LIGHT DRAUGHT POTATO HARVESTER

Machines which will imitate the action of the human hand are recognized to be the best substitutes of hand work, and hundreds of the best agricultural machines now in successful operation are based on the idea of a mechanical imitation of the human body. Have you ever seen a machine which imitates the action of human hands in digging potatoes? No; because none of the potato diggers now in use and handled by the trade are constructed along the lines of this idea. Our Light Draught Potato Harvester works like the old style forks under the guidance of human hands, and is therefore the best and only substitute for hand work in digging potatoes under any and all conditions. You are invited to see this machine on exhibition at

Score of 7 to 8. The benefit games at Campbellsport last Sunday were fairly well attended, which only accounts for the disagreeable weather, rain interferring. A shower commenced at noon which just about laid the dust, after which the Campbellsport Cornet Band gave a few selections on Main street and proceeded to the ball park at 1:30 where the first game was to be called between the Armstrong and Campbellsport teams but while promenading to the grounds a heavy shower set in which looked as if it would spoil the day. Nevertheless the Fond du Lac Pirates came with the afternoon train being met at the depot by the band. As it soon stopped raining, both teams decided to play in spite of the mud and wet grass. The first game was called about 3:30 between the Pirates and Kewaskum, which resulted in a victory for the latter by a score of 8 to 7. #### THE COUNTY FAIR.

Next Thursday, Friday and Saturday the annual County Fair will be held at West Bend, which promises to be the best and largest fair ever held by the association. The officers of the Society have done everything in their power to make this years fair a great success, and an appeal is made to every one within the county's borders, in behalf of the officers of the society, to do his or her share, to make exhibitions and to boost. The attractions and entertainment for this years annual event will be far ahead of any ever seen in the county before. The Comedy Hay Rack Rubes who have been billed are an attraction in themselves. The Three La Mothes, two men and one woman, who are the best and most graceful acrobats in their profession, have also been booked, who will present the Enchanted Cottage, a Fun Factory in two big acts. The races will be equal to any ever held in Washington County, as a great many desirable entries have already been made.

Above all, the base ball games are a feature of excitement that no fair in the county has ever had before. The game on Friday afternoon between Richfield and Kewaskum is going to be a contest between rivals who each claim to have the better team, and are full of enthusiasm and determination

At about 10 o'clock she put her other children to bed and imagine her surprise when she entered her bedroom wit a light, to see her child hanging between the wall and bed, his face being black and blue. With a yell she summoned her husband and a few visitors that were in his place who summoned a physician. Dr. J W. Ehmer worked for several minutes before the child regained consciousness. For a time all hopes were abandoned of ever reviving the child, for life appeared to be extinct. There may appear to be nothing particularly wrong with it, still a cleaning and an overhauling at least once a year would lengthen the life of a watch wonderfully.

It is asking too much of a watch to expect it to keep true to its duties if it is hampered more and more by slowly accummulating dust and dirt.

Besides this taxes the delicate mechanism to excess, and certainly shortens the life of a watch. A cleaning and a little oil in the right places will work

English Trial for Witchcraft.

Perhpas the most interesting of English trials for witchcraft was that of the Suffolk witches in 1665, for Sir Matthew Hale was the judge and Sir Thomas Browne appeared as an expert medical witness. The two prisoners were accused of bewitching young children, a great point for the prosecution being that out of the blanket of an infant suckled by one of them a great toad had fallen and exploded in the fire like gunpowder. Imdiately after the witch was found at home scorched and maimed. In spite of unsatisfactory evidence the two were convicted, whereupon the children's health at once began to improve.-London Chronicle.

The dead body of Theresa Procipio and the wounded Infusino children were found at the bottom of a deep hollow which is spanned by several viaducts.

After Fanny Infusino had been revived, she said that Sunday evening a man came along and took her little brother by the hand and asked him to go along a little ways, promising to buy the boy something nice. The man said he knew the little fellow's father and talked pleasantly. When they started away the girls followed attempting to get Freddie away from the stranger.

