Machines which will imitate the action of the human hand are recognized to be the best substitutes of hand work, and hundreds of the best agricultural machines now in successful operation are based on the idea of a mechanical imitation of the human body. Have you ever seen a machine which imitates the action of human hands in digging potatoes? No; because none of the potato diggers now in use and handled by the trade are constructed along the lines of this idea. Our Light Draught Potato Harvester works like the old style forks under the guidance of human hands, and is therefore the best and only substitute for hand work in digging potatoes under any and all conditions. You are invited to see this machine on exhibition at

FRENCH AVIATOR MAKES NEW RECORD OVER 10-KILOMETER COURSE AT RHEIMS.

CURTISS TIES WITH BLERIOT.

American's Unofficial Time Faster Than Frenchman's, but Officials Make Some Reduction.

LATHAM USES TWO MACHINES.

BETHENY AVIATION FIELD. RHEIMS. France, Aug. 25.-Paulhau, the French aviator, flying over the tenkilometer course here today, beat the distance record held previously by the Wright brothers.

He was competing for the Prix de la Champagne and covered a distance of 43 minutes and 24 seconds.

The distance between turns was not counted. He covered the course thirteen times. His time at the end of the twelfth lap was 2 hours 28 minutes 36

The Wright record for distance seventy-three miles, according to the official measuring. This does not count the curves in flight. The Wright record for time in the air, made in France, December 31, is 2 hours 20 minutes 23 1-5 seconds.

Sommer Has Record.

This record was exceeded by Roger Sommer on August 7, but the time was not official. Sommer then stayed in the air for 2 hours 27 minutes and 15 sec-onds. This time has been the world's record for duration of flight. Paulhan uses a Voison biplane. The Sommer and Wright machines also are biplanes. Glenn H. Curtiss, the only American contestant in the accordance races here. contestant in the aeroplane races here, covered a lap of the course 61-5 miles, this afternoon at a rate of speed that. according to unofficial timing, broke the record for this distance, made Tuesday by Bleriot, 8 minutes 42-5 seconds. Curtiss himself made the record that fell be-fore Bleriot, covering the distance in 8 minutes 35 2-5 second, but when the official time was given out it was seen that Curtiss had tied Bleriot. His time also was 8 minutes 42-5 seconds.

The fourth day of aviation week was ushered in with a heavy downpour of rain and blustering winds. Towards noon, however, the rain ceased and the wind became lighter.

The Esnault-Pelterie machine, which has been supplied with new wings, was the only aeroplane to make its appearance before noon. It made a dozen runs in an effort to leave the ground, but none was successful. Prince Albert Leopold of Belgium, ompanied by the members of his family, is among the latest arrivals at Rheims. The prince spent the morning in visiting the sheds, where the machines are kept, and showed especial interest in the Curtiss and Wright types. By 3 o'clock this afternoon the sky had cleared and the breeze fell to three meters a second. Several aviators came out and began to get ready for the trials of the Prix de La Champagne, the endurance test. Latham attempted in two machines ti leave the ground, but failed. Paulhan, in order to maintain his advantage over his rivals, announced that he would again attempt to cover fifty kilometers (31.05 miles) before 5 o'clock. Paulhan was the first aviator to get away. He was out for long distance, and flew low. He finished his first lap ### in 12 minutes and 15 seconds. Latham Flies High.

Latham followed Paulhan into the air a few minutes later and at once ascended to a height of 100 feet. Several times his machine was caught in a gust o wind and heeled over. This obliged the pilot to head up into the wind to regain his equilibrium, and after finishing a lap, 6 1-5 miles, in 9 minutes and 35 econds Latham came down.

Lefebvre was another starter in the prix de La Champagne. Prince Albert Leopold of Belgium witnessed his get-away, but he had hardly crossed the starting line before trouble with his mo-tor compelled him to descend. Fournier, Rougier and Ferber made brief flights, and Latham got out a new machine but only rounded the first turn.

did not stop, but completed the sixth round and then began on the seventh. Latham finally was successful in rising and made a second start. He was pre-ceded at short intervals by Bleriot and

Bleriot Does Not Fly.

Bleriot, like Curtiss, has decided not to try for the prix de la Champagne. He will reserve his efforts for the international cup, which is to be run off Saturday, and the finals of the Prix de La-Vitesse, which takes place Sunday. The Wright managers profess to believe that Curtiss has been invited to give flying exhibitions in Belgium, Germany and

Among the American on the tribune his afternoon were Princess Helie de Sagan, who was accompanied by her husband; Mrs. George Law and John McCutcheon of Chicago and Fred M. Stephenson of Marinette, Wis., who have stopped off here on their way to Africa.

