PLACE IN SENATE

Washington Democrats Favor Badger as Nominee of the Democrats

Charles H. Weisse, of Sheboygan Falls, congressman from the Sixth congressional district, is being boomed for United States senator from Milwaukee according to a Washington dispatch.

While Weisse declares he is not candidate at the present time for the office of senator, it is whispered in Washington circles that he will decide to enter the race and permit his name to appear on the official ballot of the democratic party at the primary election in September. Mr. Weisse is quoted as saying that he believes the democrats have a chance to control the senatorial situation in the next legislature.

He thinks that the so-called 20 per cent law enacted by the Wisconsin legislature last winter will have a salutory effect or influence in keeping in democratic ranks many members of the said party who heretofore have voted the repblican ticket at the primaries.

Mr. Weisse has refused to discuss his political plans, but admits that many of his friends in Wisconsin have been urging him to enter the race for the senatorship. If he decides not to become a candidate, he may retire from active politics at the close of his present term in congress.

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 9.-[Special.] —The newspaper campaign for the relection of Robert M. La Follette to the United States Senate was inaugurated here today by the organization of the League of Progressive Republican Newspapers of Wisconsin. In addition to this, steps leading to the organization of a national movement, corresponding to that existing in Wisconsin and acting under the leadership of Senator La Wollday. Belletta Havemeyer and James Watson Webb were married in St. Batholomew's church in New York Friday, before a notable gathering of New York and Newport society. The bride is a daughter of the late Henry O. Havemeyer. Mr. Webb is a son of W. Seward Webb and a grandson of the late William H. Vanderbilt. Mr. and Mrs. Webb will spend their home on abroad and will make their home on their return in Chicago. The newspaper campaign for the relette, were taken. In detail, this plan to nationalize the La Follette movement includes co-operation with all so-called Progressive forces in the United States. A conference will be arranged at an early date which will result in a meeting of Progressives at Washington and the organization of a nation-wide association to promulgate the political views upon which the movement in Wisconsin is based. This plan comes as the suggestion of a number of editors of magazines and the state organization perfected during the past two days at the meeting held here, is only part of the general movement which will be inaugurated throughout the country generally. Y., for the arrest and convic tion of the murderer of the Olney brothers and little Alice Ingerick, near Middle town, October 6, 1905, has been awarded by Justice Mills of the supreme court to George C. Rogers, a young man of Middletown. Charles H. Rogers of that city was arrested in California for the crime, brought back and tried, convicted and executed at Sing Sing. The whereabouts of the murderer was learned through a letter he wrote from Madeira, Cal., to his brother, George Rogers, and received by George C. Rogers, who was not a relative. The young man reported to policy headquarters, and the capture of the murderer followed. There were other claimants, but Justice Mills held that Rogers' information led to the arrest. The young man will use the money to se cure a college education.

EX-VICE PRESIDENT ADDRESSES METHODISTS AND VATICAN CALL IS CANCELED.

GUEST AT AMERICAN COLLEGE.

ROME, Feb. 7 .- Charles Warren Fairbanks, former vice president of the United States, prefers addressing an American Methodist congregation to having an audience with Pope Pius X. He made this preference known when the Vatican sent him notice that if he persisted in speaking to the American Methodists here he would have to forego the audience, which had been appointed

The incident which finally operated to prevent Mr. Fairbanks' reception at the Vatican occurred after a previous delicate situation had been adjusted by the use of much tact. Mr. Fairbanks, in addition to his desire to be received by the Pope, wished to pay his respects to the King of Italy. Situations similar to this are not infrequent and extreme care has to be exercised by those upon whom the task of arranging the audi-ences falls, in order to avoid offending the susceptibilities on either side.

Vatican Cancels Audience.

By a tactful arrangement, Mr. Fairbanks' audience with King Victor Emmanuel was fixed for Saturday, and that with the Pope for today, but when everything seemed satisfactorily planned, the Vatican suddenly announced that it would be impossible for his holiness to receive the former vice president if he carried out his announced intention to speak in the American Methodist church here, because the Methodists had been active in proselyting among the Catho-

Mr. Fairbanks gave a toast to the Christian church, making no distinction of denomination. He declared that the Catholic church had accomplished great things for God and humanity, while past prejudices against the Catholics had entirely disappeared for they were ever at the front when the integrity of the coun-try needed to be defended or its dignity to be upheld.

