had tried many doctors, but they did not get any better. I was examined and, to my surprise, declared I had a tumor.

I felt sure that it meant my death warrant, and was very despondent. I spent hundreds of dollars in doctoring, but the tumor grew, till the doctor said that nothing but an operation would save me. Fortunately, I had heard of your Compound, and I bought a bottle of it. I took it as directed, and in ten days I was able to eat and drink. I had entirely disappeared without an operation. I had heard of your Compound, and I bought a bottle of it.