RAILWAY MAGNATE FEEBLE WHEN HE LEAVES LINER, BUT GIVES INTERVIEW.

HAS BEGUN HIS "AFTER CURE,"

Sallow and Feeble, but Still Expresses. Ability to Defeat Such Trifling Inconvenience as Sickness.

IS SATISFIED WITH HIS TRIP.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25 .- Ten pounds lighter than when he left America nearly two months ago, but with his spirit unbroken and breathing a sentiment of optimism, E. H. Harriman returned to his home to take what he quizzically callsthe "after cure." Though Mr. Harriman cheerfully declared that he was feeling "pretty weil," he showed in every movement, every intonation of the voice, that he is a sick, tired man. He is sallow, almost yellow, and his step as he greeted friends who had boarded the steamer Kaiser Wilhelm II at quarantine Tuesday afternoon was noticeably feeble. The best description would be that of a man convalescing from a great and serious ill-

One could not see whether behind the spectacled eves there was the same fire as ever, but the cheerful smile was there and he showed no lack of his supreme confi-dence in himself and his ability to defeat such a triffing inconvenience as disease.

Tuesday night at his magnificent summer home at Arden, N. Y., the so-called "$1,000,000 fortress," Mr. Harriman began the "after cure," for which the treatment at Bad Gastein and other European resorts was a preliminary. He is con-stantly attended by his family and a corps of skilled physicians.

Coms Home for a Cure.

"And I have come home," he said, "for cure, and not for work."
In the interview with newspaper men which he gave in his private car as he reclined on a couch, Mr. Harriman refused to affrm or deny the reports that he had secured an option on the majority of the stock in the New York Central

"That is an easy one," he said, smiling, but I would not tell you if I had." He seemed greatly interested in the subject of legislation, criticised the new cor-poration law and defended himself rather warmly from the charge that he was a speculator solely and simply. He an-nounced that it was in his mind to open up new territory and to build new tributary lines.

"This means new settlements and more people." he said, with a return of his old time enthusiasm

Satisfied with Trip. "I am entirely satisfied with my trip abroad, as far as my health is concerned," he said, "and I have nothing on my mind except to come home and take the 'after cure.' I lost ten pounds while over there and for a little fellow like me that is a great deal."

Lying back on a pillow, his pade face paler in the artificial light of the car, Mr. Harriman's quaint humor and cheerfulness of mind were in marked contrast to his physical condition.

"The doctors advised me to come home and rest," he said, "although they intended at first that I should rest abroad." Here he smiled wanly and went on: "The photographing those doctors put me through was worse than upon my arrival here, for they X-rayed me and did everything they could."

Laughing softly as he recalled his ex-periences, he said: "They took sixteen different photographs of my digestive organs on the skiagraph. And to make the pictures a success they began feeding me on bismuth and rice. Bismuth and rice, I understand, show up better on the

"I had a great deal of fun during it all," he said, as he concluded the narrative of his continental medical ordeal, "but I lost three pounds during the photographing process and once got a little shock. The doctors overlooked a little tack in the machine which they stood me up against—I came in contact with it. It frightened me a little, but I stuck

Ianthe had purposely reserved one or two in case he arrived, but that aggravating something in his manner induced her to reply-

"I am afraid you are, Sir Denis. My programme is quite full!"

She looked at him with a smile which seemed to say that room might yet be found for him-if he cared. But Denis only bowed with an expression of formal regret, and Ianthe was claimed by an impatient partner and disappeared in the

It was little enough of this youth's conversation that Ianthe heard. She was fuming with indignation. Denis was not the very least what she had remembered and expected. What man on earth but himself would have been calmly content to resign all hope of a dance with her merely because she said that her programme was full? She imagined Gervase in a similar case. Why, he would simply have taken his pencil and substituted his name for somebody else's—and he would have got as many dances as he cared to claim. Then—"Miss Macqueen!" Why, she had never thought of him as anything but "Denis."

Then a wave of understanding rushed over her. No doubt he had adopted this manner so as to let her understand from the very first that they met as comparative strangers, and that he looked upon her merely as "Miss Macqueen;" his nearest neighbor, and nothing more. As if she would be likely to imagine for one moment that he cared for her still! The girl's cheeks glowed as she circled round. How insufferable he had been! She could never like him again after this!

In the meantime Denis' thoughts were all of her. The first sight of her had been a revelation. Pretty he had always thought her, but he had never imagined she would turn out so lovely as this.

