Drew a Lucky Number

William McCullough, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. McCullough of this village, returned home last Saturday from North Dakota, where he was fortunate enough to draw a land prize on the Standing Rock Reservation, in the drawing of government lands, which had only recently been closed. Mr. Mc Cullough drew No, 3288, which entitles him to a claim of 160 acres. In order to become in possession and acquire the title of this land, he must reside on it at least 14 months. Mr. McCullough intends to settle on the claim next spring.

During his stay in Dakota Mr. McCullough had the pleasure to visit John Murphy and Louis Mc Carty, both former residents from here, who he says, are doing well and have a fine farm there. They put up 9,000 bushels of grain this season besides their flax crop, with the help of but one hired man.

The registration this year reflects the changing conditions in the dairy industry. Many small creameries are being closed and the business transferred to large central factories. The cheese market is exceptionally high, and cheese makers are in such demand that many of them feel that they cannot stop to attend college.

The animal had given birth to a call in the pasture, and while Mrs. Weber and her daughter-in-law Mrs. Mat. RECLAIM LAND

Thousands of acres of land which have been inundated during wet weather will become the most productive tracts in the county providing a plan which is now under consideration is carried out.

It is proposed to build a large drainage can'al extending from the head of the millpond at New Cassel in a north and northwesterly direction through the adjoining country into the town of Eden. The canal will be several miles in length and of sufficient depth and width to carry off all surplus water, which has heretofore flooded the land.

For some time the farmers of the county have been interested in the plan and this week James Day, M. L. McCullough and two gentlemen from Elkhorn, Wis., were at Campbellsport talking over the plan with the farmers and preparing to solicit funds for the work.

There is hardly a farm in the county which has not a small drainage ditch upon it at some place or other, but the canal, which it is proposed to build will be the first one of its kind ever constructed in this vicinity. The work it is thought will cost several thousand dollars.

Providing the canal after its construction proves to be a success, others will be built in other parts of the country where it is necessary to carry off surplus water during rainy weather .- Fond

Entire Vote of Fond du Lac County to be Recounted

Startling discoveries were made in the circuit court at Fond du Lac when ballots cast at the village of North Fond du Lac at the last spring election for county superintendent of schools were recounted in circuit court this week Juring the progress of the action instituted by E. P. Crain against Miss Ruby M. Acker on the grounds that several errors on the part of election officials were responsible ditions in the dairy industry in the for Miss Acker being elected over John J. Altenhofen, the popular state. Most of the students are him by a scant majority of two

According to the returns made by the inspectors to the canvassing board immediately after the election, Miss Acker received 4 votes and Crain 88. Upon a recount in circuit court it was found that Miss Acker received 56 votes and Crain 113. The fact that gross discrepancies were found in the recount of the ballots of the town of Springvale has led the court to believe that there is a flood of mistakes in the spring election. The court has ordered a recount of the entire county and also an examination of the polling list, after ending a song and while tripping to the wings on a local theater Monday night, Miss Bertha Allgower, an actress of Columbus, O., was attacked by a lion, which she had been putting through a number of tricks.

The animal leaped upon the actress and bore her down. One of its huge paws struck her left leg, the claws cutting three deep gashes, about 4 inches long and nearly an inch deep. With tail switching, the beast, roaring with rage, stood over the woman's helpless form.

Alfred Camm, one of the actors, seized an iron and ran to the woman's assistance. Camm beat back the lion and drove him into a cage.

The actress was carried from the stage in a fainting condition. The wounds are Cliff Dwellers in China.

The existence of a race hitherto unknown to science has been proved by the remarkable discoveries made in the prehistoric cliff dwellings of Szechwan, West China, by the late J. W. Brooke, F. R. G. S., and C. H. Meares. The dwellings are cut in the red sandstone cliff near the rivers Min and Ya, and the most interesting objects found there con-sist of well-modeled red and black terra cotta figures. The faces show a type different from any race existing in these parts at the present time, the dresses censes bearing some resemblance to the kimonos worn by the Japanese, and the musical instrument in the hands of one of the figures being identical with the Koto of Japan. The authorities of the British museum are unable to say who these people were, and in view of the identity of many of the objects with those found in the ancient Japanese dol-mens, the question arises whether this ancient race emigrated to Japan.—Lon-JAMES J. Advocates Stricter Economy.

Mr. Hill did not wish to go into an amplification of his views or furnish a panacea for the ill that he sees is threatening the country. Generally speaking, however, he thought that economy—the cutting down of useless expendituresindividual and governmental-would go further than anything else toward aiding further than anything else toward aiding in improvement of conditions.

Mr. Hill is serious in his view of the danger threatening the country in the constant increase in the cost of living. He has studied history, and he finds, as he stated, that national decline begins when the cost of living becomes a burden to the masses, while the immensely rich are in no wise affected.

Problem Demands Attention.

Mr. Hill believes that the great minds of the country should turn their attention to this question rather than to the many dealing with laws, unless these laws can add to the solution of the problem. The great statesmen of the country spend hours, days and months, as he sees it, trying to devise laws for better and more honest living, for reform, and yet neglect the one problem that directly tremendously touches the millions whose welfare constitutes the very existence of the nation. As Mr. Hill sees it, there must be deep and serious consideration and without unnecessary delay of the questions dealing with the cost of food and dress of the people of the country. Prosperity is not the cure, he admits, although it is a help. "It is better," he said, "that men should be working at $2 a day while they are paying 20 cents a pound for the said of the said." for meat to go along with their vegetables rather than be without work and having to make purchases at practically the same prices.'

FOUNDER OF RESCUE HOMES SUC-CUMBS TO PNEUMONIA.

New York Millionaire Established Seventy-three Havens for Fallen Girls in America.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 17 .-Charles N. Crittenton of New York, widely known as the millionaire founder of the Florence Crittenton Rescue Homes for Girls, died Tuesday night of pneumonia after being ill less than a week. He was 76 years old.

Mr. Crittenton founded seventy-three rescue homes in this country and several in Japan and China, which he named in memory of his daughter Florence.

