RAILWAYS TO SPEND ORDERS WORTH $56,000,000 TO BE PLACED WITHIN THIRTY DAYS.

Carriers Willing to Pay Advance of $3 Provided More Sound Material Is Furnished by Furnaces.

STEEL GOING TO $31 A TON.

Carriers Willing to Pay Advance of $3 Provided More Sound Material Is Furnished by Furnaces.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 7.—Predictions are being made here that the delay of the railways in placing orders for steel rails will be ended within thirty days when it is expected that there will be upwards of 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 tons of new orders placed. The importance of these predictions, should they materialize, to the iron and steel trade of Pittsburgh, is hard to over-estimate. The vast tonnage, amounting at least to $56,000,000, will place the trade in its normal, and healthy, condition every other branch of the steel industry.

Every Furnace to Resume.

Recently it was announced that there were seventeen corporation furnaces in operation. One result of the new orders would be the forcing of a majority of these furnaces to resume operations. The steel manufacturers over the process of rail manufacture has drifted along for some time, and they have anticipated by either side it is said.

Miss Annie Butzke, Fredric and Edith Heidner of West Bend spent Sunday with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Butzke.

A surprise party for Miss Almyra Knuth, who is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Charles Petermann, was given at Koen's Hall on Thursday evening, November 7th, with a large crowd in attendance. Dancing helped to pass the evening and refreshments were served. All had a very enjoyable time.

Rev. Irl R. Hicks predicts weather as follows for the month of November: The regular storm period, which will be central on Oct. 31, will culminate on Nov. 2 and 3. General autumnal rain storms with touches of lightning and thunder to the southward will progress from east to west from the 2nd to the 4th. The barometer will remain low and the temperature high as the next storm period begins. From the 5th to the 7th a reactionary storm period will cause additional storms and other disturbances. The rain will turn to sleet and snow, generally in the northward. The barometer will rise and there will be a sudden cold in all regions, especially on the great northern lakes.

The crisis of the regular storm period, which will extend from the 10th to the 15th, will be on Friday, Nov. 15. There will be considerable cloudiness followed by autumnal storms, which will grow in intensity as they pass over the country. It is probable that the storm period may be prolonged over to the 16th. From the 18th to the 20th a reactionary storm period will be noticeable. There will be a noticeable falling of the barometer with a corresponding rise in temperature. Gales will be certain at this time on the great lakes and north Atlantic. A sudden cold wave will rush down from the northwest about the 19th or 22nd. Shippers and navigators are warned to be careful at this time of the month.

The regular storm period, which extends from the 22nd to the 26th, will be central on the 23rd. There will be a marked depression of the barometer during this period and higher temperature and considerable rain, which will turn to snow in the north and west. There will also be a few disagreeable autumnal storms during this period. The month will go out with rain, possibly thunder and lightning, followed by sudden changes due to cold waves coming from the northwest.

No teacher like experience. In time we believe that everybody will come to look at this plan of mail order: buying just about as we do. But if everyone is to experiment personally before deciding that it won't do, a considerable time must elapse before we all see the errors of the system. We desire to head off all the experimenters that we can, and for that purpose we print an emphatic assertion that we give all the newness of design, all the attractiveness, all the genuineness, all the value, all the lowness of prices that the mail order houses do. We mean by this that there is no use whatever in expecting your money to secure you something by sending it away that it wouldn't purchase at home. J. P. SCHLAEFER, Campbellport, Wisconsin.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength. But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it. It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption. Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor. And it contains no drugs and no alcohol. ALL DRUGGISTS; BOTTLES $1.00.

Reports Small Potato Crop.

In a report on the potato experiments carried on at the various experiment stations of the college of agriculture, J. G. Milward, instructor in horticulture, says: "The yield of potatoes in Wisconsin for the past season is estimated at about a two-thirds crop. Harvest was earlier than usual partly because of the unseasonableness caused by the heavy freeze in the fall of 1906. Those who marketed their crop early in the season realized about 40 cents a bushel. Prices gradually rose during the harvest season until good white stock brought as much as 52 cents a bushel. Regardless of the existing good prices, however, many growers are storing potatoes, believing that the price will reach 75 cents before Christmas. Notwithstanding this probable increase, it is generally considered safest to dispose of potatoes right off the field when the market offers 50 cents, as the price must go considerably higher to pay for the extra labor in handling the crop from cellars and pits.

