Machines which will imitate the action of the human hand are recognized to be the best substitutes of hand work, and hundreds of the best agricultural machines now in successful operation are based on the idea of a mechanical imitation of the human body. Have you ever seen a machine which imitates the action of human hands in digging potatoes? No; because none of the potato diggers now in use and handled by the trade are constructed along the lines of this idea. Our Light Draught Potato Harvester works like the old style forks under the guidance of human hands, and is therefore the best and only substitute for hand work in digging potatoes under any and all conditions. That cannot be impressed too strongly upon watch owners. This is it-A watch should receive the attention of our repair department at least once

There may appear to be nothing particularly wrong with it, still a cleaning and an overhauling at least once a year would lengthen the life of a watch wonderfully.

It is asking too much of a watch to expect it to keep true to its duties if it is hampered more and more by slowly accummulating dust and dirt.

Besides this taxes the delicate mechanism to excess, and certainly shortens the life of a watch. A cleaning and a little oil in the right places will work wonders.

Gov. Johnson was continually growing in prominence as a national figure, and at the time of his death the attention of the nation was centered on the closing moments of his once promising career.

After battling against death with determined resistence for almost a week, Gov. Johnson's life had a peaceful ending.

Grouped about his bedside when the end came were Mrs. Johnson, Miss Sulivan, her personal friend; the attending physician and two nurses. The last thing Gov. Johnson did before lapsing into unconsciousness, one and a half bours before his death, was to take his wife affectionately by the hand and weakly whisper, "Well, Nora, I made a good fight, but I guess I 've got to go."

Then as the last gleam of intelligence began to flicker he pressed her hand gently to his cheek in a parting caress as he prepared to obey the Divine Will.

About two months ago Gov. Johnson had a severe attack and was ill at his home in St. Paul. Upon his return from there he made up his mind that he would have the operation after the Taft reception on Monday. He was suddenly taken with very acute pain and as soon as he was able to travel he went to Rochester.

THOUSANDS VIEW BODY

MINNESOTANS PAY TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF LATE GOVERNOR.

Remains Lie in State for Whole Day at Capital While Whole Gopher State Mourns.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 22.-The body of John A. Johnson, late governor of Minnesota, lay in state in the capitol today and the people of the Twin cities and from nearby towns were given an opportunity to take a last look upon the face which they all knew so well in life. All night long the casket stood in the executive reception room, where in days gone by Gov. Johnson had greeted so many with a smile and a handclasp.
The floral offerings were most profuse, fully seven wagon loads having been unloaded at the capitol during the morning, and it was impossible to dispose of all of them anywhere near the casket. There were set pieces from many of the state departments, local clubs and commercial rganizations, personal friends, and some from small cities throughout the state. In attendance near the casket were commissioned and non-commissioned officers of the National guard, stationed so as to divide the crowd so it could file by on each side of the casket.

Around the bier stood a guard of militia.

Shortly before 10 o'clock the casket was moved to the rotunda, under the marble dome and the doors were opened to admit the throng which passed silently by. The body will lie there until 9:30 tonight, when the doors will be closed. At 9:15 tomorrow morning the casket will be taken to a special train which will convey it to St. Peter, Minn., here burial will take place.

Robert Hoe was also the inventor of color printing presses.

Besides being the principal owner of R. Hoe & Co., with large factories in New York and London, he was an extensive manufacturer of circular saws and saw bits. He was one of the founders of the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Remains of Pearl Ziem, Oshkosh Young Woman, Taken from Lake at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 22.-The body of a young woman recovered from the lake here yesterday was identified today as that of Miss Pearl Ziem, who disappeared a week ago from the home of her aunt at Gresham, Ill. The identification of the body was made by the young woman's mother, who came here from Oshkosh, Wis. No reason for the girl's disappearance or her suicide is known. It is said that she had been in an extremely nervous condition before leaving her aunt's home. Later in the day a coroner's jury returned a verdict of "suicide by drowning while melancholy." Mrs. P. J. Ziem, the mother of the girl, testified that in her belief her daughter ended her life by jumping into the lake while temporary insane as a result of a recent nervous breakdown due to overwork

Hat That Can Be Taken to Pieces.

