Forecasts for February

A regular storm period, preceded by clear, cold weather from the 2nd to the 4th extends from the 4th to the 9th. The storm diagram shows that this period leads into a combined period of Mercury, Venus, Earth and Mars. From this time forward, February will bring many storms and much severe and disagreeable weather. General rain snow and sleet storms will mark the period 4th to 9th, with blizzards from the northwest and change to very cold after the New Moon the 9th. A seismic period covers the 6th to 12th, central on the 9th. A reactionary storm period on and touching the 11th, 12th and 13th, with Moon on the celestial equator and in perigee on the 12th, promises some very severe storms. Rain, thunder and fierce winds southward-snow, sleet and high gales northward.

A regular storm period covers the 15th to 20th, being central on the 17th. The Mercury disturbance this period, with Venus, Earth and Mars all in force. Destructive sleet must be expected at this and the previous period.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 22nd, 23rd and 24th, having the Full Moon on the 23rd. A crisis of storms and weather extremes may be expected at this reactionary period. Threatening, unsettled weather will be most natural all through the last half of February. Within three days of the 23rd, many severe winter storms the big transcontinental roads, the may reasonably be expected.

A regular storm period is in progress as February passes into March. The Moon passes over the celestial equator on the 26th, indicating rise of temperature, falling barometer and renewed storms of rain, wind and thunder on and near that date. These storms will reach Wisconsin, and the Soo line gives present Aldrich tariff was entheir culmination the first two or the city access to the markets in acted! three days in March. At the Crystal Theatre

The excellent vaudeville bill which has acted as a magnet on the patrons of the varieties during the week at the Crystal, and in which the Eight rollicking school boys and zirls are the principals, will be succeeded on Monday afternoon with seven more acts that will awaken the devotees of vaudeville to a new interest in the Cyrstal attractions. The bill for the coming week will have for its headliner Hee Haw Maud, the unconquerable mule with the ever ready heels that fly in all directions so unexpectedly, and which has become familiar to readers of the comic Sunday magazines. Maud will be conspicuous because she will exhibit some extraordinary changes of mind, especially when she is confronted by some determined daredevil with a mind made up to stay on her back long enough to win the reward offered by the management to any one who can successfully remain on her back during one circuit of the ring.

While the Kicking Mule may be a leading comedy attraction, patrons of the Crystal will find in Blossom Robinson and her Nell Brinkley Girls, assisted by Steve Lewis one of the genuine hits of the present vaudeville season. Miss Robinson and her company offer a novelty singing act and the coustumes worn will be of especial interest to women patrons of the theater. Merritt and Love will bring an eccentric singing and dancing act that will saver of originality and be garnished with comedy. Then will come Biliy Link, the old time minstrel mar with all his laugh producing devices, topical songs, parodies, jokes and witty sayings, all worked into an up-to-date monologue that will enliven the programme. An act that will demand the audiences attention will be the Roman balance ing act that will be presented by the King Brothers. Dressed in the garb of Nero, these skillful acrobats and gymnasts do some clever stunts, many of them of their own creation and not seen in Milwaukee before. These acts willbo interspersed by an illustrated voccal programme and will be followed by an interesting series of motion pictures.

New Comet Visible Here

The new Comet, which was discovered from Johannesberg, South Africa, was visible to the naked eye here last Sunday evening between 5:30 and 6 o'clock, and was noticed by many here. At that time it appeared above the western horizon, a little to the north of the point where the sun sets. The Comet was visible for about 20 minutes, when the head sank in the west horizon.

The new Comet, which is a com plete stranger to scientists is without a doubt the largest comet which has visited the solar system in over twenty years. It is believed to have just come from the sun and, if such is the case, is estimated to be about an equal dis tance from the earth. According to scientists it is apparently about eight to ten degrees in length or about as long as the distance between the points of the "big dipper" and is believed to be from 8. 000,000 to 15,000,000 miles in length.

CONGRESS IN SESSION.

The Senate did quick work on the 19th in disposing of the District of Columbia appropriation bill carrying about $10,000,000.

The Senate had a brief session on the 20th, the only incident of which was a speech by Senator Bradley of Kentucky, in which he defended his state and charged that the "tobacco trust" was responsible for the acts of violence which had been perpetrated by the so-called The Senate was not in session on the 21st.

Mr. Tillman in the Senate on the 24th criticised the administration for failing to prosecute suits against the Southern Pacific Railroad company for the recovery of public lands granted to the railroad under the condition that it should be sold in tracts of 160 acres at not more than $2.50 an acre.

The Senate on the 25th, passed the fortifications bill carrying $5,817,200 and devoted some time to the consideration of a new national forest in Montana, at took no action.

The House was engaged on the 19th in an extended debate on the Mann "white siave" bill. The House also passed a resolution calling on the secretary of the navy to report whether during the present fiscal year any powder has been bought from a trust.

Ignoring the protests of the Demo-eratic members, the Republican majority in the House on the 20th ratified their caucus nominees for the Ballinger-Pin-chot investigating committee, displacing Representative Rainey of Illinois, one of the Democratic selections, and naming in his stead Representative Lloyd of Missouri, who indicated his unwillingress to serve on the committee. Consideration of the urgent deficiency appropriation bill was resumed. The House passed the bill relieving William Boldenweck, assistant treasurer at Chicago, of responsibility for the $173,000 subtreasury theft, on the 21st. Mr. Lloyd of Missouri resigned from the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating commit-tee, Speaker Cannon sustaining his right to refuse to serve. Various private claim measures were considered.