The Eyes of Young or Old require the greatest care. At the first sign of defective sight the eyes should be seen to. Do not wear any kind of Glasses. We will examine your eyes free of charge, give you the best glasses and guarantee them. Will be at Engle Hotel, Kewaskum, Wednesday, Nov. 13th, and at Hotel Schlegel, West Bend, Friday, Nov. 15th.—William Leissner, Refracting Optician, 2nd floor, 222 Grand Ave., Milwaukee.

—Charles Zaun, aged 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Zaun of the town of Jackson, was accidentally shot and killed by Louis Laverenz last Sunday. The accident happened on a farm a couple of miles from their homes. Young Laverenz saw a squirrel on the fence, and unnoticed by the boy on the other side of the fence, he stopped and fired a shot at the squirrel with a 32 caliber rifle. The Zaun boy was struck by the bullet, which passed through his body just below the heart and killed him instantly.

Bryan at West Bend.

W. J. Bryan, the great Democratic leader who has twice been the Democratic candidate for President of the United States, will deliver a speech at the Opera House at West Bend on Saturday, November 16. Mr. Bryan will arrive at West Bend from the north on the noon train and will at once be escorted to the hall where he will speak for two hours.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the Side-walk Committee of the Village of Kewaskum will sell a lot of old sidewalk planks to the highest bidder at Remmel's log yard at 2 o'clock p. m. November 12, 1907.

A TALENTED WRITER

Praises Peruna as a Catarrh Remedy

MRS. E. M. TINNEY.

Mrs. E. M. Tinney, story writer, 325 E. Nueva St., San Antonio, Tex., writes:

"During 1901 I suffered from nasal catarrh, which various other remedies failed to relieve.

"Six bottles of Peruna, which I took, entirely cured me, the catarrh disappearing and never returning."

"I therefore cheerfully recommend Peruna to all similarly afflicted."

Mrs. Ellen Nagle, 414 4th street, Green Bay, Wis., writes:

"I have often heard Peruna praised and it is more widely known here than any other medicine, but I never knew what a splendid medicine it really was until a few weeks ago, when I caught a bad cold which settled all over me.

"The doctor wanted to prescribe, but I told him I was going to try Peruna and sent for a bottle and tried it.

"I felt much better the next morning and within five days I had not a trace of any lameness or any cough."

"I consider it the finest cough remedy."

GROWING SUGAR CANE IN TEXAS.

The Lone Star State Ahead of Hawaii in the Production of Sugar.

Sugar-making appears to be one of the destined large industries of this prolific state. The lower valley of the Rio Grande, for a distance of 100 miles inland from the gulf, is said by sugar cane experts to be the most favorable spot in the United States for the cultivation of that plant. Owing to its extreme southern latitude, 400 miles south of the United States, the crop may develop fully without danger of frost. Planters in the lower Rio Grande valley give their cane a full twelve months to mature, against eight or ten in Louisiana, where frost is always a menace later than October. The combined richness of the Texas soil, upland in Culo, and favorable climatic conditions, place the yield of the region above that of Hawaii. A planting of cane "joint" will yield in Texas profitably for eight years, against three years at the extreme, in other cane growing sections of the United States.

Texas has great plans for coming into the sugar market of the United States, and coming in strong. Great plantation companies are being organized, and the most extensive irrigation works on this continent are under process of construction in the Rio Grande valley. Refineries are springing up there, and extensive sugar plantations are being established. The poor man's chance lies down there today on the Texas frontier—G. W. Ogden in Everybody's.

HIS WIFE HIS NIECE?

A Tangle in the Family Affairs of an Old King's Son.