A leading Parisian milliner has just invented a hat which may be adapted for various occasions at will. It can be taken to pieces. When its removable brim is packed away under the brow it becomes a close fitting toque suitable for motoring, railway traveling or for walks in rough weather. If its owner finds herself unexpectedly called upon to appear in evening dress she has simply to readjust her crown and she is ready for any function demanding the greatest elegance.-London Chronicle.

CHAPTER V.

Claude turned. Irma Vassie was defiance or nervousness or both.

"I saw you in the grounds," she said,

· look of quiet inquiry. "They are humbugging you," the girl said shortly—"Lord and Lady Delisle, I ning!" Irma cried. "Don't you see? You Dr. Surtees-they have lied to you about my sister."

"Miss Vassie," the young man replied very gently, "I have examined your sister, and I grieve to say that her present state of health is due to alcohol poisoning. Does it sound cruel to you? Let me assure you that it would be far more cruel for me to hide the truth from you. What Lady Delisle tells me confirms my

"I dare say," the girl said scornfully. "The thing is a disease like any other disease," Claude continued. "Your sister, I am sure, will obey my orders. No blame or shame will attach to her. I believe I shall cure her. I will dare to promise to do so."

"Thanks!" Irma said with the same fierce scorn. "If you are to cure her, if you are to save her, you must know the truth!" she cried.

Surtees, you must dismiss all you have been told about my sister from your mind. And if you listen honestly and kindly—as I believe you will do—you must see that I am speaking the truth."

"But, Miss Vassie, I myself am convinced that your sister has been in the habit of taking alcohol in excess—"

"The alcohol has been administered to her without her own knowledge." I was her without her own knowledge," Irma said scornfully.

"How would that be possible, Miss Vassie? You yourself and Lady Delisle have been with her constantly, have you "Just so; Lady Delisle has been with her constantly," Irma said, "but I have not. It is only a few weeks since I came home after an absence of eight months, and I came home because I feared that all was not well with Kathleen, though I did not expect anything quite so dia-bolical as the truth. I received a letter," che went on after a minute's hesitation, "which hinted to me that I ought to be with Kathleen."

"You received a letter? Some one else shared your suspicions?"

"Yes, Viscount Gartmore." "Viscount Gartmore warned you against his mother!" he exclaimed. "She is not his mother. She is Deshe came here with us. She was married to Lord Delisle seven or eight years ago." "But, Miss Vassie, it is extraordinary. She has known you and your sister all your life. What motive could she have here? Till Friday?"

for doing such a dreadful thing?" "She has a motive," Irma said with anger and scorn in her voice. "Gartmore told me, and I know it is true. It is because of our money. My father left a good deal of money-more too Kathleen than to me, for she is the elder. Gartmore believes that his father cannot account for the money; it was left in his care, and we are to get it when we marry, or when we reach the age of 30 unmarried. Gartmore knows that his father's affairs are in a bad way, and he believes that Lady Delisle has made this plot; he overheard a conversation between them."

"But it is a terrible charge to bring against them, Miss Vassie, and I cannot sister from marrying should—"

"Don't you see?" Irma interrupted with a stamp of her foot. "Alick Lorrin loves Kathleen—they are engaged, though Lord and Lady Delisle say they are not. Don't you see that they know that she-that she has fixed on this as the surest means of estranging him?"
"It has not done that," Claude said, remembering the look in Lorrin's honest light eyes. "Ah, but it will! Even if his love lasts how could he marry her? Suppose they have been successful-suppose the craving has really been made part of her? Poor little Kathleen! Oh, Dr. Surtees, you'll help me to save Kathleen -you'll help me to make her happy!"