Mr. Crittenton was on a tour visiting the many rescue homes throughout the country and arrived here ten days ago. He became ill within a few days after his arrival and pneumonia quickly devel-

Mr. Crittenton began life as a boy on a farm, but soon went to New York to seek his fortune. Here his first work was as an office boy for an undertaker, but he soon started for himself in the drug business. At the end of the first year Mr. Crittenton and his wife counted up $863 in profits and he often said he never since felt so rich as he did at that moment. His drug business grew till it made him a millionaire. His life at this period was saddened by the death of his 4-year-old daughter Florence. He gave up business and de-voted himself to evangelistic work among girls. Mr. Crittenton had a special car built to save hotel bills and traveled back and forth across the country for several years before his death, visiting the homes he had founded and carrying on his missionary work.

New York Man's Boat Wrecked Off Madeira, but All on Board but One Are Saved.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 .- Eugene Higgins' yacht Varuna lies today a total wreck on the northeast coast of the island of Madeira. All on board of her, with possibly one exception, have been saved.

This information came in a cable gram from Funchal, Madeira, following advices Tuesday night that the yacht had been stranded on the Madeira coast. No particulars as to the manner in which those on board got clear of the vessel have been received. It was stated, however, that the majority of the yacht's passengers and crew had arrived safely at different villages on the north coast of the island. The Varura was on her twenty-eighth trip across the Atlantic. At Mr. Higgins' offices here it was said today that although the make-up of his yachting party was not known there, it is believed that he took several friends when the yacht sailed from Marseilles which was her last known port of call.

LITTLE ANNE OLIVER.

BY LUCY A. LEEDS.

CHAPTER I.

"Five pounds, is it not, Miss Oliver? dare say you will find gold more useful than a cheque. A month from today, then! The children will have had enough of the sea by that time, and I shall want to see you all settled to work again steadily before we go north. Good morning! I hope you will have a pleasant holiday!"

Exit Lady Chilcote, bland and selfsatisfied, as befitted the mother of a large family-the head of an artistocratic

Little Anne Oliver, small, young and shabby, the underpaid, overworked daily governess to the establishment, dropped the five hardly-earned gold sovereigns into her frayed leather purse, hurried lesson-book copies, slates, and ink bot-tles gleefully into the schoolroom cup-board, kissed the nose of the tabby cat curled up in a fat pincushion on the window sill, and ran off downstairs, pinning on her sunburnt sailor hat as she

Outside the big house in upper Brook street the July sun scorched down upon the broad pavement with a fierce, uncompromising glare. Little Anne, holding her head well down to let her shallow hat brim shade her short-sighted eyes, ran blundering against the first person she met, and found herself with her nose in sudden contact with the button of a buff linen waistcoat, from which she retreated in prompt alarm, as a voice greeted her gaily—

"Oh, I say, now, Miss Oliver, that's a bit shabby, isn't it? To run a chap down, and then stare at him as though you had never seen him in your life be-

Sir Roger Gresham, light-hearted and gay, a typical well-grown, well-dressed representative of the aristocratic class from which he sprang, looked down smiling kindly at the little governess, while she, crimsoning at the encounter, began a lame apology.

"I am very sorry; I wasn't looking; the sun was in my eyes, and—and I've only met you once before, sir."

"Oh, but we're old friends all the Do you know that the waltz you played for us last week at Lady Chilcote's runs in my head still. Something about mice, wasn't it called, French mice? I never could remember a name." "I suppose you mean 'Sourires d'Avril'? Sourires means smiles, not mice," replied Miss Oliver in her best governess style, but with a peal of girlish laughter.

Her companion was, however, not a wit abashed by his mistake. "Oh, well, 'Smiling Mice,' then! What does it matter? One word's as good as another in French. I expect you have no end of work drumming such gibberish into the small Chilcote's ears all day long, haven't you? I'm on my way there now to leave a note and these"he flourished an immense bunch of pink rosebuds under little Anne's insignificant nose. "Don't they smell jolly, and make you think of the country and all sorts of of the scorching pavements that half green things, eh? They came up fresh blistered her feet through her well-worn from my place in Sussex this morning, and when I saw them I felt what a fool I was to have wasted half the summer in grimy old London."

Miss Oliver stooped over the fragrant bandful until the pinky glow of the blossessor of a buoyancy of temperament soms seemed to lend a transient color to that communicated itself to all with her pale cheeks.

"Oh, I wish I had not just left the house, or that you had called a few minutes earlier, then I should have had the pleasure of putting them out-I always do the flowers for Lady Chilcote! Miss Chilcote never has time, and hates the trouble, but I love them, and these are such beauties!"

There was such a ring of honest disappointment in the girl's plaintive voice that Sir Roger felt quite pitiful.

"Well, turn back with me now and take charge of them," he said hastily, crainming the nosegay into her unwilling hand. "There's loads of time before lunch. I must call at the house myself, for the week. I rather wish I could have accepted, I might have heard you play again if I had; but anyhow I will walk

He placed himself at Anne's side, perfectly indifferent to the contrast between himself, faultlessly well-dressed, and the homely shabbiness of his companion.

In his honest friendliness and absence of all vulgar pride of birth or station, Roger Gresham would have strolled leisurely through the park with Lady Chilcote's daily governess as readily as with the smartest girl of his very smart acquaintances. She was a nice little thing he would have said if questioned on the subject. She interested him, he wanted to talk to her and walk with her, so why should he be prevented?

Fortunately, perhaps, little Anne, although by no means worldly wise, had learnt enough during the eighteen months she had spent as a subordinate in Lady Chilcote's household to know that walking along Brook street at the busiest time of the day with Sir Roger Gresham as an escort would be a most dangerous proceeding as far as she was concerned, and that the meager pittance tightly was much too precious a possession to be risked for the sake of ten minutes' chatter with an idle man.

She shook her head emphatically at his proposal, and shyly held out the flowers as she spoke.

"I can't come back, really-I should concession because her companion's fair, good-looking face wore such an expression of genuine regret. "But I have finished with them-I mean the Chilcote children-for today, and I'm going for my holiday. At least, I don't suppose I -we shall be able to leave London, but they are going to the sea." A very faint so they won't get all rhubarby from the sigh accompanied this, to little Anne, all shop," pleaded Gerry, bending her small important statement. She would have face over the roses while Annie cut the given all she was worth ten times over, string that tied the stems and put them the seaside holiday to which the Chil- bowl produced by Phil. cote infants, their German nurse and Swiss nursery maid, were looking for-elder girl's neck, and the languid head, Town and Country.