"What a mercy she and not bind herself to me!" was his bitter thought. "She has become part of a different world."

of it all. All the strangers seemd to be on terms of the greatest familiarity with one another, and, although Ianthe made valiant efforts to mix the two elements, it seemed as if they were like oil and water, refusing to combine. Denis confined his attention mainly to the country families, among whom he was an old-established favorite. Ianthe, endeavoring to divide her attentions equally, was inevitably more at home among her personal friends, and obviously enjoyed most the dances she had with them. Lord Dully had been her closest attendant. The infatuation of this noble youth was patent to the entire ballroom, and it was also pretty evident that Ianthe was finding him a little trying.

Finally, Fate accorded him an oppor-tunity for distinguishing himself, which was destined, however, to cover him with lasting confusion as far as Ianthe was concerned. He had taken her in for some refreshment, and as they were sitting together at one of the tiny tables Ianthe inadvertently stretched her arm across the top of the fairy-lamp which formed the center of the decoration, and in a moment found her chiffon sleeve in a blaze. In an instant half a dozen men had whipped off their coats and were rushing to the rescue, but before one of them could reach the terrified girl some one had sprung across the floor and with his hands had crushed the flames.

"Ianthe ,are you much hurt?" The voice was tense and eager. Ianthe, through her pain, saw a white face looking at her with wild concern. "Not much, I think," she answered with a laugh; "but, Denis, I might have been if it had not been for you."

"Not with all these men in the room." answered Denis, with an involuntary look of contempt at Lord Dully, who had stood by all the time, too much petrified with astonishment to make a single movement

One of the girls had put a scarf over Ianthe's bare arm and shoulder, and now the girl was led away to have her arm attended to. The untoward accident brought the ball to an end. In a few minutes, Ianthe, with a change of dress, descended to bid their guests good-bye. The burns were only of the slightest description; owing to the flimsy material the flames had scorched rather than burned. All the same, she had got a fright, and could certainly dance no more. It was now 2 o'clock in the morning, and many of the guests who had a long way to drive had already departed. Denis, however, was still there when Ianthe descended to show that she had not been really hurt. "What about yourself, Denis?" she asked him, her eyes full of concern. "Oh, I am all right!" he answered. "My skin is a good deal tougher than

yours, remember."

"And then of course you had gloves!"
"Of course," said Denis, omitting to remind her that the incident had occurred in the supper room, and that he had removed his gloves. The palms of his hands were really rather painfully burned, and Ianthe did not know that even the soft pressure of her fingers gave him horrible pain.

The girl finally reached her bed, utterly worn out with excitement and

"It has been a splendid day," were her last thoughts as she closed her eyes, "and I am glad my sleeve caught fire, for it told me the thing I wanted most to know."

CHAPTER XI.

his opportunity to ask Ianthe to be his wife. Ianthe had known that the moment must come sometime; this was inevitable, considering how deeply the youth was in love. She made no objection therefore when he followed her to her special greenhouse alone with the evident intention of declaring himself. The girl did not care much for the task of refusing him. With Gervase it had been different, for she had known that he was not really very deeply in love.

"Indeed, Frank, I thank you very much for the honor you have done me, but, believe me, it can never be," she had now got the length of saying. "But why? You must have some reason," he said.

"I have a great many reasons," anhe loves me still?" swered lanthe gently. "The chief one is that I do not love you."

"But if I am content to overlook that, and trust that you will grow to care for

"You are very generous, but that would never content me."

"You seem to want a great deal," said the boy bitterly. "I can give you rank and wealth and love, and yet that is not enough!"

"No, because I want a husband also whom I love, so well as one who loves

Lord Dully grew angry.
"You ask a great deal more than you are likely to get!" he said venomously. "It only shows how ignorant you are of life. Some fine day an adventurer, attracted by your money, will come along and you will fancy you love him, just as your mother did before you. You need somebody to protect you from dangers like those."

Least and to wait with this till the description of the was why he was so late in arriving here."

"I don't know why I should think so much about him," the girl said to hereself with vexation. "I suppose it is

It was now lanthe who was angry. "There is no necessity for dragging my mother's name into this conversation, more especially if you have only an insult to utter. As for requiring protection from danger, I am not at all sure that I am incapable of looking after myself. But if I am, Lord Dully, I scarcely think it is to you that I need appeal for help!"

His face flushed scarlet. "It is not every one who can keep his head in an emergency," he answered. "I own that I cut no heroic figure last night, but it is hardly necessary for you to taunt me with it today."

"I was wrong," answered Ianthe with swift compunction; "but your words annoyed me. You will admit that I had cause to feel angry and vexed."

"Indeed, I beg your pardon most humbly," said poor Lord Dully. "I can-not think how I came to say such a

"Well, we have both distinguished ourselves by being unpardonably rude," said the girl with a rueful laugh. "Let us make it up now and be friends. You see how impossible it would be for us to live in harmony."