"Certainly, my dear Miss Vassie, certainly. I will do everything in my power, believe me. I have little doubt I shall be able to cure your sister, but if I have seemed to you unsympathetic you must make allowances for my very natural surprise. The whole thing is so extraordinary, so amazing. You and Viscount Gartmore have ocular knowedge that alcohol is being administered to your sister without her knowledge?"

For answer Irma slipped her hand into her pocket and drew forth a little cardboard box. "These are capsules which Dr. St. Clair

-the last doctor we had-ordered for Kathleen. Please cut one of them, Dr. Surtees, and look what is inside it!" Claude took out his penknife and slit one of the egg-shaped pellets. The dark fluid inside it was, he perceived, nothing more harmful than a mixture of iron and various other substances generally recommended in cases of anaemia. He looked perplexedly at Irma.

"Open another!" the girl said. "Let us go a little deeper in among the Claude opened a second pellet; it was full of some alcoholic fluid, very strong. "You see!" Irma almost hissed in his ear, her face pale, her eyes burning darkly. "They have put it into everything she takes, and they insist upon her taking wines and liquors even; they say Dr. St. Clair has ordered her to take a certain amount daily. They have mixed it in all her medicines. Keep watch and you will see, but you must watch well. They are cunning, and they may suspect you are examining her food and drink. I suppose Lady Delisle told you that Kathleen was always asking for champagne and port?"

"She did so."

said so to everyone. Oh, Dr. Surtees, don't you see it's all a plot to rob her standing beside him on the short turf headed with tiny drops which shone with man whom she loves? No one on earth could have suspected them of a plot without knowing about the money, for it would seem to everyone that they had no motive and could feel nothing but grief and shame for Kathleen. No one could have suspected it. You could never have thought of it yourself if I hadn't told you. I should never have guessed it if Gartmore hadn't told me. But you do believe me, Dr. Surtees? > Claude raised his eyes to rma's face. "I will-indeed I will," he said earnestly. The girl held out her hand, and he touched it with his gentle, firm touch, which had in it something magnetic. Suddenly Irma hid her face with her other hand and wept as she walked hastily away.

The young man stood still where she had left him, then he began to make his way back to the house. The strangeness

A ship that was going home! A happy ship! A happy ship-

Irma broke off with an impatient augh and played half a dozen loud octaves, then rose from the grand plano which stood in the middle of the big drawing room, now flooded with the sunshine of the early afternoon.

"Won't you go on?" Lorrin said.
"No, I won't Alick. I can't sing ityou know I can't. I can't even play the piano well enough to accompany my own singing, and I hate to do a big thing in a small way. So I'm going to confine myself to the mandolin and French songs after this."

He brought her the mandolin, and they fell to turning over a heap of music. Both were thinking of quite other things—things which had little enough connection with the mandolin or with lisle's second wife. She was our nursery songs. Kathleen's name was written on governess when we were children, and many of the pieces which they handled; and Kathleen's face and form rose ever before them.

"Alick," Irma said, still looking down at the music, "how long can you stay

"Till Friday? Father wants me to meet him in Edinburgh on Saturday." "Alick, your folks haven't been toldanything-about Kathleen?"

"They have not," Lorrin replied coloring. Irma dropped the piece of music she was holding, and looked thoughtfully into her companion's face. More than once the question had presented itself to her. Should she speak of her suspicions to Lorrin?

"He would be very kind and polite," Irma said to herself, "and would try to explain away things and to smooth me down and pat me as if I were an unreasonable child. I know what Alick is like; he will be a kind husband to Kathleen if-if they are ever married; but I see why the desire to kep you and your should only shock and amaze him if I were to tell him this."