Charge Against Woman Who Shot Lawyer in New York Hotel Dismissed.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15 .- The grand jury today dismissed the charge of felonious assault against Mrs. Mary Scott Castle, who on August 3 at the Waldorf lions, if the farmer, who pays most of the bills, has retired to the city or the country town in order that his children may the better enjoy their automobiles and enter into the delights of the social game?

LISBON, Sept. 14.—King Manuel King Edward November 20. He will stop four days in Madrid to return the visit of King Alfonso. It is generally understood here that King Manuel's betrothal to the daughter of the Duke of Fife will be announced from Windsor castle and that King Edward will confer the order of the garter upon King Manuel in honor of the engagement.

LISBON, Sept. 14.—King Manuel Astoria shot William B. Craig, a New York lawyer. The grand jury's reasons were not made public. The $3000 bail bond under which the woman was held was immediately dismissed. The shooting caused a great stir at the time. When the hotel corridors were crowded, Mrs. Castle met Mr. Craig, with whom the had long been friendly, and after a few words drew a revolver and fired at will confer the order of the garter upon King Manuel in honor of the engagement. The President was the guest of 2000 representative men of Boston at Mechanics' hall, his speech being the first to be delivered on his 13,000 mile trip which began when he left Beverly today. Tomorrow he will depart for Chicago.

Says System Is Patchwork.

Referring to proposed financial legis-lation, the President said: "Your chairman has made some reference to a number of subjects to which the attention of Congress may well be directed. In the first place, there is the monetary situation. While it is probable that the Vreeland bill, passed by the last Congress, would aid us in case of another financial crash, it is certain that our banking and monetary system is that our banking and monetary system is a patched-up affair which satisfies no-body, and least of all those who are clear-headed and have a knowledge of what a financial system should be. The matter has been referred by Congress to a monetary commission, which has been studying with much interest and enthusiasm the financial and banking systems of the great governments of Europe, and has embodied and will soon publish interesting and attractive accounts of the financial systems of the world. It is quite apparent from the statements of Mr. Vreeland, who is now the head of the committee on banking and cur-rency in the House of Representatives, and from the conversations of Mr. Aldrich, who is the chairman of the mone-tary commission and of the finance committee of the Senate, that the trend of minds of the monetary commission and of the monetary commission is toward some sort of arrangement for a central bank of issue which shall control the reserve and exercise a power to meet and control the casual stringency which from time to time will come in the cir-culating medium of the country and the world.

Favors Central Bank.

"Mr. Aldrich states that there are two indispensable requirements in any plan to be adopted involving a central bank of issue. The one is that the control of the monetary system shall be kept free from Wall street influences and the other that it shall not be manipulated for political purposes. These are two principles to which we can all subscribe. It is quite possible that the report of the commission of a definite conclusion may be delayed beyond the next session of Congress. Meantime the members of the commission intend to institute a campaign of education in order to arouse public opinion to the necessity of a change in our monetary and banking systems, and to the advantages that will arise from placing some form of control over the money market and the reserve in the hands of an intelligent body of financiers responsible to the government. I am told that Mr. Aldrich will 'swing around the circle' in the present fall and will lecture in many of the cities of the middle west on the defects and needs of our monetary system. I cannot too strongly approve of this proposal.

Aldrich Above Suspicion. "Mr. Aldrich, who is the leader of the Senate, and certainly one of the ablest statesmen in financial matters in either house, has been regarded with deep suspicion by many people, especially in the west.

"If, with his clear cut ideas and simple but effective style of speaking, he makes apparent to the western people what I elieve to be his earnest desire to aid the people and to crown his political career by the preparation and passage of a bill which shall give us a sound and safe litical obstacles to a proper solution of the question. Little to Say of Tariff.

