WOULD ARBITRATE STRIKE

REPRESENTATIVES OF OPERATORS AND WORKMEN MEET TO RECONCILE DIFFERENCES.

DEMAND TRIMMED DOWN.

Proposition of Owners for Award Not Definitely Declined, but Favor Agreement for One Year.

MAHANOV CITY, Pa., April 5.—John Hersker, an independent coal operator here, was informed by telephone today from New York city by an operator that the anthracite mine owners will refuse all of the miners' demands. Hersker was advised to prepare for a strike.

To Reconcile Differences. NEW YORK, April 5.—The sub-committee, representing the anthracite mine owners and the miners, made another attempt today to reconcile the differences existing between the employers and their workmen.

Before going into session there were no surface indications that the meeting would bring about agreement that would send the men back to work.

No Agreement Reached. The conference adjourned at 2:15. It was understood that the agreement had been reached. After the conference the operators' committee went to the office of President Thomas of the Lehigh railway, where they held a meeting.

It was announced that another peace meeting will be held next Monday at 3:30 p. m.

The anthracite miners have proposed arbitration by the present board of conciliation.

Demands Were Trimmed Down. The representatives of the miners were reported to have trimmed down their original demands, and had not yet definitely declined the proposition of the operators for a one-year agreement.

By the first of next week he believed 200,000 men will be at work in the company pits. The independent operators are making repairs to the mines.

Keefe Calls on Mitchell. One of his associates today was Daniel J. Keefe of Chicago, international president of the Longshoremen's union. Mr. Keefe called on Mitchell, president of the operators' association, to discuss the anthracite strikes of 1900 and 1902.

Keefe frequently visits Mitchell and his lieutenants and was of much assistance to them.

More Mines Resume Work. PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 5.—Work was resumed today at several mines. F. L. Robbins claims his company is doing as much business as it can handle.

By the first of next week he believed 200,000 men will be at work in the company pits. The independent operators are making repairs to the mines.

Bloodshed is Averted. IRWIN, Pa., April 5.—At the Madison mine near here, today the strikers attempted to hold a meeting to induce men at work from the mine. No one was hurt.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., April 5.—Reports from all the coal mining districts of Indiana show that twenty-two operators have started work.

Iowa Nearer Settlement. DES MOINES, Ia., April 5.—After adopting a resolution providing for the majority rule to govern the meeting of the general convention and the scale committee, the miners and operators of Iowa today referred to the joint scale committee, which is now in session.

Dynamic and Assault. WILKES BARRE, Pa., April 5.—Dynamite was exploded under the steam pipes in the mine of Lehigh and Wilkes Barre coal companies today. The strikers fired until repairs could be made.

Patrick Dolan Ousted. PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 5.—When the miners' district convention meeting today a resolution was adopted with but one dissenting vote, expelling from the organization the late Secretary Patrick Dolan, and former Vice President Uriah Bellinzoni.

VON BUELOW IN FAINT

MOROCCO AFFAIR SAPS HIS STRENGTH; AND HEALTH.

Carried from Reichstag after Making Address—Had Been Taking Medicines for Considerable Time.

BERLIN, April 5.—Chancellor von Buelow, while attending the debate in the Reichstag today, fainted and was carried to a committee room by some of the members of the House.

The chancellor made a speech on the subject of Morocco and was listening to the answer of Herr Bebel, the Socialist leader, when he was taken ill.

The vice president then adjourned the sitting for a quarter of an hour during which deep sleep prevailed throughout the House.

Princess von Buelow remained alone with her husband, Emperor William came to the door but was not permitted to enter as the chancellor was sleeping.

Prince von Buelow spoke for about half an hour in a forceful manner today in his usual animated style.

His face was very red and he seemed to be suffering from a severe cold.

He was understood to have been taken to the American embassy that night for three months past.

His wife's breakdown was undoubtedly caused by overwork during the Morocco campaign.

PAUL NOCOUET LURED TO DEATH.

Gives Up Life in Swamps of Long Island After Unsuccessful Balloon Trip.

NEW YORK, April 5.—Paul Nocoquet, sculptor and aeronaut, has announced the cause of the death of his wife, who was found dead in the swamps of Long Island, two miles from the spot where the balloon in which he ascended from the Bronx Tuesday afternoon was found.