She put the music back into the drawer, and rose from her knees. "Let us go for a walk, Alick," she said. Do you know how long the doctor is going to stay here?" "Delisle has asked him to put up for an indefinite time," Lorrin replied, "and he has consented. It's amazing rather in a man who must be as busy as Surtees, but he seems to be wonderfully interested in the case. He's a nice fellow." "Very nice!" Irma said. "He looks very young," she added. "Amazingly so," Lorrin replied with his little laugh. "I assure you I was astonished when I first saw him. And when we were coming up in the train I could hardly believe that it was a successful London doctor I was talking to. Why, he seems younger than I am myself. He takes a tremendous interest in athletics -he told me so; and his house is filled with clubs and racquets and developers and things," and Lorrin held the drawing room door open for Irma to pass

"I'll be down in a few minutes," Irma said. "Is Dr. Surtees married, Alick?" "I really don't know," Lorrin said.

A quarter of an hour later they had passed through the gates. They turned involuntarily, and looked back at the old gray house.

"Which way shall we go?" Lorrin said. "To the sea," Irma replied. The wind had risen, and there were white-crested waves on the sea, which was of a beautiful blue, streaked with long wavering lines of emerald green, and glittering in the sunshine.

"Isn't it lovely?" Irma said. She felt her hopes and spirits rising. They were approaching a ridge of grayish black rocks against which the waves dashed and broke with a white spraying of foam. And suddenly a voice, singing, came to them on the wind-

This is the ballad of two who sailed

This is the ballad of two who sailed
O'er the blue and the green and the foam;
And just at the dawning it chanced that they hailed
A ship that was going home!
A happy ship! A happy ship! A happy ship that was running home!
A happy ship that was running home,
Like a child to his mother's breast;
And it sailed o'er the blue and the green and the foam,
And into the dark, and into the dark, and into the dark in the West!

Irma and Lorrin had stood still at the first notes of the voice. Their eyes met in a look of perfect comprehension. "It is Emily Keverne," Irma said when the song ceased. "What a fool I was to

"Her voice is more wonderfu: than ever," Lorrin replied, adding, "I wonder does Gartmore know she is home!" "I think it is likely he does," Irma said dryly "Irma, do you think it's really a serious thing between those two? I know you are very much in Gartmore's confidence; you understand I don't want to be too curious and prying."

"As if I, or any one who knows you, would suspect you of that," Irma said in her scornful way. "It is serious, Alick. You know yourself that last winter Gartmore's attentions to her were quite openly spoken of in London; and there is certainly an understanding between Under Proposed Law, Source of Income

"Do you mean an engagement?" "Well, it's not called an engagement till it's made public, is it? But Gartmore has given her a ring, and has told her he loves her; and she has given him her promise. I'm telling you this because Gartmore wants you to know."

"Does Delisle know?" "I should think not; but Gartmore is going to tell him."
"Time he did," Lorrin said. "Well, you know, Irma, it's not right for a fellow to hide things like that from his father."

"Why don't you tell your father why Kathleen has the doctor?" Irma retorted, quick as a flash. Then, seeing that the oung man flushed deeply, and that tears rose to his eyes, she caught hold of his arm. "Forgive me, Alick, I know that you are doing what you know is right and the best thing to do. I had always a quick temper and a sharp tongue. I was never sweet and gentle ike Kathleen; and now I am growing so bitter and savage, it almost frightens me sometimes. Forgive me."

"You mustn't say that, Irma dear," Lorrin said gently. "There's no harm done. But, touching this affair of Gartmore's, it will give poor Delisle and his wife a shock, I'm afraid."

"Yes," Claude said gravely.

"Very well, then I will tell you. Dr. Surtees, you must dismiss all you have been told about my sister from your mind. And if you listen honestly and cindly—as I believe you will do—you will do every one hereabouts knows that she comes of honest people. And, as for her being a star in light opera, how many peers have married singers and actresses? It seems to me that if there's any condescension in the affair it's on her side. She is marvellously gifted, and will renounce a splendid careeer to marry Gartmore. I must say I don't understand any woman marrying Gartmore."