"I see no such thing and I will not give up hope," he answered, and he raised the girl's outstretched hand and

Now the inevitable reaction after all the excitement set in. The two days following the ball witnessed the departure of nearly all the guests. Lord Dully and Gervase Oliver had both gone, much to Ianthe's relief. Lord Dully's air of gloom had told his story to all; Ianthe knew that the air was full of comments.

If Gervase felt any wound he con-cealed it admirably. His behavior, in fact, was such as to make many believe that he was the chosen suitor. He parted with Ianthe on the most cordial terms, and the look which they gave one another on parting was misunderstood by Lady Mellenden as well as by others.

the girl. "Don't be pert, my dear. I mean my question seriously. Somebody must look after your matrimonial prospects, you know. So you have sent him away?' "Yes," answered lanthe. "I do not care for him the least-in that way." "Well, in a way, it was to be expected. Frank is not half clever enough for you, and he is very tactless besides. Still, it would have been an excellent match. You will probably never have such a chance again."

"I do not want such another," said the girl, trying to subdue the feelings of rebellion with which such remarks always filled her. "I will marry for love when I marry, not for wealth or rank."

"And a very good sentiment," re-turned Lady Mellenden serenely. "I think, however, that you have probably made an excellent choice and have managed to bestow your heart where there is a good deal of money, too." "Indeed, I have bestowed my heart nowhere!" cried the girl. "I think you are under a wrong impression, Lady Mellenden. I had better tell you at once that I have refused Gervase, too."

She raised a charmingly flushed face. "Refused him!" echoed Lady Mellenden in astonishment. She loked coldly great many in this region, all among at Ianthe's pleading face for a moment and then added, "May I ask, then, whom

"Dear Lady Mellenden, don't be so angry. I know it seems ungrateful and unkind after all you have done for me. But indeed I am not ungrateful. Nobody could feel your kindness more than

She rose and threw her arms round her friend, who gradually allowed herself to be coaxed back into good humor. Nevertheless Ianthe knew that she was not really forgiven. It was a most painful predicament for her. She had an almost morbid sense of what she cwed to Lady Mellenden. There was no way of repaying her except by making that "good match" which was all the reward

"Oh, if I had only one real friend in all the world to whom I came first of The next day Lord Dully at last found all!" thought the girl. It was the old misery of her life arisen once more to haunt her. she craved.

"What brings happiness?" wondered the girl, looking out at the stars. "It is not youth nor money nor beauty nor being popular with all the world. People say that I have all those things and yet am not happy."

"I am so lonely," she sobbed, "in spite of it all!" There was but one way to happiness-loved her, and she had not known whether she had loved him. Willingly she would now throw herself into his arms and weep from gratitude and re-lief. Instead she had had to smile and thank him, she scarcely remembered how. She had seen something in his eyes as he looked into hers that had made her heart beat loud and fast. He had been cold and strange when first he met her, but he loved her still-she was sure that he loved her still!

Yet, was she quite sure? Doubt overcame her. Nearly a week had passed and he had never come to see if she were none the worse. Lady Ingraham had called, bringing his apologies to Lady Mellenden for his inability to accompany

CHAPTER XII.

"Ianthe Macqueen is in a fair way to have her head turned," was Lady Ingraham's remark to her son, after she returned from her call. "I must admit she is remarkably pretty and has a good deal of style, but she spoils it all by the airs she gives herself."

Denis was well acquainted with this formula. It was his mother's invariable comment upon a pretty girl. Therefore he only sighed and made no reply.

"There's a rumor that she is engaged to that young Mr. Oliver. I think it must be true, for they certainly seemed on terms of great intimacy. In my the case to the young days, thank goodness, girls were not allowed to behave as Ianthe did this.

"Perhaps she is not his fiance," suggested Denis very quietly.

Opposition was the one thing required to make Lady Ingraham sure about anything.

"But I tell you she is," she answered tartly. "I have it on the best authority." Denis said nothing.

"She had not even the courtesy to ask how your hands were," continued his "She did not know they were burned," said Denis. "Nobody knew, and there is no reason why anybody should."

"If you had had sense to say something at the time instead of putting on a pair of gloves and pretending they were all right, they would have been

This was why Denis had not gone in person to call, for the injured hands were still bandaged, and would have to remain so for some

He rose and left the room, for it was obvious that his mother had returned in a very bad temper, and would have no good to say about any one. Her news carcely surprised him. He too had heard the rumor, and had thought it probably true. Ianthe had danced more than once with Oliver, and had seemed to enjoy his society in a very special degree. He had remarked it at the time.

BIG CAVES IN LAVA BEDS. Interesting Discoveries in a Land of Extinct Volcanoes.

