LIGHT DRAUGHT PUTATU HARVESTEK

Machines which will imitate the action of the human hand are recognized to be the best substitutes of hand work, and hundreds of the best agricultural machines now in successful operation are based on the idea of a mechanical imitation of the human body. Have you ever seen a machine which imitates the action of human hands in digging potatoes? No; because none of the potato diggers now in use and handled by the trade are constructed along the lines of this idea. Our Light Draught Potato Harvester works like the old style forks under the guidance of human hands, and is therefore the best and only substitute for hand work in digging potatoes under any and all conditions. You are invited to see this machine on exhibition at Wisconsin State Civil Service. Kewaskum Loses Second Game AN ODD CHARACTER DIES.

Locals Play Very Loosely Which Causes Grave and Tombstone Were Prepared by Their Defeat.

Last Sunday the locals, in a comedy farce, lost their second game of the season to Random Lake by a score of 5 to 3. The only excuse that can be offered is the very poor fielding of the locals. The lineup was completely changed as a few extra players nad to be secured to fill the vacancy of J. Schaefer, who is a member of the Kewaskum band, and had to play with them at the park and Geo. Schmidt having a sore hand.

Backus, at short, had an oif day and was also off color, having six errors placed against his record, his fielding had considerable to do with losing the game. His drop of a 1ly ball in the eighth inning, which, on an easy double play to third, would have retired the side without a run, but after this unexcusable numble, they were able to bring three runs across the imtial bag, thereby winning the game.

The visitors aside from the seconu inning, played tine base ball, and which they can feel proud oi, several times the fielders robbed the locals of sure hits, which perunder direction of the Agricultur- haps would have told a different story of game.

Himself and Phonograph Furnished Funeral Music.

Harvey Durand, Fond du Lac's

most eccentric citizen, died last week Thursday from injuries received from a fall near his home. He became unconscious shortly after the accident and remained so almost continuously until death. The funeral was held Friday, the dead man's favorite phonograph played, "Saved by Grace" and God Be with You Till We Meet Again, in accordance with one of the last wishes expressed before his death. Several years ago Durand prepared for his ultimate end, having a grave dug and having his tombstone selected, it being only necessary to carve thereon the date of his death. At the death of his wife several months ago, he used phonographs to furnish the funerat music.

Durand was born at Westfield Chautauqua county, N. Y. on November 2, 1827, removing to Fond du Lac in 1853. He was at various times a member of the North-Western railroad's engineering corps, farmer, speculator and city assessor. During the Civil war he was in the office of the provost marshal, being appointed in 1891.

He was instrumental in procuring the right of way for the North Western road between Fond du Lac and Milwaukee. In 1876 he made an extensive tour of Europe. Durand in 1860 married Miss Jennie F. Brown, who died several months ago. He is survived by one sister Mrs. Edward R. Felton of Fond du wedding on August 10th. The Young Peoples Alliance will hold their annual convention at Lomira, August 25 to 29.

Frey & Hall, dealers in general merchandise, at Richfield, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Hall retired from the business.

The corner stone of the new St. Paul's Lutheran church two miles south of Lomira was laid last Sunday with a large mass of people in attendance.

A new condensed milk factory is being built at Oostburg, Sheboygan county on the line of the Milwaukee Northern, and will be completed about September 1st. The company is capitalized at $30,000 and will employ about tifteen men.

Dr. F. W. Rogers of this city and W. P. Behling of Milwaukee left luesday evening on a delightful summer outing. From Milwaukee they went by poat to Detroit, from where they will go to Toronto and up through Canada to New Foundland, and will also visit Halifax on their way back. The trip will be made largely by boat, and will be a most enjoyable one this warm weather.-Hartford Press.

The corner stone of the new St. Joseph's church at Fond du Lac, was laid last Sunday afternoon by Bishop Fox of Green Bay, The principal address was delivered by Rev. Clifford, who spoke of the good the new church would accomplish. The ceremonies were attended by nearly 2000 people. Other clergymen in attendance were Revs. Alberts, Clifford and McDonald of Oshkosh, Collins of North Fond du Lac, Taugher, Keenan, Hudon, Wuelffing and McCreery of Fond du Lac.

COMING STATE FAIR.