Gresham, good-naturedly mimicking the girl's tone, yet struck by the longing ex-pressed in it. "Well, why don't you go, too, pray? I should think they would want you to help with the bathing and spades, and buckets and things. I wonder my lady leaves you behind."

"Oh, but you don't understand, and please I really must go—I am late as it is, Sir Roger! I ought not to be idling here chattering to you."

A crimson wave dyed little Anne's face at this moment as a smart Victoria dashed past the incongruous pair containing two exquisitely dressed women to whom Gresham turned to raise his

"I'm only Lady Chilcote's daily governess, you know," continued Annie; "I don't teach anything grand-only just English and music, and mend their clothes. I have a little brother and sister at home to work for; we have no parents, you see, so of course I have to be very, very careful and earn all I can for them-and-and I wasn't wishing for the sea for myself, but only that I could take them, because the girl isn't strong, and a change would do her good, and that's all. Good-bye!" added Miss Oliver rather forlornly.

"'Good-bye!' Oh, no, it isn't—we'll say 'Au revoir!' in that blessed language you're so fond of. I dare say we shall meet again before long, and I should take those kids to the sea by hook or by crook if I were you. You can get seaside lodgings for a song, I expect. No, I can't carry about those weeds any longer really. Will you take them home and look after them? There's a man I want to see-". Her companion was across the road in colloquy with some passing acquaintance almost before Anne realized the fact, leaving her with the bunch of moss roses in her hand, and chuckling all the while at the success of his small stratagem to force her to keep his flowers. "Poor little soul!" he thought to himself, mentally reviewing the trifling episode, as having dropped his note into the Chilcote letter box he hailed a passing hansom to drive to the Carlton, where he had a luncheon engagement. "Rather a tightness in the money market with her, no doubt; jolly hard at her age to have to work for her brother and sister as well as herself, and I'll bet her ladyship grinds her like a slave and underpays her wretchedly. Why, the price of this blessed luncheon I'm going to eat now, and don't want, would pay for those brats' journey and back to Ramsgate or Margate, or some such unholy haunt, and leave something over for milk and penny buns besides." Which abstruse mental calculation affected Sir Roger so thoroughly that it actually destroyed the flavor of the lobster salad, and quite spoilt his appreciation of the costly brand of champagne which this wealthy, good-hearted, and absolutely ignorant what-to-do-with-his-money

young man had ordered for the delectation of his guests and himself. Meanwhile, all unconscious of the interest she had aroused in her new acquaintance's breast, little Anne Oliver shoes. She turned into a dingy little side street off a busy thoroughfare, where, over a chemist's shop, she and her little brother and sister had their shabby lodgings. She was the happy poswhom she came in contact and which caused her to find a delight in the veriest trifle, a fund of enjoyment where a duller, less appreciative mind would have searched for it in vain. Running up the narrow dark staircase of her lodging two steps at a time her bunch of fragrant rosebuds in one hand, her little purse containing those five sovereigns, the guerdon of three months' patient unre-mitting toil, in the other she burst like a real ray of sunshine into the tiny sitting room and dropped her treasures to clasp both its occupants in her arms.

"It's all over for a month, darlings and I've got my money-and see what lovely flowers!" The small boy and girl because they've asked me to dine and I slender, weedy creatures—the boy about can't, because I'm going down to Cowes 13 years of age, olive-skinned and blackhaired; the girl only 7, fair and fragile, with the frailed, pinched look of an underfed town-bred child—clung rapwith you, and you can put the flowers turously about the newcomer's neck as through the girl's character that shrank though they had been parted from her from accepting help either for herself or but a few hours asunder.

"Show us the pretty gold shillings! Are they enough to take us to Sandbeach and can we dig and throw stones and build sand castles, like you said we should?" shouted Gerry, capering fan-tastically round; while Phil added grave-

"I took Gerry to the dispensary after school, like you told me, Nan, and the doctors said she would never be any better till she had a change of air and drank new milk straight from the cow.'

"We'll see about it presently, dear; just let me get cool a minute, and, Phil, fetch me some water in the old fingerbowl for these beauties" said the elder sister, smothering a sigh as she took off her hat and subsided into an old wicker chair with Roger Gresham's roses in her knew each other as children at Elwood, lap.

This seat, drawn close to the window, was, with the exception of a hard and of five gold sovereigns snugly hidden in the worn little purse she clutched so tightly was much too precious a posses. ed deal chairs and a square table covered with a faded red cloth, a small cheffonnier staggering on three legs with a wad of brown paper to replace the missing fourth, an antiquated piano with a faded silk front, and two hassocks, completed the list of furniture. Muchlove to!" She couldn't resist this small darned lace curtains and a yellow holland blind adorned the one window, opened to its widest extent, and thus admitting the hot heated odor of the street below, mingled with the medicinal, drugy smell from the chemist's shop on the ground floor. "Let me have the flowers quite close, which after all wasn't saying much, for loosely into an old green glass finger-

"Why must we live over a medicine shop, Anne dear?" said Gerry. "I get

"Let's get a pencil and draw house for the sovereigns, where they've all got to go, like you did once before. Make a story, and tell how we will spend the one that is to take us to the sea," he said, putting the five yellow discs in a row on the faded little cloth.

"Yes, yes! Tell, tell!" cried Gerry in er eager voice.

So Anne took a pencil and a spare page of an old account book and began. She drew a shoemaker's house, where one sovereign had to go to buy new boots and shoes for all three of them, and to pay for patching the old ones into the bargain; and a grocer's and a dairy house, where another was due to pay for the small necessaries of daily food; then there was the severeign for the rent to be handed over to the mixer of the Gregory's powder down below, and when all items had been reckoned there re-mained thirty whole shillings to be put into the seaside cottage that haunted all their dreams day and night—a tiny whitewashed cottage with black tarred palings, and a rose bush over the porcha cottage divided from the beach by only a narrow strip of turf-a cottage that smelled of sand and shells. "Write, 'It smells of fish,' over the picture, Nan!" cried Gerry. Whilst the solemn conclave was progress a barrel organ commenced to drone a popular coon song under the sitting room window. "The chap plays that all wrong! I say, can't you hear you're leaving out all the flats and sharps!" shouted Mr. Philip Oliver, putting his curly, dark head out of the window to remonstrate with the musician, then withdrawing it and closing the sash with a sharp bang.

