Pin Boy Lifts Ton in a Night.

Bowlers who stop to figure how many pounds they lift, carry and roll during an evening's play are astonished to find how much work they do in pursuit of pleasure. But even those who are curious enough to wonder how much work they do themselves seldom trouble themselves about the much abused pinboy. The pinboy does more work in one evening than do several bowlers as figures show.

The regulation pin weighs a little more than three pounds, and the whole set weighs approximately thirty-five pounds. If every bowler rolled perfectly scores the pinboy would have to lift the pins and place them after every ball, and each bowler rolls probably an average of sixteen balls, the pinboy would have lifted 560 pounds by the time the game was completed.

Making an allowance for the pins that do not fall, the pinboy probably sets up on an average two-thirds of the pins after each bowler finishes his inning. This would give the boy a record of 373 pounds lifting pins in the game. Each man bowls three games when playing with a team, and hence the pinboy sets up 1,119 pounds of pins for one man in the course of the evening's play. Five men constitute a team, and thus for each team, the pinboy sets up enough pins to weigh 5,594 pounds.

This amount only represents the weight of the pins. The pinboy also has to lift the balls from the pit up to the chute and shove them back to the bowlers. The average ball used by men who play on teams weighs seventeen pounds. The largest number of balls a player can roll in a ten-inning game is twenty-one, and the smallest eleven. Splitting the difference, a good bowler may be said to average sixteen balls. In one game the boy lifts balls weighing 272 pounds, and in the three games 716 pounds. Setting pins for a five-man team, the boy lifts balls weighing 3,580 pounds. Adding the amounts lifted in pins and balls, the much abused pin setter lifts in one evening 9,174 pounds. Alley managers wonder why pin boys are scarce! He lifts almost five tons in one night.

The One Exception.

The topic of debate at the Poets' club meeting was, "Which of the Sexes Contributes Most to Life's Happiness?"

"I think," said a woman called upon to speak on the feminine side, "that there is no doubt that man contributes most to the life happiness of woman—that is" (upon second thought) "unless he happens to be her husband."

Not Innocent.

"Tommy, I'm going to punish you severely."

"What for, pa?"

"Now, don't try that innocence game. I know all the bad things you've done today."

"No, you don't, pa. You don't know where I hid the strap you whacked me with."

No spooling of wheels by adding the tire too short. It does far more work than can be done by taking the tire off. No boring of the felloe for new bolt holes.