The House on the 24th passed the urgent deficiency bill, after cutting off the $125,000 item for the immigration commission. The bill carries nearly $5,000,000, which is $1,000,000 under the treasoury estimates. The House named Mr. Graham, the Democratic caucus choice, to succeed Mr. Lloyd on the Ballinger-Pinchot committee.

CRUELTY TO CHICKENS.

Humane Society Asks Amendment to Protect Fowls.

That even civilized Americans have grown to regard chickens merely as table delicacies, rather than as living beings with feelings and some troubles of their own, is indicated by conditions found by the Anti-Cruelty society to exist in the shipping and marketing of the fowls at Chicago. Jammed in crates so shallow that they cannot stand erect, chickens often travel two or three days without food or water. Frequently their legs are bound together so that if they fall they are absolutely powerless to get on their feet again and are smothered to death by the struggling pack in the crate. The slats of the crates are sometimes nailed so close together that a chicken happening to get its head out cannot draw it in again, and is either crushed or decapitated when other crates are thrown against it. Elimination of such cruelty is sought by an amendment to the anti-cruelty ordinance, prepared by the Humane society. It was passed by the Chicago council after favorable recommendation by the judiciary committee, but was sent back to the committee by Mayor Busse for reconsideration, aft-er a protest had been registered by the commission men. The amendment is expected to come before the council again, without recommendation, at its next meeting.

Sad End of a Hero.

There was no greater hero in the work of rescue in the disaster of the Paris charity bazar fire in May, 1897, than a plumber named Leon Desjardins. Time after time he rushed through the flames and saved some woman who would have perished but for his brave aid, and although exhausted he did not desist until found that he was carrying a corpse. This hero has shared the fate of many another man who has rendered gallant service to his fellow creatures. Being out of work and in destitution, he drowned himself last week in the Seine and his body was identified at the morgue.—New York Sun.

MUCH SUFFERING AMONG POOR

Snow Storm, Bitter Cold and Hunger Causing Great Distress in Unfortunate Quarters.

SUBTERRANEAN STREAMS ALARM.

PARIS, Jan. 26 .- The floods here and throughout France have reached the dimension of a great national calamity. An official estimate of the losses up to today is $200,000,000, or one-fifth the war indemnity paid by France to Ger-

Great sections of the French capital are under water, six square miles of the historic Bois de Boulogne being sub-merged, while the River Seine sweeping over its banks has filled the subways, inundating the Palais Bourbon, the foreign office and scores of the historic monuments which lie along each side of the river. The many bridges which span the river are threatened with destruction as vast accumulations are banked against them by the terrific course of the onrushing flood. Special meetings of the Cabinet were held to consider means for coping with the havoc already wrought and the greater danger still impending. Military forces have been summoned from all parts of the country and the city has been divided into five military divisions for the purpose of administering the work of rescue and relief.

The Madeleine Sinks. In Paris the situation became more desperate momentarily as the day progressed. At 4 p. m. the Rue Royale between the Place de la Concorde and the Madeleine, the famous church edifice, began to sink, and was hurriedly roped off. Several big fissures have occurred in the Javel region. The boulevard adjoining the Pont de Bercy and the street in front of the Louvre museum also began to cave in. West street, at the west of the foreign office, is in imminent danger of collapse, being sustained only by the compressed air forced from the flooded subway, which runs underneath, Should this fall the entire street must cave in. The archives of the foreign office in ad-joining building appear safe.

Although the river Marne was re ported stationary at Fretesous to the east of Paris, the fluvial navigation department declares that the volume of water rushing down from the Yonne and other affluents of the Seine above leaves no hope that the high water mark will be reached before tomorrow morning, when the flood is expected to reach a maximum of 31 feet, or a height greater than was reported by the disastrous flood

At the same time the department admits confidentially that it is impossible to predict anything with accuracy, as the whole of France is still in the grip of an unprecedented storm. Rain, snow and hall are falling everywhere, the coasts are stormbound and ships are flee-ing to the harbors for refuge.

Snow Storm Raging.

A blinding snow storm raged in Paris today, and, coupled with the bitter cold, added to the general consternation, suffering and misery of the poor and home-less. In the face of a national disaster, France is giving a fine exhibition of pluck and solidarity. Political divisions have been buried and the government and people united to solve the problem of relief. Powerless to do anything to conjure the rage of the elements, those in authority have devoted themselves solely to the work of rescue and of providing shelter and food for the homeless.

Every resource of the government, in cluding the army, was employed. Boats were requisitioned at all parts, and soldiers and firemen worked tirelessly. Nevertheless, Premier Briand and the other ministers, who had not left their posts for forty-eight hours, were unable to re-spond to the appeals for help coming in from every direction. Provincial authorities have been instructed to act on their own initiative without awaiting orders from the central government.

Subterranean Streams Rise. The situation in Paris was not changed appreciably from Tuesday, except that more streets had been converted into yellow canals, more districts evacuated, a few more pavements had caved in, and traffic communication was completely paralyzed. One of the greatet causes of alarm continued to be the constant rise of the subterranean streams under the center of Paris, which flooded cellars and undermined the foundations of buildings. Whole streets have been roped off as un-All of the bridges over the Seine are still standing, but traffic over more than half of them has been closed.

Another serious phase of the situation is that Paris is becoming rapidly isolated, telegraph and telephone wires being "drowned or grounded." Wire communication is failing in all directions. It is impossible to communicate by telephon between the two banks of the Seine greatly crippled the work of relief and the dispatch of prompt succor. Only two railways to the north and west were operating directly into Paris.

Half of the arrondissements of Paris are affected directly and the rich as well as the poor are beginning to suffer. The wealthy Champs-Elysees district is without gas or electricity and some of the homes have no heat. Many of the residents are leaving their homes for the hotels which are crowded.

and two of them were thrown into the Seine at Charenton.

