WORK OF CONGRESS,

Senate.

The finance committee forces completed arrangements on the 7th for the final vote on the tariff bill in the Senate on the 8th. The straight income taxers were afforded the opportunity they have so long been working for, a chance to vote directly in favor of the income instead of the corporation tax, and they were defeated 28 to 47. The corporation tax amendment was thus finally made a part of the tariff bill and Senator Clapp of Minnesota succeeded in having it amended so as to include holding companies. After a hot debate on the customs court the finance committee's provision was accepted. Senator La Follette offered several amendments, but they were rejected.

After a long speech by Senator La Foilette and repeated attempts at amendment, almost all of which were failures, the Senate passed the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill shortly after 11 o'clock, and adjourned at 11:18 on the 8th. Senator Bradley of Kentucky succeeded in amending the tobacco schedule so as to remove the free sale of

During a session lasting nearly four hours the Philippine tariff bill and the bill automatically continuing the Porto Rican budget were passed by the Senate on the 9th. Only a nominal resistance was offered by the minority to these measures. An amendment by Senator Johnston (Aia.) declaring the intention of the United States eventually to grant independence to the Philippines was opposed as being out of place in this bill, and was rejected. Senator Culberson sought to limit the operation of the Porto Rican act to July 1. 1910, but his amendment for that purpose was defeated. The Senate entered upon an agreement to adjourn three days at a time until the conference report on the tariff bill is ready for consideration, and also not to enact any legislation when it does convene. By the adoption of a House resolution an invitation was accepted by Congress to be represented at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition now being held at Seattle, Wash.

The major portion of the time of the sitting was devoted to a discussion of the unantmous consent agreement not to transact any business while the tariff conference is in progress. Senator Carter tried to have passed a bill pertaining to the affairs of the District of Columbia on the ground that the bill was "such a little one" that no harm could result from its passage. But Senators Ledge and, Culberson, standing guard over the interests of the two sides of the chamber, objected and thus prevented action.

one of the commonest and most reliable. It is when the blooms have seeded and are in the fluffy, feathery condition that the weather prophet faculties come to the fore. In fine weather the ball expands to the full, but when rain approaches it shuts like an umbrella. If the weather is inclined to be showery it keeps shut all the time, only opening when the danger from the west is past. The ordinary clover and all its varieties, including the trefoil and shamrock, are also barometers. When rain is coming the leaves shut together like the shells of an oyster and do not open again until fine weather is assured. For a day or two before rain comes their stems swell to an appreciable extent and stiffen so that the leaves are borne more uprightly than usual. This stem swelling when rain is expected is a feature of many flowering grasses.

The fingers of which the leaves of the horse chestnut are made up keep flat and fanlike so long as fine weather is likely to continue. With the coming of rain, however, they droop as if to offer less resistance to the weather. The scarlet pimpernel is nicknamed the "poor man's weather glass" or wind cope and up and remains closed until the shower or storm is over.

The common garden convolvulus crumbles up its delicate blossoms within the space of half an hour if raindrops are on the way, and it keeps them thus until the bad weather has passed .- Chi-

Commerce and Labor Department Seeks Information Which May Prove Valuable to the Newcomer.

STATE CO-OPERATION IS SOUGHT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 13 .- Cooperation between the governors of the various states and territories and the division of information of the department of commerce and labor to promote a more beneficial distribution of aliens in the congested centers of the country is sought in a communication which yesterday was sent out to the chief executives of states by T. V. Powderly, chief of the division of information.

Asks Aid of Governors.

This step has been taken in view of the general demand for immigration of a character that will make good, peaceful, industrious citizens. The letters were written by way of suggestion to invite an exchange of opinions and to secure the views of the governors. It is particularly desired that all available data regarding the resources, products and physical characteristics of each state and territory be sent to the bureau.

Many Want Land.

