The Machine that Does it Right.

The great utility of this machine consists in the saving of time, labor and expense, and we set forth the following advantages over the old way of setting tires: No tires are taken off. No bolts are taken out and thrown away. Any degree of dishcan be put in the wheel. Four tires can be set in one-half hour's time. No hammering or marring of fellos. No spoiling of wheels by welding the tires too short. It does far more work than can be done by taking the tire off. No boring of the fellos for new bolt holes.

Perfect Womanhood

The greatest essence to woman's permanent happiness in life is the suffering that comes from some derangement of the feminine organs. Many thousands of women have realized this too late to save their lives, barely in time to save their lives.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The great woman's remedy for woman's ills, made only of roots and herbs. It cures Female Complaints, such as Dragging Sensations, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and all Organic Diseases, and is invaluable in the Change of Life. It dissolves and Expels Tumors at their early stage. Subdues Faintness, Nervous Prostration, Exhaustion, and strengthens and tones the Stomach, Cures Headache, General Debility, Indigestion, and invigorates the whole female system. It is an excellent remedy for derangements of the Kidneys in either sex.

How to Exercise the Bowels

Your intestines are lined inside with millions of little suckers, that draw the Nutrition out of food as it passes them. But if the food passes too slowly, it decays before it gets through. Then the little suckers draw Poison from it instead of Nutrition.

This Poison makes a Gas that injures your system more than the food should have nourished it. You see, the food is Nourishment; Poison, just according to how long it stays in transit.

They do not waste any precious fluid of the Bowels, as Catholics do. They do not relax the Intestines by greasing them inside like Castor Oil or Glycerine. They simply stimulate the Bowel Muscles to do their work naturally, contentedly, and nutritiously.

And, Exercise these Bowel Muscles are thus forced to take, makes them stronger for the future, just as Exercise makes your arm stronger.

"CADET ROUSSELLE"

CHAPTER XIX.—(Continued.) His face paled a little in speaking. Bebe raised her, all stilled with tears, and sobbed out:

"Oh, yes, yes, Cadet Rouselle—dear Cadet Rouselle, you know I do!" The color came back into Cadet Rouselle's cheeks, and he made an effort as if to take the little trembling hands stretched out to him. The impulse was checked however on the instant, and with a decisiveness which drew him further from her.

"Thank you," he said simply, but with a slight hushiness in his voice. "I am glad that you are so kind to me, and I am perfectly true; and though it makes no earthly difference of course to the matter in hand, and cannot certainly benefit me in any worldly way, I am nevertheless glad to think that you are still being in me so far. I fancy that in after-years you may be glad of it too."

"That is all I am going to say to you, my dear friend. I should like of course to ask you also to believe that, in spite of the immense advantages to be derived from an immediate marriage, and an adventurer like myself from a marriage with you, and the weight of argument which your guardian has brought to show that I am not only a poor fellow, but stooped to the basest methods for ensuring the success of my plan, my acquaintance with you did, in truth, spring from the most accurate and disinterested of motives from force of circumstances rather than from desire; and until this moment I had not the slightest idea that you were any other than a poor, friendless and alone in the world as myself, and no better off in worldly goods—Bebe Richard, in short, not being engaged, I'm not going to strain your credulity as far as this however, because though you, being young and tender-hearted, might be inclined to the present proposal, I regard you as my grandfather and guardian would very soon bring you round to their opinion, if only by reminding you that a man blackguardly unscrupulous enough to do what they accuse me of would be equally unscrupulous in denying it. That's true enough, you see, and since neither details nor assertions are worth anything without proof, I repeat that I don't propose to offer either."

"Meaning, as I'm afraid we must conclude, that you are unable to do so?" said Mr. Langley, who had been listening to him with a sneer, pardonable perhaps under the circumstances. It had the effect of irritating the younger man beyond endurance.

"For your sake, Mr. Langley, I repeat that it should be so, for I am bound to tell you that, while eager and anxious to do what he would, the only child of his long-lost and deeply-mourned father, and determined to overlook any faults or indiscretions of which her extreme youth and inexperience may have been guilty, your great-uncle distinctly begged me to inform you that his present opinion of your conduct with regard to her is in the honor of the family to condone."