One of the features of the coming State Fair which should prove of general interest is the exhibit now being planned by Secretary Cranefield of the State Horticultural Society. In a booth adjoining Horticultural Hall daily demonstrations will be given by preparing Bordeaux mixture and the other standard compounds used in fighting bugs and diseases which attack fruit and vegetables.

In addition all the different spray pumps and machinery used in applying the remedies will be shown in actual operation. Everything will be here from the tiny bellows used in dusting house plants to the six horse power gasoline engine spray outfit drawn by two

Such demonstrations as these may easily prove of more benefit than tons of bulletins giving formulas and directions. Everyone interested in garden or orchard should see this exhibit.

The Homecoming Celebration.

The homecoming celebration held at the North Side Park last Sunday was a success. The weather was fine and everything proved favorable for the enjoyment of the day. The Main street of our village presented a gala appearance, many buildings were tastefully decorated with greens, buntings and flags. Welcome banners were suspended Sunday afternoon with the Frank across the street at various places.

> The festivities began in the morning, when the Kewaskum brass band met the excursionists on the 8:50 train, after which, the band played several selections around town and then proceeded to the park, where landlord Eberie served and elegant dinner. The picnic in the afternoon was well attended games of all sorts were greatly enjoyed by all.

The speaking took place after 4 P. M. Val. Peters, president of the village, introduced the first speaker, A. C. Backus, Dist. Att'y, of Milwaukee, who made a brief but a very elegant address. Mr. Mc Gee, who was next introduced, made the principal address of the day, his subject being, "Equality of Philip must have had a lot on Men". He made an excellent adtentively. The dance in the evening was very largely attended, nearly 300 dance tickets were sold.

The French minister of agriculture, after a careful examination of the subject, has established "the legal status of the snail" by issuing a circular in which snails are defined as animals injurious to vegetation, and therefore legally subject to capture and destruction at all times and all seasons. This decision has created excitement and dismay nas created excitement and dismay among the numerous persons who earn a live ihood by collecting snails for market. Snails are in high favor with French epicures, and immense numbers of these mollusks are eaten in Paris. In the winter of 1900 the consumption of snails in the French capital amounted to 800 tons. The consumption has since to 800 tons. The consumption has since diminished, but more than eighty mil lion snails are still received annually by the Halles Centrales, the great market of Paris.—Philadelphia Record.

The girl heaved a sigh. Her thoughts went back to the six months she had spent under his roof, and involuntarily her lips curled in a smile. Nobody who saw her then could possibly recognize her now. Nobody, in fact, had seen her then who was likely to see her now-except Denia!

Their correspondence had dropped as a matter of course when Ianthe went to school. After that she had been too shy to begin again. Then her life became full of other interests, and during the last two years Denis had been almost forgotten. Now he would once again be her nearest neighbor, and because of that alone he would be a most important person in her life. She wondered what her new impressions of him would be. How would he compare with the other men whom she had added to her list of friends? On what footing would they stand?

"I wish," thought Ianthe with burning cheeks, "that those two unlucky proposals had never been made. Oh, I hope he has forgotten what happened when or a mother." last we met! If I had seen him even once in between it would not be so bad."

The day after Ianthe's final inspection of her house was to bring a number of guests. Every spare corner was to be utilized as guest room before the great day arrived. The ball was being given by Lord and Lady Mellenden, old friends of her grandfather's, who had taken a fancy to the friendless girl. It was Lady Mellenden who had given her her season in London and had presented her at court. The old lady had determined that the coming-of-age of her favorite should be celebrated by a ball. The month was I don't think there was a single discred-August and nearly all their friends were in Scotland. Most of the members of the house party were to remain a week as Lady Mellenden's guests. After that Ianthe was having a small and select few on her own responsibility, but naturally those did not include any of the young men whom Lady Mellenden regarded as eligible.

Chief of these was Gervase Oliver, son of a famous diplomat and heir to vast don't let us quarrel. I admit I am a riches from his American mother. Gervase was decidedly Lady Mellenden's favorite. His deliciously frank cosmopolitan manners were charming to all women, and Lady Mellenden was inclined to think that Ianthe's inclination leaned slightly in his direction. Then there was Lord Dully, whose name unfortunately rather indicated his nature. He was Ianthe's most open admirer, but he obviously bored her. Apart from his rank there was nothing to recommend him, but with Lady Mellenden rank counted for a great deal. Then there was a troop of lesser attractions, any one of whom might make quite an excellent husband for the girl, and about whom Lady Mellenden was quite indifferent.