There is a pretty little tangle of relationships in the family of Henry H. King, Jr. It comes out in this way: Mr. W. E. Benjamin married Mrs. Rogers' older sister and Mr. Rogers married Mrs. Benjamin's niece, the daughter of Dr. George H. Benjamin, whose wife was Jane Seymour of Ogdensburg, N. Y. Thus Mrs. Henry H. Rogers is sister-in-law of her aunt and Henry H. Rogers is a sort of uncle of his wife. It is very odd, and it is on a yacht that the young pair do all their holiday making. It is in the summer of 1901 that they are on an all-winter cruise in the West Indies and along the South American coast, and in a storm Mrs. Rogers sprained her arm. Mrs. Rogers is a granddaughter of John Lathrop Motley. She has a beautiful voice and has inherited not a little of the talent of her grandfather. Mrs. Rogers is devoted to automobile and has more than once seen the palm along the beach at Atlantic City—New Broadway Magazine.

Miss Ashworth felt surprised, as well she might, for she too had noticed that Hugh showed a marked preference for her young cousin's society. She said nothing, however.

"Well, then, dear, I have another message, from quite another person, about a plan for the afternoon. Willie Palliser wants to take you and me—you, dear, really, for an old lady cannot be so interesting to a lady of his age—to Meriton abbey."

"Oh, yes, I should like to go so much," said Sybil eagerly. "We will walk, for I could scarcely drive with any one else after refusing to go to the station."

"Dear, of course you will go. Certainly we will go. It is a pleasant walk across the fields and through the woods, Willie tells me."

"What time shall we go, Cousin Anne?"

"At 4 o'clock; it will be cool then. We had tea there at one of the lodges, as the family is away."

"We shall just go in time to dress for dinner," said Sybil, relieved that she would not see Hugh until they were all assembled in the drawing room.

They had a very pleasant walk through the leafy woods, and, in spite of the pain gnawing at her heart, a very jolly tale, for Sybil was young and Willie Palliser a charming lad who did not know he had any sentimental in him, and he was from a gray-eyed girl a week ago. As they went back across the fields a sudden thought struck him.

"Diana, the duke and Hugh drove to have a picnic to the ruined Priory tomorrow, all of us? I'll ask Cousin Di tonight."

"But where is it? In which direction?" asked Miss Ashworth.

He stopped and turned round facing Meriton abbey, whose chimneys were visible across the wood, which lay in a hollow.

"Over there, six miles beyond the abbey. It is situated on the cliffs overlooking the sea, and there's a lovely stretch of sand beach in front of it."

"I should like to go very much," said Sybil, for she knew that Willie Palliser needed no invitation to keep close to her side all day. She had a very good devotion from the first hour they met, and his two brothers fished in the streams and went birds' nesting without him, grumbling that he had not been with a good nood for boyish frolics.

Sybil had made up her mind to avoid a tele-tele with Hugh Chantley. At a quarter of eight he entered the large drawing room with Cousin Anne, and, even as the man servant held the door open for them to pass through, Hugh Chantley detected a subtle change in the girl he loved. She did not look so grown taller in a week, and yet she looked taller. She was pale, ivory pale, her hollows of passionate grief the evening before had taken all the color from her cheek.

He came forward to greet the two ladies, after waiting a moment to give them time to exchange a few words with their hostess.

"He took the girl's hand; it had grown icy cold, and the words, warm words of greeting, were never uttered."

"Instead his 'How do you do, Miss Waterton?' sounded cold even in his own ears."

"Oh, how do you do, Mr. Chantley? I hope you had a pleasant journey down?"

"Very pleasant, thank you. Willie Palliser and I were at the moment and joined the little group immediately, asking Sybil with embarrassment whether she was tired after their long walk."

Hugh and Miss Ashworth sat down and discussed on various points of interest the sweet, silver-haired old lady, but his eyes still watched the girl he loved as she chatted to young Palliser. Not for him were the words of the Duke of Westshire, he said he was a beautiful creature of flesh and blood, and she turned into a statue.