Referring to tariff legislation, the President said: "I am not going to discuss the merits and demerits of the new tariff bill with you. ## Love's Entanglement.

BY A NEW AUTHOR.

CHAPTER III.

Claude Surtees' love story had really had its beginning more than two years ago. He had called one December afternoon at the Montgomeries, and, on being shown up to the drawing room, had found Mrs. Montgomerie and another lady there.

Mrs. Montgomeries greeted Claude in a sprightly manner, then introduced

"Mr. Claude Surtees-Mme. Stephanoff."

The lady bowed. She was of medium height, and Claude was rather tall. Yet somehow the impression remained with him that he had looked up at herlooked up into a beautiful face lined by care; there was a sad, wistful expression in the eyes, and the hair was three parts silver. But time could do no wrong to the exquisite, clear-cut features.

Mme. Stephanoff and I were deep in a very frivolous conversation when you came in," Mrs. Montgomerie said with a laugh. "The children are going to a fancy-dress ball. Nellie and Mona are to take part in a minuet, but they are horribly nervous about their steps. Wait a minute—here they are coming down."

The two girls came in in their pretty costumes of delicately tinted silks, and from the conversation that followed Claude was able to conclude that this beautiful, refined woman was a teacher of dancing.

He met her several times at the same house, and Mrs. Montgomerie gave him a brief outline of her history. Though she herself never referred to her troubles in the past, he found Mme. Stephanoff perfectly frank and open about her present almost friendless condition. seemed to take an immediate liking to the young man, and Claude found himself looking more and more to her for sympathy and advice. He had even asked permission to visit her, but she had laughingly told him she lived in a slum. They met by appointment in picture galleries, at lectures, and churches.

Their friendship grew so rapidly that Claude could hardly believe, when two months had passed, that he had seen Mme. Stephanoff only some twenty times. Then came the summer, and that sudden meeting with her at the Catesbys in August. Claude had not seen her since the end of May, and after an absence one notices changes which escape notice in frequent communication. Claude started when he looked at her, his professional eyes noted the thinness of her face, the bluish lines about her mouth.

She had just come to Perth; it was a fortnight's engagement, she told him. When it was over she would go back to his treatment for alcohol and drug victims, and the high hopes that he had of its success.

One afternoon he had been visiting a case in a poor street. After leaving his descended to a lower landing, patient h when suddenly a woman's loud cry of distress came from within one of the doors, which was almost at the same time thrown violently open. A grayhaired woman rushed out.

"What is the matter? Can I help you?" the young man asked quickly,

"It's my son; 'e was taken with a fit!" the woman sobbed out. "Yes, I know. You've no brandy of

"I live next door," she explained quiet-"I'll stay with him till you come

The young man died three days later. During his visits Claude heard the poor mother's story. Her son had been out of work for more than a year, his lungs wasted away. She had worked for them starved if it had not been for the "foreign lidy" in the next room.

The night that the young man died Claude and Madame Stephanoff watched one of deep secretiveness and .nxiety. with the mother by his bedside. A motorman came across the wet, gleaming platform, and saluted Mr. Lorrin. An automobile was awaiting them on the road—a shabby enough car, and not of the best make.

"Delisle has sent his motor." Lorrin said, as if to disclaim responsibility for this machine. The hood was up, and there was little wind, so they did not get much rain as they went humming along the muddy, lonely road.

Presently a great, distant sound fell on their ears—a sound like the boom of a gigantic organ.

"The sea," Lorrin said, noticing that Claude was listening. "We are getting near the end of our journey, but the road runs nearer to the sea here than it does at Delisle's place."

Lord Delis!e's house was about a mile from the sea. The motor car entered at a wide gate and rolled up a broad, graveled drive. Claude could see the housean old, gray building with a great many small windows. As the motor slowly ascended the steep incline which led up to the door of the house Claude saw Lorrin salute somebody with a nod and a smile. Involuntarily glancing in the direction of his companion's look he saw a young man cross the graveled space in front of the doorway, and plunge into the thicket of shrubs. He was a tall youth, dark, with an awkward gait. "It's my cousin, Gartmore," Lorrin explained in his artless way. "Gartmore is Delisle's son, you know.