"That chap can't do 'Honey' half as well as Gerry and me, Anne. Just you listen a minute."

The boy snatched up an old fiddle, which was lying face downwards on the end of the slippery sofa, and drew his bow across the strings, the little girl placing herself beside him with her banjo. Nothing could have been more spirited or tasteful than the children's rendering of a popular plantation song. Music was in them both—a natural instinct inherited from a dead mother whose passionate love for the art had induced her to leave home and friends to follow the fortunes of the young Italian music master who had taught the violin at the fashionable boarding school where Miss Annabel Ferrars was being "finished," regardless of expense. Anne herself, the eldest child, was full of music to her slender finger tips, but poverty had rendered it impossible to fully cultivate the invaluable gift, and her whole childhood and earliest girl-hood had been spent in the endless drudgery of nursing an invalid mother, dependent solely on the money earned in teaching by her penniless husband.

Affairs had come to a climax after Geraldine's birth, when the Signora Olivera, her name long since corrupted into Mrs. Oliver by the class amongst which she fived, c'osed her teer washed eyes for ever on an unkind world, while by the flames and smoke within six months of her death her husband was knocked down by a van in Piccadilly Circus on his way home from SUICIDE IS HUSHED UP, made out of copper.

Address, H. P. HAMILTON, Address, H. P. HAMILTON, went speeding homewards, oblivious alike playing at some charity concert, and killed on the spot, thus leaving his three German Papers Suppress Details of Ship children destitute. Fortunately, the promoters of the smart society function at which poor Olivera had been assisting when death overtook him on his homeward road. pleaded very warmly the cause of the young creatures left orphans by their father's untimely death, and a subscription was raised sufficiently ample to supply Anne and her little brother and sister with all present needs, besides forming a nest-egg, which, judiciously invested, produced a tiny sum of twelve pounds a year to count upon.

Charity once roused to action would have gone further. Somebody unearthed the all-important, but hitherto neglected. fact that Olivera was himself of gentle birth-had even been entitled to the rank of count in his own country-and sundry offers of homes in charitable institutions for his two young childrenin some cases of adoption by childiess wealthy people—poured into little Anne's lap as she sat, very pale and forlorn, in the shabby lodgings over the chemist's shop in those long, sad days after both her parents had been taken from her.

for months, albeit the three had been those dear to her, and the mere notion of separation from Phil and Gerry, the 2-year-old baby, roused her whole heart in revolt. Surely there had been partings enough already!

Marries a Chauffeur to Begin Married

Life as a Poor Woman. The facts in a modern romance, ending in the marriage here of the daughter of a rich man to a chauffeur, and the father's bitter resentment, have become known at Terre Haute, Ind. Miss Fay Leeson of Elwood and Terrel Huston and the young woman, now 19 years of age, has wanted to marry him for more than a year, but was prevented by her father, Wayne Leeson, said to be the richest man in Madison county. The op-position led to a stronger feeling, and the young woman declared her intention of marrying Huston. The latter realized the seeming gulf between them. He left Elwood, declaring he would not drag her down by such an alliance. He went to Casey and became a chauffeur for an oil man. Recently Miss Leeson told her parents she was going to Kokomo to isit friends, but instead she went to Casey, where she met Huston. They went to Terre Haute without delay and were married. When the father was informed he departed with his family for his summer home at Webster lake, leaving a note informing the girl that he did not care to see her again and that she was disinherited. The young wife rejoined her husband at Casey, where she says she is ready to begin life as the wife of a poor man. Her only regret is that her parent brought her up without teaching her how to work.

SLAYS CHILD FOR LOVE

NEGRO WOMAN KILLS DAUGHTER TO PLEASE LOVER.

Holds 8-Year-Old with One Hand and Slashes Her Throat with Razor Belonging to Man.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 17 .- A remarkable murder story was revealed here today following a confession Tuesday night by Mary Batson Howard, a day night by Mary Batson Howard, a negro woman, that she had killed her 8-year-old daughter because Raymond Carver, a man the woman loved, threatened to leave unless the child was sent away. Taking the little one into Palmer's woods near Seat Pleasant, Md., last Tuesday, the woman said she held the child with one hand while she slashed the girl's throat with Carver's razor, which the woman held in the other. And after covering the body with leaves, the woman wiped the blood from her hands with a newspaper she had found. She with a newspaper she had found. She then returned to Washington.

Discovery of the body was made last Friday and the woman was detained by the police and put through the "third degree." She at first insisted that she had left the child with relatives, but finally broke down and confessed.

The woman said that she had promised to take her daughter to the country and that the child seemed very happy at the prospect of going to the woods. The woman said she took the razor in her hand as she assisted the girl through a barbed wire fence surrounding the woods and the child innocently turned and

"What are you going to do?" Without answering the question the woman said she held the little one tightly and cut the child's throat. The woman will be turned over to the Maryland authorities, a warrant for murder having been sworn out against her. She said Carver knew nothing of the murder.

GEN. GRANT IS DRIVEN FROM HOME BY FIRE.

Assists Mrs. Grant in Escaping from Room by Climbing from Window to Porch Roof.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 17 .- Maj-Gen. Frederick Dent Grant, commanding the department of the lakes, was forced to flee from his home, 1406 Dearborn avenue, today by fire which originated in the basement and for a time threatened to consume the house. Gen. Grant assisted Mrs. Grant in escaping from the room by climbing out of a window to the porch roof and descending to the ground by a ladder which firemen raised. Aside from the discomfort of the hurried exit into the cold, neither Gen. nor Mrs. Grant suffered from their experiences.

After watching the flames for a time and ascertaining that the fire was under control, Gen. and Mrs. Grant went to the home of Mrs. Potter Palmer, who is Mrs. Grant's sister. In descending the ladder from the chilly porch roof, Mrs. Grant was aided by firemen who also offered assistance to the general and were waved aside.