Makes No Distinction.

At the American Methodist church, Mr. Fairbanks' address acquired exceptional importance because of the incident with the Vatican, and it is looked upon as his final answer to the conditions imposed upon him relative to his audience with the Pope. During the course of this address he said:

"It is impossible to emphasize too strongly the good work the Christian church is doing in all lands and amongst all nationalities. It is gratifying that the American churches established in all countries are asserting a wider influence. The agitation going on in the political, social and economic world is due to Christianity breaking down the prejudices and lifting mankind to a higher plane. PLAY IS A SENSATION, Rostand's "Chanticleer," a Poem of Lyric Beauty, Unsurpassed and Easily His Masterpiece.

PARIS, Feb. 7.-Rostand's "Chanticleer," which had its dress rehearsal Sunday night at the Porte St. Martin theater, is easily the leading sensation of the hour in Paris.

Today's papers printed more about the performance than of the details of the misery and havoc wrought by the recent flood. The critics are unanimous that as a poem of lyric beauty "Chanticleer" is unsurpassed and many pronounce it Rostand's masterpiece. All pay tributes to the marvelous ingenuity with which the author depicts the play of human weakness in "the barnyard romance" manifest doubt that it will prove a popular dramatic success.

BODY DIES, BUT MIND LIVES ON

DR. CARL E. GUTHE, PROFESSOR OF PHYSICS AT MICHIGAN UNIVER-SITY, DEFINES SOUL.

PERSONALITY GROWS IN DEATH

Mgr. Kennedy, rector of the American college, gave a dinner at noon in honor of Mr. Fairbanks. The hall was decoand Gives Reasons.

BARS THEOLOGY AND PHILOSOPHY.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 9 .- "If you claim that personality is both matter and mind, both physical energy and consciousness, are we not completely de-stroyed when death claims our bodies?" is the question Dr. Carl E. Guthe, professor of physics, answered in lecturing to students of the University of Michigan on the probability of life after death without reference to a religious

Dr. Guthe said: theory. "Our life is a constant growth of the human intellect, closely connected with the development of the body. But we know that there is a continuous inter-change of cells, decaying and forming, and yet, though the living tissues may, in the course of time, be entirely re-newed, the individual continues to exist; it remains one and the same. But even the matter and energy which has been given off from the living body has not disappeared, it is still in existence though disconnected from the life-giving principle. Should we not demand that here should be a similar conservation for the invisible part of our life?

Admits Limit on Vision.

"I have not the power to describe what the life after death is; the intellect will not tell us. However I do not see any reason why the mind could not form new combinations which are beyond our comprehensions, or why consciousness in wider sense should cease with death. "Why should we only ascribe person ality to those combinations of matter and mind which appear in the form of animals or men? In a wider sense the university has a personality, a spirit. We speak of the will of the people. Can we find a unity of purpose and feeling in as large assemblage as this?

"While I have to content myself with the assertion that mind is as indestructible as matter and energy, my firm belief in evolution and in an orderly plan of the universe leads me to doubt that there can be any retrogression in its development. I believe my spirit will, after death, be more advanced in all the characteristics of the human soul.

Based Only on Science. "And thus I find no difficulty whatever in believing in a personality embracing the whole universe and intimately blended with a marvelously intricate system of material bodies, a personality, different from ours, it is true, but since I form a part of it, one of the same nature as my own, only grander, wiser, more powerful and more just.

"In conclusion let me state that the views here advanced were not obtained by adherence to any theological or philo sophical dogma, but were the result of a purely scientific search after a world pic ture which would satisfy not only the in elect, but the human soul

A DUTIFUL FATHER.

Premier Asquith's Devotion to His Daughter, in Her Sorrow.

In one of the greatest crises Great Britain has seen in years, Premier Asquith abandoned practically the campaign and the Liberal party to be at the bedside of his daughter, Violet, who is heartbroken and prostrated by the death of her fiance, Archibald Gordon, third son of the Earl of Aberdeen. She was at Winchester, where Mr. Gordon died, and so serious was her condition that the premier forgot the statesman in the father and gave up a very import-ant cabinet meeting in Downing street to be with her. Mr. Gordon was injured in an automobile accident on November 28, and was taken to the Royal Hampshire County hospital, at Winchester. There Miss Asquith hurried as soon as she heard the news and there she remained until his death. She hardly left his bedside during the whole time and not for a moment after the doctors said death a moment after the doctors said death was imminent.