Lorrin looked at her more reproachfully than ever. Irma stamped impatiently on the firm sand; and the color in her cheeks deepened.

"I know what you are thinking about." she said. "I suppose Lord and Lady De-lisle have spoken about it to you. Yes, they did want to arrange a match between me and Gartmore; that was why I went away from home. Gartmore didn't want it any more than I did. They thought it would be a good way of keeping my money in the family," she

Lorrin turned towards her with the intention of rebuking her, in a brotherly the resulting apportionment of the proway, for speaking so unkindly and un-dutifully of her lifelong guardians; but After a few preliminary remarks Mr. dutifully of her lifelong guardians; but as he opened his lips to speak the Taft touched briefly on the tariff, saying wild voice behind the rocks broke again into song-

Wha'll buy caller herrin'?

What a marvellous voice it was! Wild and sweet and strong as the wind itself; passing swiftly from the blithe inquiry of the opening verse to a wistful dreaminess and solemnity-

When ye were sleepin' on your pillows. Here the singer came out from behind the rocks, and, at the sight of Lorrin and Irma, ceased her song; but came towards them without embarrassment, smiling, Capt. Ferber of French Army Crushed and holding out a white hand. She was a small girl, slight, with dark hair, and the pale face which is often seen among the fisher folk on the eastern coast of Scotland. She was dressed very plainly in black, a touch of red in her hat. "Miss Keefe!" Lorrin said, blushing, and in his confusion greeting her by her stage name. "No, not Kitty Keefe just now, if you please, Mr. Lorrin. Here, at home, I'm just Emily Keverne, the fisherman's daughter, going singing about the shore as I used to do when I was a barefooted lassie." Her dark eyes were looking past them in a curious way while she was speaking. Her manner was quite self-possessed, but instantly Irma guessed that the singing had been a signal to some one. Irma's blue eyes darted a look along

RUTHLESS PROGRESS. Automobiles Displace Guides and Motor Boats Gondolas.

Yet another profession is dying a natural death-that of the Paris guide. He finds that his services are no longer in

With policemen who have several languages at their fingers' ends and motor cars to whisk people from one end of the city to another to see the sights, he is not wanted or needed, and like the Lon-don cabman and the Venetian gondolier he has to retire in favor of modern meth-ods. He has accepted his bad luck with French philosophy and only shrugs his shoulders at this taking away of his livelihood.

The London cabby has been helped by a benefit matinee and he still clings to his calling and looks fairly cheerful in spite of adverse circumstances, but the gondoliers fight the invasion of motor boats on Venetian canals with every means in their power. First by their protests they managed to secure a promise that motor boats would only run between railway stations and the hotels on the Lido, but one of the hotel proprietors obtained permission to use a boat exclusively for himself and his travelers. That was the beginning of the end.

Again the gondoliers protested but in vain. They were told that the motor boats of which they complained were private property and were not used by the public. Once they went so far as to compel some travelers to get out of compel some travelers to get out of a motor boat and sit in their gondolas. This was of little avail, however, for when the travelers arrived at their destination they refused to pay. They said they had paid for the motor boat and they did not propose to pay again.

The mayor when appealed to decided in favor of the travelers and the discomfited gondoliers have had to stand by and watch their trade and the trade of ancestors taken from them .- New York Press.

TAFT SPEAKS FOR CORPORATION TAX

PRESIDENT IN SPEECH AT DEN-VER URGES STATES TO ADOPT THE AMENDMENT.

EQUALIZE BURDENS.

Would Be Assessed and Not the Individual.

TO MAKE UP TREASURY DEFICIT.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 22.-President Taft arrived in Denver Tuesday afternoon and in the evening at the Denver Auditorium he addressed an enthusiastic crowd numbering thousands on the corporation tax passed as a part of the Payne tariff bill. The President also urged the states to vote for the amendment to the constitution permitting the levy of a direct income tax without apportioning the proceeds among the states according to their population. The principal points brought out by Mr. Taft

There is no constitutional provision for a direct levy to meet wartime or other extraordinary expenses-therefore let the constitution be amended so that a direct income tax may be levied. The direct income tax should not be levied except in cases of emergency.