He watched her closely at dinner—he sat opposite to her and his hostess turned toward him, though this he was quite unaware, for she did not appear to neglect the Duke of Westshire, her right-hand man, and she was very kind and pleasant to her, and she congratulated herself on the success of her last night's interview. Hugh would be late, and he had to go to the end.

The boy's proposal for the evening was heartily approved of by the host and hostess, especially by the latter, who intended to talk with her cousin and talk about Willie Palliser's devotion to Sybil and hers to him.

Presently Hugh and Arnold Palliser came up to Willie Palliser, who were deep in conversation, and they went out to a game of billiards. All four went out to the billiard room, a most luxurious modern addition to the house, and they were followed by several of the other guests, but he did not manage to get a word in with the girl, Sybil, and a great pain was at his heart, for his love was deep and true.

"Diana," he said, as he sat chatting to his cousin that evening after the others had retired, "what is the matter with the Sybil? I seem to have offended her. I do not know what I have done."

"Oh, I think it is your imagination, Hugh!" said the baroness, playing with a lovely emerald ring which the baron had just given her.

"Oh, no, I am sure it is not!" "I think it is," she said, "but a child, and now that Willie Palliser and she have fallen head over ears in love with each other she has eyes for no one else. Girls are always made of that sort of women of 27. I suppose they think that quite a mature age, but I mustn't betray pretty confidences. Hugh, dear, how I have longed for you to come!"

"Have you?" he asked in an absent-minded way which maddened her.

"His arm was resting on the arm of her chair, playing nervously with the balls of the silver fringe. She placed her own on it carelessly."

"Tell me, dear, what is troubling you?" she asked in a low, soft tone, passion stirred.

"Nothing, Di. What should there be?" He did not dream that Diana would stoop to deceit or treachery to make the girl he loved turn against him; indeed he thought that the love he bore Sybil was quite unknown to any one but himself.

"There is something, Hugh. Do tell me!"

"There is nothing, Di. I am not very well tonight. I think I will go for a walk."

FROM JEST TO EARNEST.

About 3 o'clock Cousin Anne came in. "The baron and baroness are going to the station to meet Mr. Chantley, and the baroness thinks a drive would do you good. Will you go, dear? If you are ready in half an hour that will do."

"No, thank you, Cousin Anne, I do not care to go."

Miss Ashworth felt surprised, as well she might, for she too had noticed that Hugh showed a marked preference for her young cousin's society. She said nothing, however.

"Well, then, dear, I have another message, from quite another person, about a plan for the afternoon. Willie Palliser wants to take you and me—you, dear, really, for an old lady cannot be so interesting to a lady of his age—to Meriton abbey."

TALENTED HOUSEHOLD

Another Kitchen Utensil which would be welcomed by every housewife and cook is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is an adjustable lift-er whereby pans or other cooking utensils on the fire which are too hot to be removed with the hands can be taken up by the lift-er and placed wherever desired. The lifting apparatus is accomplished by inserting a small plate glass between the metal on the fire. Above the plate is a wire clamp which normally projects upward, the plate and clamp being attached to separate spring rods. When the plate is inserted beneath the pan the clamp extends over the rim of the receptacle. By moving the handle forward the rod supporting the clamp is forced to the right, causing the clamp to descend and firmly grip the rim. The pan can then be lifted from the fire and carried to the table or other place required. The hands are thus protected from accidental burning, while the operation of removing the receptacle can be accomplished as quickly as with the hands.

To Can Tomatoes for Frying.

Use glass jars. Wash jar with a clean cloth and soap powder (powder rather than soap, because more antiseptic). Always rinse jars just before filling with warm water. Use clean, firm tomatoes, wash in cold water, and with a sharp knife trim out the stem and any imperfections, and cut through once. This makes two flat pieces with skin on. Put a quart of water in a granite or porcelain kettle. Lay pieces in, skin side down, and let boil three minutes. While the pieces are cooking, place in jar whole, and when wanted to use can be lifted out, rolled in flour and fried in a hot skillet, in which is a spoonful of lard and one of butter. Let brown, turn and brown other side, add salt, pepper, sugar and a cup of milk.