"Lady Mellenden knows what she is about," said one of the girl guests to another. "It was a very wily idea to bring these young men here and let them see Ianthe's possessions. I've seldom seen any place quite so prettily situated. It's quite like the castle of a fairy princess. Yes, my dear, a Highland estate and a good shooting are valuable additions to Ianthes charms. Gervase, with all his gold, would find it hard to get just such another place as this."

At the same time Ianthe was loitering in the glen with Gervase Oliver. Both these young people were perfectly well aware of Lady Mellenden's scheme concerning them, and each was equally aware of the other's knowledge.

Gervase found himself occasionally wondering if they would marry. As far as his nature allowed he was in love with Ianthe, but his was not a very ardent temperament. The frank manners that were his conspicuous charm concealed a rather cold, calculating nature. As he walked with the girl up the lovely glen he was mentally appraising its value as an asset. It was not every charming girl who was so richly dowered.

On the other hand, there were more things to be considered than wealth. Gervase was rich enough to overlook an extra retinue of servants. Never had wealth in his future bride. That was not his temptation. What he did look since the house had been built a century for was social power, and of this Ianthe had none. There were strange stories dinner, but the meal was now over, and afloat about her antecedents. Gervase they had all dispersed again—the girls had rever arrived at the truth of the to give last touches to their toilets and matter, but report spoke of a father set to rights any little disorder.

"Take my word for it, you haven't missed much," replied Gervase. "Between you and me family ties don't count for very much. Why, I scarcely know a single family where the members are not variance. As for parents, well, I shouldn't say anything against them, for I have the very decentest pair possible, but on the whole I am not inclined to rate the possession of parents very highly. They interfere frightfully with your liberty.'

"They both died when you were a baby, did they not?" asked Gervase in his softest voice.

A little smile rose on Ianthe's lips. "Is it really possible that you have lived through a whole season and have heard none of the reports regarding my father?" she asked in a tone of affected surprise. "A good many have reached my own ears by hook or by crook. I have heard that he was an inmate of an asylum, that he was 'ticket-of-leave.' that it was a good thing I came of age before he had served his time. Her eyes met his with undisguised friendship, although there was a little mocking demon somewhere in their depths. Gervase understood very well what she meant. She had seen through his sentiments as if they had been held up to the light before her, had appraised his love and his hesitation at their true value, and had condemned his suit beforehand. Now that she had placed herself out of reach she was the one thing on earth he seemed to desire.

"Ianthe, don't be so cruel!" he cried. "You know that I love you. Ianthe, be

I want a husband who is willing to take me as I am, and to swallow me, father, stepmother, and vulgar little stepbrothers too, as if I were the sweetest morsel under heaven!"

She looked at him with a brilliant smile.

"You couldn't do that, Gervase. You know you couldn't. You would always be wanting to wave a wand and transform the photographer into a duke-and the little stepbrothers into ducklings! You could eat them up so nicely," she explained, "and they would be so easily got rid of!"

Gervase had perforce to smile, and they returned to the house in a friendly manner.

Ianthe, however, seemed to know no fatigue. The day had begun with the reception of countless presents-so bewildering in their variety and beauty that it was a wonder the girl made no mistakes in her little speeches of thanks. and the guests were allowed to gaze upon the scene of the revels. Ianthe took her place by Lady Mellenden's side to receive the guests. She wore her presentation frock, an exquisite creation of filmy lace and chiffon, pearls on her neck, and white roses wound in her hair. The brilliant loveliness of her face compensated for the total lack of liest center of attraction that could have "I think every one must have come now," said Lady Mellenden to Ianthe as the stream of arrivals seemed to cease. "I think so too," said the girl, with a sudden feeling of weariness. Yes, it seemed as if everybody had come-except the one person for whom she had watched and waited ever since she had color in her attire. She made the love-taken up her stand. "Why has Denis not come?" wondered the girl. "Is it possible that he does not mean to come?" A double pang of disappointment shot through her heart. She was very anxious to see Denis again; she was very anxious-true daughter of Eve-that he should get his first glimpse of her as she stood there in the first freshness of her lovely attire and received homage. It would be so piquant a contrast to their last meeting.