Miss Asquith's grief, when death came, was pitiable. A few minutes before he died, Mr. Gordon held her hands clasped in his, whispering his farewell and his vows of eternal love. When his eyes were closed for the last time, she threw herself across his body, clasping his hands, kissing his dead face and hysterically pouring out words of love and entreaty. It took the united efforts of the entire party to force her away from the entire party to force her away from the couch and from the room. In a neighboring room she became violently hys-terical, and the utmost efforts of her father and stepmother to quiet her were unavailing.

The episode has aroused deep pity for

The episode has aroused deep pity for her in London, and many denunciations are heard of William Watson, who, in his poem, "The Woman With the Serpents' Tongue," denounced as calloused the woman who is capable of such poignant grief.

The premier's attitude also has set at rest the reports that he and his daughter were at odds most of the time, that she practically ruled the household and that he not only did not approve of many of the things she did, but had no particular affection for her.

Raw Eczema on Hands.

"I had eczema on my hands for ten years. I had three good doctors but none of them did any good. I then used one box of Cuticura Ointment and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent and was completely cured. My hands were raw all over, inside and out, and the eczema was spreading all over my body and limbs. Before I had used one bottle, together with the Cuticura Ointment, my sores were nearly healed over, and by the time I had used the third bottle, I was entirely well. To any one who has any skin or blood disease I would honestly advise them to fool with nothing else, but to get Cuticura and get well. My hands have never given me the least bit of trouble up to now. "My daughter's hands this summer became perfectly raw with eczema. She could get nothing that would do them any good until she tried Cuticura. She used Cuticura Resolvent and Cuticura Ointment and in two weeks they were entirely cured. I have used Cuticura for other members of my family and it always proved successful. Mrs. M. E. Did This Dog Reason? We brought from Scotland a collie about 6 months' old. He was allowed to be with us at the breakfast table, but never to be fed in the dining room. This rule was strictly enforced by my daughter. I was the only member of the family who ever broke over the rule. And often when I offered him a tempting bone he would glance across the table, and if he caught the forbidding eye he would resist the tempta-tion. But one morning she left the table abruptly. Rab followed her into the hall and watched till she had closed the door of her study. Then he scampered back, nudged my elbow, as if to say: "Now is our time!" He seized the bone, and was soon crunching it with the greatest satisfaction.—Cor. New York World.

A FOOLISH FROLIC.

By the Author of "The Wild Geese," "A Democratic Duchess," Etc.

Montresor jumped into a hansom and bade the driver take him with all speed to Graham street.

Mr. Caterhouse's hall door was opened to imply that he was anxiously expected. The same maid that he had seen before ask a question, to the drawing room. The as possible. room was, as before, in semi-darkness; the one lamp being so carefully shaded that there was hardly light enough to see to walk about by.

The old gentleman was standing by the table as Montresor entered.

"Well done!" he exclaimed in his queer husky voice and without any form of greeting. "I did not think you would be so prompt. Young men are not always ready to respond to an ap- the world for him. peal for help when it involves even a trifling sacrifice."

"What can I do for you?" Montresor asked quietly.

Mr. Caterhouse turned to the table and seemed to search for something. "Here," he said, taking up a dirty sheet of paper, "this was brought to me this evening by a little boy."

He handed the missive to Montresor, who read on it the following words-"My Dear Uncle. I entreat of you to come at once to my assistance. I am a prisoner in this place, and shall be until I consent to marry the owner of it, who has brought me here, or until somebody rescues me. This is the first opportunity I have ever had of getting a message sent to the outer world, and if my messenger is caught he will suffer for his pity for me. This place is nine miles from a railway station, and is in the loneliest part of Essex. Come secretly, and take the household by surprise. For if you let him have any warning of your approach he is capable of killing me at once. At the station ask for Mr. Thomas Wilson's house. Anybody will direct you. And bring a sufficient force of police with you. The station is Carleshope. I am explaining myself very badly, but I have become stupid through long captivity. Lose no time, but come at once. Your niece, "DENZILIA LAVENHAM." Montresor perused this extraordinary statement with ever-increasing bewilder-

"It seems hardly credible," he began, "that here in England, in these days, a lady could be kidnaped and kept in anybody's house against her will, especially a lady whose disappearance has created such a stir as your niece's has."