Mrs. Grant narrowly escaped severe burns when she at first sought to escape from the house by a stairway from which she and Gen. Grant were driven back

Agent's Shortage and His Death.

BERLIN, Nov. 17 .- Crazed to a point of desperation by his hopeless financial entanglements, Bothas Pawlowski, general agent in Paris of the North German Lloyd line, shot and killed himself in his apartments in Hillman's hotel in Bremen. Although this was on the night of November 2, the affair has been hushed up by the German press and only the most meager details of the events which led up to the suicide have been allowed to reach the public. Pawlowski, who was well known personally to thousands of American tourists who booked over the Lloyd line via Cherbourg, not only filched from the treasury of the Paris office a sum aggregating many thousands of dollars, but squandered the fortune of the wealthy Philadelphia widow whom he married a few months ago.

TRY TO SAVE INDIANS.

Colony of Sioux Will Be Established in Nicaragua to Prevent Extinction of Tribe.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 17 .- To save the remnant of the Sioux tribe of Indians from extinction by consumption and other diseases, a colony of the Indians will be established in Nicaragua early in the new year. Chief Little Bison, a full-blooded Sioux, sailed from Boston on the steamer Esparta today for Nicaragua, where he will receive the deeds to 16,000 acres of land granted by the Nicaraguan government for the establishment of the colony. The project is supported financially by F. S. Dellenbaugh, head of the American Geograph ical society, and several wealthy New York people. The migration of the Indians is expected to begin in January.

COWS DITCH TRAIN.

Two Moolley cows nearly caused a serious wreck on this division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad Sunday afternoon when they chose to utilize the track as a boulevard. The passenger train which left here at 5 o'clock in the afternoon in charge of Conductor Charles Reynolds and Engineer Race encountered the cows near Knowles and then things began to happen. One of the animals was killed, but when the engine struck the second cow $900 and also finding that the defendant it proved too much even for the engine. As a result the engine jumped the track, carrying with it the baggage car and passenger coach. The engineer and fireman jumped and none of the passengers were injured. Both cows were killed and it took a wrecker some time to reopen traffic on the road again.

ARE TALL MEN STUPID?

Geniuses of the World Have All Been of Medium Size.

Dr. I. Potter, an eminent German physician, has been making some interesting observations regarding the stature of individuals and the relation that exists be-tween height and talent and genius. The doctor finds that not only persons with considerable talent but the geniuses of the world have all been of medium size or less. Says the Boston Post: or less. Says the Boston Post:

Among statesmen he points out Attila, Cromwell, Frederick II., Napoleon, Gambetta, Thiers—all of whom were of very small stature. Jesus Christ, too, the doctor says, according to the Talmud, was built in small proportions; so was Paul.

Among the great artists the short men were Raphael, Michael Angelo, Titian, Leonardo da Vinci and Menzel; among the musicians, Richard Wagner, Handel, Bach, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schumann, Schubert, Brahms, Nearly all the poets were of small stature, particularly Dante, Victor Hugo and Heine. So were Cervantes and Rosseau.

SKIN TROUBLES CURED.

Two Little Girls Had Eczema Very Badly-In One Case Child's Hair Came Out and Left Bare Patches -Cuticura Met with Success.

"I have two little girls who have been troubled very badly with eczema. One of them had it on her lower limbs. I did everything that I could hear of for her, but it did not give in until warm weather, when it seemingly subsided. The next winter when it became cold the eczema started again and also in her head where it would take the hair out and leave bare patches. At the same time her arms were sore the whole length of them. I took her to a physician, but the child grew worse all the time. Her sister's arms were also affected. I began using the Cuticura Remedies, and by the time the second lot was used their skin was soft and smooth. Mrs. Charles Baker, Albion, Me., Sept. 21, 1908." Potter Drug & Chem. Corps., Sole Props. of Cuticura Remedies, Boston.

$1000 FOR A LEAF.

An Australian Pays That Sum for a Bit of Spineless Cactus.

Wizard Burbank says that though some dishonest dealers both in this country and in Europe have been offering specimens of the so-called Burbank spineless cactus for two years the first State Board of Assessment Issues Stategenuine specimens were put on the mar-ket only last summer.

He has been experimenting with the production of a spineless opuntia, or prickly pear, for twelve years. Specimens were sent to him from all over the world and thousands of seedlings were feet and is over 6 feet in diameter. The towns through which the lines run. thornless varieties cannot be raised from seed, but are propagated only from cut-assessment of each road, the total tax tings, which must be first wilted in the and the percentage of taxes going to sun for a week or two before they will the state and the cities, villages and grow. "After that," says Mr. Burbank towns interested:

85 per cent. root anywhere any end up—even in your overcoat pocket or on the floor back of the stove.

A single leaf of the best variety of the thornless cactus, the Santa Rosa, was sold for $1000 to John M. Rutland of Melbourne, Australia, with the right to sell in the southern hemisphere, and one leaf of another variety was disposed of to the same Australian horticulturist for

"The foliage proposition," continued Mr. Burbank, "is by no means all there is to cactus culture. The fruits have wonderful possibilities. Many of my helpers prefer 'pear' to appricots or peaches and I myself find it delicious. There is great variety in the taste of the different sorts, and my ambition now is to produce a type that will bear distinct varieties of cactus fruit, the same as different varieties of apples are char-acterized by different flavors."

CAREFUL DOCTOR

Prescribed Change of Food Instead of Drugs.

It takes considerable courage for a doctor to deliberately prescribe only food for a despairing patient, instead of resorting to the usual list of medicines.

There are some truly scientific physicians among the present generation who recognize and treat conditions as they are and should be treated regardless of the value to their pockets. Here's an instance:

"Four years ago I was taken with sue of the alumni magazine of the uni-severe gastritis and nothing would versity, which contains various articles stay on my stomach, so that I was on the verge of starvation.

"I heard of a doctor who had a summer cottage near me-a specialist from N. Y., and as a last hope, sent for him. "After he examined me carefully he advised me to try a small quantity of partment. Grape-Nuts at first, then as my stomach became stronger to eat more.