But Denis did not come. Ianthe turned away with a stifled feeling of disappointment in her heart, but a minute later she was opening the ball, as Lord seemed to defy him to deny her state- old-fashioned quadrille. This ended, the real fun of the evening began, and in a "I confess I have heard a few wild few moments Ianthe had forgotten her rumors." he answered, at once recover. disappointment and that strange little ing his composure. "They were so very wave of fatigue as she swung round the room with Gervase Oliver to the music 3-weeks'-old daughter of I. F. and Clem-

It was not until quite two hours later eyes regarding her fixedly as she spun "It was kind of you to think so," said round, this time with a stalwart young Ianthe, in a tone that might have been officer. A pang of excitement shot The waltz over, she sought Lady Mellenden.

"I see Sir Denis Ingraham has just come," she said in a low tone. "He is my very oldest friend. I suppose he has not yet succeeded in finding his hostess?" As she spoke Denis crossed the room,

"How strange it is to see you again!" married again, and has a second family, she exclaimed as they shook hands. She looked at him eagerly as he made his apologies to Lady Mellenden for his late arrival. He had not changed an atom, except that he seemed much graver and more subdued. "I am very sorry to have come so late on such an auspicious occasion, Ian-Miss Macqueen," he said, turning to the girl. "Believe me, it was an absolutely unavoidable delay." His eyes met hers gravely, and Ianthe chose to be annoyed with his serious air. "I am sure it must have been to keep you away from such an assemblage of beauty and fashion," she said, with a light indifferent air which seemed to indicate that his excuses had no real interest for her. Denis made no further explanation.

"I hope I am not too late to secure a dance with you," he said. TO BE CONTINUED.

LAUGHTER AS A CURE.

Idea Good, but There Is Trouble in Getting the Prescription Filled. It is all very well for a German doctor to prescribe hearty laughter as a remedy for nervous diseases, but perhaps he will also be good enough to tell us where we are to get the ingredients for his prescription, says the Lady's Pictorial.

One cannot well sit down and laugh "till the tears run down the cheeks" at nothing at all, however anxious to cure severe attack of neuralgia.

When one comes to think of it, few things make one laugh to this extent, and what is one person's meat where hilarity is concerned may prove so poison-ous to another as to plunge him to the very depths of depression.

There are people who will double up with merriment when they see some one else fall down a flight of steps, and afterward describe it as "the funniest thing they ever saw," but most nervous patients probably would not laugh at all if in order to effect a cure an attempt were made to excite their hilarity by throwing relatives and servants down stairs. Nerve specialists who adopt the laughter cure will have either to practice clowning or keep trained fools to set their patients "in a roar."

Animals Are Poor Sailors.

The polar bear is the only wild animal that likes a trip on the water, according to a French scientist who has studied its behavior at sea. He is quite jolly when aboard ship, but all other animals violently resent such a voyage and vociferously give vent to their feelings until seasickness brings silence. The tiger suffers most of all. He whines pitifully, his eyes water continually and he rubs his stomach with his terrible paws. Horses are bad sailors and often die on a sea voyage. Oxen are heroic in their attempts not to give way to sickness. Elephants do not like the sea, but they are amenable to medical techniques. are amenable to medical treatment.

by the breaking seas and the crew took refuge on the bowsprit while the Long Beach lifesaving crew tried to shoot a line over the vessel or to launch their surf boat. Pierson launched a raft in an attempt to bring a line ashore, but the raft drifted seaward and along the shore instead of coming on the beach. The condition of this daring sailor was worse than that of his shipmates cling-ing to the bowsprit above the breakers.

Shoot Line Toward Vessel. The Lyle gun of the Long Beach crew was dragged a mile from the station to the scene of the wreck, and many attempts were made to shoot the line over the rigging of the vessel. Further at-tempts to rig a breeches buoy in this fashion were abandoned, and the life-savers dragged their surfboat onto the the boat through the surf.

The vessel seemed to be resting solidly in the sand and in no immediate danger of breaking up.

John Brown's Fort.

Preparations are being made at Har-pers Ferry to move the old John Brown from the Murphy farm, a mile or two from the town, to the campus at Storer college. The old building is to be taken down carefully and re-erected in exactly the same size and shape as was the original. It will be used by the colege as a library and museum.

Against Home Study.