Actual Earnings Taxed. All corporation whose net incomes do not exceed $5000 are exempted under the corporation tax law. The law, therefore, in effect, is an income tax; that is it taxes earnings actually made. It is a tax on success and not failure.

There are no adequate statistics concerning corporations. Even stockholders know little of the course of business. Under the corporation tax law the corporations will be required to disclose their actual working conditions.

If the income tax amendment passes the corporation tax law can be enlarged to include a proper burden on bondholders in corporations as well as sharehold-The burdens of all will be equalized.

Under the corporation tax law the ource of the income will be taxed rather than the individual. The corporation tax law will go far toward meeting the deficit in the treas-

Held Unconstitutional. Mr. Taft declared that it was the sureme court decision declaring unconstitutional the income tax law passed by a Democratic Congress some years ago that prevented the leaders in Congress during the session recently closed from including in the corporation tax measure a provision for a levy on bonds and bondholders. To tax bonds would result in the reduction of the rate of interest, and hence this resulted in a direct tax on the individual holders of the bonds. and came in contact with the decision of the court that no direct tax could be levied by the national government without that, while a revision had been deemed essential, there was also a deficit in the treasury to be met. This partly will be met by a cut of $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 in the appropriations to be made by Congress and partly by the income from the new corporation tay law. We To fit the new corporation tax law. Mr. Taft said he had favored at first an inheritance tax, but the objection that the states had pre-empted that field had sufficient weight to defeat the proposition.

Capt. Louis Ferdinand Ferber had been detailed for several years past for the investigation of aeronautics in the interest of the French army. He was at one time in charge of the extensive govof experiments in aviation. He worked with the Le Baudy brothers and the dirigible balloon La Patrie was an outcome of this co-operation. Capt. Ferber's interest, however, turned quickly to the heavier-than-air machine, and he was a pioneer in this field.

Capt. Ferber took part in the recent aviation contests at Rheims, where he flew in the race for the international cup and gave also an exhibition flight.

THE DEPORTATION MILL. Another Case in Which It May Grind the Wrong Grist.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Franz Cassin, a 14-year-old Syrian boy, was held on Ellis island and ordered deported, although he gave every promise of making a good citizen. But he was unaccompanied and had parents on the other side. Cassin comes from Lebanon in the side. Cassin comes from Lebanon in the Holy Land, and has a brother living in Pineville, Kentucky, who sent him money to come here. The boy is especially bright and a representative of his brother was on hand at Ellis island yesterday to show that he would be well taken care of. The case was decided against him, however, and immediately appealed to the secretary of commerce and labor at Washington.

Our native spiders are notable for their extreme unsociability. Of those which are spinners each one constructs its web apart from those of its kind. And those which hunt pursue their prey alone. In other countries, however, there are spiders which live in communities, and one such, a native of Mexico, is described by M. L. Diguet. It is known as the mosquero and makes a large nest in oaks and other trees. Here the spiders live gregariously and along with them in the nest is found a minute beetle and another species of spider. The beetle is said to act as scavenger. Parts of the nest of the mosquero are hung up in the houses during the wet season to get rid of the flies.—London Globe.

After a mad chase of about ten blocks, the boy was taken from the wagon and the blanket removed. With a desperate effort, Graham wrenched himself loose. He was pursued, but outdistanced his #### FIGHT SABER DUEL IN HAVANA. Gen. Del Castillo Wounded by Editor Whom He Challenged.