"The honor of the family," cried Cadet Rouselle passionately. "What have you, a wretched attorney, to do with that, that you dare to quote it as if it were about my honor! Bah! His blaise of passion was suddenly quenched in a bitter laugh. "You'll tell me, I suppose, that I have allowed myself to be misled by your words, and that I could guard that, and if my wife's—well, enough of this and of the whole of it."

"Bebe!" he turned almost fiercely on the terrified, half fainting girl, still supported by her guardian's arm. "I told you in that conversation, which you did me the honor to believe, that I had no other errors and iniquities may be, I had never, save on that one luckless evening, wronged any man of a penny piece during the whole of my life. Well, nor had I ever injured a woman knowingly, or to my own profit. I hold to that statement now. I have wronged no man, I have tricked no one, I have not a great property, who might have wedded along with the best and smartest in the land, into marriage with a shabby, disreputable relation, living on my wages, and with little else to back them. Well, I'm sorry, you may not believe it, but I am, as sorry as you can be; and what is more, I decline to retract it. Do you hear that, sir? I decline either to abide or profit by it. You may tell my wife, and then I'll be gone."

"Your answer to—You decline? I don't understand you, Mr. Garnier!" the lawyer stammered. "I don't understand you, Mr. Garnier!" he said again, more harshly than before. "And yet it is simple enough," he said mockingly. "You see, there are two sides to every question, and you are looking at it from his own. The little girl whom I found friendless and exposed to perils worse than robbery or violence on the London streets, and from a few shillings in her pocket, and to earn more, the little girl whom I pitied and loved—the possibility of my relationship before she had entered your mind—whom I placed under the protection of a kind and virtuous woman, guarding her honor as if it were her own, and who, the girl whom I married this morning, and for whom, because I loved her for the love and respect she had in me, I would have changed my wife, my trade, my work like a navvy, if need be, to keep her comfortably and make her happy—well, that is my answer to you."

"One Advantage of a Long Night. "The Land of the Midnight Sun" was a least shortly before his last sickness," he exclaimed. "All right, I find that the most inspiring subject. In the land of the midnight sun, the days are six months long, and so are the nights. Just think what a blessing that would be to some of us. Why, if one of my creditors came to me and said: 'Berry, I want you to pay up that $10 you owe me,' and then I wouldn't hear any more of it for twelve months."—Boston Herald.

CHANGE IN FOOD. Works Wonders in Health. It is worth knowing that a change in food can cure dyspepsia. "I deem it my duty to let you know how Grape-Nuts food has cured me of indigestion. I had been troubled with it for years, until last year my doctor recommended Grape-Nuts food to be used every morning. I followed instructions and now I am entirely well. "The whole family like Grape-Nuts, we use four packages a week. You are welcome to use this testimonial as you see fit."

THE Reason this lady was helped by the use of Grape-Nuts food is that it is digested by natural processes and therefore does not tax the stomach as the food she had been using; it also contains the elements required for building up the nervous system. If that part of the human body is in perfect working order, there can be no dyspepsia, for nervous energy represents the steam that drives the engine. When the nervous system is run down, the machinery of the body works badly. Grape-Nuts food can be used by small children as well as adults. It is perfectly cooked and ready for use.

Representative Walter Brownlow of Tennessee Has Made Only One Speech. Congressman Walter Brownlow of Tennessee has made but one speech during the 10 years that he has been a member of the House of Representatives.

Turned the Tables. In a crowd waiting for a car at Eleventh street and Grand avenue yesterday was an old negro, who was inclined to be discursive. Two high school boys believed they saw a chance to make fun of him, and made several remarks at which they themselves laughed heartily. Finally one of them said: "You're a preacher, aren't you, uncle?" "Yes, sah," replied the negro, bringing forth the card. "Ah, an undertaker, but Ah'd lak t'eh have yo' business."

To Decorate the Table. When the guests at a recent entertainment in Paris went to dinner, each one found at his plate a beautiful rose sprig with a card attached, which read in white, to take the place of the usual dinner card. The writing on the rose was done by electricity.