The Modoc lava beds in California, near the Klamath county line, long a place of historic as well as scenic interest, have grown more prominent lately from reason of new discoveries, especially as to the caves, of which there are a lava beds of the raggedest description. As one traverses Tulu lake, the southern margin of which rests on the lava Many of these are weathered and ancient, covered with shrubs and trees, and others are absolutely bare and the reddish lava about their craters has a modern look. Following the lava flows from these cinder cones are vast crevices and crinkled ridges of lava and caves of great extent and of various forms. A man who lives in this region and who has spent thirty years as a cowboy, claims to have discovered a cave many miles in extent, which he calls the Mammoth cave of California, and steps are being taken to make a thorough exploration of its vast subterranean recesses. A party of thirteen persons from Klamath Falls has just returned from a four days outing in the tava beds and reports a most interesting outing in that land of dead volcanoes.

Several new caves were discovered by the party, one of which, some 200 feet in length, 50 in width and with a level ceiling 40 feet above the floor. The most important discovery made by the party, however, was of a two story cave, which is indeed one of the world's mar A hole was found some 10 feet vels. in width in the bottom of a large cave lantern was lowered on a rope it was evident that there was another floor with a surrounding cavity some 25 or 30 feet below.

This was lowered until it touched the lower floor and by it the party descended to a great corridor 30 or 40 teet wide, ex-tending apparently parallel with the corridor above in both directions from the point of descent. The corridor is not less than 500 feet in extent and is obstructed at the ends by loose material fallen from above. # WESTERN ROADS WIN NOTED RATE CASE IN MISSOURI

GRANTED PERMANENT INJUNCTION AGAINST INTERSTATE COM-MERCE COMMISSION.

CHICAGO JUDGES DECIDE IT.

Famous Action Involves Schedules in Many States in the Missouri River District.

HAS LONG BEEN IN THE COURTS.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 24.-The permanent injunction sought by western railways against the interstate commerce commission in the famous Missouri river rate case, was granted here today by Judges Grosscup, Baker and Kohlsaat of the United States circuit court. The case has been in litigation for some time. Judge Grosscup delivered the opinion of the court, Judge Kohlsaat concurring, while Judge Baker delivered a dissenting

Commission Will Appeal. The commission, thus defeated, in its first attempt to bring about what is alleged to be a new system, or principle, of rate making, will, it is asserted, carry the case to the supreme court of the

The parties which petitioned for the injunction were the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad company, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad company; the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway company; the Chicago & North-Western Railway company, and the receivers of the Chicago Great Western Railway company et al.; the Illinois Central, the Santa Fe, the Alton, the Missouri Pacific, the Frisco Railroad companies, and a number of important shipping interests intervened as co-com-

The bill for injunction was filed on complaint of George Kindell, a manufacturer of Denver, Colo., against the order entered by the Interstate Commerce commission on March 2, 1909, relating to joint rates from Chicago and St. Louis to Denver. Missouri River Cities Losers. By the decision announced the Missouri river cities lose the advantage which the enforcement of the commision's order would have given them.

Besides granting the permanent in-junction in the Missouri river rate case, the court also granted a preliminary injunction in the Denver rate case which is based on similar principles as the Missouri river case. The Denver case involving shipments to Denver instead of Missouri river points is still pending finally on a demurrer filed by the Interstate Commerce commission to the bill of the complaining railroads.

The railroads in the Missouri river rate case sought to have the interstate commerce commission enjoined permanently from enforcing an order of the commission made June 24, 1908, relating to joint rates from the Atlantic seaboard to Missouri river cities.

Wants Through Rates.

This order sought to create a system of through rates from the Atlantic sea-board to the Missouri river for a reduc-tion from the sums of the local rates. This, according to western roads, threw the burden upon them.

Powers of Federal Body.

CANNON A MENACE. CHARGES FOWLER

REPRESENTATIVE, IN OPEN LET-TER, SAYS SPEAKER USURPS LEGISLATIVE POWER.

SAYS HIS RECORD IS ROTTEN.

In the Tariff Fight, New Jersey Man Accuses "Uncle Joe" of Duplicity and Treachery.

HE CONSPIRED WITH ALDRICH?

ELIZABETH, N. J., Aug. 24.-Representative Charles N. Fowler, recently leposed as chairman of the committee on banking and currency, has made pubic his promised open letter to Speaker Cannon. He announced several days ago that the contents of the letter would be of national importance, and would go to the root of the trouble which resulted in the attempt of the "insurgents" to efeat the speaker for re-election. Mr. Fowler was modest, as politicians who saw advance copies of the letter learned, for the communication is by far the most vigorous and comprehensive attack on Cannonism that has yet appeared.

