MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 16, 1908.—
In a decision handed down this afternoon, Judge Joseph V. Quarles in the United States court denies the application of the city of Appleton to be permitted to intervene in the suit instituted against the Appleton Waterworks company and the North American Securities company.

The suit was started by the Continental Securities company to collect a many tried to stop the animal but without success. Pierzchalski had no control over the animal, and it was feared that the wagon would be upset and the two thrown to the pavement, when Peocnski, seeing their danger, sprang toward the horse's head. He was dragged for half a block but refused to loose his hold.

At Martin and East Water streets the animal swerved toward the gutter and striking it, fell on its side over the young man. The horse was raised with difficulty and Peocnski was picked up by bystanders. He was covered with dust and blood, but said that except for a few bruises on his head and over one eye he was unhurt.

Why don't you try it? Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Cunningly hidden in a secret receptacle deftly carved in the leg of an antique table, the fortune of the late Mrs. Jessie Fremont Dietsch of San Francisco, relative of the noted pathinder, Gen. John C. Fremont, was found re-cently by the deputy public administra-tor, W. J. Hynes. The neatly fastened little bundle give up a bank book show-ing deposits of $4200, a costly collection of time honored jewelry and countless shares in wildcat concerns worth their

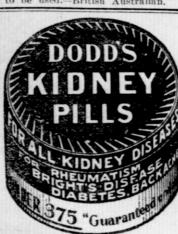

The discovery of the effects of the erratic woman of historic lineage ends a ratic woman of historic lineage ends a search that Hynes and his men pursued for several days with great earnestness. When Mrs. Dietsch died, on April 28, alone and in seclusion, her effects were taken charge of by the public administrator in the absence of any near relatives. The officers were informed that the old woman was possessed of great wealth and the stories came from such reliable sources that it was deemed advisable to make a complete search of

With this end in view Hynes and his assistants strained every effort to locate the hidden treasure. Every article in the house was overturned and thoroughly searched without avail. Even the carpets and tapestries were ripped open in the hope that they would yield some of the glittering gold which the aged recluse was supposed to possess

Just as Hynes was about to abandon the search he accidentally knocked off the hollow leg of an ancient table. In a eleverly contrived cache the public ad-ministrator spied an old wallet. Opening the bag, Hynes discovered that it con-tained the bank book, jewels and stock certificates.—Los Angeles Times.

Man Who First Made Railroads Com to Time Spending Declining Years

in Home for Aged.

STILL REMEMBER OLD DAYS

MADISON, Wis., July 11.—[Special.]

—In failing health ex-Gov. William R. Taylor of Wisconsin, who scourged the railroads in the early 70's as champion of "granger" movement, celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday yesterday, almost alone at the Gisholt Home for the Aged, a semi-charitable institution near Madison. The superintendent of the home reports that while the general retains all of his faculties, during the past year he has failed greatly in health. But few people visit him. Some of his Madison friends and relatives go there occasionally, but because of his advanced age he appears more contented when left alone.

At the Gisholt home, a beautiful ornary farm house, the governor pass his time sometimes reading the papers and always willing to explain the fight which he made against the railroads in 1874 to compel them to obey the laws. Home Is a Large Farm.

The Gisholt Home for the Aged was counded by the late John Johnson, head founded by the late John Johnson, head of the big Fuller & Johnson Manufactur-ing company, and the Gisholt Machine company. When Mr. Johnson died he company. When Mr. Johnson died he left a bequest providing for an establish-ment for the home for the aged. The home is known as the Dixon farm in the town of Burke, about ten miles from Madison. L. E. Edwin is superintendent. If an old resident can pay $500 he will be cared for the remainder of his life. Early in December, 1905, after selling his homestead at Cottage Grove and flirting with the proceeds on Chicago markets for a few days, ex-Gov. Taylor entered the home with the assistance of some of his Madison relatives, among them being Justice R. M. Bashford of the supreme court. Since then he has visited in Madison frequently and usual-

His Business Deals.

Ex-Gov. Taylor lost his wealth through unfortunate investments and speculation. He was swept into office during the Granger movement in 1873. The Democrats and Grangers fused that year and Taylor was put at the head of the ticket. During his term the famous "Potter" law was enacted creating a commission to fix and regulate railroad rates. It placed the roads under state control, limiting the charges for the transportation of passenger and freight and classifying the freight. A howl went up from the railroads. They took the position of injured innocence. It was the first time that a governor had attempted to assert authority over them and early in April they served formal notice on the governor that they would not obey the law. He promptly countered with a proclamation, dated May 1. 1884, in which he enjoined compliance into the courts and decision finally es-tablished the right of the state to regulate corporations, and paved the way for the agitation and public sentiment that in its recrudes

The succeeding Legislature repealed and modified the law. Taylor was not re-elected and Harrison Ludington of Milwaukee was called to the executive chair. While in politics Gov. Taylor be came interested in the cranberry business came interested in the cranberry business with the late Gen. George F. Bryant of Madison. For two years they made money and then for four successive years their marshes were burned over, causing them a heavy loss.

Ex-Gov. Taylor never recovered from his heavy losses. When he left the governor's chair his farm was mortgaged for $10,000. This burden was so heavy that it was never materially reduced until the farm was sold. After selling his farm he bought a home in Cottage Grove. His wife by a second marriage left him, alleging incompatibility of temperament and secured a position as matron of the state home for the feeble minded at Chippewa Falls. She is still there. The only child living by the second marriage is William Taylor, who is now living near Cottage Grove.