Claude was shown to his room, had a bath, went to the drawing room and had afternoon tea. Lorrin acted as his host, one one else appeared. They sat in a great round window from which they could see over a wide stretch of country, although everything was vaguely defined in the mist.

As Claude continued to gaze out on the fascinating gloom of the scene, giving meanwhile an apparent attention to Lorrin's conversation, there was the "clip-clop" of a horse's feet on the drive, and Viscount Gartmore rode down on a pretty bay mare. In the shimmering light of the afternoon his face and figure were brought into an uncompromising distinctness, and Claude was impressed by the sullen, discontented expression of a countenance which Nature did not seem to have meant to be disagreeable. He turned his eyes from the window, and said with a laugh-

"What a melancholy country!" "Oh, it isn't always like this, you know!" Lorrin said eagerly. "Why, one hour of sunshine in Scotland is worth a month anywhere else!"

"You're patriotic!" Claude replied smiling. "But you mustn't think I undervalue the beauties of your country.

At an earlier stage in their friendship she had shown interest in Claude's leap as Lord Delisle approached him. In studies and he had told her all about the now uncertain light of the big, shabby drawing room the young man could see only that his host was of mid-dle height and of slight build, with a dark beard. When Claude bowed Delisle offered his hand, and the pressure of the fingers produced a disagreeable feeling. His manner increased it, and when a servant had brought lights and drawn the blinds Lord Delisle's face confirmed the young man in his impressions. Delisle's expression could not by any stretch of courtesy be called agreeable. The glance of the dark hazel eyes was furtive, the lines of the face 'er ignoble, while he made a washing move-

Claude was still haunted by that impression of falseness in the man's looks and in his words.

"Is Mr. Lorrin engaged to the young lady?" Claude asked. Delisle raised his eyebrows, then smiled.

"Really, I don't know what my cousin loved her—and there had been so little may have told you. I don't wish to be love in her life. So she gave way at guilty of a breach of confidence." "He told me nothing more." Claude Briefly, that was Claude Surtees' love said laughingly. "I must apologize for

TALL AFRICAN GRASS.

Beautiful Scenes at Night on the Veldt When Fire Spreads.

Unlike a good deal of South Africa Rhodesia is largely wooded. In some places the forests are of value, but a large proportion are not valued for their timber. The grass in this part of Africa grows to phenomenal height in the valleys, and especially in the valleys of the Sabi and Zambesi rivers it reaches its Naturally, it is very easy to lose one's way in this grass if one is unfortunate enough to stray from the beaten track. It is the custom there to burn this grass usually in August and September, or even in October. Fires burn for miles, and as the country is largely a wilderness little damage is done by this method of destroying the grass. It is a beautiful sight at night in the fire season to see the hills for miles around encircled with flames.

After the grass has been burned the rainy season usually begins, and it is rainy season usually begins, and it is then that the country is at its prettiest. The grass is then green and the foliage on the trees is beautiful. The old leaves drop off gradually and the new ones take their place before the trees are bare. The new leaves are of all shades of the rainbow, and it is much like the fall scenery in this country when the dead scenery in this country when the dead leaves are falling from the trees. Waterfalls are numerous in the mountains, and there are many of great height, although the rivers are usually small in volume.—Springfield Republican.

Very Game.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, at a dinner in Cincinnati, told a quaint story about a precocious boy.

"They are very precocious, indeed," she said, "those little chaps from Eton or Rugby, with their round, sober faces and their quiet air. "A very pretty American girl was talking one evening in London to one of these urchins. "'And have you got a sweetheart yet, Tommy?' she said, playfully.