Mr. Fowler does not hesitate to call a spade a spade. In language that would make Senator Tillman envious, he lays charge after charge at the door of the speaker, winding up by declaring him a national menace that must be removed if Republican government is to continue in the United States.

Mr. Fowler charges Speaker Cannon with being responsible for two-thirds of the national losses in the panic of 1907, through his defeat of the bankers' bill providing for a system of credit cur-rency. He declares that the speaker conspired with Senator Aldrich to discredit the President and defeat the Payne tariff bill. He warns the American people against Mr. Cannon's plan to make American banking and commerce the football of our politics, pre-cisely as our productive industries are today, by the establishment of a central bank."

Tariff Tilt Challenge. "I challenge you," he writes of the tariff controversy, "to cite in all your political history a more dishonorable and disreputable piece of business unless, perchance, you cite something in your own career of which the people are not yet advised."

And finally: "As you are aware, we And finally: "As you are aware, we now have a government by edict, so completely have you absorbed and usurped all power, legislative as well as political. You have succeeded in Russianizing the House of Representatives. But you will be the last of the political Bourbons, and the conditions which made such a creature as you possible will end with the Sixty-first Congress."

Beginning with the recital of the circumstances of his candidacy for the speakership and his subsequent removal speakership and his subsequent removal as chairman of the banking and currency committee. Mr. Fowler nominates the speaker briefly for membership in the Ananias club in connection with the congressman's deposition, and passes quickly to a review of Mr. Cannon's record Kansas City chauffeurs carried Mrs.

on financial and currency questions.

In taking up the subject of the credit currency bill prepared by a commission of fifteen bankers in the fall of 1906, e writes:
"After the bill had been reported by the banking and currency committee to the House. I went to you as was necessary, disgraceful as the necessity may seem under the circumstances, to ask whether I could call up the bill for conideration, telling you we were facing financial crisis, that something should be done to meet it, and that this bill had been drawn for that specific pur-Lays Blame for Panic.

"You literally hooted the idea of a panic, and inquired, 'What does this howling in Wall street amount to? The country don't care what happens to those speculators. Everything is all right out west and around Danville. The country don't need any legislation. Then, I don't take any stock in your as-set currency.' As usual, your ignorance and prejudice were all-sufficient then. "But the panic came, as every man who had any intelligence on this subject knew it would. And one-half to two-thirds of all our losses I charge to you personally, because if the bankers' bill thirds of all our losses I charge to you personally, because if the bankers' bill had passed the House and gone to the Senate these losses would have lain at their door if they had failed to pass it —as the matter now stands, they lie at your door. * * * * This is your record upon our financial and currency legislation. I challenge you to find a single living man with so rotten a one. It is a record of ignorance ten a one. It is a record of ignorance or political cowardice or a disgraceful hybrid of the two. And yet, sir, you assume to dictate the financial and currently of the company of the co rency legislation of a civilized country.

It was in contemplating the unmeasured losses and terrific consequences to my country resulting from the crisis of 1907, because of your ignorance, preju-dice, and absolutely unchallenged power as speaker of the House of Representatives, that I resolved that, so far as in me lay, never again should such a financial tragedy fall upon the American people. Therefore, I announce myself as a candidate for speaker.

Ignorance and Prejudice. "Do you suppose, sir, that I did not ppreciate fully the probable couse-uence of my act when I undertook to play my part in securing this reform (appointment of a calendar day for introducing bills)? Do you suppose that I was not aware of your ignorance, prejudice, inordinate conceit, favoritism, putrid preferences, and that, like all such characters possessing absolute power, malice is the mainspring of your every action under such circumstances? "You can insurge and plot against the Republican platform, and against the President himself—of which I shall now adduce stronger circumstantial evidence than that on which many a man has gone to the gallows.

"It seems from all that can be learned with reference to the conference on the Payne bill, that you, with every mem-bers' political head in your basket of favors, shuttle-cocked through the halls of Congress, trying to secure the passage of the Aldrich bill and disfiguring so far of the Aldrich bill and disfiguring so far as you could the Payne bill, with the ex-ception of a few schedules. "How did it happen that Mr. Aldrich

Fontana was 48 years old and is survived by three brothers.

ALASKA'S BLACK GOLD.

Her Coal Fields Said to Be Richer Than Her Gold Reserves.

While Alaska's gold reserves are large they are in no way unique, for refined gold is the same, whatever the source. But when it comes to coal fields, says the American Review of Reviews, Alaska has no competitor. Its store of high grade fuel cannot be equalled in quality west of the rockies.

In fact to find anthracite and bituminous coal which compares in fuel value with that of Alaska one must come east to Pennsylvania. These coals are, therefore, the key to the commercial situation on the west coast. For a high grade steaming coal used for manufacturing industries or a merchant marine or a coke for smelters in the western states one must turn to Alaska.