HAVANA, Sept. 22.—A desperate duel with cavalry sabers was fought Tuesday afternoon in the parlor of a private residence in Havana between Maj. Gen. Enrique Loynaz del Castillo, a former Congressman, and Wilfredo Fernandez, editor of El Commercio. After several minutes of fencing Gen. del Castillo was seriously wounded in the sword arm and was unable to continue fighting. The duel was the out-come of the sarcastic reference in El Commercio to the general, who thereupon sent a challenge to Senor Fernandez. Both men are skilled swordsmen, and the duel is said to have been the most desperate fought in Havana in many years.

A Sensible Measure.

A novelty in the shape of a measure 4s seen in the grocery shops. It is a circular piece of tin, the required size. This fits into the bag, the bottom of the paper sack serving for the bottom of the measure. It is then heaped with whatever is to be measured. Then the measure is slipped out and the goods are in the bag ready to be tied up. This does away with the transferring of the peas, beans, or whatever it is, after measuring, an operation which often results in spilling the contents. These measures are quite as practical for household use and are certainly time sav-

NEW LAND AND BARNS ARE NEXT.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 18 .- Almost immediately after the closing of the state fair of 1909, shortly after 10 o'clock Friday night, both President George McKerrow of the state board of agriculture and Secretary John M. True said that the event had resulted in a financial balance.

The attendance of 1909 was more than 14,000 under that of 1908. However, the number of passes issued, the number of exhibitors and a variety of other matters might alter attendance figures. In the estimation of officials the cash re-ceipts of 1909 will exceed those of last

Nothing definite can be made known of the balance attained until an official casting up of books has been made. The board will probably not have its financial report ready for two weeks.

for this and last year are as follows

Official Statements Made. Meanwhile confidence reigns. Secretary True said he thought receipts would be about $4000 greater than they were last year. The following statements were made on Friday night: "I believe the fair will prove a finan-cial success." President George Mc-one year ago. New Land Is Next.

The members of the board of agriculture who are opposing the purchase of the Fleming tract east of the fair grounds for which $20,000 was appro-priated by the Legislature, and who are now trying to divert the appropriation of the purchase of land not suitable for the purpose for which the appropriation was secured were shocked to receive yesterday a notice from Senator Hud-nall, chairman of the claims committee, this agreement the board of agriculture is not authorized to divert the appropriation and apply it to the purchase of

Senator Hudnall said the board would have to buy the Fleming land or none

The additional acres are desired for the purpose of erecting new speed barns to be placed beside the grand stand, and to remove the present speed barns from the gate entrance to make room for new terminals which are essential for the success of the fair.

CLINTONVILLE, Wis., Sept. 18 .- To be deserted at the altar for another was the fate of Charles Foesch, a prominent young farmer of the town of Waukechon, who was engaged to be married to Miss Clara Stubbe, one of the belles of the town of Larrabee. BADGER SOLONS TO MAKE STUDY THERE OF GUARANTY OF BANK DEPOSITS.

M. C. BERGH WILL MAKE TRIP.

Banking Commission and Bankers' Asso ciation Have Been Invited to Accompany Them.

TO BE THERE DURING FAIR WEEK.

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 20 .- [Special.] -A visit to the state of Oklahoma for a thorough study of the new law for the guarantee of bank deposits will be made next week by the special committee on banking of the Wisconsin Legislature, consisting of Senators Walter C. Owen, Maiden Rock; R. C. Martin, Darlington, and James A. Wright, Merrill; and Assemblyman L. C. Whittet, Edgerton; O. A. Crowell, Almond; Platt Whitman. Highland, and William Reader, Antigo.' Make Thorough Study.

Oklahoma is the only state which has in operation such a law as is contemplated for Wisconsin, hence the importance the committee attaches to a thorough study of its workings. Kansas and Nebraska have enacted such laws, but their operations at present are tied up by injunctions. Texas and South Dakota have also adopted such laws, but they have not yet gone into operation.

On invitation of the committee, Commissioner of Banking M. C. Bergh will missioner of Banking M. C. ALASKA NEEDS RAILWAYS.

Territory Has 200,000 Square Miles Untouched by Explorer.