"'No,' said Tommy—'still, I'm game enough for a bit of spooning, if that's what you're after.'"—New York Trib-

G. F. PEABODY OF APPLETON DEAD

PROMINENT FOX RIVER VALLEY MERCHANT SUCCUMBS TO CAN-CER OF THE STOMACH.

HAD BEEN ILL SINCE MAY.

Was Trustee of Lawrence University, to Which He Recently Gave Bequest of $25,000.

HELD STATE OFFICE UNDER PECK.

APPLETON, Wis., Sept. 13.—George F. Peabody, a leading merchant of Appleton, and one of the best known men in Wisconsin, died Sunday morning at to'clock at his home here of cancer of

Friday night, in the private car of Vice President Gardner of the North-Western road, Mr. Peabody was brought from Chicago to Appleton.

The funeral was held at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Peabody was first cousin to George Foster Peabody, the New York philosphereign.

York philanthropist.

Mr. Peobody's illness dates back to last May while returning from his winter's sojourn in Florida and cruising in the Florida keys on his private yacht. It was at first believed that he was suffering from ptomaine poisoning, but the operation several weeks later at Augustana hospital, Chicago, revealed a cancer of the stomach of extensive growth.

Weds Miss Pettibone. Mr. Peabody was born in September, 1845, at Milford, Conn. When young he removed with his parents to Portage, Wis.,, where his father died a few years later. When about 20 years of age he went to Fond du Lac, where he entered the employ of C. J. Pettibone, remaining there about six years before coming to Appleton in 1872, when he took charge of a store conducted by Mr. Pettibone.

Two years later Mr. Peabody and Miss Emma Pettibone were married, the latter surviving only a few years and leaving her husband and one daughter, Miss Emma Peabody of this city. When Mr. Peabody came to Appleton the Pettibone business was confined to a small general store, but it now stands as a monument to his enterprise and one that attracts buyers from every city in this section of Wisconsin.

Widely Traveled Man. Mr. Peabody was a widely traveled man of broad general interests and generous sympathy with public movements. He had served the city in various public offices and for many years had been an ardent advocate of good roads. In 1896 he was elected trustee of Lawrence college and under the administration of former Gov. Peck he was appointed a commissioner of fisheries for a term of

For two years he served as president of the American Fisheries society and at Eczema Came on Legs and Ankles -Canadian Chief of Police Could Not Wear Shoes Because of Bad Scaling and Itching.

"I have been successfully cured of dry eczema. I was inspecting the removal of noxious weeds from the edge of a river and was constantly in the dust from the weeds. At night I cleansed my limbs, but felt a prickly sensation. I paid no attention to it EVEN for two years, but I noticed a scum on my legs like fish scales. I did not attend to it until it came to be too 1tchy and sore and began getting two running sores. My ankles were all sore and scabby and I could not wear shoes. I had to use carpet and felt slippers for weeks. I got a cake of the Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment. In less than ten days I could put on my boots and in less than three weeks I was free from the confounded Itching. Capt. George P. Bliss, Chief of Police, Morris, Manitoba, March 20, 1907, and Sept. 24, 1908."

TOOK OWN KNIVES AND FORKS. Custom of Table Manners in England Even as Late as 1660.

Even at so late a period as the restoration, 1660, according to the London Chronicle, it was the custom for guests to take their own knives and forks to an or's feast in the Guild hall. In the previous reign the lord chamberlain had found it necessary to issue regulations for the benefit of officers invited to dine at the royal table. They were required to wear clean boots, not to be half drunk on their arrival, not to drink more than one goblet to every two dishes, not to throw the bones under the table nor to lick

The Stuarts undoubtedly did much to refine English table manners, for it was one of the points admired in Mary Queen of Scots that the customs she intro-duced from France made her court and royal banquets more exquisite and genteel than those of her rival, Queen Elizabeth. As forks came into use the old time importance of the table napkin bepan to wane. From being a necessity it became a luxury, on the fastidious use of which etiquette has at various times placed strange values. Under the third empire in France, St. Beuve brought disgrace upon himself be-zause at breakfast at the Tuileries he tarelessly opened his napkin and placed it ove: his two knees. To this he added the crime of cutting his egg in two at the crime of cutting his egg in two at the middle. Court etiquette prescribed that the half folded napkin should lie on the left knee and the top of the egg was to be merely broken with the edge of the epoon and drained with tip of the spoon. For his failings in these respects St. Beuve's name was struck off the imperial risiting list.

