Cured the Dryness. Mother—How did papa's new book get in this condition? Bobby—Why, mamma, I heard papa say last night that the book was too dry for him. So I put it in the bathtub and let the water run.

Slow, but Not Sure. "Your daughter is not engaged to young Johnson yet, then? I suppose it is a case of slow and sure?" "Well, yes—he is slow, and she is not at all sure!"

I have often wondered how every man loves himself more than all the rest of men.—Antonius.

Sagacity Recognized. "Our forefathers who framed the constitution were men of mighty intelligence." "Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "I am sometimes tempted to believe that they knew as much about the constitution as some of the lawyers who have since interpreted it."—Washington Star.

Art Improvement. Mrs. De Riche (showing her home to Mrs. Winifred)—What do you think of my Venetian blinds? Mrs. Winifred—Aln't it a shame how careless servants are? B' couldn't you glue the arms on again?—Tuck.

Magic and Poison Rings.

The ring began when man thrust his finger through a hole in a pretty shell and later learned to make rings of jet. The ring is very magical. Lord gave Queen Mary a ring which was sorran against poison, and she generously replied with the present of her father's wonderful jeweled dagger, of French work, no longer in existence. Whether Ruthven fooled with this magnificent weapon in the affair of Riccio or used it as a cheaper article is uncertain. At all events, Mary based on the ring that was an antidote to poison a charge of sorcery against Ruthven. The judges of Jeanne d'Arc regarded with much suspicion her little ring of base metal, a gift from her parents, inscribed with the sacred names Jesus Marie.

It was usual to touch the relics of saints with rings. Jeanne d'Arc said that her ring touched the body of St. Catherine, whether she meant of the actual saint or a relic of the saint, brought from Siena to Florbois. The ring might contain a relic or later a miniature. I fear that I do not believe in the virtues or vices of poison rings. Our ancestors practically knew no poison but arsenic, and Carthaginian science can scarcely have enabled Hannibal to poison himself with a drug contained under the stone of a ring.—Andrew Lang.

Our Debt to Champlain.

We of the eastern United States, and above all, the dwellers in New England, owe to Champlain more than most of us imagine. Northern New York and New England were fields of his exploration, and it was he who charted the coasts of the north Atlantic nearly to Connecticut, making surveys that have not been greatly altered to this day. Three hundred years ago, at the point of Quebec, then covered with nut trees, Samuel de Champlain set his men to work to cut down these trees, saw boards, dig cellars and make ditches to construct a habitation. Before the coming of Champlain Canada had yielded to the French vast quantities of furs and skins and had enriched many a trader, but it remained for this great explorer to see in Canada something more than a mere ground for the trapper and trader—a home for people, a veritable new France. In the accounts of his voyages he described with enthusiasm the land, its people, its animals, its timber, its plants and its minerals, and on these products he based prophecies of a great future for this land.—Forest and Stream.

Imagination.

"Just slap down a sketch of a drunken husband sitting in a wretched hole of a home," requested the newspaper editor, hurrying into the apartment of the lazy staff cartoonist.

The artist carelessly complied and sprawled back in his chair, "Don't you think it would fill out better if you were to sketch in a table and an empty whisky bottle?" inquired the editor, gazing at the bare figure.

"Oh, the readers will imagine the booze part of it, all right!" "Well, how about adding a broken hearted wife and a couple of ragged children?"

"Unnecessary. The readers will readily imagine all that as part and parcel of such a scene." "Then," ejaculated the editor, tearing the sketch to bits, "then the readers can imagine the drunken man!"—Washington Post.

A Fine Dodger.

Carol's grandfather had served in the war, and Carol liked to hear of the many battles in which he had fought. One day after listening to the vivid recital of many heroic deeds Carol said:

"Grandfather, you went through all those battles?" "Yes."

"And the shot and shell fell all around you?" "Yes."

"And soldiers were falling and dying everywhere?" "Yes."

"Well, grandfather, what a fine dodger you must have been!"—Delineator.

Sharpening a Pocketknife.

Cutters have certain tricks for sharpening razors, pocketknives, etc. "A razor," said one of the craft, "must be laid flat on the hone, because it is hollow ground and requires a fine edge. But a pocketknife requires a stiff edge, and the moment you lay it flat on a stone, so as to touch the polished side, you injure the edge. It must be held at an angle of twenty to twenty-five degrees and have an edge similar to a chisel."

Quite Likely. "I didn't see you at our euchre the other night," said the becheur. "No," replied the young Benedict, "as far as euchre goes with me now, I consider 'home' the right bower."

"That's all right while hearts are trump, but I suppose if clubs should turn up it would be the left bower."—Philadelphia Press.

Dangerous. First Actor—I thought your next tour was to have been through South Africa. Second Actor—It was, but the company struck. One of them had read that an ostrich egg often weighs two or three pounds.

MOLLY'S PRANK.
"Now, Claude, confess that you only want to carry them to make people think you bagged them!"
"I don't!"
"You do!"
Lady Molly Darcy and Claude Stanton were seated on a fallen tree near a peat bog in the west of Ireland.

Stanton was greatly irritated, Molly coolly sarcastic; the former was flushed and angry, the latter calm but radiant. It was over their many quarrels.

With her customary carelessness, Lady Molly began to kick idly at the foot of the loaded gun which lay at her feet, and as her foot swung near the trigger, she noted with satisfaction every look of indignation on her companion's face.

He and Molly had been playmates together, and each of their lives seemed to be connected. They had been sent from home at the same time, to Oxford, she to a sedate London college for girls.

She had been brought up practically by old Betty, her nurse, for her mother had been killed in the hunting field, and the motherly hand of her father took little notice of her.

She was a girl of a different type, independent girl and she revenged herself by teasing her young companion whenever chance offered.