Details from the flooded regions of the provinces tell in harrowing monotony of broken dykes in the canals and of the inundation of villages. The immense losses in every branch of industry were reflected, on the Bourse, where a bad slump in industrials and railroad stocks

PRICES OF MEAT STILL DROPPING

AGITATION CAUSES DEAD MARKET IN NEW YORK WITH ACCOM-PANYING DECLINE.

FORCE OF PUBLIC SENTIMENT

Dealers Declare Beef Will Be Cheaper by End of Week Than It Has Been in Years.

GRAND JURY PROBE CONTINUES.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26 .- "The market is dead; agitation against high prices did first witness to give testimony. it." was the declaration today of a wholesale meat dealer.

The action of the local markets, both wholesale and retail, confirmed the dealer's assertion. Lamb dropped a cent the latter, after, considering them, wrote wholesale, pork loin two cents and some dealers in beef cut prices a cent or more a pound. . It was said today that whole sale dealers were stocked with thousands of unsold cuts of dressed beef with supplies still steadily flowing in. "Beef will be cheaper by the end of the week than it has been in years," said another wholesaler. "After that the price won't go lower for the supply will be cut down."

All this is laid to the widespread agi tation against the use of food product-considered to be over priced. Force of public sentiment is shown in the price drop, the dealers admit.

Grand jury investigation of food combines, particularly of the alleged milk trust, continued today. District Attor-ney Whitman continued to look into the cold storage situation, on complaints that the system is largely responsible for the ability of food dealers artificially to sustain prices in and out of

TO ENFORCE LIQUOR LAWS.

Indian Commissioner Gets Increased Appropriation for This Work.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 26 .-[Special.]-At the request of Commissioner Valentine of the Indian bureau, the committee on Indian affairs has inserted in the Indian appropriation bill an item increasing the fund for the suppression of liquor traffic among Indians from $50,000 to $70,000. This will enable the commissioner of Indian affairs ti largely augment the field officers assigned to this particular duty. Com-plaints have been received in Washing ton from various states that in enforcing the law state officers have not exercise proper discrimination with the result that injustice has been done in a num-ber of instances. With additional em-ployes to do the work, Commissioner Valentine believes that he will be in position to direct his subordinates to pro ceed with more care in working up cases against violators of the liquor laws.

FIREFLY'S ECONOMICAL LIGHT.

Scientists Hope to Find the Secret of This Method of Illumination. The light of the firefly is believed to Inventors do not yet despair of success in imitating the firefly's economical method of producing an illumination, says a writer in the Philadelphia Record. In the opinion of one eminent scientist, it is reall within the research. it is well within the range of possibility that he may see the transmission of light-producing energy entirely done away with, and a return made to some form of portable lamp consuming an ex-ceedingly small amount of material and producing a "cold," or firefly-like, light.

CHAPTER III.-Continued. "I am sure I am very sorry!" said Mrs. Matthieson, uttering the simple, conventional apology with a sweet charm peculiarly her own. "I am afraid I was not considering Mr. | all right." Langrishe's feelings," said Montresor bluntly, "but-" "Mr. Montresor and I," broke in Langrishe blandly, "have both suffered a disappointment today. We were both convinced that we held the clue to the Lavenham mystery, and nothing has come of my conviction or of his. So understand, we both feel small, and we would both sooner avoid the subject if we could." "It is a pity," Mrs. Matthieson said, with a scarely perceptible glance at her daughter, "that any of these mysteries should be so much discussed."

Denzilia Lavenham was not spoken of again during dinner, but when the mother and daughter were alone in the drawing room the girl exclaimed, with more excitement than she generally permitted herself to show-

"How very strange both those men were ! There must have been something

Mrs. Matthieson acquiesced in this very obvious view of the case.

Denzilia Lavenham." Mrs. Matthieson mused a moment. "It is true," she answered. "I think" -she looked away from her daughter as she spoke, and seemed absorbed in lowering the lamp-"he must have been in love with her." "I suppose so," said Agnes slowly. She sat silent for five minutes, and then rose and went to the piano.

In the meantime, the moment the dining room door had shut on the two men downstairs, Montressor turned to Langrishe.

"Look here," he said, "we must work this out together!" The other slightly raised his eyebrows, but said nothing.

"You are interested in finding her"— in his excitement Montresor never thought of specifying whom he meant by "her"—"and so am I. You think it confounded cheek in me to take any interest in the matter, but I can't help that. I am interested in it. We must work together. We will find her, and when we have found her-'When we have found her," said Langrishe, with a bitterness that outflavored his habitual cynicism, "she will break your heart, as she has broken mine."

He was desperately ashamed of this speech the moment he had uttered it. For a moment Montresor could not conceal his surprise, then he said lightly—
"I am willing to give her the chance."

"I never saw you before," the other went on with the same desperate and unwonted candor, "and I don't like you now I do see-but Fate has willed that we should be associated in this task." "Do you think old Caterhouse has had a hand in his niece's disappearance?" asked Aubrey boldly. "I should not like to think so," Langrishe answered slowly. "There is some-thing about him that reminds me strangely, attractively, of Miss Laven-ham herself. I-but this is no time to discuss the matter. Come back with me to my rooms tonight. And now let us join the ladies."

Agnes was still at the piano when they entered the drawing room, and Langrishe at once advanced to her side, leaving Montresor to make himself agreeable to Mrs. Matthieson. The girl smiled with a wistfulness of which she was herself unaware when Langrishe approached, but she went on playing without speaking. He leant his elbows on top of the piano and looked straight into her face.