A coroner's investigation into the death of Nocoquet will be made tomorrow.

To determine the exact cause of his death, an autopsy will be held. It is believed that Nocoquet died from heart failure, following complete physical exhaustion and mental anguish.

The theory that he was crazed by fear was strengthened by the facts learned after the finding of his body last night.

The finding of Nocoquet's body revealed a tragedy more appalling than any in the annals of ballooning.

Noquet lay down to die amidst a rain of safety, after a struggle for life.

A succession of creeks, stretches of swamp broken by little islands formed a barrier between the stranded aeronaut and the twinkling lights that danced through the darkness.

His body was found on the landward side of one of the islands that sprang from the treacherous ground.

It was the tenth creek he had crossed, and there he died.

Strapped around him was the life preserver he had carried in his balloon.

On the other side of the creek lay his captives. Just then Capt. Purdy and another boatman came along, but they decided to wait until the tide had run out for a time.

They then went to get the body and bring it ashore.

Story of the Last Flight. According to Arthur Wood, an architect of Garden City, the balloon, when it passed there, was near enough to the shore for the voice of the aeronaut to be heard.

He leaped over the edge of the car and shouted to some boys, according to Wood, to "Is this Garden City?"

The boys shouted back that it was and that Nocoquet was dead.

"I have been trying to make a landing, but my grappling iron is broken," he called out when he made his landing on Tuesday afternoon, kissed his hands in French fashion to friends and said: "I am going to cause a sensation. I am going to give you a surprise."

Noquet was born in Brussels in 1857, and at the age of 14 studied painting under Jean Portaels.

Farm for Sale or Trade. A good stock farm of 100 acres, 1 mile from Campbellsport with good buildings, good well, windmill and a good line of fences. Finest location in the neighborhood. The farm was sold twice, once for $8,000 and once for $9,000, but there is a jealous party in this neighborhood who always spoils my trade and runs the farm down and runs me down just for spite and tells people stories to frighten them from buying. Land buyers should not listen to his talk as it is not more than a gust of wind. If anybody wants to buy a fine home they should write or call on the owner. PETER BRODZELER, R. R. 32 Campbellsport.

MAMMOTH WHITE OAK LOG.

Delivered at Warren; Sixty-two Feet Long, Seven Through.

A white oak tree, the largest ever cut in Trumbull county, at least for fifty years, was brought to the Helman ship timber mill at Warren, O. The tree as it was delivered to the mill measured sixty-two feet in length and seven feet through, and contained 765 feet of lumber, board measure. The tree was located by Mr. Helman's buyers on the farm of C. K. Shipman on Gustavus and 3100 roads, about one and a half miles from the man's love each ring found on a tree, counting out from the center, means a year's growth, and the workmen who cut the tree counted 1050, and then tried not finishing the job. The Helman company will dress the stick down to 20x20 inches, sixty-two feet long, and will ship it to New York to be used as a dredge anchor.

TERRIBLE SCALP HUMOR.

Badly Affected with Sores and Crusts—Extended Doctoring Behind the Ears—Another Cure by Cuticura.

"About ten years ago my scalp became badly affected with sores and itching humors, crusts, etc., and extended down behind the ears. My hair came out in places, also. I was greatly troubled; understood it was eczema. Tried various remedies, but without effect. Saw your Cuticura advertisement, and got the Cuticura Remedies at once. Applied them as to directions, etc., and after two weeks, I think, of use, was clear as a whistle. I have to state also that late last fall, October and November, 1904, I was suddenly afflicted with a bad eruption, painful and itching pustules over the lower part of the body. I suffered dreadfully. In two months, under the skillful treatment of my doctor, conjoined with Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I found myself cured. Dr. F. Weiss, Hammond, Christian Co., Ill., Aug. 31, 1905."

His Fate Sealed.

A new member was beseeching and pleading with the speaker on a certain committee. Mr. Cannon shook his head. He would be glad to do it, but it was not practicable.

"Then, Mr. Speaker," said the new member, "you sent my wife. My failure to get on this committee simply ruins me with my people, and I had no relatives to go home."