It is a bad thing for an adult to lose sleep, but it is worse for a child. To cut short the time the immature brain needs the hospital.

for rest and repair is to stunt the growth irreparably. Therefore, says Sir James Crichton Brown, the English physician. parents should set their faces firmly against home studying. When books are taken home the studying is, as a rule, done at night, and brain work at night is almost sure to poison the child's neep, robbing it of the repairing power sleep ought to have. "The present increase in nervous and mental diseases noted by recent observers is largely due," says
Sir James, "to insufficient sleep * * *
It would be wiser to let the children learn less if thereby a better brain power is insured for the future.'

AUTO IN DEEP DITCH

ONE DRIFTS OUT ON RAFT. MRS. H. O. PUTNEY OF WAUKESHA HURT IN ACCIDENT.

the rescue.

One Sailor Washed Ashore.

Madden Pierson, a Swedish sailor, who set out in a lafe raft from the stranded vessel, was washed ashore allive at Rockaway Beach during the morning and is being cared for there.
In a heavy easterly gale which piled the surf high upon the southern coast of Long Island, the Arlington went ashore before daylight. Her decks were swept by the breaking seas and the crew took tal.

The automobile turned turtle in its descent. The three women were pinoned beneath the wreck of the machine There they lay screaming in terror and not realizing how badly they were in-jured until the automobile could be removed.

Near them in the excavation was a team of kicking, maddened horses which, too, had gone into the excavation at the same time as the automobile.

The cause of the accident is somethe rigging of the vessel. Further attempts to rig a breeches buoy in this fashion were abandoned, and the life-savers dragged their surfboat onto the beach some distance east of the vessel and waited a favorable moment to rush the boat through the surf.

The cause of the accident is somewhat of a mystery. The most plausible explanation and the one given by Mrs. Holliday, after her wounds had been cared for in the hospital, is that a wag-on working on the boulevard, which is being widened at that point, struck her machine. The steering gear was dis-abled. Before Mrs. Holliday, who was driving the car, could bring it to a stop it had plunged into the deep hole on the side of the street.

HAS TWO POSTOFFICES.

Although the population of Camppellsport is about 800 there are two postoffices in the village and it is regarded as rather extraordinary that one of the offices is third-class and the other fourth class. Campbellsport was originally two villages-New Cassel and Campbellsport. When the villages incorporated the residents of New Cassel did not want to walk across the river to mail their letters, so the matter was finally settled by having two postoffices. Platt Durand is the present postmaster at Campbellsport and William Pool is in charge of the office in what was formerly New Cassel.

Military Babes.

The 4-year-old heir to the Italian throne must feel at times that honors are burdensome. In spite of his tender years he is obliged to wear a military uniform on all formal occasions, with sword and spurs, like a veritable war-zior. There are royal "soldiers" rounger than the tiny Prince of Piedmont even. The future King of Spain was enrolled in the King's regiment on the first anniversary of his birthday, and on that occasion his wee body was attired in the uniform of that regiment. Much more sensible to most Americans will seem the method of the Prince and Princess of Wales with their sons. Simple, boyish clothes, such as the sons of orivate gentlemen wear, are what the ittle English princes wear, be the occasion public or no—except, indeed, the 14-year-old Prince Edward, who wears the uniform of a naval cadet worn by all the boys at Osborn college.

After the people of Helena had seen last winter to their immediate wants in the shape of food, clothing, blankets and shacks the government sent supplies which carried them through until the weather moderated. An agent was sent from the Blackfeet reserve to take a census of the tribe and he found it to consist of 120 American Chippewas and 17 Canadian Chippewas. Nothing will be done for the latter and they must shift

With the coming of spring the band separated and one by one the broken down wagons creaked out of camp, some bound northward, some southward and Scharff seemed perfectly rational dur-ing the day, although he complained tunity to find a living. Then the government sent out another agent to see about putting them on the Fort Peck reserve and he found the members of the tribe already scattered.

The task of getting them together has been assigned to Mr. Armstrong, and if possible the Indians will be placed on their land this fall. If not it is possible that the government will take care of them this winter. The land assigned to them is fertile. Wheat, oats, rye and barley are the principal grains raised there, and if the Chippewas prove as successful at farming as the Crows their future will be assured.

LA FOLLETTE DECLARES PRESI-DENT TAFT SHOULD HAVE VETOED THE BILL.

