PRISONERS TO MAKE ROADS Australia's Plan to Start Criminals or Right Track.

A novel experiment is about to be tried by the government of Victoria, Australia. A sum of $25,000 has beer placed in the administration's estimate for the making of roads by prisoner through the "bush" in unsettled parts of the state. Each prisoner who does his work well will be paid a regular daily wage, the amount to accumulate until his release, when, as the premier says, he "will have a respectable sum with which to make a new start in life."

Mexican Ocelot a Great Jumper.

One of the most interesting animals of the new world and yet one of which little seems to be written, even by sportsmen who have spent much time in Mexico and the central American states, is the occlot, the strange little spotted cat of the dense jungles of tropical parts of the two Americas.

They are not nearly so heavy as the

the two Americas.

They are not nearly so heavy as the average lynx of the eastern woods and are infinitely lighter on their feet. They run with the greatest agility up and down the almost perpendicular trunks of trees and follow a crippled bird out on limbs too slender, it would seem, to bear the weight of the parrot, let alone the cat. Parrots are the occlot's prinbear the weight of the parrot, let alone the cat. Parrots are the occlot's principal food, and their hunting is done almost altogether by day, though like all the cat tribe they are thoroughly at home in the blackest night.

The parrots which they hunt frequent the thickets of forests, coming to the ground only in the rare open spaces and along the banks of the many small streams where they drink. In order to follow them, it is necessary that the occlusts be great jumpers, and so they are. When I was following the hounds through the southern California hills after wildcats and an occasional mountain lion I was wont to say that the latter was the greatest jumper on earth. latter was the greatest jumper on earth.

Records of the death harvest show that few of those who died in the woods were killed by fellow hunters, most of the fatal accidents being due to carelessness in handling firearms. This death list of eight may be enlarged to ten, as two hunters, E. B. Caldwell and J. S. Lincoln of Duluth, are lost in the woods near Grand Marais, Mich. Most of the casualities occurred this year in Wisconsin. This is probably due to the fact that a person shooting a fellow hunter in Michigan is arrested for manslaughter. On "one was shot and killed in upper Michigan. Bert Cook, of Newberry, was killed by Percy Crawford, a friend, who mistook him for a deer. There were no serious injuries to Nimrods in the upper peninusla that have come to notice.

Flagman Too Late.

Before, it is said, a flagman could get back to protect the other train, the Atlanta train dashed into it. The heavy engine of the train plowed into the private car of President Spencer in which he and his guests are supposed to have been sleeping.

Immediately the private car caught fire. The wreckage was piled around the engine as though placed there by human hands to be consumed. Every piece of woodwork on the engine was burned and the monster machine stands there torn and twisted and will have to be turned down the embankment as it is useless.

Davis' Death Touching.

Dispatcher Davis was alive when he was taken from under the wreckage. He was crushed about the lower portion of the body and was conscious until the end. He asked that word be sent to his wife and child. The death of Mr. Davis was touching. He stated to his rescuer that he knew he was dying and knew that the end could not be far off.

"Place your finger on my mouth," he said. "It feels so cool and good," he pleaded with the man, who was also a passenger on the train, not to leave him, and for ten minutes this man stayed with him until he saw that nothing more could be done for him.

EFFECT OF WATER ON COAL.

How It Assists Combustion-Does Not Make the Coal Last. It is often asserted that water on bituminous coal both aids combustion and "makes the coal last." Housewives, office men who live where this coal is used and who are compelled to maintain stove or furnace fires, are firm believers, as a rule, in this paradox. That water on coal cannot do both, these people would know if they but thoughtfully considered it a

The facts are these (and anyone may The facts are these (and anyone may easily verify them): In a light fire, that is to say, a stove or house furnace, water sprinkled on large lump coal really eauses it to burn more rapidly. It soaks into the strata, into the porous surface, and being there converted into steam, the lump is split into parts, or the surface becomes corrugated and cavernous, they desired to leave a reacher that the correct of the surface becomes corrugated and cavernous, they desired to leave a reacher the surface becomes corrugated and cavernous. thus offering a larger area of carbon to the active oxygen of the air. If the water is in excess of the amount which will do this, it then no longer aids combustion, but retards it. Again, if the coal is fine, a small dampness, nothing approaching wetness, however, may increase combus-tion by holding the particles apart, thus permitting the air to be admitted. In short, says the Scientific American, water on coal favors combustion, when it does favor it, only by assisting the oxygen of the air to find more ready access to the surfaces of the carbon. TURKISH HEIR IS A PRISONER.

Prof. Boni, the Italian archaeologist, has just completed his greatest undertaking, the restoration of Trajan's column, this task having consisted in replacing no fewer than fifteen pieces of marble which had fallen out of their places in the column, thus menacing a possible collapse of the entire structure.

Would Not Write to Order.

I once asked Pinero to write me a play of a certain style, and to emphasiize my predilection for the subject, I suggested a considerable preliminary payment, which my one time experience with Sardou taught me might gain instant approval. Mr. Pinero pondered over the matter for a day or two, but at the apinted hour said:

Your offer is generous, but I can't see my way to accepting it. I must write according to my own subjects and my own convictions. But I am at work now on a piece. As soon as it is done I will send you the play as usual. Produce it if you think your public will like it. If not, it doesn't matter."