Attention is called to the fact that numerous inquiries are received as to where vacant land may be had, and, to answer these questions, Mr. Powderly says that the bureau will be glad to cooperate with the states in directing the attention of admitted aliens and others to such opportunities for settlers. The question then is asked if the governors have appointed agents to represent their states at any of the immigration stations of the country as provided for un-der the law, and if not, it is urged that consideration be given the matter. Every facility will be afforded such agents successfully to carry on their work.

Department of Agriculture Calls Attention to Three Held Perilous. WASHINGTON, D. C., July 14 .- A warning to the public is issued by the department of agriculture concerning the growing use of three perilous drugs, phenacetin, acetanilid and antipyrin. These drugs are found poisonous in the true sense of the word and are habit-forming, being scarcely less objectionable than opium. Under the pure food law a careful investigation into the use of the drugs has been made, testimony having been solicited from practicing physicians. The investigation indicates that all three drugs are now used less than for-merly by medical practitioners. Of the physicians who gave information to the department 66 per cent, say that they use acetanilid less frequently than formerly; nearly 66 per cent, make the same Ianthe Macqueen paused in her sorrowful musings and gazed down the glen and across to the lovely hills of her Highland home. It was a most exquisite scene, and certainly it seemed that any one dissatisfied with such surroundings must be ungrateful indeed. Yet Ianthe was scarcely to blame. She had been shut up in this Highland glen, apart from all companionship, until the mountains had been shed been tains had ceased to have any beauty in her eyes and had become hateful warders mounting ceaseless guard over a most unhappy prisoner.

Ianthe was 17 and had scarcely seen a girl of her own age. Her grandfather, who was, as far as she knew, her only living relative, had brought her up in accordance with his own ideas. Ianthe never knew why she was kept so close a prisoner, although every person in the whole countryside could have told her.

"Once bitten, twice shy," they said. The old general had suffered one bitter and terrible disappointment in his life; he had determined not to suffer another. Patricia, his only child, had been sent to school in order that she might have companionship. The result of that had been a most imprudent love affair, a wrathful parent, a rebellious child, a handsome lover, and a runaway match. Gen. Colquhon had not followed the customary course of the wrathful parent in such matters. He had received his daughter and had made no public scandal by casting her off. He had received, too, the tiny helpless baby whom Patricia had left behind when she closed her willful eyes on this troublous world. As for John Macqueen, her husband, Gen. Colquhon cared not at all what had happened to him. The handsome lover had degenerated into a most unhandsome husband, and, finding that his marriage with a girl quite out of his own rank had not been followed, as he had hoped, by an immediate increase of fortune to himself, he virtually cast Patricia off and went to seek solace with more congenial

General Colquhon had vowed that never should lanthe have the chance of following in her mother's footsteps. He had suffered in his day many sorrows, but none so great as this which his dearly-loved Patricia had brought upon him. Ianthe, he determined, should be brought up at home under the strictest supervision. She should have no friends until he had her safely married to the man whom he should choose. After that, she would be his affair no longer.

So for seventeen years lanthe had lived in her grandfather's home, under the supervision of a governess chosen for certain special qualities which did not altogether make for happiness in her pupil's life. Yet Ianthe was fond of Miss Dawson, chiefly because, poor child, she had practically no one else to be

Once or twice the girl had been taken to the sea for change of air, and those interludes had been times of intense joy. Although she might only look on at the other children playing on the shore, it gave her a certain sense of companionship to watch them from a little distance and imitate their plays and antics as well as she could when she was alone. It is doubtful if she ever had a very intense desire to speak to them. She was so accustomed to be alone that she would scarcely have known what to say.

Latterly, however, the girl had begun to pine for some more suitable friend than her governess. She was not altogether ignorant about life; her reading was practically unchecked within certain limits. Miss Dawson was perhaps growing a little tired of eternally thwarting her pupil's natural thirst for information about the world from which she was so effectually cut off. Perhaps, even, she was touched by the girl's growing sense of captivity and ignorance. Be that as it may, it was certain that Ianthe had culled from books a far more intimate knowledge of the ways of the world than her grandfather ever intended she should have.