"Miss Matthieson," he began, "I am going to confide something to you, and ask you to do something for me." "All right!" she said coolly. "Just to it. put back those photos. You are spoiling

He carelessly pushed back the heap of unmounted proofs that lay under his elbow, and went on-"You probably thought Mr. Montresor and me very odd just now about Miss Denzilia Lavenham." "I did think so," she returned composedly.

"It is true we did think we had a clue.

We both saw her at Marlingham last Agnes almost sprang off her chair. For a moment she forgot herself. "Poor girl!" she cried. "Then she was murdered last night." "No, no!" replied Langrishe, every feature contracting. "I do not believe it, Miss Matthieson. I could not bear to believe it." "I understand," Agnes answered in a very low voice. What I want you to do is to say nothing to any one of mine or Mon-tresor's interest in her."

"Mr. Montresor! Why on earth Agnes, stopping in her operations and looking at Langrishe.

"Poor fellow! He has only seen her once, and is already in the same case as myself."

Agnes thrust back a heap of music that lay on the turned-back plano lid with so rough and careless a movement that she knocked over a vase of flowers that stood on the far end of the piano. The water instantly flooded the top of the piano, and then, deluging the loose, unmounted photo proofs that lay there, fell thence in a rapid stream on the

"Was that my fault or yours?" asked Langrishe coolly as he stooped to pick on her photograph of Langrishe had been up the vase and to collect the flowers. as she collected them and brought them to the lamp. "Most of them were only

"It won't hurt them," said Montresor, who was himself something of an enthusiast in photography; "they will dry

Agnes seemed a little doubtful still and, taking up her flimsy lace-trimmed pocket-handkerchief, she began to wipe the sheets one by one. The others fell into a desultory conversation on other subjects in which she took no part; but suddenly they were amazed to hear a little sharp cry come from her lips and to see her start. "What is it?" they all exclaimed.

She lifted a face that for a moment wore a look of dismay ,almost of fear. "Ah," she said, looking from one to the other of the young men, "you have been playing a trick on me! It was a very silly trick!" she added.

"I have been playing no trick on you!" exclaimed Montresor in a tone of such ject. sincerity that it carried conviction with "What is the matter?"

But Agnes did not answer him. In stead she turned to Langrishe, and fixed her eyes with something like reproach on

"Then it was you!" she said to him. "I solemnly assure you, Miss Matthieson," he answered, "I have been playing no tricks on you. I cannot conceive what you are talking about."

"Look here!" returned Agnes in a tone that was almost awe-struck. She handed him the photograph she had been dry-

"I don't understand it," said Mrs. Matthieson when she had done so. She spoke with a puzzled but by no means an alarmed air.

Montresor was the last to examine the photo which had caused Agnes so much discomfiture. He also made an exclamation of astonishment. It was a photograph of Langrishe himself which you." Agnes had lately taken. But the circumstance that caused so much surprise to them all was that across it in large letters, also apparently photographed, were the words-

"Denzilia Lavenham lives, and her heart and hand and fortune are for him who finds her."

Montresor read the words aloud. "It is a photographer's trick!" he said contemptuously, and looked with frank pathetic. significance at Agnes. "I had no hand in it!" she said in re-ply to the look. "I do not understand

"You took this photograph?" he asked. "Certainly!"

"It has since been specially prepared o receive this sentence. It only out when the paper is wet; when it dries the words will disappear."

This indeed turned out to be the case. They discussed and rediscussed the mystery, but no one could throw any tracted Mr. Montresor's attention."

CHAPTER IV.

The two young men walked home to Langrishe's lodgings together.

They talked far into the night, but they arrived at no solution of the mystery of the photograph. They came to an agreement concerning their future line of action. Langrishe, they decided, should undertake the official part of the quest for Miss Lavenham. He alone should appear publicly as one who was interested in finding her. He should interview detectives and be responsible for advertisements. He had suddenly become as eager to show himself Miss Lavenham's champion as he had hitherto been to conceal the fact of his acquaintance with her.

This fact struck Montresor, and with his usual frankness he made allusion

"I don't understand," he said, as he lit his fifth pipe, "why you have been so inactive all these months."

"I have, in point of fact, not been in-active," Langrishe replied. After a mo-ment's pause he added, "But what I have done I have preferred to do very quietly." He paused again, and then went on still more deliberately, "I had reason to believe that Miss Lavenham, were she still living, would not wish-I did not care to proclaim myself as one so much interested in her. If she were dead"-he seemed to control a shudder

-"what matter?" "And now you don't mind proclaiming your interest in her?" Montresor asked with simple straightforwardness.

But Landrishe was not disconcerted. "Since the incident of last night and that of the night before," he replied, still with the same slow deliberation, "I have made up my mind to cast aside all scruples."

"I understand," answered Montresor with a nod. But, as Langrishe very well knew, he did not understand. He was should he be interested in her?" asked instinctively aware that the American did not like him, and that he would be an active rival should Denzilia Layenham ever again appear in the flesh before them, but, though he disliked him accordingly, he did not in the least realize that it was nothing but Langrishe's pure and, in the circumstances, unreasonable jealousy of himself that had made him come forward as a former acquaintance of Denzilia's. When Montresor left the American's rooms that night he went home to study photography instead of going to bed, and the next day he betook himself once more to Mrs. Matthieson's house in order to explain to Agnes how the trick effected. Mrs. Matthieson was out, the servant said in answer to his first inquiry. Miss Matthieson was in, but the man did not know if she would see any one. She the request that Mr. Montresor would walk upstairs to Miss Matthieson's sitting room.