Canned Corn.

Select young ears of corn. Cut kernels from cobs into jars and press it down to fill them tight nearly to the top. Pour a cloth over the neck of the jar, and tie with a string. Use clean, firm tomatoes, wash in cold water, and with a sharp knife trim out the stem and any imperfections, and cut through once. This makes two flat pieces with skin on. Put a quart of water in a granite or porcelain kettle. Lay pieces in, skin side down, and let boil three minutes. While the pieces are cooking, place in jar whole, and when wanted to use can be lifted out, rolled in flour and fried in a hot skillet, in which is a spoonful of lard and one of butter. Let brown, turn and brown other side, add salt, pepper, sugar and a cup of milk.

To Use Up Remnants of Fish.

Free the fish from skin and bones, and cut into small pieces. Mix with season with salt and pepper. Make a sauce of butter and onion in a pint of milk. When it comes to a good boil remove the onion and thicken with a tablespoonful each of flour and butter, beaten to a cream. Stir until smooth and season with salt and pepper. Line a deep earthen pudding dish with a thin layer of left-over mashed potato and put the fish in the dish. Pour the sauce over the fish and cover with buttered crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven twenty minutes.

Baked Eggs with Cheese.

Butter the bottom of a shallow baking dish and sprinkle in a few fine bread crumbs to lightly cover. Break on to this as many eggs as the dish will reasonably hold without running into each other, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover with a thin layer of grated cheese, American or Parmesan, cover with a little cream to moisten and dot with bits of butter. Set in a moderate oven, and when the eggs are set and the surface of the dish slightly browned, serve at once.

For an Instant Melon.

When the breakfast melon proves insipid, as it often does when purchased in city markets, don't try to eat it then, but put on ice and serve at luncheon as a salad. Take out the ripest pieces, cut in blocks about an inch square, salt, arrange on a bed of lettuce or water cress and dress with a French dressing made with lemon juice and oil instead of vinegar.

Baked Egg Plant.

Boil the whole egg plant in salt water for twenty minutes, halve it with a sharp knife, scoop out the center; chop and mix this portion with bread crumbs, a little finely cut raw tomato, chopped parsley, onion juice and seasonings. Refill the shells with the mixture, cover with buttered crumbs and bake for half an hour in a hot oven.

Rice Balls.

To one cup of hot boiled rice add a large cupful of finely minced chicken well-beaten egg, salt and pepper to taste, and sufficient cream sauce to moisten it slightly. Mix together and set aside until cold. Form into small balls, egg and bread-crumbs them, and fry in deep fat. Drain on unglazed paper and serve at once.

Okra Soup.

Into a quart of chicken stock stir two ounces of fresh minced, chopped onion and two dozen okra. Add a pint of strained tomatoes and boil all until the okra is tender. Season to taste and serve.

Potato Pancake.

Take about three medium-sized potatoes and grate them. Add one egg, a pinch of salt, one cup of milk, one and one-third cups of flour, with one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake on hot griddle.

Quince Snow.

Beat the quince, add two eggs to a froth and three-quarters of a cup of powdered sugar, beat, add two-thirds of a cup of quince marmalade, and beat again. Pipe in a dish and bake a pale yellow.

Fried Green Tomatoes.

Slice them thin; place in salt water for a short time; put on the frying pan; have equal parts of lard and butter to fry; pepper them well, turn them over, and brown both sides.

To Get Rid of Ants.

To rid a gallery of ants, sprinkle cloves or salt on the shelves.

FAMOUS LONDON HOUSES.

Where Some Great Books Have Been Written.

How many readers of Thackeray have passed down Young street to the Kensington postoffice and have been aware that in No. 11 those immortal works "Penny Fair," "Esmond," and "Pendennis" first saw the light?

Lower street, again, is a somewhat monotonous street of unprosperous looking middle class houses. Few people know that in No. 110 Charles Darwin wrote that "Origin of Species," but his famous work on "Corals Reefs," "The Philosophy of Language," and "The Crystal Palace," were written at No. 110 Charles Darwin street, 106 Prith Street, Soho. William Hazlitt during the last few months of his life wrote some of his most notable essays.