After the Show.

A well dressed man, said to be an man, has been arrested in Montmartre, Paris, on a charge of tendering bad half-sovereigns for dinners and entertainments. Which reminds us of the story about the touring company which had been doing very bad business in "the smalls." While the proprietor and sole responsible manager was standing putside the temporary theater (the Corn Exchange), a very small boy with a very large melon arrived and proposed to barder the fruit for a seat in the gallery.

The bargain was duly concluded, and the scene now changes to the interior of the theater after the performance: "Boy," says the manager severely, "that melon was rotten." "That's all right," ceturns the youthful critic, "so was yer show.""-London Globe.

That Influential Novel.

What a stroke of enterprise it would be for the publisher of the novel which so entranced a congressman, it is said, that he failed to vote at a critical stage of the tariff legislation to get out a special edition with the congressman's portrait and, if practicable, a special introduction analyzing the merits of the work from the standpoint of a legislator in midsummer, says the Springfield Union. It is a pity that the name of the novel has not even been learned or whether it has a place on Dr. Eliot's

PRESSED HARD.

Coffee's Weight on Old Age. When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others. A superintendent of public schools In North Carolina says:

"My mother, since her early childthood, was an inveterate coffee drinker and had been troubled with her heart for a number of years, and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago, I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavour of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum.

"I was so pleased with it, that after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal. The whole family liked it so well, that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its suse, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the theadaches were not so frequent, and ther general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a wictim of long standing."

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 15 .- The third day of the Wisconsin state fair opened under more favorable auspices than did the two preceding days. Weather indications early in the morning were more favorable and by 8 o'clock, when the sun made its appearance, street cars and other conveyances were crowded with visitors headed toward the grounds. They didn't intend to miss much, despite all the rain and mud and clouds in the Meantime the noon attendance is estimated at 15,000. It's the biggest of the 1909 days yet recorded. Milwaukee day and Taft day, yet to come, will probably exceed it. But, considering the skies and the recent rain and other gyrations of weather, the attendance proved English banquet. Pepys records that he more than satisfactory. To what pro-fied this when he went to the lord may-portions it may swell before night is problematical and depends upon the skies. The estimate made by state fair officials ranges anywhere from 18,000 to 30,000.

Gov. Davidson Arrives.

At 10 o'clock this morning Gov. James O. Davidson, accompanied by a party of state fair officials, arrived upon the grounds in automobiles. He was met by members of the state board of agriculture and escorted in a tour about the grounds. Several persons knew of his presence. Most of the motly multitudes consumed frankfurters "regardless." for the governor, he unhesitatingly boomed his state and his fair.

"I cannot recall a better fair nor one that seems to more universally please. It is a striking exhibition of Wisconsin's progress, agriculturally and industrially. I am more than pleased with it.'

that fondle tiny lambs; they include, too, small, squealing "bacon" porkers and huge grandpa hogs.

The sheep and hog exhibits on the state fair grounds are proving a magnet that draws crowds. Farmers come to the barns because sheep are a growing Wisconsin product; they come because nogs are a staple and are making the Wisconsin farm one of wealth.