AGITATION WILL CONTINUE

Asserts Rhode Island Senator Deliberate ly Deceived Congress and People on True Situation.

SAYS HOUSE NEEDS "REFORMING."

DES MOINES, Ia., Aug. 14.-In an interview with J. J. Dickinson of the Chicago Examiner, Senator Robert M La Follette of Wisconsin spoke firmly of his determination to carry before the people of the entire country the fight he to force their party to live up to its campaign pledges for tariff reduction. In denouncing Senator Aldrich and

"Aldrichism" he said:
"It was Aldrich who so manipulated the sugar schedule in the Dingley bill twelve years ago as to give to that in-satiate trust $3,000,000 a year more as an added expense of the American breakfast table.

"In the tariff bill just passed did the Republican party redeem its pledges for revision?" "It emphatically did not," was the re-platform of the party to be for down-ward revision?"

"He certainly did that in his campaign speeches.

"It is not; it is distinctly upward. It for the manufacturers only and even they don't know how well they are going to fare under it. The consumer has been gnored in nearly every schedule of the

"If in your judgment the party has not redeemed its pledge, point out in what respects the party failed to make good its promises?"

Senator La Follette laughed. "The instances are too numerous to be hurriedly pointed out. In the last day of the session I laid before the Senate in tabulated form a schedule of more than 300 articles that had been changed. This was to refute Senator Aldrich's false claim that the bill tended down-

"My tables showed that in only thirty-five of these articles had the Dingley rates been reduced, while on more than 280 of them they had been increased. They were schedules so adroitly manipulated that on their face they appeared to bear out the Aldrich claim.

Revision Agitation to Continue. "Will the subject of tariff revision now be allowed to rest or will the sentiment for a revision such as the people thought among the standpatters, the danger of permitting the agitation for revision to cease—a danger not only to the Republican party, but to the country and the system of protection itself. We shall keep hammering away until the people are aroused. After that is accomplished the rest will be easy. I have demon-strated in my fights in Wisconsin that all you have to do to get proper results is to help the people understand what is going on, assist them to comprehend the meaning and full significance of such vital issues as that of tariff revision. They can be implicitly trusted to set things right. "I could wish that the President had vetoed the miserable Aldrich-Payne bill and thus have presented the issue squarely and acutely to the country and the world. He would have been sustained by the American people."

"In your judgment do not the consumers of this country have to bear more than their just proportion of the burdens of the government, while the privileged classes escape the payment of their prop-er share of taxation?"

"Yes. And this condition cannot last much longer. The people are being rap-idly educated. And they will turn on and rend the men who have been deceiving them. I have absolutely no misgivings on that score. They are groaning under the tremendous weight of unequal burdens piled upon their backs by the men who have betrayed them."

Favors Inheritance Tax. "Would not the income and inheritance taxes, both of which are now in of the Little Bighorn, the scene of Cusoperation in Germany and England and ter's last stand, has solved a mystery more equal distribution of taxation bur-

This would have been demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt had not Senator Aldrich kept from the Senate an important govern-ment document which was forced upon the consideration of his committee while the House bill was being doctored by the finance committee behind locked

Would "Reform" the House "Will a fight be made next year for the election of a House of Representa-tives plainly pledged to sincere tariff revision downwards?"

"Yes. And it will be broader than that. It will be made for the reformation of the House, for the restoration of that branch of Congress to its original status. Cannonism must first be de-stroyed. Maybe 'Uncle Joe' cannot be beaten in the Danville district yet. But Cannonism can and must be destroyed. LUCANIA SUNK TO PREVENT TO-TAL DESTRUCTION

Big Vessel Is Gutted from Funnels Forward at Liverpool Dock and Firemen Fight Futile Battle

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 16 .- The Cunard line's steamer Lucania lies submerged at and a handful of Republican senators the Huskisson dock, seriously damaged made at the special session of Congress having been almost gutted from her funnels forward by fire which broke out on board the liner at 7 o'clock Saturday night. The flames are supposed to have originated in the saloon kitchen.

The fire brigade of the vessel, with two powerful motor engines, turned out immediately at the first alarm and found the first saloon burning fiercely from end to end. Despite all their efforts the flames gradually worked forward until they reached the steerage, consuming every particle of the woodwork there, and then practically destroyed the fore

At this time the heat was tremendous and the flames, shooting high from the vessel, attracted thousands of persons to the side of the river, where they remained throughout the night.