"I kept at it and gradually got so I could eat and digest three teaspoonfuls. Then I began to have color in my face, memory became clear, where before everything seemed a blank. My limbs got stronger and I could walk. So I steadily recovered. "Now after a year on Grape-Nuts I weigh 153 lbs. My people were surprised at the way I grew fleshy and strong on this food."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

VAN HISE IS HONORED

WISCONSIN UNIVERSITY HEAD CAR-NEGIE FOUNDATION TRUSTEE.

Succeeds Charles W. Eliot, Who Resigns and Leaves Harvard Without Representation.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17 .- Charles W. Eliot, former president of Harvard university, retired today from the board of trustees of the Carnegie foundation, Edwin Holt Hughes' resignation was also accepted.

In the place of these gentlemen, Dr. Charies Van Hise, president of the University of Wisconsin, and Dr. Ira Remsen, president of Johns Hopkins university, were elected.

The action was taken at the annual meeting of the trustees of the founda-

Dr. Eliot's retirement was due to his stated belief that the position of trustee should be held by a member actively interested in educational matters. By his resignation, Harvard university is left without representation on the board.

President Henry S. Pritchett announced that no additional institutions had been admitted to participation in the foundation's plan, under which educators of advanced years in accepted institutions are pensioned. No action was taken to-ward readmitting George Washington university, dropped some months ago from the accepted list.

PLANS COURSE IN JOURNALISM. University of Wisconsin Takes Steps to Develop Department.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 17.—The University of Wisconsin is completing a plan for including in its curriculum a course of journalism to be classed in the same rank as the law and medicine departments of the institution.

The first practical advance toward this point is noted in the November ismagazines, pertaining to recent scientific iscoveries, personal news of the students and faculty, and several semi-literary stories. These articles were prepared by various students of the university under direction of Prof. Louis P. Lochner, who is acting as editor of this de

Dr. A. J. Ochsner, president of the alumni, with the co-operation of the faculty and Prof. Lochner, intends to develop the journalistic course until it shall teach details of preparing news, printing the newspaper and providing arrangements for advertising and business management.

A Delayed Wedding Gift.

Five years after their marriage the Crown Prince and Princess of Germany will receive a wedding present from the chief cities of Prussia. It is a magnificent gold and silver dinner service, worth many thousands of dollars, and numbering 500 pieces, including centerpieces, sidepieces, dessert and fruit dishes, candelabria, etc. The delay has been due to the elaborate nature of the work, the articles being beautifully chased and bearing the heraldic insignia of the various cities. The prince and princess have now been informed that the gift will be ready for presentation in the spring of 1910. Meanwhile they have been blessed with three bonny sons while waiting for this magnificent wedding present, and have rubbed along with ta-ble furniture which they purchased

Gov. Davidson Proclaims State Thanksgiving Day.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 16 .- [Special.]-Gov. Davidson today issued his proclamation designating Thursday, November 25, as Thanksgiving day. The proclamation follows:

It is well to live a rich, full life, and for its attainment, it is good now and then to pause and consider our circum-stances, to review our resources and to plan for their greater effectiveness.

In the productiveness of nature we are now rich in the fruits of the year. Commercial and industrial prosperity have returned. Peace and good will toward each other abide with us and we are working harmoniously together for the realization of our material, social and spiritual ideals.

It is fitting that we should give a day spiritual ideals.

It is fitting that we should give a day to the appreciation of what we have and to planning for the future.

Therefore by the authority of law and in harmony with the proclamation of the President of the United States, I, J. O. Davidson, governor of the state of Wisconsin, designate Thursday, November 25, as Thanksgiving day and recommend consin, designate Thursday, November 25, as Thanksgiving day and recommend that its usual customs be observed that its usual customs be observed throughout the state.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the state of Wisconsin to be affixed.

MURDERER CONFESSES AND SEN-TENCED WITHIN 15 MINUTES.

Kills Man Whom He Declares Robbed Him of $4-Goes to Waupun Prison for Life.

RACINE, Wis., Nov. 16 .- [Special.] It took just fifteen minutes for Jonas Hobarth to plead guilty today to the charge of stabbing to death James Sullivan in a saloon at Lakeside on July 25 and for Judge Beldon to sentence him to Waupun for life.

This is said to have been the quickest action of the kind on record and the first time a man has been sent up for ife in many years.

Hobarth said he did not desire an attorney but simply wanted to plead guilty and receivve his punishment. He claimed that Sullivan robbed him of four dollars and that his "head went broke" for three days and that he laid outside of the saloon with a knife for Sullivan and that when Sullivan came Children Play with Matches and One out, he killed him. Hobarth then threw away the knife and left the city but was afterwards captured at Fort Bend, Ind., and brought back. Sullivan was 45 years old and his re latives were never discovered. Hobarth

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 17 .-Schemes to defraud the farmer and the would-be farmer, meaning the city man, who is attracted to the country by glaring advertisements, are receiving the attention of the department of agriculture and it is probable that Secretary Wilson in his forthcoming annual report will sound a note of warning to the overcredulous Traets of almost pure sand left after the cutting of pine trees are being advertised as farm lands of the finest description; undrained swamps are described as priceless possessions, and all sorts of inducements are held out to attract purchasers of these alleged worthless lands. A favorite device is to set-many thousands of slips or cuttings of fruit trees on common -range lands incapable of producing anything better than sage brush, and another is to offer to the unwary, seeds or bulbs of some remarkable hybrid plant that will pro-duce thousands of dollars an acre.

The real character of these lands, agricultural department officials state, might easily be ascertained by inquiry of the state authorities. A few months ago the department of agriculture caused an investigation into the merits of a which was advertised to be a wonderful hybrid, combining the properties of the rarest fruits, but it was found that it had little or no value as a fruit product.

PEWTER STOVE LIDS MAKE EDITOR MOURN.

During Pioneer Moving the Heirlooms of Colonial Days Are Used to Replace Lost Covers.

NEW LONDON, Wis., Nov. 17 .-Special.]-Because a relative utilized precious pewter plates as stove lids, Publisher C. F. Carr of the New London Press is minus a goodly portion of what he regards a most valuable and interesting collection of heirlooms in the shape of pewter tableware handed down in his family from Gov. Welcott, first colonial executive of Connecticut.