Children come because their interests run naturally to sheep and lambs. And bigger city folk come to wonder over the ever growing proportions that the

Probably not one of the thousands of farmers that have, and will yet, visit the fair fails to visit the hog pens. The hog, in his general dissemination and his general utility, has classed almost with dairy cattle in the agricultural affairs of Wisconsin. He is probably even more generally an adjunct to the Wisconsin farm than the cow. He ranges its corn stubble in summer; he ranges its orchards in the fall; he occasionally crops its clover fields and its alfalfa. He goes nutting as regularly as do the farm's And he converts his gleaning's into eash. He lays on pork and by and by his squeal ends in a packing house. And it is said that there everything but that squeal is made use of. Sheep in the North.

Wisconsin's sheep are spreading through the northern counties. Each year the University of Wisconsin is tellng more of their value on cut over lands. Farmers in the north are proving, by test, that there is no means to clearing brush and making possible the tilling of a soil that has been overgrown with shrub and sapling through ages. They tell, on the fair grounds, of the acres that have been eaten down by the sheep that are now being bred for the prize ring. They explain that they crop away leaf and stalk until what was a hopeless tangle gives way under their onslaught. It has been argued that nothing has done more toward clearing the north than the sheep imported into those counties.

So state fair exhibits range from the So state fair exhibits range from the fine wooled Delaine Merino to the heaviest Lincoln and Cotswolds, bred for mutton. They include the American Merino, Southdown, Tunis, Dorset, Shropshire, Cheviot, Suffolk Down, Hampshire and Oxford Down and the Leicester, Lincoln and Cotswolds. Practically every breed known in Wisconsin is represented. Each of them is unique in its interest. The sheep industry has not been a large one as Wisconsin livestock goes. But state fair breeders are confident that in a few years it will be classed with the important phases of agricultural activity.

The University of Wisconsin flocks are among the interesting exhibits shown. The flocks of George McKerrow & Sons of Pewaukee are others that are attracting attention. The McKerrow sheep will be taken to the world's fair at Seat tle immediately after the close of the Wisconsin state fair.

Dairy Men Organize.

At a meeting in Secretary John M. True's office this morning a Wisconsin branch of the National Dairymen's union was formed and officers elected as President, F. H. Scribner, Rosendale; rice president, Kenneth Luchsinger, New Glarus; secretary, J. G. Moore, Madison; treasurer, Hugh S. Bare, Madison.

The new organization has the backing of the organized dairy interests of the state and its chief object is the curtailment of the oleomargarine industry of the country. Much time was spent this morning discussing the attempts which the oleo interests are making to have Congress repeal the tax of 10 cents per pound on colored oleomargarine, and it was decided to join in the country-wide fight of the dairymen to have the national legislature retain the present tax.

BRINGING IN THE GOLD.

How the Precious Metal Is Collected, Guarded and Transported in Alaska.

Six tons and a half of yellow gold, $3,200,000 worth of virgin metal, largest single shipment ever brought out from Alaska, was unloaded from the steamship Jefferson of the Alaska Steamship company a couple of weeks ago," said Fred W. Armstrong of Seattle,

"Of that sum," continued Mr. Armstrong, "$2,800,000 was sent out by mail and about $400,000 by express, coming from Fairbanks Circle, Dawson, and other rich camps of the interior. The gold was accompanied by several wealthy mine operators with thousands in their clothes, who have come to attend the Seattle fair.

"Receiving less consideration appar-ently than the trunks and suitcases of the passengers the sacks of gold were put ashore at pier 2 by the sling load, only a small number watching the rich cargo discharging, and many of them not realizing that the dirty leather mail pounches were filled with the precious metal.
"In dust and bricks the treasure was shipped from the various camps along the Tanana and Yukon on the steamboat Victorian of the White Pass and Yukon fleet. The spring cleanup in central Alaska and the Yukon territory started long before the river was free of started long before the river was free of ice, and the dumps were relieved of a rich burden this spring before the first boat was able to feel its way against the ice toward Lake Le Barge. On the Victorian a heavy armed guard kept watch night and day to prevent any possibility of robbery. At White Horse the gold was shipped by rail to Skagway, thence to be taken by the Jefferson and rushed to Seattle.

on the dock the consignment was taken to the postoffice by a dozen mail wagons which were waiting on the dock. There were some extra men from the office to guard the treasure, but the weight of the pouches, one of which two men could hardly lift, made robbery almost an impossibility.