Agnes had taken an immense fancy to the miniature painter, who, besides being a very pretty girl, was clever and cultured, with a curiously self-possessed manner, and, despite the extreme plainness of her attire, by no means the air of one who worked hard for her living. This circumstance was soon explained. She admitted frankly that she had not been brought up with the idea that she would have to earn her own bread.

It was Miss Anselm's own personality, however, and not her family history, that interested Agnes; and she guessed that the girl's stipulation that she should never be brought into contact with any of the Matthieson's visitors proceeded from a shyness in possibly meeting, in her altered circumstances, those whom she had known in the days of her prosperity.

She had awaited Miss Anselm's coming this morning with unusual impatience. She was feverishly anxious to talk over the mysterious photograph and Denzilia Lavenham with one who was not likely to read too correctly her private reasons for her interest in the sub-

Miss Anselm arrived punctually. Agnes waited until the lesson was in full swing, and the teacher had begun the portrait of the pupil with which she filled up her spare moments. Then she

Agnes went on to relate the incidents

"Your hair is certainly a most difficult color to paint," said Miss Anselm, glancing from the photograph before her to Miss Matthieson's head. "Yes, it was funny. But I should think that the American man, Mr. Montresor-"Mr. Langrishe is the American," put

"Ah!" said Miss Anselm. She sat for a moment as if musing deeply; then she resumed her work, and declined to discuss the Lavenham mystery any more. But Agnes soon declared she could not paint any more, and suggested that the lesson should come to an end, and that they should have some tea.

The footman who answered the bell brought the intelligence that Mr. Montresor was downstairs and was antions to see Miss Matthieson on particular sion, or at least to the hope, that he had come to tell her something about Denzilia Lavenham. She turned eagerly to Miss Anselm.

"It is one of the men we have been talking of. He is not like an ordinary visitor. Do you mind his coming up for this once? I am sure he has come to tell me something about the photo. It is a breach of our contract, but I am sure you would like to hear what he has got to say."

Miss Anselm shook her head and smiled. "It is a breach of the contract," she said seriously. "But it is true I would like to hear the end of this adventure. Yes, let him come up. Only please remember I am in earnest about not wishing to see strangers." "I know, I know!" replied Agnes apologetically. "I won't do it again. In fact, if you really very much dislike-(To Be Continued.)

The Doctor's Mistake.

A certain good natured doctor, whose doorbell rang late on Christmas eve, supposing that the summons was from some one who needed his services, rose from bed, put on his dressing gown, and went to the door. A man stood there, holding a huge paper package, from which buds and leaves were protruding. "Is Miss Caroline Ward in?" he asked. "She has retired," returned the doctor. Miss Caroline Ward was his cook.

"I'm sorry, sir, to call so late. Something went wrong with the car I was in.
I'll leave this for her, sir, if you will kindly give it to her in the morning." "Certainly," said the doctor. He took the flowers into the kitchen and placed a dishpan in the sink, drew a few inches of water in it, carefully pressed the package into the water and went back to bed, thinking how pleased the cook would be. The next morning he found the cook holding a dripping bundle. She was angry. "If I had the pussons wot did this," said she, "I'd empty the kettle on 'em.

I'd let 'em see if they could put the hat what my young man bought me in a dishpan, I would! The doctor left the kitchen somewhat

LIMITED TRAIN'S NARROW ESCAPE FROM WRECK

IWENTIETH CENTURY ENGINE TURNS OVER AND PLUNGES 300 FEET ON BACK.

TWO EMPLOYES ARE KILLED.

Coaches Bound from Track, but Remain in Upright Position When Stopped.

MANY PASSENGERS ARE INJURED.

UTICA, N. Y., Jan. 25 .- The engine on the New York Central Twentieth Century limited, eastbound, turned completely over about a quarter of a mile west of St. Johnsville today. It slid 300 feet before it stopped. Under the engine pits, Fireman Melvin J. Handville of Syracuse was crushed beyond recogni-tion. The engineer, John Scanlon of Fort Hunter attempted to leap when the engine left the rails, but he was caught between the engine and tender and cut and crushed in a terrible manner. None of the coaches left the track, though the trucks of several of them are derailed. Most of the passengers were thrown from their berths and some were slightly injured. Throws Crossover Switch.

There is a signal tower about a quarter of a mile west of the St. Johnsville station and from this the switches and crossovers are controlled. For some reason not yet explained, it was necessary for the operators to shift the train from track No. 1 to track No. 2, and he had thrown the switch for the crossover and set the signals. The supposition is that the signal cautioning Engineer Scanlon to slow down was not seen by him in time to bring his train under full control, and when the ocomotive struck the crossover the ponderous machine bounded into the air, turned upon its side in a twinkling and hen as it struck one of the rails, rolled upon its back and plowed ahead through the rails, ties and ballest at least 300

Coaches Leave Track. The sudden twist wrenched loose the oupling between the engine and baggage and mail car and this saved the train from the ditch. The heavy coaches bounded from the track in front, but they fell back right side up and remained in an upright position. The passengers were mostly all asleep and some of theme were scarcely disturbed.

No blame appears to be attached to the tower man, Joseph Battie, for the accient, as he had set the signals in proper time. The engineer, who apparently mis-judged the speed of his train, is dead. All the coaches left the rails and they stand at an angle, reaching from track No. 1 to track No. 4. The passengers have been sent forward on other trains.

Efforts Are Being Made to Smoke Out Reported Manager of Collapsed Pool of Stock

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.-Efforts to smoke out James R. Keene, the reported manager of the recently collapsed pool in Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron stock, were under way today on the part of members in the pool and others af-fected by the big rise and disastrous slump last week.