Only the teapot, sugar bowl and pitch er remain of the once complete set. Carr's paternal grandmother was a Wolcott. While the pewter ware was in the possession of another member of the family, the lids of a cooking range were lost while moving from one locality to another during the pioneer days.

Stove lids were not to be procured except at a distance, so the pewter dishes were utilized. At that time they were regarded as of little value, but Mr. Carr mourps their destruction greatly, for the pewter plates did not long survive the strenuous existence as substitutes for stove lids.

EXPOSE FARM FRAUDS STOP! LOOK!

A TALK WITH THE SIGNALMAN

is Block signaling?"
"The block," said he, a length of track which, on double-track roads, has at movable arm; and on single-track lines one at each end. When you read that a line has every inch protected by this system, it means the entire line is

"Is it universally used?" "No. There's only one line from Chicago to New York thus protected, and of the total in the United States one-third is on the Union and Southern Pa-"Take three blocks at the beginning of a line with a train in each. Train in first must not move to second until divided into consecutive the train in second goes to third, and train in second must not go into third until third moves to fourth. "As number three goes into fourth, it tells train in two it has done so, and train in two of has done so, and train in two going into block three makes the movable arm say to train in one, 'Come on, I've gone into block two,'

"As an illustration, let's take three connecting rooms at your home, communicating without doors. Now attach on the right hand—going from the front to the back—of each door frame a movto the back—of each door frame a movable stick which can be pushed to right angles with the door frame, or pointed down about as you would point your arm at a spot on the floor two feet from you. Got that? Your stick represents the 'semaphore,' or arm. Now, then, the middle room is your private office. Your servant knows by the arm being at right angles she must not enter, and when angles she must not enter, and when you are not in there the stick will point downward at 60 degrees and she may usher a visitor in.
"All very simple you say; but on a busy morning you rush in your office and forget to change the arm to denote occupied. The servant ushers in the last person in the world you want there, just then—and the scheme is a disastrous failure. Then you improve so the stick left to itself will remain firmly at right angles. Can't forget that, you figure. Next thing you do is to forget to change the position of the stick. The employe sees signal 'occupied' and turns away an important client with disaster almost equal to that caused by admitting the ne she shouldn't.

"You change things so the stick will move from right angle to pointing to the floor, when you are not in your office. You can in walking from the front room into your office release the arm, which will go to horizontal; it will stay in that position as long as you are in there; and when you walk out of your office into the back room it will be pulled down to indicate you have vacated; and your employe may take the next

"In other words, you have changed this device from a possible human forgetful-ness to a positive mechanical perform-ance; you have an automatic signal. "Substitute the consecutive lengths of a railway for your rooms, and you have "Then, as I understand it, a sema-phore arm located at the entrance to a block set at right angle to the post is a signal to an approaching train to 'stop,' and when pointing diagonally toward the round means keep on going?"

"You call it automatic?"

"It is. Just as your stick is kept at 60 degrees incline, when your office is vacant, so is the semaphore arm on the line when a block is unoccupied. When train enters a block it affects the energy which is part of automatic sig-naling, so that the arm goes to and re-mains horizontal as long as the block is occupied."

"You build these signals so their normal position is stop and then you apply mai position is stop and then you apply a force that makes them show keep going. Why is that?"

"Because the trains must keep going. They have not only the problems of safety, but of hurry up. They work by minutes, and seconds. The first duty is safety. Having that cinched, the automatic hangs out the signal to keep tomatic hangs out the signal to keep moving. Only when something occurs does this scheme cause signal to go to stop position."

"What's the energy you referred to?"
"Electric current." "Where does it come from?" "Battery near each post." "How is it worked?" "The rails of each block are made just as if all one piece, by connecting all joints with wire. Then connecting the extreme ends forms a complete circuit. The current flows in complete circuit. The current flows in this circuit. Machinery made out of ex-perience, wheels, springs and things is moved by this current; and its move-ments either hold the arm down or permit it to stay horizontal.

"With no train in block, the current makes the mechanism pull the arm down and hold it there. When a train enters a block it destroys this combination. The wheels and axles combined with the rails make a shorter circuit. Electric current deserts the longer for the shorter way round. The energy that held the arm down is withdrawn, and up it swings to horizontal.

"Each block is independent of all other blocks. When the last wheels of a train leave it, the current resumes its flow, and the signal arm away back at the entrance is pulled down to proceed. Before the hind wheels have ceased doing what I've just stated, the front wheels of the locomotive have entered the next block and repeated what it did in the previous blocks."

"Isn't it a possible thing for a train to enter a single track at one end on to enter a single track at one end on the same instant another enters at the opposite end? What then?"
"Yes—but we have that taken care of.
On double track, a train through the signal talks only to the train behind.
On the single track it not only talks

"How about the single track?"

automatic arrangement is the same, only there is a signal at each end."

back, but also to one which may be coming from the opposite direction. This is done by the current overlapping from one block to the next. Before the entrance to a single track block is mached. trance to a single-track block is reached the train sets a stop signal at the far end of the block it is about to enter. And as it enters the block it also sets the entrance signal to stop, just as is done on double-track."

"How does an engineer know before he sees the home arm what it will signal?" "We put up another signal from a half mile to a mile from the entrance to a block—in the direction from which the train approaches. It is called 'Distant.' The one at the entrance is called the Home' signal. The distant indicates the position of home signal, see? "Is the distant distinguished from the home signal, to aid the engineer?"

"Yes, the 'Distant' is painted yellow, with black bar, and has a forked end: the 'Home' red, with white bar and square end." 'You said a while ago the stop signal is displayed only when something occurs. Anything but trains occur?" "Now you touch the most important feature of the outfit, and the principal reason why the arm is made so that when left to itself it will stay firmly at stop. As it is constructed it cannot show anything but stop, unless the entire combination of rails, wire, current, magnet, etc., are working perfectly. If a wire parts, a rail breaks, a battery falls, a switch point opens the slightest; then the combination fails, the arm is released and resumes horizontal position. gineer knows, you see, when signal says stop; there may be a train, an open switch, a break in the track or in the signaling apparatus."