As for Charles Dickens, London teems with memories of that great novelist. At 48 Doughty street he began "Barnaby Rudge," finished "Pickwick," and "Oliver Twist," and wrote "Nicholas Nickleby." At 1 Devonshire Terrace he finished "Harnaby Rudge" and "The Old Curiosity Shop," "Martin Chuzzlewit," "The Christmas Carol," "David Copperfield," "The Cricket on the Hearth" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." At Tavistock House he wrote "Black House," "Little Dorrit," and "The Tale of Two Cities."

Henry Fielding wrote "Tom Jones" in a house on the site of the present Bow street police station, and Smollett wrote "Roderick Random" and probably "Pamela" at No. 110 Charles Darwin street, 106 Prith Street, Soho. Richardson's "Pamela," "Clarissa," and "Grandison" were written at The Grange, North End, Hamersmith, occupied for some time by Sir Edward Burne-Jones.

At 24 Cheyne row the Sage of Chelsea, Thomas Carlyle, wrote "The French Revolution," "The Life of Frederick the Great," "Past and Present," "Oliver Cromwell's Letters and Speeches," and "The Life of John Sterling"—London Daily News.

ADVICE TO VICTIMS.

TELLS READERS HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM AT HOME.

Directions to Mix a Simple, Harmless Preparation and the Dose to Take—Overcomes Kidney and Bladder Trouble Promptly.

There is so much Rheumatism advice by the world that the following advice by an eminent authority, who writes for readers of a large Eastern daily paper, will be highly appreciated by those who suffer:

Get from any good pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces of Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Shake these well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime; also drink plenty of good water.

It is claimed that there are few victims of this dread and torturous disease who will fall to find ready relief in this simple home-made mixture, and in most cases a permanent cure is the result.

This simple recipe is said to strengthen and cleanse the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys so that they can filter and strain from the blood and system the poisons, acids and waste matter, which cause not only Rheumatism, but numerous other diseases. Every man or woman here who feels that their kidneys are not healthy and active, or who suffers from any urinary trouble whatever, should not hesitate to make up this mixture, as it is certain to do much good, and may save you from much misery and suffering after a while.

Art Treasures Come to America.

In view of Mrs. Colis P. Huntington's purchase for $280,000 of Rembrandt's "The Philosopher" from the Kunst collection, members of French art critics suggest that France should have a law prohibiting sales of gifts of art objects of old masters that would carry them out of the country. The American public is art becoming terrifying to Europeans, who may yet have to visit the museums of America to see any old masters whatever.

It can't hurt you, and is sure Insurance against serious sickness.

When you have Heartburn, Colic, Coated Tongue, Suspected Breath, Acid-rising-in-throat, Gas-belching, or an incipient Cold, take a Cascaret.

Remember, all these are not merely Discomforts, but indications of a serious Cause. Nip them in the bud—eat a Candy Cascaret. Cascarets don't purge, nor punish the stomach like "Bile-driving" Cathartics. They act like Exercise on the Bowel.

Beat the teeth and two eggs to a froth and three-quarters of a cup of powdered sugar, beat, add two-thirds of a cup of quince marmalade, and beat again. Pipe in a dish and bake a pale yellow.

Slice them thin; place in salt water for a short time; put on the frying pan; have equal parts of lard and butter to fry; pepper them well, turn them over, and brown both sides.

To rid a gallery of ants, sprinkle cloves or salt on the shelves.

KIDNEY TROUBLES

The kidneys are essential organs for keeping the body free from impurities. If they should fail to work death would ensue in very short time. Inflammation or irritation caused by some feminine derangement may spread to some extent to the Kidneys and affect them. The cause can be so far removed by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that the trouble will disappear.

When a woman is troubled with pain or weight in loins, backache, swelling of the limbs or feet, swelling under the eyes, an uneasy, tired feeling in the region of the kidneys, she should lose no time in commencing treatment with