The purported tax of the pool agreement included a specific stipulation that holders of 60 per cent. of the certificates subscribed for by the pool had the right to call for an accounting. Today it was reported that lawyers representing holders of the requisite number of shares had the necessary signatures, and would at once serve the request upon Mr.

Mr. Keene refuses to discuss the subject except to reiterate that he knows nothing of the pool.

Divorced Wife of Millionaire Has Furs and Millinery Suit Decided Against Her.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.-Katherine Clemons Gould will have to pay $3165 for the furs and millinery she purchased from one firm, although she asserted that the purchases were made before her sep-aration, and that Howard Gould should pay the bill. A supreme court jury today found a verdict against Mrs. Gould for the entire amount claimed, with interest. Mrs. Gould receives $30,000 alimony a year.

About $1500 must be raised by May 1.

AIRSHIP FOR FAIR.

An airship will be among the feature attractions at the annual county fair of the Fond du Lac Agricultural society to be held on August 31 to September 2 next fall. This was decided at the meeting of the board of managers held Friday afternoon in the office of Secretary E. W. Phelps. The managers also decided to continue the night attractions at the fair and to make a few minor improvements on the grounds. There is some talk of having a picnic and race programme at the fair grounds on July 4. but no definite action was taken at the meeting.

A Methodical Being.

A man of method who attended to everything on schedule time, whether it was work or recreation, had the fortune to fall in love when he had passed the age of forty. The mistress instinct does not come into play, and of his heart put up with his oddities. It is almost impossible to bring the The Government Pays Railway Mail He had regular nights for calling upon her, regular hours for coming and going, regular theater and club nights, etc. In fact, she looked upon his regularity as something admirable.

Things had been going on in this way for two years, and finally the great crisis came. They were to be married. The day was fixed, the wedding clothes were made, the guests invited, and the minister was engaged.

At the appointed time they were all assembled. The bride was dressed, the wedding presents were displayed, but the bridegroom came not. The bride wept and fainted, but it did no good. Finally some friends of the delinquent groom hurried away to see if he could be found. He could. He was at home in his room, reading as unconcernedly as if he had never contemplated getting married.

"What is the matter? Why don't you come to your wedding?" shouted his friends

"How do you account for that?" "Well, sometimes they ran second 'cos they'd overmuch weight to carry, sometimes they ran second 'cos the jockey had backed another and wantthey ran second 'cos the judge would is tender." A Euchre party was given at the have 'em there! Sometimes, again, Responsive.

There was at least one responsive hearer in the crowded little church in an English village, and it happened

Guests had arrived unexpectedly at the country parsonage on Sunday

The weekly supply of butter had run short, so the hospitable host dispatched old Joe, the handy man, to his neighbor, Mr. Paul, whose dairy always boasted a surplus. The parson proceeded to church with his well prepared sermon on some of the deep sayings of the great apostle and was well under way with it when old Joe, returning empty handed, concluded he would quietly slip in and hear his master preach.

Just as he entered the minister leaned over the pulpit, stretched out his hand with a most impressive interrogation in voice and manner and called out, "And what did Paul say?" Distinctly sounded through the church old Joe's reply:

"He say, marster, he ain't going to let you have no more butter till you pay for the last you got."

The Tomb of Genghis Khan. Genght Khan, the Mongol chief, in the thirteenth century proved himself one of the world's greatest warriors. His tomb, exists at Edchen Koro and is described in Count de Lesdain's "From Pekin to Sikkim:" "Two small tents, one behind the other and connected by a very low inner door made of wornout felt and admitting through the 'monument' destined to perpetuate the renown of the greatest conqueror the world has known. Sir James Ross in the course of his travels noted a curious fact with regard to the penguin-namely, the habit of swallowing stones. In one specimen he found ten pounds weight of quartz, granite and trap. Other animals, reptiles, fishes and mammals exhibit the same strange fancy. In a paper contributed to the proceedings of the Bristol Naturalists' society W. H. Wicks has collected a number of facts connected with such stomach stones. The fact noted by Mr. Wicks that the pebbles are usually white quartz is interesting, but does not appear to throw any light on the strange habit.-London Globe.

TALK BUSINESS NEEDS OF NATION

NATIONAL BOARD OF TRADE OPENS FORTIETH ANNUAL MEETING IN WASHINGTON.

POSTAL REFORM IS URGED.

Resolutions Favoring Central Bank Will Be Offered and Currency Changes Are Favored.

TO SUGGEST TARIFF COMMISSION.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 25 .-Sixty chambers of commerce and boards of trade, voicing the business needs of the nation from as many cities, were represented in the fortieth annual meeting of the National Board of Trade, which began its sessions here today.

Concerted action on the live issues of the day will be taken and expressions of the national body indicative of the senti-ment of business interests will be given in the form of resolutions proposing some legislation, favoring some now proposed and asking for the repeal of some now

Twelve of the largest bodies come with strong resolutions calling unequivocally for a ship subsidy to promote an American merchant marine. Twelve others call for a forward march on harbor and river improvements. Others, while divided somewhat in opinion of method, stand for conservation of the national resources of forests, water power and minerals.

Postal Reforms Needed.

Postal reform is strongly urged, some opposing a parcels post, others in favor of one with limited extent, some organizations call for a readjustment of the rates of postage and postal savings banks are endorsed with some conditions. Resolutions favoring the creation of a central bank will be offered and currency reform will be urged.

Repeal of the federal corporation tax passed at the last session of Congress will be urged, amendments to the Sherman anti-trust law which will preserve its intent and define its limitations and the creation of a permanent non-partisan tariff commission will be suggested.