"You think the thing is a hoax," commented Mr. Caterhouse. "Well, my niece is certainly capable of hoaxing us "And then," continued Montresor, "if the lady Langrishe and I both saw in Marlingham gardens was Miss Laven- A perceptible shade ham, how can she have been shut up in a house in Essex at the time?" "True," observed Mr. Caterhouse, "But then suppose Langrishe was mistaken in the identity of the lady he took for my niece Denzilia? Confound the minx! he added testily. "Let her stay in the Essex house and get out of it as best she can, or marry Mr. Thomas Wilson, who, I have no doubt, is quite good enough for her." "That is all very well," remarked Montresor, "but if by any strange chance the letter is not a hoax? Is it in your niece's handwriting?" he asked suddenly. "Yes," replied Mr. Caterhouse unhesitatingly. "It is without any doubt her writing." He opened the writing table drawer and took out a packet of letters. "There!" he said. "You can see for yourself. Those are all the letters she has ever written me." Montresor compared the handwiriting with a good deal of interest. There was, as Mr. Caterhouse had said, no doubt that the handwriting of the letter purporting to come from a place in Essex was precisely similar to that on the letters in the packet.

"The girl does not deserve that I should trouble myself about her," Mr. Caterhouse muttered. "But-I cannot help feeling as if I ought to take some notice of that letter, improbable as it seems, and-I don't like, on the other hand, making a fool of you!" "I don't in the least mind being made a fool of," Montresor assured him earnestly. "I am quite ready to give you all the help I can."

"I cannot go down into Essex." Mr. Caterhouse then declared. "My health makes such expeditions perfectly impossible."

"You would like me to go," suggested the other, with a little hesitation. "Precisely! I don't know why I should feel any diffidence in asking you, considering your professed eagerness to be the man who should discover the whereabouts of Denzilia Lavenham. But,' added the old gentleman with an indescribable malicious shrewdness in his tone, "it strikes me you are not so keen upon the search as you were. Got a young woman in the flesh who has put the imaginary Denzilia out of your head, Montresor blushed like a boy.

"If the first foolish enthusiasm for a face I had only seen for a second under exceptional circumstances has died away," he said with a frank dignity, "I am none the less sensible that it is the duty of every man worthy of the name to do all that in him lies to clear up the Mystery that surrounds this unfortunate young lady. I am ready to start for Carleshope at once." "I have a conviction that I am sending you on a fool's errand," Mr. Caterhouse. "That is why I requested you not to mention the matter to that long-legged supercilious American." Montresor was silent for a moment. He too would have much preferred leaving Langrishe out of the affair altogether. But he and Langrishe were

ly. "It would be a breach of faith."
Mr. Caterhouse was very angry. "Then I will find some one else," he you may do as you please. It will do today," she said.

that conceited ass good to be made a fool of, if anybody is to be made a fool Take him with you to Carlshope. All I stipulate is that you don't let him come near me. I detest Americans."

Montresor promised that he would not to him with an alacrity which seemed allow the American to inflict his presence on Mr. Caterhouse, and then, taking leave of the old gentleman, he drove back to the Matthieson's house with the showed him, without waiting for him to object of consulting Langrishe as soon

Dinner was over, and the men had already joined the ladies in the drawing room. Langrishe was sitting beside Agnes in a somewhat secluded corner. It struck Montresor as he approached the pair, after having explained his reappearance to his hostess, that he, like himself, might be less eager than he had been three weeks ago to ascertain the fate of Denzilia Lavenham. In this he erred. The missing American heiress was still to Langrishe the one woman in Montresor took a vacant chair close to Agnes and talked across her to Langrishe. It was one of her characteristics that people instinctively felt that she was a safe person to talk to private matters before.