With solemn face the speaker extended a hand, and all he said was "Good-bye."—Washington Post.

Betting on Cricket Fights.

Sixty Chinese have been arraigned before the Hong Kong court charged with gambling by betting on the results of cricket fights.

Many thousands of people journey from Canton to see the cricket fights. The crickets themselves are valued by their owners at enormous prices, a victorious cricket fetching sometimes hundreds of dollars.—South China Post.

Set a Herd of Cattle Afire.

A few days ago two cowboys on the Matador ranch near Channing were dipping cattle in oil. They found one under a steer and after dipping it brandied it.

The heat of the branding iron set fire to the hair of the steer which was soaked with oil, and it immediately dashed into a bunch of steers which were being dipped. The fire spread to the other steers, setting them afire, from which forty died.—Texico Trumpet.

SISTER JEAN.

By the Author of "Bubbles," "In His Father's Footsteps," "Bitter Than His Word," "No Immediate Prospect," etc.

CHAPTER VI.

"She insists upon seeing you, but she is very weak. You must be careful." There is not much need to ask Gerald to be careful and tender in his dealings with Rupert Dunstan's poor little widow. He has shown compassion on a thousand ways since the funeral day, nearly a month ago, when she broke down completely, and he carried her upstairs sobbing and moaning in incipient delirium.

So Gerald is admitted, and though at first he has a faint suspicion that she is hardly controlled her sobbing sufficiently to think him for his quietly expressed sympathy, the interview does her no harm. When Jean comes in with the tea, after leaving them to themselves for as long as she deems advisable her patient is lying back in the freight looking pitifully small and fragile in the white chair, with a tingling color to her white cheeks, and a tremulous smile about her lips. She even finds her pretty cuffed head at her friend with a little air of triumph. "You see I am better, not worse," she says, in her sweet, weak voice. "I knew Mr. Barclay would do me good—and see what he has brought!"

"The package is in your thin fingers a cluster of fragrant autumn violets, and holds them up for Jean to inhale their scent. "This is the time for her bodily health rapidly improves, until at last Jeanie can safely leave her and go back to her own home, where she has not slept a night since Rupert's death, and steadily resists all pleadings.

"Please don't ask me," she says tearfully. "I may come, but I cannot leave her yet. Mr. Barclay says I must, unless I like; we have the rooms for six months, and the rent is paid." "But, dear, don't you think that fresh air?"

"No, they would be worse than anything," says the young widow quickly. "I would live here always," she goes on, with a firmness that she does not seem to possess. "If I could, it is wrong, perhaps, but anything fresh, any new plan, seems like leaving him further behind."

"Gerald looks at the package little by little, and in the end he takes it from her in his heart to hide the girl. "It is a mistake, perhaps, but I cannot force her," she says to Gerald, "and you encourage her in her whim." "The poor Rupert took the place for so long!" "He did not," Gerald says guiltily, "the arrangement has been made since."

"That is all, and pretty tough work too," she says to Gerald. "I thought, 'This is a little more,' he tells her vaguely. "There has been no final settlement with Macnab & Co., you know, and no one of value to do a running account with the publishers."

"Everyone of those reviews was adverse," she proceeds, eyeing him narrowly. "The best that any of them said was that the lyrics were graceful or tender." "What became of them?" he interrupts unconcernedly.

"I burnt them all, except—that one." "Cissy took it. She was reading and crying over it, half that terrible night before the funeral. I should like to see her cheeks as she reads it. She was so mad, so vehement, passion—to tell that man—that murderer—what he has done!" Gerald glances momentarily at her, then turns his eyes away.

"That is a hard word, Sister Jean. He may have thought he was doing his duty." "Nothing of the kind," she returns hotly. "It was not his duty to make a personal attack on the poor dying boy. Because he thought, and Cissy thought, that he could not be called a murderer, he called mad and conceited? I wish—I wish—I wish he were broken as she passionately repeats herself—that that ignorant brute who called him a murderer, may have come in that night and seen his handiwork!"

"Who is calling names now?" asks Gerald, with would-be lightness. "Of course," she says bitterly, "you defend your own profession." "It is not my profession," he says gently. "I am too busy now with my work to sit in judgment on other people's."