Hence the growing population of the west has a vital interest in the develop-ment of these coal fields. These coals

WATER SUPPLY IS INADEQUATE.

NESHKORO, Wis., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—Fire broke out in the large marsh just east of this place Tuesday afternoon and is still raging fercely. It was use it, however, will not be to waste it unless it be improperly mined. A surveyed area of about one hundred square miles is known to be underlaid with these coals, and it is probable that further investigation may show an extension of the field.

A rough estimate of the quantity within this surveyed area gave some 6,000,-000,000 tons, or more than one and a half times the entire production of Pennsylvania since coal mining began. It is fair to assume that this coal is worth $1 a ton, which would make its total value about forty times as great as the entire gold output of Alaska to the present time. It is probable, therefore, that the value of the coal fields exceeds that of grass and moss about two feet in thickness and the fire is creeping along the ground under this. There is no telling when or where it will break out.

All the crops are poor in this section of the state and the marsh fire is wiping out all of the existence for the farmer's stock.

Forest Fires Under Control.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Aug. 25.—Reports from Traverse City say that danger from the forest fires in that videnity has disappeared with the subsiding of the wind. The fires that were burning yesterday are now under control.

These coals are, however, practically untouched, for the only coal mining in Alaska is that of some lignites for local use. A few years ago statistics showed that Alaska's entire export of coal for a year was four tons, while it produced 15 tons of gold. There are also some bituminous coals, though of less fuel value, in the Alaska peninsula, on the Yukon and on the Arctic slope. Lignitic coals and peat are abundant and widely distributed, and some of these possess great value for local consumption.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has not weakened on his stand against bleached flour, and preparations are being made to try several cases of this sort as soon as the department of justice can get ready for them.

LUDINGTON, Mich., Aug. 25.—[Special.]—The worst fire that has visited this city in twenty years destroyed the entire plants of the Butters Salt and Lumber company Tuesday night. The

Many of the bakers who testified at the hearing said that it was impossible to buy unbleached flour on the market, and that personally they would be glad were burned. The scene of the conflagration was one mile from Ludington on the opposite side of Pere Marquette lake and while the city fire department responded they were uttank pushful that personally they would be glad if the practice were done away with. The secretary of agriculture issued an order that no more bleached flour was to be admitted to interstate traffic after June 8 of this year. That gave the manufacturers six months to get rid of their stocks. There is a great deal of money involved in the business, both among the millers and the manufacturers of the bleaching machinery. An effort was made to stop the enforcement of the secretary's order by mandamus proceedings, but the court refused to grant the order, and cases will now be made against the shippers of flour in interstate commerce. -Washington Star.

Beneficent Vesuvius.

Volcanoes and sharks are the latest drafted allies of "the man with the hoe." As a result of extended investigations into the results of the 1906 eruption of Vesuvius, the Italian experiment station reports that the fall of volcanic material caused a notable increase in the fertility of the soil. It hurt crops then in the ground by reason of its crushing weight and the excess of injurious salts and acids. But these harmful elements were all highly soluble and have already vola-tilized or washed away, while the remaining ejecta have added vast quantities of needed potash, phosphoric acid, and ni-trogen. Far away Tasmania, whose shores are infested with sharks in ap-parently uncountable numbers, has ceased to dread the monsters and is now getting rich by using them as fertilizer in its immense apple orchards.-Country Life in America.

This shape is a fortunate one, having so many possibilities. There may be a sharp turn-up directly on the left side, a low roll to the brim, or, by judicious wiring, the sharpest turn may be bent into lines becoming to almost any face. The palm is given to leghorn and crin in natural straw and string color, although there are many blacks worn.

These snappy shapes lend themselves singularly well to the lace veil-a French favorite and ours by adoption. The dotted veil is departing with the other hat shapes, and the lace or figured veil is gaining ground so rapidly that it is thrusting itself even upon the unoffend ing sailor hat, which seems really an impossible combination from the viewpoint of correct dressing. Black, brown and string or champagne colored lace veils are in the best taste; but among a host of dyed veilings mauve is the most popular. For instance, with all the lilac and pansy trimmed hats the mauve lace veil is novel, but the delicate lingerie costume, with lowered neck line and three-quarter sleeve, is completed by a champagne or white veil of figured mesh or patterned border.

Many of the children, they say, have to be taught how to play just as they would be taught geography or arithmetic.