On this lovely summer evening Ianthe had wandered out in the grounds possessed with a spirit of unrest. The domain was a very large one and contained many varied points of great beauty. But of recent times Ianthe, when she was alone, invariably chose the one place which most other people would have avoided. This was the barbed-wire fence which bordered the public road for a considerable stretch. Here, hidden behind a tree, Ianthe would sit and watch the passers-by, at no time very numerous, for they were far from a town of any description. Still, an occasional bicycle or cart would pass, a chance pedestrian, one of the servants, perhaps, on her day out, a country lad with his lass, a pedlar with his pack-and from all of those Ianthe derived a certain amount of active enjoyment.

But this evening her mind was less willing to be satisfied.

"Oh, if something would only happen to me as it does to lonely girls in books!

A man on a great black horse might come along and meet with an accident, like Mr. Rochester in "Jane Eyre." Only he couldn't slip on the ice, because it's summer. Or a violent storm might come on and compel some one to seek shelter with us. Only that couldn't happen because the house stands two miles from the road. For the same reason, I can't be like that girl in the French book who, whilst in a rage, threw out the image of her patron saint and nearly broke a man's head. Of course they had to take him in and nurse him, and then they fell in love and were married. But I have no images of patron saints. Then if there was the sea, some one might be saved from a wreck and be carried to our house to recover. But there's no sea! In books there is always some way of bringing a romantic incident about. There is only one person I know of who waited and waited and it never came. Oh, I wonder if I must be like Mariana in the moated grange!

"'She only said, "My life is dreary,
He cometh not," she said.

Then in the distance the sound of a horse's feet was heard, coming nearer and nearer as fast as a horse could trot. "He is coming!" cried Ianthe, leaning over the fence, trembling with excite-

There was probably a reason for this, but Ianthe did not know it.

Denis Ingraham stood in dire perplexity, for lanthe made no reply to his questions, but only sobbed more pitifully than before. For a few minutes he waited, and then, judging that she was more fit to answer, he again put his question-

"I know I am silly and wicked," said father."

Her blue eyes looked up with a half smile through her tears, and Denis felt a sudden thrill of desire to help her, to act the fairy prince in very sooth, to be her champion through thick and thin. It was quite a year since he had seen her. and he had noticed that she had grown from a child, with her long fair curls hanging loosely, to a girl on the verge of womanhood, with the curls coiled at the back of her head. Ianthe smiled and shook her head. "But there has been no beast," she said; "there has been a very good, kind friend without any disguise. Thank you so much, Denis. I don't feel half so unhappy now."

Denis Ingraham had often wished that he had a sister, but this desire had never been so great as when he had paid a visit to the house of Gen. # FLIES STOPPED A TRAIN.

Peculiar Cause That Brought an Engine in Canada to a Standstill.

A few days ago the Grand Trunk flyer going east was in hard luck. At Napanee the steam box on the big engine got overheated, or something, and refused to continue the journey. The timely arrival of a freight train helped. The cars were shunted to a siding and the freight engine brought into commission on the cry like that, I implore you! I will express, taking it as far as Brockville, sinful, to keep you like this. Ianthe dear, don't cry!"

Now comes the peculiar part of the troubles of that train: When about twenty miles out of Correction speak to your grandfather; I will see when another large engine was secured. a sea of peculiar flies. They were in everything on the engine. The train had been ploughing through the flies at a mile a minute for several miles. The track was covered with crushed insects and the engine wheels balked at going round on it. After a little persuasion and a lot of cleaning up the train went upon its way again. On arrival at Montreal the engine presented a truly curious spectacle. The bars of the cowcatcher were filled right up with flies. On the front of the engine they were several inches thick .- Toronto Cor. Ottawa Citizen.

Cities Not Included in Itinerary Anxious to Entertain Nation's Chief.

MAY STOP AT CHARLESTON, S. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 13 .-President Taft continues daily to receive invitations to visit cities that were not included in the itinerary of his western and southern trip announced several days ago. The entire Republican delegation from Missouri, headed by Representative Bartholdt, called at the white house today to bespeak the President's consideration of an invitation which will formally be extended next week to visit St. Louis.