He rapidly detailed his interview with Denzil Caterhouse, and produced Denzilia's letter. Langrishe's face changed as he took the letter, his hand. Agnes fancied, even trembled a little. She watched him from under her eyelashes as he read it. "It is Miss Lavenham's handwriting," he said slowly, "but it is not her style, and the story is on the face of it improbable." Montresor announced his intention of going the following day to Carleshope to investigate the affair. Langrishe immediately said that he would go too. It was agreed that the two young men should go down to Carleshope the next day by a train which left London at 10 o'clock. Langrishe was to undertake the office of providing a couple of trustworthy men to accompany them. It take the police into their confidence.

Montresor went home to devise wavs and means of seeing Miss Anselm in the morning before starting, and explaining to her how unavoidable and how distasteful was the business which obliged him to give up a day's expedition to the Zoo with her and the children, which expedition they had agreed upon. He came to the conclusion that, as she was not a fashionable person, 9 o'clock was not too early to call upon her.

Accordingly 9 o'clock found him standing outside her door. She opened it to

"You know no more agreeable engagement could turn up," he said. "You know there could not be for me any more agreeable engagement than to go with you anywhere."

"I don't suppose you wish very much to shirk it," murmured Miss Anselm, with a rather plaintive smile. "Why should you escape the madness that takes possession of every man whose path Denzilie Lavenham crosses? Even though you do not know her you are half in love with her already, and if you do succeeed in finding her you will break your heart over her just like all the rest

"Don't you know that Denzilia Lavenham can never be anything to me because you are so much." He was standing over her, looking down upon her with his whole face of love and longing. "I didn't know," she said in a whisper he could scarcely catch. "I was afraid you—I was jealous of Denzilia Laven-

"I am ashamed of myself!" he said hurriedly. "I might catch it yet. I promised Mr. Caterhouse. 'Good-bye, my own love!" Without even waiting to kiss her he rushed from the room, and flung himself into the first hansom he could find. "I will give you five shillings if you catch the train!" he cried to the cabman, who, though he expressed himself doubtful as to the success of the experiment, was perfectly willing to make

On arriving at the station he flung a five-shilling piece to the cabman, and rushed on to the platform. The train was just moving out of the station, and at one of the carriage windows he saw the supercilious face of Alick Langrishe.

CHAPTER VII.

Montresor stood for a moment and gazed after the receding train with a great disgust in his heart. Nor was his ering the proposed legislation relating to indignation against himself altogether due to a pure sense of his duty to Mr. Caterhouse. The old feeling of rivalry with Langrishe had awakened in him when he saw that supercilious smile on the face at the carriage window. After the first moment of stupefaction the bills accompanying their report the attempt is made to establish the doctrine tell him when the next train for Carleshope started. He found that there was one at 11 o'clock. But it was a slow train, and, though it started only an hour after the other, it did not reach Carleshope till nearly two hours later. Nevertheless he determined to go by it. He spent the intervening time in the station, so resolved was he not to be late again.

He got into a first-class carriage. His only companion was a rosy, middle-aged gentleman who studied a newspaper assiduously for the first hour of the journey, but presently the two travelers entered into conversation.

They were close to Carleshope station before it occurred to Montresor that if this pleasant gentleman lived on this line he might be pumped concerning Mr. was decided that they would not yet Thomas Wilson. He could devise no more delicate means of beginning his investigations than bluntly asking-

"Do you happen to know a man called Thomas Wilson in this neighborhood?" The middle aged gentleman burst into jolly laugh.
"Do I happen to know Thomas Wil-this unexpected intelligence was so obvious that Mr. Wilson ceased to laugh, "Is there anything so very astonishing

"Perhaps I am making a mistake," said Montresor in a great hurry, for the train was now stopping. "I was told to ask for Mr. Thomas Wilson's house, but Wilson is a common name."

"There is no Thomas Wilson about here that I know except myself," returned the other, jumping out of the train which was now at a standstill.

A party of young people, varying in ages from 17 to 5, precipated themselves upon him the moment his foot touched the platform.

"Oh, daddy!" they all cried simultaneously. "Why did you come by that horrid slow train? We have been waiting here for ever so long."

PROBLEM OF INTEREST TO PEOPLE.

(Special Correspondence of The Evening Wisconsin.)