"I am glad to hear it," she returns shortly. But an instant later she holds out her hand with a winning smile. "I know, then, she says, withdrawing her hand with an embarrassed little laugh, "that I hate to be watched and weighed as you have a trick of doing."

Newspapers, her conscience stabs her as she speaks. "The doctor," she says, "she has grown so accustomed to having him always to care for her, always on the alert to serve her and anticipate her wishes, that it is pleasant rather than otherwise to feel that his eyes are upon her, to know that she has only to turn her head in that direction to meet with instant sympathy and comprehension."

"That last night," she begins in quite a different tone, "you and Rupert must have had some talk while Cis and I were out of the room, before the postman came." "He nods. "Was it then that you made him some such remark?" "Yes, how did you know?" "He reminded you of it, afterwards," she says, poor fellow, he did. "I was alone, along, that it was hopeless," she muses sadly.

"Yes, he surprised me by his knowledge. He spoke of his wife and her plea of ignorance, or of her being unjustly treated, that it is pleasant rather than otherwise to feel that his eyes are upon her, to know that she has only to turn her head in that direction to meet with instant sympathy and comprehension."

"I am looking into these pockets, he says, "I never had a gun with me until that night, when he was always accompanied by his faithful dog, and as a weapon to be used in the case of an emergency, he carried a hatchet, with which he had killed many a bear that he found lying in one of his traps." Bennington Co. Bennington, Vt.

A New Thrust. What is supposed to be the first and only recorded instance of the dusky thrush (Turdus dussumieri), a native of Asia, is reported to have been seen in the State of New Hampshire. The bird closely resembles the fieldfare in point of size, and its note is almost indistinguishable from that of the latter. In Europe the dusky thrush is of rare occurrence, having only been introduced recently to the continent by a succession of adverse winds, which have brought it many miles to the west of its normal range. The bird is found in most countries in Asia, and at certain points traverses the great Pacific Ocean, as testified by the capture of one at San Francisco, by Mr. J. M. Gillette, of the U. S. Fish Commission.

Arbor and Bird Day.

MADISON, Wis., April 2.—The state superintendent of public instruction will issue the annual Arbor and Bird Day book. The book has been prepared by Miss Anna Barrett, librarian in the office of the state superintendent. It is printed by the Wisconsin State Printing Co., Madison, Wis. The book contains a list of trees and birds, and is intended to be used by the schools during the month of April.

"It is a horrible horror," she says, "how hollow his cheeks have grown, how his whole person has aged since I had two lives instead of one on my conscience."

"Your conscience"—call it what you will, I don't want my burden added to, I can tell you."

"You have carried it easily enough for two months or more," she says bitterly. "The simple quiet question quenching her wrath as no passionate self-defense would do. That he has found some of life's burdens quickly, and by a rapid movement she steps between her and the other. "You shall never forget—never."

"Oh, but we will talk about it," says Gerald quickly, and by a rapid movement she steps between her and the other. "You shall never forget—never."

"I am glad to see you, Mr. Barclay."

"She almost quails before the flash in his eyes, but she does not. He looks straight at her with steady hopelessness.

"Miss Carlyle then, it is quite true that you are not a good talker, but you are a good listener. I am glad to see you, Mr. Barclay."

"I wish to have it said," he cries passionately. "But I did not, and if the time were to come again I should act just as I do now." Miss Carlyle, where are you going?"

A CURE FOR DEBILITY

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. A Cure for Debility, Weakness, and All the Blood-Making Elements.

When the body is weak and the blood thin it is sometimes difficult to find the cause unless a wasting illness has preceded, or the sufferer happens to be a girl on the verge of womanhood.

Obscure influences, something unhealthy in one's surroundings or work, may lead to a slow impoverishment of the blood and an enfeeblement of the whole body. When a serious stage has been reached there seems to be nothing that will account for it.

Mr. C. E. Lager, of Dilton, W. Va., has found a successful method of treating weakness and bloodlessness. He says: "I was cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

"You are your cure to these pills?" "I certainly do, and I also know that they are helping others to whom I have recommended them. They have a merit and I know of nothing that would take their place."