Other National Questions. A great many other national questions will be brought before the board for action, among them the encouragement of desirable immigration, recommendations for uniformity of business laws in the states where a contrariety exists, the federal inspection of grain, commercial education and preservation of the public

DAYTON, O., Jan. 25 .- Aeroplaning to the north pole was pronounced a real Is Confident Suit Now Pending in Peary in a discussion here Monday night with Wilbur and Orville Wright, who exhibited a significant interest in the problem. Mr. Peary met the Wright brothers after delivering a lecture here.
Orville asked the exployer about polar possibilities. The necessities, as seen from the Wrights' point of view, he explained, were surfaces that would permit a machine to start in a flight, alight and start again.

"From what I have seen, I should feel safe in venturing the speculation that an aeroplane would have no trouble getting started," replied Mr. Peary. Once in flight, it could find enough space to alight and start again at any of its journey until the pole had been reached."

The Wrights then quizzed him about the weight and volume of necessary sup-

BERLIN, Jan. 25 .- The old idea of reaching the north pole by submarine as so graphically set forth in Jules Verne's story, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," has been revived by the announcement that Dr. Anschnetz Kemp, the inventor, has resolved to make the attempt. It is stated he has been working for a decade upon the project, and he will build a submarine of his own design.

GARFIELD IN PROTEST

Former Secretary of Interior Opposes Bill Submitted by Present Secretary, Mr. Ballinger.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 25 .-Former Secretary of the Interior Garfield today appeared before the Senate committee on public lands and opposed the bill submitted by the present secre-tary, Mr. Ballinger, authorizing the secretary to withdraw public lands from settlement, pending recommendation to Congrees for legislation in reference to them. Mr. Garfield declared that legislation of this character was not needed as the President had authority under existing law to withdraw public lands believed to contain valuable timber or minerals, or to be valuable for the development of power. He took up the position that as this power was vested in the President there was no good reason for extending the right to the secretary of the interior.

GAIN FOR UNIONISTS.

Take Sixteen Out of Twenty-five Seats Contested in British Elections of Monday.

LONDON, Jan. 25 .- Twenty-five results announced today complete the returns from Monday's balloting for members of Parliament. Of the seats decid ed, the Unionists take 16, the Liberals 5. the Nationalists 3, and the Laborites
1. The standing of the parties as known this afternoon is: Government coalition-Liberals, 207:

Irish Nationalists, 72; Laborites, 35. Opposition—Unionists, 237. The Unionists have a monopoly of gains, placing to their credit 8 out of the 25 returns of Monday.

Epidemie of Itch in Welsh Village. "In Dowlais, South Wales, about fifteen years ago, families were stricken wholesale by a disease known as the itch. Believe me, it is the most terrible disease of its kind that I know of, as it itches all through your body and makes your life an inferno. Sleep is out of the question and you feel as if a million mosquitoes were attacking you at the same time. I knew a dozen families that were so affected.

"The doctors did their best, but their remedies were of no avail whatever. Then the families tried a druggist who was noted far and wide for his remarkable cures. People came to him from all parts of the country for treatment, but his medicine made matters still worse; as a last resort they were advised by a friend to use the Cuticura Remedies. I am glad to tell you that after a few days' treatment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, the effect was wonderful and the result was a perfect cure in all cases.

Description of a Contest in Which the Little Animal Came Off Victor.

I had the good fortune this evening to ritness a fight between a four-foot cobra

On first catching sight of the cobra rikki tik (as Rudyard Kipling calls the Indian mongoose) quietly smelt its tail and then hung around awaiting events with curiosity, but he had not long to wait, for the cobra spread its hood, hissed out its death sentence and prepared to dart from its coil at its natural

WOMEN OF THE BEDE HOUSE.

Changed in 300 Years.

The bede house (which means praying ouse) was founded in the reign of James I. by Henry Howard, the eccentric Earl of Northampton, and the Howard badge is still worn by the inmates on Sundays and holidays. Nor is this the most curious detail of their attire, for the old ladies are garbed now just as they were in the first days of the foundation—blue gowns, scarlet cloaks and high peaked hats, like those worn by Welsh

At Rising then, more than at any place I know, we can fancy ourselves back in early Stuart days, having around us these "bedes women" dressed in the identical costumes of 300 years ago. Nothing has been changed in the fashion of their clothes, nor in the dear little rooms they inhabit. they inhabit. As for the inmates them-selves, surely they are pretty much the selves, surely they are pretty much the same as were those first fortunate old creatures who profited by Henry Howard's charity and offered up their prayers for his benefit. For in this world of change nothing changes so little as the human heart, and the kinsman of humanity runs through every age. The rules under which admittance is obtained ere drawn up by the founder.

Every applicant must prove herself to be of "an honest life and conversation, religious, grave and discreet, able to read (if such an one may be had), a to read (if such an one may be had), a single woman, her place to be void upon marriage, to be 50 years of age at least, no common beggar, scold, haunter of taverns, inns or alchouses." Once in. she must hear prayers read by the governess the control of the property of must hear prayers read by the governess twice a day and be very regular in her attendance at church. Furthermore, she must never be found guilty of atheism, heresy, blasphemy, neglect of duty or misbehavior in the performance of it, or she will be expelled, sent out into the cold world again, far from that haven f peace and rest.

But I am quite sure that none of the But I am quite sure that none of the old ladies would ever do anything to merit dismissai; they live apparently in the most delightful bonds of sisterly love. the most delightin bonds of sisterly love, taking any donations you may give them for the maintenance of a donkey and small carriage, in which the infirm inmates may take an airing.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The "Death Watch."

weak and irregular breathing, and while she listened a weird ticking commenced Five gentle but distinct taps—a pausefive more taps, but this time from a dai ferent direction; then a dead silence. Th old and superstitious nurse hopeless. raised her hands and shook her head All now was of no avail. It was a 'warning!' She had heard the 'death watch.
"Two hours later the patient died."