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 8.-In considwater powers and the giving of franchises for the erection and maintenance of dams across the rivers of Wisconsin, the recommendations made by Senators Husting and Krumrey, as a minority of the special committee, are of interest. In of state ownership of the energy of the water in Wisconsin streams and lakes and to nullify the existing declared pol-icy of the rights of riparian owners. In order that the public may judge of the intent and purpose of the plans of the minority of the committee, the report is erewith reviewed. The first purpose is to declare all streams, whether meandered or not, navigable streams, which are navigable in fact for any purpose, including those navigable for logs and rowboats. This is done to fix the policy of the state in un-mistakable terms. The second proposi-tion declares "that the use of water in navigable streams and lakes for power developed under a franchise from the state is a public use; and all of the energy developed or undeveloped of the water in the navigable streams of the state is subject to the control of the state for the greatest public good." The report asserts the right of the state to regulate the creation and use of the power.

Confiscation's Cloven Hoof. "The state should declare that the beneficial use and natural energy of the water of the navigable streams and lakes of this state for all public uses belong to the state in trust for all the peo-ple." This is a declaration of the right of the state as against the right of ripa-rian owners. The committee further proposes to make the acceptance of any franchise a contract between the state and the grantee, and thus enable the state to manage, control and regulate the erection of dams and the development of water powers upon such terms as it may require.

One of the most important propositions submitted by the minority of the committee is to be found in the following: "No franchise should ever be granted in perpetuity but should be for a defi-"Have you any business with me?" no longer than is required for reasonable safety of investment." In explanation of this recommendation, the committee speed for Carleshope station. There was says: "We recommend that no franchise be granted for a longer term than twenty years with the privilege of con-tinuance for two further and successive terms of ten years each, at the option of the grantee. The state should reserve the right to readjust (at stated periods) the compensation to the public. The purpose of this provision is to give a sufficiently long period of enjoyment to the investor under unchanging terms and conditions, so that the same will attract and justify investment in the develop-ment of power and industrial enterprise connected therewith. The period stated we believe will give every investor prac-tically a life time in which to get returns on his investment and on the other hand will leave to future Legislatures the right to legislate to meet the conditions then existing.'

Franchises to Revert.

Having, to their mind, established the octrine that the state owns the energy the water, Senators Husting and Krumrey recommend that a reasonable franchise fee should be imposed, because it gives a special privilege to the holder. One of the recommendations made as well as provisions in the bill of interest to prospective investors in Wisconsin wa-ter power properties and industrial auxiliarjes, is to be found in the following: "At the expiration or forfeiture of franchise, all rights exclusive of physical property should revert to and become the property of the state in trust for all the people, that at the expiration or forfeitore of the franchise, the water power privilege may be reappropriated with right of condemnation and sale of all physical property not removed by the old apprepriator.

The legal effect of these recommendations, should they receive the sanction of law and be upheld by the courts, would be to unsettle any existing doctrine under which riparian owners now operate. It is a departure from policies continuing in Wisconsin since a permit or franchise for a dam was first granted and an absolute attempt through legislation to establish socialism as it not only applies to the confiscatory rights of the state, but in the fact of state ownership and the operation of industries.

Minority's Theory of Sovereignty.

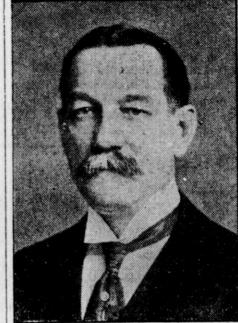

Senators Husting and Krumrey base their plan upon the theory that because the applicant for a dam franchise on navigable streams is compelled to go to the Legislature for a permit or fran-chise, the state and not the riparian owners, is the actual possessor and holder of rights, without limitation. The doctrine sought to be established is taken from theory obtaining in English law relating to the sovereignty of the crown and in part, finds an application under the Canadian laws relating to crown lands. In practically all franchises granted by the Wisconsin Legislature, the right to amend or repeal is reserved and in many instances, other limitations are imposed. This it is assumed under the plan proposed, gives the state unlimited powers to prescribe all the ele ments of ownership and control over any water power existing in Wisconsin heretofore exercised by individual owners and not included in the rights of the public as they relate to navigation or G. SERIOUS CHARGES. Country Is Alleged to Be Reeking with Graft and Taint of Crookedness. There is scarcely a business or in dustry in Canada that is not in a flourishing condition," said William Mc-Ritchie of Ottawa at The Rennert. "In every part of the Dominion the same story of prosperity is heard. The crops of this year were abundant and the producers get ton prices."

now we had the model government of the world. Graft was unknown, and no charge of corruption was ever laid at the door of any public official. Today I am ashamed to say that an entirely opposite state exists. As a matter of fact, the country is reeking with graft and the taint of crookedness attaches to multitudes of men in the public service. It is an application of the public service. an unpleasant confession, but it is true. The revelations of wrongdoing have disgusted our people, and you may depend on it that there will be a reckoning that will give the guilty ones all that is com-ing to them."—Baltimore American.