"What is done at night, when the semaphore arm cannot be seen?"

"Lights of several colors are used on these same posts. These are seen through spectacles in the butt or weighted end of the arm, and are displayed and ob scured, according to the signal."

"Why the name spectacle?"
"That's what it is. The light is white or ordinary flame color, supplied by an eight-day lamp. It will burn eight days without replanishing, although all lamps are refilled every four or five days. When the home signal is in stop position, the engineer sees the flame through a red glass. That's stop, and it is used only in the home signals. If distant signal is at caution he sees through yellow glass. Yellow is used only in the distant signal. It tells the engineer it is the distant, and to be prepared to stop at the home signal. He may see through the home signal. He may see through green glass. That means proceed, and is used in both home and distant signal."

"What does a white light mean?"
"Well, it is so easy to have we don't dare use it. As a white light on a semaphore can be displayed by breaking spectacle glasses, you can understand why it is impossible in our scheme."
"How about places where two or more

"How about places where two or more lines cross at grade?" "The general principle, movements of arm by day, and colors of light at night, are the same, but being greatly complicated all signals are controlled by levers operated by men from a central station." The crossing and contiguous tracks are governed by the Interlocking system.
"When in perfect order and unoccu-

Does a train entering an locking region set the home signal stop, same as in the block system?"
"Yes. Interlocking plants extend from the crossing 3,190 feet out each track, where distant signals are placed. The home signals are 550 feet from crossing. Only the signalman can display proceed; but the train automatically sets the stop

"Now, my friend, I have given you all the principal features of both systems. There are numerous variations, each specially adapted to some peculiar conspecially adapted to some peculiar condition. In yards where there are many tracks and little room for posts, bridges are used. Where there are diverging tracks, two or more of these arms are placed on one post—and so on."

"Are all lines completely equipped in this manner?"

"No. There are about 11,000 miles. The only line thus protected every inch from Chicago to California is via the Northwestern. Union and Southern Pacific. One-third of the 11,000 miles of automatic signaling is on the Harriman lines—and the Northwestern has more miles of double-track automatic than any other railway."

TRANSPLANTING THE LAPPS. Dying Race Is Being Removed to Labrador to Prevent Extinction.

A commencement has been made in a most remarkable and long talked of en-terprise, says Stray Stories. This is nothing less than the transplanting of the Lapps from Lapland, where they are a dying race, to Labrador, where it is hoped they will flourish and increase.

Whether these hopes will be justified or not remains to be seen. Similar experiments in the past have seldom been wholly successful, and some have resulted disastrously.

The Doukhobors, for instance, who, in 1899, were transported, to the number of 8000 or 9000, from their homes in southern Russia to the Canadian northwest, were for a time in dire straits. They also behaved erratically, marching naked through the snow, and abandoning their flocks and herds to the wolves. They are now, however, reported to be settling down and doing better.

On the other hand, the attempt made some eighty years ago to transplant the Rockolnikis of the Don country to a new home that was supposed to have been found for them in eastern Turkestan resulted in one of the most ghastly trage

The vessel was saved by missionaries and natives, who dug a trench three miles long, through which they were able to get her into water of sufficient depth. Three prospectors who formed part of the prospectors who formed part of the schooner's crew on the voyage to Puget sound had spent forty-five days in an open sailboat, twenty-two feet long, traversing between St. Michaels and the Kushokwin river. When they reached the schooner they had been ten days without food other than fish, and were nearly overcome with fatigue, hunger and thirst. A small pack of furs and a spoonful of nuggets, not exceeding $10 in value, were the only reward of years of hardship and constant search for treasure.

About two weeks ago, the elder Mr. Ramsperger said, the family received a cablegram from the daughter, now a matron of 26, saying that her mother had disappeared and that she feared she had sailed from a Meditterranean port. She asked that an effort be made to locate her. The next heard was when the family received word from the im-

The fact that she has no money is a further good reason. Mrs. Ramsperger must prove she is an American citizen. Feet higher than the South Canadian. None of the tributaries of the No that his client is an American cifizen and entitled to land.

"This is not the fault of Mr. Rams-perger," said his lawyer. "He trusts sincerely that his wife will be deport-ed. He has offered to see that she is supplied with a comfortable passage back to Switzerland. He does not want to see her or have anything to do with her. When she went away from New York she told her husband she wanted to die in her old home. But she did not die, and now she is back again. Three years ago she said she wanted that villa on Lake Geneva, the finest one there. At great expense it was bought and presented to her."

Yet it cannot be that material is so very much dearer, for the some old record tells us that broad satin ribbon cost from 8 to 15 francs a yard, white crepe 30, and feathers varied between 45 and 100. It must be, therefore, that the work girls are better paid than they were, and in this case we can have nothng to say, unfortunately, however, high er wages always create new wants and there is the same story of poverty to be told all over again—Pall Mall Maga-

MRS. PANKHURST'S STYLE.

She Awakens Great Enthusiasm by Her Manner of Speaking.

In a recent address to 3000 men and women in Carnegie hall. New York, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the British suffragette, defended the stone-throwing, the ime-honored argument of the British voter. She gave a worthy and exultant description of the flight of "flinty messengers;" for every stone was carefully ied in a paper that carried a message t the political meeting from which the women were barred. She gloried in the battles—"battles as justifiable as any in the history of the world" and had added: "The only people I trouble to plead with are women. Where would your great American republic be if the men had not thrown tea into the Boston harbor? If the men had not taken up arms and destroyed human life and er in cream.

But the British suffragette sounded a deeper, more sinister note, when, after describing the arrests of militants for attempting to exercise the traditional right of petitioning the sovereign, she said "At the next session there will be a larger deputation than ever before. When women hear of a Liberal secretary wh orders women in jail to be held down, strapped down and forcibly fed for this offense, they want to go, too. They feel they, too, must do something for the cause. The deputation will include women honored in science, in medicine, in phil anthropy, through the length and breadth of the land. And there will not be one of them who is not ready to face the or deal of fasting to the edge of death or death if need be. We have always given them a loophole. The applause which had so often in-terrupted her before was wholly stilled as Mrs. Pankhurst made her declaration.