Alaska, with more than 600,000 square miles of territory, has virtually 200,000 square miles untouched by the explorer, says the Chicago Tribune. Yet in 1908 it produced almost $20,000,000 worth of minerals, $19,000,000 of which was gold. minerals, $19,000,000 of which was gold.
Lack of transportation in the territory is the greatest factor keeping back its development. In these 600,000 square miles there are only 452 miles of wagon road, 397 miles of sled road, and 255 miles of improved trails. It has only 300 miles of railroad, a considerable portion of which is out of repair and idle, and only fifty miles of new road was built in 1908. 1908

The cost of transportation has made it impossible to work any but the richest of mineral deposits in many sections of the country. Supplies must be fur-nished the mining communities, and ex-cept in those remote camps where the gold deposits are extremely rich, difficulties of transportation make supplies prohibitive. Alaska is ripe for a new era in transportation facilities.

FOR WOMEN AND GIRLS

There is great variety in skirts, as, indeed, there is in everything. In some brief interviews with Paris dressmakers published in "The Woman's Home Companion" Mme. Havet says: "We are fashioning full skirts, straight skirts, plain circular skirts and kilted skirts."
Paquin favors the plaited skirt, and in many of his gowns the princess top appears with pleats, not very flaring, below.

Also French women are taking low. Also, French women are taking particularly to skirts which have box pleats front and back, mounted on a nitted yoke which extends about 3 inches above the waist line. Variety rules, and any woman with a reasonably good figure, some money and fair taste can look well. As one of the dressmakers says: "Many things are not beautiful, but then it is an easy matter to avoid

Some days ago two large eagles descended upon the town of Milo and carried off Biff, the big Persian cat belonging to Mrs. L. H. Ryder at the Silver Lake hotel. No one ever expected to see her again, but Monday morning she re-appeared outside of Mrs. Ryder's win-dow apparently but little the worse for her experience.

Some of the long fur about her throat was missing and there were several was missing and there were several scratches on her back, but she was purring contentedly and has taken her customary allowance of milk and sardines since without the slightest difficulty.

The final act in the drama was unfolded when Dave Hutchinson arrived here from his Bee Pond camps with the bodies of two eagles which he found in the Ten Mile Shanty road about five miles from here. The head of one of them had been slawed terribly and the throat of the other had been torn open.

That they both met their death at the hand of the cat there can be no doubt. But how she managed to despatch them without herself sustaining serious injury is a complete mystery which even Bill McBride, the Houston Mountain bee fancier doesn't attempt to unravel.—Ken-

Deep-Sea Rivers.

The bottom currents of seas and oceans, such as those which possibly bring amber to our shores, are strangely disposed. The Seigneur of Sark some fifty years ago was shipwrecked in his yacht near the island of Guernsey. He lost, among other things, a well fastened, strongly made chest containing silver plate. It was found a year later in deep water off the coast of Norway and Picked Up on an English Hillside-Instances from India.

On Friday last a number of townspeople taking a walk on the slopes of Knockscalbert hill were surprised to see on the grass near cummerbill a large number of very small Cshes, varying in length from 11/2 to 2 inches. The fish appeared to be the young of the herring, and their presence on the hill in considerable numbers created much specula-

In August, 1904, a shower of herring fry was experienced at the head of Long-row, but there was no doubt as to whence the miniature fish had come, for they fell from above on the hats and clothing of several men, and at the time a small black cloud of remarkable density was directly overhead.

The phenomenon of fish falling from the clouds is, says our contemporary, of more common occurrence than is generally supposed. It is undoubtedly due to some small fry of fishes having been lifted from the water and carried over dry land by what is popularly known as a waterspout. Many cases are reported from abroad, and they are common in India. Last year Caithness reported a shower of small fishes which were identified as herring fry, and there was also a similar occurrence in Rossshire. Frogs, insects and other living creatures have also been known to be thus transported through the air.-Campbelltown Courier.