After Spending Thousands of Dollars and Consulting the Most Eminent Physicians, He Was Desperate.

CHICAGO, ILLS .- Mr. J. G. Becker, of 134 Van Buren St., a well-known wholesale dry goods dealer, states as follows:

"I have had catarrh for more than thirty years. Have tried everything on earth and spent thousands of dollars for other medicines and with physicians, without getting any lasting relief, and can say to you that I have found Peruna the only remedy that has cured me permanently.

"Peruna has also cured my wife of catarrh. She always keeps It in the house for an attack of cold, which it invariably cures in a very short time."

A LADY BOUNTIFUL.

The Countess of Granard Winning Golden Opinions in Ireland.

The Earl and Countess of Granard (she was Miss Beatrice Mills of New York) are passing a very quiet winter season at Castle Forbes, Longford, Ireland. Occasionally the earl has friends down for the shooting (Lord Powerscourt and Lord Massereene were recently at the castle) but the state of the season at the castle) but the state of the countess' health forbids extensive entertaining just now. When Lord Granard was called to London on official business his sister, Lady Margaret Forbes, and his brother came to visit the countess during his absence. The countess' munificence to the poor on or near her husband's lands excited their warmest gratitude, espe-tially as this is their first experience with "Lady Bountiful." When the severely sold weather began the countess distributed $1000 worth of warm clothing and blankets among those who most seeded them. She takes great interest in the nuns' industrial school, which she aften visits and joins in the games of the shildren there, enjoying herself unaffectedly. In the village of Newton-Forbes the countess' simple manners, kindness and good humor have won all hearts. This generous American-born woman had splendid Christmas tree, a tree such as the children here never dreamed of in heir wildest visions of Santa Claus. She gathered all the children of the parsh in her husband's home, a castellated nansion rising on the edge of Lough Forbes, one of the prettiest lakes which he river Shannon enlarges. She gave to each child a substantial Christmas

Athletic games will be held on the tastle grounds January 16, and at the same time the old folks among the enantry will be entertained. Lord Granard has always been very popular with the gentlefolks who are his reighbors. But now his countess has aptured the peasantry, whose witty and quaint sayings give her delight and

GET POWER.

The Supply Comes from Food. If we get power from food, why not strive to get all the power we can?

That is only possible by use of skil-

"From not knowing how to select "From not knowing how to select the right food to fit my needs, I suffered grievously for a long time from stomach troubles," writes a lady from statements of the experts employed by stomach troubles," writes a lady from a little town in Missouri.

"It seemed as if I would never be able to find out the sort of food that was best for me. Hardly anything that I could eat would stay on my stomach. Every attempt gave me heartburn and filled my stomach with gas. I got thinner and thinner until I literally became a living skeleton and in time was compelled to keep to my bed.

"A few months ago I was persuaded to try Grape-Nuts food, and it had such good effect from the very beginning that I have kept up its use ever since. I was surprised at the ease with which I digested it. It proved to be just what I needed.

"All my unpleasant symptoms, the heartburn, the inflated feeling which gave me so much pain disappeared. My weight gradually increased from 98 to 116 pounds, my figure rounded out, my strength came back, and I am now able to do my housework and en- Looks of Children of Malay Women Marjoy it. Hyde, whether with felonious intent, we, the jury, are unable to decide."

Dr. Hyde Startled.

The reading of the verdict caused Dr. Hyde to start forward involuntary in his chair. Turning to John M. Cleary, one of his attorneys, Dr. Hyde asked: "What does that mean?"

Mr. Cleary explained that the jury was unable to determine from the evidence whether there was an intent to kill or not. Dr. Hyde nodded.