"The shipment on the Jefferson besides being the largest ever brought out indi-cates a large cleanup in Alaska this summer."—Washington Herald.

information on the subject from the children themselves tells a different tale. She concluded that the little ones would express their ideas better in pictures than in words, and every member of her class was accordingly told to make a drawing of "what father looks like." The resulting pictures showed that the idea suggested to the minds of the little ones by that word "father" was in most cases that of a being no more than human, who possesed a large, toothy smile and smoked incessantly. In the days when fathers governed more austerely than they do now such a conception could scarcely have been formed, and if it had any expression of it would never have been countenanced.

European travel is taken so much for granted at this season of the year that special foreign correspondence pads have been brought out by one firm for the use of tourists. In the ordinary sense of the word they are not pads at al., but a compact method of putting up fine and thin paper in long sheets that fold across the middle to form note paper and then fold once more to fit into oblong envelopes, lined with bright colored tissue. This paper is cheaper than fine correspondence paper in any other style. White paper has as many tints as there are fashions in colors, and these tints are preferred to pure white.

In the matter of initials and mono grams for note paper there is no decided fashion as between large and small dies. Some prefer one size and some the other. The circular effect in monograms and initials is finding favor among those who like novelty. In some letters form the outer circle, and in others this is formed by a colored disk behind the letters. The familiar medallion is not so popular as it once was, but is still used. In its place drop letters have seized the fancy of those who like ornamented stationery. Drop letters appear in two or three different ways. They slant across the upper left hand corner, or are placed one below another or else are arranged on a below another, or else are arranged on a line at the top of the sheet, in the mid-dle. Some effective drop letters are set in panels, often with the letters in relief upon a background of contrasting color. Script makes a neat drop or top page letter, and script dies are often replicas of a person's own handwriting. Shaded Old English is one of the most popular styles of lettering. It is engraved in small, medium or large sizes, according to one's taste, and is very largely employed in dies for residence addresses at the top of note paper. For this purpose a good plain block letter is considerably in evidence. Some like it small and dainty, and others want it as large as they can get it. Both extreme

Crests are as much in vogue in note paper as they ever were, and as each color in a crest signifies something, a crest that lacks some of its colors is not complete. Some persons, however, leave out a color or two in the die. It is ex-pensive to mingle colors, and conse-quently fashionable. The richest color effects are, perhaps, to be seen upon the correspondence paper of yacht owners. Some yachts sail under the flags of several countries, and these, as well as the yacht's own pennon, are reproduced in their several colors. their several colors. A novelty of the season is the bronze monogram. It is now possible to bronze any color, and this kind of die is having a considerable

Cheese and rice baked together are much like cheese and macaroni. Add to a cupful of cold boiled rice a cupful of milk, a pinch of salt, a little pepper and several tablespoonfuls of grated cheese-enough to give it a strong cheesy flavor. Put this into a buttered baking dish of earthenware and bake slowly for about an hour or until a rich brown crust forms on top and the cheese has entirely melted and formed with the rice a compact mass. Bits of butter should be placed over the top as they will add to the richness of the crust. Serve either

Consequently it was believed that every time a tree was felled another spirit was dispossessed, and this was supposed to cause some bitterness on his part against society.

Rather than risk having these homeless and disgruntled spirits vent their ill feeling upon the houses under construction or upon the builders, says Van Norden's Magazine, a branch was planted on the highest part of the house for their occupancy. They were then supposed to be mollified, and if they remained so until the roof was put on mained so until the roof was put on any evil design contemplated would prove harmless, for the spell would be
