Hicks Weather Forecast for March. A regular storm period extends from the 4th to the 9th, being central on the 6th. The chances are that uns-till, stormy weather will continue from the first to the second period, with electrical, tropical storms in many places southward and touching the 4th. Threatening barometric readings will mark this period, and severe storms of rain and wind, turning into blizzards of sleet and snow in many sections northward, will be most natural, progressively from about the 5th to the 9th.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 11th, 12th and 13th.

A regular storm period is central on the 17th, covering the 15th to 20th. Blizzards and serious interruption of transportation and supplies need surprise no reader of these forecasts in northerly directions. After the storms there will be danger of cold and frost far to the south.

On and touching Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 17th, 18th and 19th, no central to northern section should be surprised if one of the greatest snow blockades of the winter should strike it.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 22nd, 23rd and 24th. Many sharp, disquieting squalls and violent gales will be natural for several days, centering on the 22nd, 23rd and 24th, calling for proper care of live stock.

A regular storm period covers the last five days of March, being central on the 29th. Falling barometer, rising temperature, cloudiness and threatening conditions generally will be noted in all western sections early in this period; but storms will not reach their culminating crisis until near the end, say on the 30th and 31st. The temperature is apt to reach very high readings, and the barometer fall far below normal about the 31st, in which event storms and tidal waves of dangerous proportions will be more than probable within thirty-six hours of midnight on the 31st.

How He Grew Young. One satisfied man returned from a two weeks' holiday. He spent it on a farm owned by an old aunt, and the royal way in which she fed him, to use his own description, formed the chief delight of his holiday.

"You see," he remarked confidentially, "my wife is a graduate of a diet and cooking school of the most up-to-date sort. She sees that we never have a meal which isn't perfectly balanced as to food values. The things we eat are chosen with reference to that and not with regard to whether we like them especially. Well, I can tell you old Aunt Laura, with her table just groaning with forbidden, indigestible articles, was a mighty welcome change to me. She never heard of carbohydrates or phosphates or cellulose, and she wouldn't know a proteid if she met one in a bean porridge, where, by the way, I believe they largely congregate. But I tell you her fried chicken and fresh pork and biscuits were the finest things I've had for years. My wife actually turned pale when she saw me eat, and I know she was worried, because we were six miles from a doctor. I was never ill for a minute, though, and those two weeks of old-fashioned, domestic cooking have made me feel like a new man—or, rather, like a boy again."—London M. A. P.

Her Conversion. When preparing his parishioners for the solemn ordinance of confirmation, an old clergyman found among them one old woman so excessively ignorant and stupid that for some weeks prior to the time he was obliged to have her come to his house every day in order to instruct and catechise her. At length he began to hope that his time, patience and zeal had not been entirely bestowed in vain, a few bright flashes of understanding having burst from the old dame's clouded intellect. "Now, my good friend," said the worthy pastor just previous to the commencement of the ceremony, "as this is the last moment in which I shall have an opportunity of conversing with you, let me ask, do you thoroughly understand and believe all the articles of your Christian faith?"

"Aye, yes, sir, thank'ee," replied his venerable pupil, with a smiler and dropping one of her best courtesies, "I does indeed now, and, thank God, I heartily renounces them all."

The Clock Struck 1. It was just two minutes to 1 when John Ludlum entered the house and, unwrapping a paper parcel, said to his wife that he had brought her a present of a clock. It was her birthday, and she had expected a brooch or a ring at least, and so she said tartly, "You like the look of that clock?"

His face flushed. "A nice way to speak about a present! said he hotly. "Well, it's the truth. I wouldn't have given a couple of shillings for it," said she in an exasperating tone.

John Ludlum was a quick tempered man. The veins in his temples swelled, and—

Just then the clock struck 1. What did it signify? that the clock was running all right?—

It did not. The ambulance surgeon said a few minutes later that if the clock had struck one inch nearer her temple John Ludlum would have been a widower.—Pearson's Weekly.

You can't think of even one reason why goods that we sell should ever be bought anywhere else. There isn't less to pay by buying away from home. There aren't newer designs than we offer. There isn't anything like as convenient a service. You can't handle the goods before you decide to take them. And you can't be SURE of what you are getting unless you handle the goods beforehand. For these reasons we submit that buying at home results in as much advantage to you as to us. J. P. SCHLAEFER, Campbellsport, Wisconsin.

TESTING THE EYES. Sometimes when people get spectacles which suit them, they go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested, to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity be not apparent to them. As a general rule spectacles for old sight require changing about every three years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every two years. Whenever you feel uneasy in your spectacles, don't hesitate to call and see us, even if you have worn them a short time only, as we are glad to help you. If no change is necessary we will tell you.