Want Taft for Centennial. The Missouri delegation is particular anxious that the President should be St. Louis October 3 to 9, during the the founding of the 100th anniversary of the founding of the city. They would also like to have the President make the trip down the Mississippi river to New Orleans, arriving at the latter city in time to attend the deep waterways convention. These plans do not coincide with the President's, however, and if he stops at St. Louis at all it will have to be during the latter part of Septem-ber, while he is en route to Seattle.

The President has decided to spend three days in the Yosemite valley. Rep-resentative Needham of California talked with the President concerning this feature of the trip, and was requested by the President to make the necessary ar-

Mark Twain was waiting for a street car in Boston when a young girl approached him, smiling. She was a lovely girl, fresh, blooming, ingenuous, bubbling with enthusiasm, and evidently on her way home from school.
"Pardon me," she said. "I know it's

"Glad to do it, my dear child," said Mr. Clemens, drawing out his fountain en.
"Oh, it's so good of you," gurgled the

"Um-m-m-mm" said Mr. Clemens,

The anchored boat had not a drop of water in it to indicate a struggle; in fact, the oars had apparently been carefully lifted out of the water and placed in the boat. Children who were playing on the shore say they noticed the boat at anchor for some time.

past few days. For the benefit of its members the society issues a paper which publishes correspondence with its members on topics of interest. The last issue contains a letter from Assemblyman George E. Scott in which he declares that "in my opinion the experienced legislator who would take a quick glance at the lob-byists opposing the binder twine plant and not be for it, without any further reason, must have been stone blind."

Ope of the clever pieces of literature a table showing the members of the Assembly on the special committees to investigate industrial insurance, income tax, good roads, water powers and dams, guarantee of bank deposits, education and investigation of the state departments. The secretary of the society concludes that out of twenty-eight appoint-ed on the committees, eight voted for the NEW YORK, July 12.-Mrs. Heler twine plant, nineteen against it and one vote was doubtful. Then follows a rather sarcastic letter in which it is intimated that some of the men were rewarded for faithful service in voting against the twine plant. The article says: "Another strange coincident-take the more important committees-income tax, water power and dams, banks and education, and of the sixteen members, those who voted against the farmers enjoy thirteen seats, while those who stood by the farmers get only three seats. None of these forty-three assemblymen, who 'stood up' and 'stood out' can be trusted to be even represented on so important committees as banks and education. Anyway the '2 to 1' selection is enough to cast a suspicion and to make the farmers 'wake up' and 'get busy.'

The President also spoke of the wisdom of providing rational amusement as a part of church work, thus making religion a welcome amusement of life and not something "to be improved only once in seven days and then to be taken in as small doses as possible."

Misses Trowel Work.

The church is to be known as the Ingram Memorial Congregational, of which Dr. J. W. Frizzell is the pastor. The church was founded by O. H. Ingram of Eau Claire, Wis., as a memorial to his son, Charles S. Ingram. President Taft, who is a Mason, and who at a recent cornerstone laying in this city worked for nearly fifteen minutes in spreading mortar all over the surface upon which the big granite block was to rest, was somewhat disappointed when he found that his only function was to place in position and seal into the stone a metal box containing photographs of himself, of the paster and various records and trinkets.

"I am an accomplished Mason," pro-tested the President.
Dr. Frizzell laughingly replied that the church did not want to take any chances and had the stone set before the President took charge.

who are members of the church. It is to furnish rational amusement. It is to make the church so attractive by reason of its social qualities and still con-form to the religious law. I am glad to know, to see and to believe that all churches, in a way, not so completely as this plan indicates, are adopting the view that there is nothing inconsisten, between religion and duty and happi-ness and rational amusement, and that the union of all of them is not something that is repellant to the real religious soul."

Western Trip to Be Long.