Such a passage as this was common enough in the pages of novels not very many years ago. In earlier days the "death watch" was heard much more frequently than now indeed, was quite a popular terror amon; the superstitious and ignorant, who be lieved in "omens," "warnings," and such presages of future events. However, like most of the superstitious fancies of by gone days, this supposed prophetic and mysterious "augury," when investigated with ordinary scientific methods of observation, proves to be entirely fallacious and a delusion.

The "death watch" that produces the weird tickings formerly so much feared is nothing more or less than a mischiev ous and destructive little beetle madly in love and very desirous of finding its mate. Thus is the fallacy of our an-cestors regarding this mystery dispelled.

A CONVICT-NO MORE.

The Story of a Kansas Prisoner Released on Parole.

Recently the 800 inmates of the Kan sas penitentiary bade a veteran comrade farewell. It was John Rodgers, the oldest in point of service among them, who "Well, Charley, the mare is not est in point of service among them, who worth it," said the governor, "but I years. It was a holiday and the convicts had the freedom of the yard to talk and enjoy themselves. Rodgers was released on a governor's parole, not a pardon. He had not broken the prison rules in a quarter of a century, and all the officials from the warden down have the same confidence that the old man will make good and never have to come back. He left the prison meek and submissive, for twenty-seven years under the close discipline of penitentiary guards had stamped out nearly all his individuality and spirit.

The crime for which Rodgers was committed in the spring of 1880. He was courting a girl when her stepfather, Littleton Wallace, objected, and demanded that the attentions cease. The mother of the girl favored Rodgers as a suitor for her child, and domestic troubles followed. Finally Rodgers, the mother and the girl left Wallace, who lived on a farm. Rodgers later on went back to the farm and a quarrel followed, and Wallace was shot by Rodgers, who claimed that he acted in self-defense, and that Wallace was trying to strike him with a cane. Rodgers was tried and sentenced to be hung. Under the old Kansas law, repealed two years ago, a prisoner sentenced to death was to be brought to the penitentiary, and remain one year and then to be executed at any time aft er when the governor fixed the date. None were hung since 1873, as no governor ever set a date after a prisoner started serving time in the penitentiary At one time there were sixty-five "hang" or death convicts in the Kansas peniter

The Great Samson Procession. In Langau there is a picturesque little village called Tamsweg. Through it runs a mountain stream, the cottages are built of bright brown wood, the roofs tiled with wood also, the windows gay with flowers. Here Samson is the pet hero and forms the central figure at local fetes and gatherings. A Samson procession has been held on All Souls' day for centuries past, and it attracts many sightseers from the neighborhood.

Samson is a figure about 20 feet high who therefore has no difficulty in peep-ing in at the windows of the upper stories of the houses. His chubby red face smiles from beneath a silver helmet, and he wears light yellow breeches and a pale blue coat. In one hand is a lance, and in the other he clutches the jawbone of an ass. A long iron rod runs up the body and is fastened to the head, which moves from side to side in a primitive

In Samson's hollow body walks a man. who manages to grope his way by peering through holes bored in the breeches. He must, however, be both strong and adroit; for the giant is heavy to tow about, and a fall might almost mean an-nihilation. A number of citizens precede him as bodyguard, and he is flanked on either side by his "maids of honor," two grotesque dwarfs with monstrious heads He visits the town hall and the church, returning to the market place where the band begins. Directly he hears the sound of a national dance he begins pathertically, with blundering footsteps, to tread a measure, while the two dwarfs tumble over each other in their endeavor to dance a waltz. It is said that Samson belongs by right to the neighboring vil-lage of Wolting, which was granted a "Samson privilege" on account of the bravery of its inhabitants in the defense of a fortress nearby, but he has now be come thoroughly acclimatized at Tams Another village used to carry Go liath in procession, accompanied by David, and when the show was over there would be a stone-slinging combat.—

Ireland's Oldest Inhabited Stronghold.

Malahide castle, on the sea coast about ten miles north of Dublin, it is claimed, is the oldest inhabited strong hold in Ireland. A most picturesque old place, it has extensive encirclia woods, which make it an ideal residence in either winter or summer, while the English village adjoining a nobleman's well cared for estate. In the great hall at Malahide is a suit of armor with a gash in the side about which a romantic story is told. The wearer of this armor had just been married in Malahide church when there came a sudden call to arms, and though the bridegroom's side was successful, he himself fell in the fray. His bride-"maid, wife and widow" in one day-soon, however, consoled herself, for she was married twice after that tragic day, the first time six months afterward. By her second husband she had a son, Thomas ralbot, whom Edward IV. appointed lord admiral of Malahide and the seas adjoining, an hereditary honor borne by successive heads of the family down to he present Lord Talbot de Malahide This lady's third husband was John Cornwalshe, chief baron to Henry VI., and, dying when over 80, she was buried t Malahide, where her tomb may yet

Rabies in Cattle

Rabies is a germ disease, usually attacking dogs but all warm blooded animals, including man, susceptible to the malady, which is always communicated through bites from a preceeding case.

The disease first manifests itself in cattle by a loss of appetite, a rumination and stopping of the secretion of milk, great restlessness, anxiety, manifestation of fear, in fact the entire disposition of the animal is changed.

This stage is followed in a day or two by the stage of excitement and madness which is indicated by increased restlessness, bellowing in a peculiar manner, owing to the partial paralysis of the throat, violent bunting, pawing the ground, and a great tendency to attack other animals, although the desire is not so marked in cattle as in other