Simplicity is the keynote in the latest table decorations and tableware. In-stead of the dishes covered with ornate designs in gold and bright colors, there are seen services almost Puritanical in their plainness. Some pure white china is used, but so beautiful is the glaze that it makes up for absence of ornamenta-tion. Then there is the lovely undecorated Serves, deep cream in color, and with a surface absolutely unblemished. All these dishes have a border of an openwork pattern, which appears as delicate as lace, but is singularly tough and durable. Some of the white glazed dinner services have a little wreath of gold or green laurel leaves on each plate, at one side. Plates, by the way, are larger and shallower than of yore.

FARMS FOR A SONG.

But Some of the Songs Are to the Tune of Caruso Prices.

One of the farm papers reports a few recent sales. One place of less than 200 acres in Chenango county has just been sold for $10,000, one of 82 acres in Monroe county for the same round sum, and one of 240 acres, same county, for $70 moistened so it would adhere. The rats, an acre. Another paper reports three she says, left in disgust. recent sales in Illinois—one at $125 an acre, one at $200 and one at $250. The $200 an acre place hadn't a building on it, the price was for land alone.

When you next hear of "abandoned farms," says Country Life in America, just docket these few with them. The comparison may suggest something. There are farms and farms.

Some are rich as mud and some are poor as Job's turkey; some are accessible and some are miles from a lemon; some are mostly arable and some couldn't be ploughed with dynamite. Some can be bought for $3 an acre and some can't be touched for one hundred times that sum. The chances are that when you buy a farm you'll just get your money's worth-if you're as shrewd a buyer as the other fellow is seller-you won't get any more.

Sleepy Grass of New Mexico.

While making a trip through the southwestern part of New Mexico Herbert W. Wolcott of Alamogordo, N. M., found a grass from which he believes a parcotic may be extracted which will take the place of those now known to medicine.
"The grass is known as 'sleepy grass' to the natives of New Mexico near the Apache reservation," said Mr. Wolcott. "Cattle and horses will eat it the first time they see it. It makes them fall to the ground in their tracks and lie in a state of coma for two days. When they wake up they have no ill effects from the opiate. But they will never eat it again; in fact they will run away if it is offered to them.

Holland Medicine Co., Scranton, Pa.

Dear Sirs: In writing you this, I am doing something that I have never done before, voluntarily. Several weeks ago I saw your coupon in the "Times-Star," and as a last resort I thought I would try your Haarlem Oil Capsules. You sent me the coupon, and to make a long story short, I am now on my second box. I am, or was suffering from what I supposed was kidney trouble, caused by an over-indulgence of beer, and the pain I suffered at night was excruciating, and left me feeling bad all next day. I have since then stopped drinking beer, thinking that would allay the pain, but without any good results. But your capsules have given me so much ease. I felt that not to write you would be doing you an injustice, hence this letter. I am going to continue their use indefinitely. Thanking you for your generous kindness in sending a coupon, I am,

OBITUARY.

B. D. Romaine, one of our highly respected citizens, died Friday morning, August 20. 1909, after lingering illness of about 10 months. He was born March 23, 1843, near Patterson, New Jersey. In 1849 he came west with his parents to Fond du Lac, and in 1850 he moved with them on a farm in the town of Auburn. In 1864 he was married to Miss Elizabeth Roberts, and lived on a farm near New Prospect until about ten years ago when they moved to this village, where they have lived since. He is survived by his widow and five children, George of New Prospect, Mrs. Clara E. Moritz of Platt, S. D., Mrs. Otto Prehn of Omro, Edward R. Romaine of Platt, S.D. and Mrs. Wm. F. Prehn of Fond du Lac. he also leaves one sister Mrs J. W. Bell and two brothers, Ralph Romaine of this village and B. F. Romaine of Chicago, Ill., and eighteen grand children. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Methodist church with Rev. W. J. Corr officiating, with interment at the Union cemetery. The pall bearers were H. F. Sackett, James Furlong L. Reed. O. G. Hendricks, J. Wenzel Jr. and F. H. Haskin.

Among those from away who attended the funeral were Mrs. E W. Romaine of Neillsville, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Brown of Loyal, Wis., B. F. Romaine and wife of Chicago, Ill., Mrs. J. W. Dyer of Marinette Mr. and Mrs. R. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Romaine, Mr. and Mrs. N. Tice, Mr. and Mrs. Delger, Mr and Mrs. P. G. Van Blarcom, T. L. Dole, L. B. Van Blarcom all from Fond du Lac, and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Tice of Byron.

One of the sad features was that Mr. E. R. Romaine and Mrs. Clara Moritz failed to get here on time to attend the funeral services on account of their train which was to bring them into Milwaukee was delayed for two hours and could not get another train to get them here on time, they then hired an automobile to bring them, but when within a few miles of West Eend the auto broke down and could not proceed farther, they then took another automobile but that also broke down, and so they finally decided to wait at West Bend for the evening train, which brought them here at 6:45 P. M.