MADISON, Wis., July 13.—[Special.] Indications multiply that President Taft's announced itinerary for his westmaterially extended. On his far western trip, where trains are run heavier and at longer intervals than here in the east, it is more than likely that the President will have to follow the policy of his predecessors in chartering a special train. A special train will be absolutely essential if the President is to make stops at any of the Other liabilities smaller cities.

BIRDS LEAD CHOIR AT CHURCH. Canaries Obey Master's Baton and Sing Like Trained Musicians.

in with choir music, the Lincoln Park Institutional Baptist church had one of the most unique services ever known on Sunday. It is declared that not a false note was sounded by the birds, who followed the choirmaster's baton with amazing precision. The canaries began their chirping with the first strains of music and ceased with the singing, maintaining almost absolute quiet during the intermissions. The idea of calling the birds into commission as a part of the choir is original with the pastor, Rev. George R. Robbins, and the effect of the use of the canaries, it was declared by members of the congregation, added greatly to the choir serv-

The sermon was based upon the text, "Who are these that come flying through the air like doves?"

How Elephants Sleep.

In captivity elephants stand up when they sleep, but in the jungle, in their own land, they lie down. The reason giv-en for the difference between the ele-phant in capitivity and in freedom is that the animal never acquires complete confidence in his keeper and always longs for liberty.—Watchword.

Imperishable Wood.

A curious source of wealth is reported by the French Consul at Mongtze, in Upper Tonkin. It lies in wood mines.

The wood originally was a pine forest, which the earth swallowed in some cataclysm. Some of the trees are a yard in diameter. They lie in a slanting direction and in sandy soils, which cover them to a depth of about eight yards. As the top branches are well preserved. it is thought the geological convulsion which buried them cannot be of very great antiquity. The wood furnished by these timber mines is imperishable, and the Chinese gladly buy it for coffins.-London Globe.

Mme. Nazimova to Have Own Theater in New York.

(Copyright by J. E. Purdy, Boston.)

Work has been started on a new theater in New York which is to be a monument to the art of Mme. Nazimova. It is located on Thirty-ninth street, just off Broadway, and will be known as the Nazimova Art theater. It will be under the direction of the Shuberts, making the sixteenth theater in New York under their management. Some objection has been found to the selection of the name given the new playhouse on account of the difficulty people have in pronouncing Nazimova. The famous Russian actress, however, insists that her name be used. Mme. Nazimova is perhaps the most remarkable woman on the American stage by reason of the fact that she learned the English language in six months and at the end of that time was able to give a perform-ance in English of "Hedda Gabler." She begins her season in October and will open at the new playhouse in January.

It is estimated by Mr. Campbell that the growers netted an average of not less than 75 cents a crate or $345 ed deputy speaker of the House, and on the assembling of Parliament last winter he was elevated to the post of the growers $983,250 on 2850 cars. The Barnum & Bailey greatest show on earth is to visit Fond du Lac on Thursday, July 29. All America, together with foreign country, has been scoured from end to end by agents of this big show in search of novelties and the result is a performance brim full of sensational acts new to the circus world. In the big Barnum & Bailey show are nearly 400 arenic stars, most of whom are seen now for the first time. A new sensation will be seen at every performance in "JUPIion of his saloon property in the TER, the balloon horse." This re markable animal with its fearless rider ascends to the dome of the circus tent in a balloon and des ery ill at her home the past two cends to the ground in a shower weeks, from the effect of a slight of fireworks. Nearly 1000 animal wonders are to be found in the big 108 cage menagerie. 8 herds of elephants, including one herd that actually plays upon musical instruments in time and tune. A group of giant giraffes, monster trained hippopotamus, only living bi-horned rhinoceros and hundreds of other strange beasts. Barnum & Bailey's big, new, free street parade is the most gorgeous processthe history of circus business. Its tremendous size and wonderful Oscar Guenther and Ray Hend- length can only be believed in the actual seeing. It is natural to expect this big circus to lead all others in quality and quantity of its street spectacle as well as in other departments of the big show, yet never in its splendid history of nearly half a century has it dis played such extravagance as is shown this year.