At 3 o'clock Sunday morning it was decided to flood the vessel by admitting water into her from the dock. Soon she heeled over and her funnels came in contact with the cranes on the dock and were badly damaged. A half dozen firemen who were on the gangway at this time were thrown into the water, but all were rescued. A fleet of tugs then was brought into requisition and pulled the liner upright and held her until she settled firmly on the mud bottom.

The second-class quarters and the whole after part of the boat, including the engine room, escaped injury from the flames and comparatively slight damage was done to the exterior of the vessel. Her upper part is considerably above water. The first saloon skylights were destroyed and the decks forward are badly buckled. Some of the plates of the hull were warped by the heat. The repairs to the Lucania will occupy considerable time.

WAUKESHA, Wis., Aug. 16 .- [Spenoon following the collapse of a large | pleasantly. which the "Holy Jumpers" were holding their camp meeting, several persons were painfully injured and many others escaped with slight bruises. During the panic many members of the sect remained on their knees praying. The most seriously injured were:

Freda Goldman, scalp wounds, bad cuts on face and body badly bruised; Robert Farrell, cuts on head and face, and se-vere bruises on body; Mabel Eaton, cuts and bruises on head and arms; Mrs. Soee, cut and bruised on head and arms. The afternoon camp meeting was in progress when the storm, which came up suddenly, struck the big tent. The center pole, 85 feet high, was shaken loose and dangling by ropes was whipped about over the heads of the crowd which became panic stricken in an effort to get out of the tent.

The crowd had scarcely started on its mad rush when the canvas collapsed on the heads of the fleeing people and that many persons were not trampled to death seems a miracle.

THE FOUNTAIN PEN IN RUSSIA. And the Chick Pea in Mexico, All Under the Watchful Consular Eye. Every once in a while the Consular Reports contain information of a sort that appeals as being odd. For instance, to a man whose first emotion when he hears the name Russia is to think of Siberia and general darkness and persecution, an announcement of trade opportunities for fountain pens rings queer. The announcement to the intending introducer of fountain pens concludes with the note: There is a polytechnic school in Riga and a university at Dorpat, both in the province of Livonia. The former has about 1700 students and the latter 3000. There are no book rooms maintained at the high schools, but students can obtain stationery, etc., from the beadles (proctors). As a rule, however, the students purchase their supplies at the different stores. Correspondence with these beadles would be of little or no value and business relations should be confined to business firms.

Almost next door to this item is an article regarding the growth of chick peas in Mexico. These, the reader is informed, are almost universally exported to Spain. It is odd to learn that Spain's typical dish depends not a little upon imports from Mexico.

RECORD CROP IN MINNESOTA

$300,000,000 Worth of Wheat Is Now Almost Ready for the Binders.

The farmers of Minnesota and South Dakota will get more than $300,000,000 for the crop now almost ready for the binders, based on present prices, and there is nothing to indicate any great drop in the value of wheat between now and the harvest. This means that the farmers of these states will have more money to spend than ever before in the history of the northwest. The figures are based on the crop estimate of the Northwestern Miller. This publication, considered the most reliable wheat crop authority in the country, places the total wheat acreage at 15.297,000 in the two states and the yield at 235,000,000 bushels, the greatest wheat crop ever raised by these states. The estimates are based on reports from more than 3000 resident agents of the Minneapolis Elevator comagents of the Minneapolis Elevator company, covering every nook and corner of the entire wheat belt. Based on the price of wheat in the Minneapolis chamber of commerce the crop is worth exactly $313,750,000 compared with $148,750,000, the value of the 1908 crop, based on the prices of a year ago. This means that the farmers will get $165,000,000 more this year for their wheat 000,000 more this year for their wheat than last year, or an increase of hetter than 100 per cent. on an acreage increase of only 8 per cent.

is a well recognized fact that the flour from the hard spring wheats of the northwestern districts will produce a large, well piled loaf of bread of excellent quality, and because it absorbs a lot of water, it also gives a good yield of bread. Don't forget the tonic effect of a cold bath on some children. It is in many cases one of the best things for the prevention of summer pining. A cold bath braces the nerves, blood vessels and heart. In hot weather such a bath cools heart.