The play turned out to be "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray"—his greatest work. I did feel timorous about producing it. I thought our public was not ready for a theme that indicated as radical a change in my policy of productions. cal a change in my policy of productions at the Lyceum, in spite of the fact that it was a great work.

THE FARMER IN WESTERN CAN-ADA.

The Quality of No. 1 Hard Wheat

Cannot Be Beaten. The Canadian West in the past five or ten years has given a set back to the theory that large cities are the backbone of a country and a nation's best asset. Here we have a country where no city exceeds 100,000, and where only one comes within easy distance of that that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable figure, according to the census just taken and where no other city reaches a population exceeding 15,000. The places with a population over 5,000 can be counted upon the fingers of one hand, and yet the prosperity that prevails is something unprecedented in the history of all countries past or

The reason for this marvelous prosperity is not hard to seek. The large majority of the 810,000 people who inhabit Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have gone on to the farm, and have betaken themselves to the task of not only feeding and clothing themselves, but of raising food for others less happily circumstanced. The crop of 1906, although not abnormal, is an eye-opener to many who previously had given little thought to the subject. Ninety million bushels of wheat at 70 cents per bushel-$63,000,-000: 76,000,000 bushels of oats at 30 Pinkham is daughter-in-law of cents per bushel-$22,800,000; 17,000,-$92,600,000. This is altogether outside the root products; dairy produce, and the returns from the cattle trade; the beet sugar industry and the various other by-products of mixed farming.

When such returns are obtainable from the soil it is not to be wondered at that many are leaving the congested districts of the east, to take upon themselves the life of the prairie farm and the labor of the husbandman.

With the construction of additional railroads, new avenues for agricultural enterprise are opening up, and improved opportunities are offered to the settler who understands prairie farming, and is willing to do his part in building up the new country.

This is the theme that Mr. J. J. Hill, the veteran railroad builder in the West, has laid before the people in a series of addresses which he has given at various points during the past few months, and, having been for so long identified with the development of the West, there are few men better qualified than he to express an opinion upon it. Take care of the country, says he, and the cities will take care of them-

The farmers of the Western States and the Canadian West are more prosperous than ever before, and when it comes to measuring up results, the Canadian appears to have somewhat the better of it. His land is cheaper, in fact, the government continues to give free homesteads to settlers, and the returns per acre are heavier when the crop is harvested. Farming land in the Western States runs from $60 to $150 an acre and up, whereas equally good soil may be purchased in Canada for $8 to $15 per acre, within easy reach of a shipping point, and much f this is available for free homesteading. The quality of the Canadian No. 1 hard wheat cannot be beaten, and the returns to the acre are several bushels better than on this side of the line. The soil and climate of that country being peculiarly adapted to wheat

The fact is evidently appreciated by the large number of American farmers who have in the past two or three years settled in the Canadian West. The agents of the Canadian government. whose address may be found elsewhere, advise us that for the fiscal year 1904-5, the records show that 43,-543 Americans settled in Canada, and in 1905-6 the number reached 57,796. From all of which it appears that at present there is a good thing in farmng in Western Canada, and that the American farmer is not slow to avail

CHAPTER I.

"Now, Sadie, tell me candidly-how do I look?" It was the night of the Sunniford hos-pital ball, a grand affair which was always held on the first Friday in December, and was regarded as a sort of inauguration of the winter festivities. No

Julia answered new dresses which were to do duty during the coming season made their first appearance, and sad indeed was the heart of the fair maiden who was unable to appear in a new toilette on that important occasion.

For the past three years Salome Fenwick's admirer added rather secrely, with a ludicrous air of pious disapproval. "She's such a jolly girl, I thought she would have had more sense." "Oh, but when a girl is in love, you makir, the pure pink-and-white complexion with the served with the

Let me gather my roses while I may, my dear; the frost will come, soon enough, and wither them up," Sadie added, as she looked again at the fair face, with its brilliant coloring and luminous eyes, that seemed to offer a flat denial of the words. She smiled again.

Her wishes, Mrs. Fenwick looked so aghast tribute of respect and affection a Moro knows, and given him his heir.

Strange things happened. In February of 1903 the captain was invited to Bayan, the scene of the first fight, to confer with the supposedly half hostile datto of that rancheria.

For three years, then, Sadie had been the acknowledged belle, not only of the hospital ball, but of all the dances. No matter how late she might be in arriving, the men reserved their dances, and displayed an aggravating reluctance to be introduced to expectant partners until Sadie's card was filled. Except for a few dances which she reserved for one or two favorite partners she was strictly impartial in the distribution of her favors; first come was first served with her. Sadie shrugged her shoulders important things to occupy his thoughts; sterling qualities which are far more important than the state of Cauca, United States of Colombia, in 1866, when he pulled up a small tree by the roots, and there in the sand lay an even baker's dozen of regularly shaped gold fishhooks of the ordinary size. Mrs. Cota, Confined to Bed and in Constant Pain, Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Rheumatism can be inherited and that fact proves it to be a disease of the blood. It is necessary, therefore, to treat it through the blood if a permanent cure is expected. External applications may give temporary relief from pain but as long as the poisonous acid is in the blood the pain will return, perhaps in a new place, but it will surely return. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure rheumatism because they go directly to the seat of the disorder, purifying and enriching the blood.
