Patti Wanted Her Money.

One of Adeline Patti's peculiarities was that she never sang a note until she had her salary either paid or so fully assured that there was no doubt as to her getting it. When she sang at the Academy of Music, in New York, at one time the manager was sorely put about to find money to pay her, but she always stoutly refused to sing until she had her salary.
 One night at a quarter past 8 her representative went to him and said: "Madam is all dressed except her shoes. She will put those on when she gets the money."
 The manager, half distracted, rushed about the house and succeeded in raising one-half the amount due the prima donna, which he hastily sent to her. But another quarter of an hour passed, and though the audience showed great impatience, there was no Patti, whereat the manager ran to her room.
 "My dear madam, why do you not go on? I have sent you half the money, and the rest will reach you before the end of the first act."
 Patti smiled dolefully, exhibited the tips of her feet and said: "You see, I have only one shoe on. I cannot go on the stage without the other. It would be quite impossible."
 Almost crazed, the manager rushed out and discovered that the other half of the money could be raised.—New York Tribune.

The March of the Caravan.

Perhaps the weirdest and most impressive of the many unwonted memories that the traveler carries away with him from travel in the east is the recollection of the camel caravans which he has encountered at night. Out of the black darkness is heard the distant boom of a heavy bell. Mournfully and with perfect regularity of iteration it sounds, gradually swelling nearer and louder and perhaps mingling with the tones of smaller bells signaling the rear guard of the same caravan. The big bell is the insignia and alarm of the leading camel alone. But, nearer and louder as the sound becomes, not another sound and not a visible object appears to accompany it. Suddenly and without the slightest warning there looms out of the darkness, like the apparition of a phantom ship, the form of the captain of the caravan. His spongy tread sounds softly on the smooth sand, and like a great string of linked ghouls the silent procession stalks by and is swallowed up in the night.—Persia and the Persian Question.

Dickens' Full Name.
 Charles Dickens was christened Charles John Huffam, or Huffham, as it is erroneously entered in the parish register. But when he became famous he dropped the last two Christian names, as he desired to be known as plain Charles Dickens, a wish respected on his tombstone in Westminster abbey, by his biographer and friend John Forster and by the scrupulously accurate Dictionary of National Biography.

Patronizing catalogues is a bad habit.

We wouldn't think for a moment of buying our stock by mail. We want to SEE what we are buying.
 Want to examine it critically. Want to judge of its worth actually, not from a picture in a book.
 We somehow think it would be more satisfactory for the public to follow that plan.
 Here is a jewelry stock all ready for your examination.
 Styles are identical with what the large city stores are showing, and prices are, if anything lower.

When Comets Terrified.
To Evelyn a comet was a very terrifying phenomenon. He notes the appearance of one on Jan. 12, 1880, which he describes in his diary as "a meteor of an obscure bright color, very much in shape like the blade of a sword." "What this may portend," he adds, "God only knows, but such another phenomenon I remember to have seen in 1640 about the trial of the great earle of Strafford, preceding our bloody rebellion. I pray God avert his judgements."

Marches and Marches.

"No, we haven't that," said the red cheeked girl who served as clerk, "but we have lots of others. Will one of Sousa's do?"

No Mystery This Time.
Mr. Popp—By gosh, for once in my life I know where my cuff links are. Mrs. P.—Where are they now? Mr. P.—The baby's swallowed 'em!—Cleveland Leader.