"I see," he said.
Within a few moments the courtroom was cleared. Dr. Hyde and his attorneys were soon walking down the street, on ir way to luncheon. A crowd of sev eral hundred persons followed, talking of the case and predicting what the future stens might be

Dr. B. Clark Hyde, who was physician to Col. Swope on the day the latter died and who prescribed a digestive capsule which preceded death only a short while, refused today to testify, even to be sworn.

Nurse Repeats Story.

At the request of the coroner, Miss Kellar again detailed that part of her story of Tuesday, in which she had described the condition of Col. Swope following the administering of the capsule prescribed by Dr. Hyde a short time prior to Col. Swope's death. Miss Kel-lar described the first convulsion experinced by Col. Swope.

"Then," she continued, "after he had turned his head from the window, his yes were fixed-he went into this quiverng motion I told about yesterday. His hands clenched, and there was a terrible motion over the whole body and he vas making a sound, not with his mouth but evidently with his teeth lenched somewhat, a very tense sort of grind, I would judge with the mouth the same time he made this motion. I suppose that convulsion lasted ten minutes. His arms were raised and his hands elenched tight,"

PARADE AND BANQUET WILL BE FEATURES OF HOMECOMING IN NEW YORK.

PRESIDENT TAFT WILL SPEAK.

African Hunter's Steamship Will Be Met by Committee on Way Up the Harbor.

POLITICS WILL BE HEARD.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 9. -President Taft today was given full details of the plans that have been formulated thus far for the reception to be tendered former President Roosevelt upon his arrival in New York harsome time between June 15 and 21. Col. John A. Stewart, president of the New York State League of Republican clubs and representative of the Republican club of New York city, discussed the matter with the President for half an hour or more and told him that the committee which would be placed in charge of the celebration would

OPERATOR IS DARING.

Failing to Deliver Train Order, He Retrieves Negligence and Prevents Collision by Feat of Strength.

ALBION, Ill., Feb. 9 .- An itinerant ALBION. Ill., Feb. 9.—An itinerant telegraph operator, "working extra" failed to hand over a train order and therefore is on his way, but he retrieved his negligence and prevented a collision between two passenger trains by a trick of daring and strength before he departed, early today.

Train No. 2, westbound and late, pulled out of the Southern railway station here e operator having order to hold back for the passing of an eastbound train. He rushed frantically along the track, missed the steps of the last car and fell headlong.

On his feet again and running he caught the rear coach, pulled himself to the vestibule door, smashed the glass, and stopped the train. There was just time to get back to Albion when the east bound train rushed by. The operator did not show up.

MANY VOTE ON STRIKE

Referendum in New York Will Decide Whether 150,000 Shall Be Called from Building Jobs.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9 .- A vote being taken today will decide whether a strike involving 150,000 men and completely tying up building operations in this city shall be called. The referendum was ordered at a conference of the Building Trades unions Tuesday night when sympathy with the steam fitters' strike for an increase of wages was voted by the delegates, and a general strike in support of the men now out was favored.

The outcome of the referendum is problematic. A strike now would be in vio-lation of the arbitration agreement in force since the last strike. Numbers of the men are believed to be strongly op-posed to such action. In the big strike of 1902, 100,000 men stopped work, and $50,000,000 worth of building operations

Formerly these masks ended at the chin; but a fatal accident occurred. A filler died from having his throat cut by a flying fragment of glass.

PEARLS REQUIRE LIGHT.

Experiments Show They Lose Lustre if

It has been pretty well demonstrated that the placing of pearls in dark places and keeping them there for long periods injures their lustre and makes them dull in appearance, says the Detroit News-Recently the great pearl neckace in the Louvre museum, consisting of 145 pearls, and valued at $600,000, once the property of Mme. > THE TELESCOPE THAT FLOATS. Wonderful Glass Which Swings in Concrete Tank.

At the Harvard university observatory a gigantic telescope floats in a tank of water. It is one of the largest in the world, the reflecting mirror being 5 feet wide. Mounted on a water tight cylin-drical steel float the telescope swings in a concrete tank full of water, only slightly larger than the cylinder, which is de signed to fit it closely and serve as a pivot for the telescope, instead of having it mounted on a solid base. Machinery at each side holds and guides it. The water bears the weight, and the movements of the telescope are regulated by tiny electric motors; the gigantic mirror was be easily removed and resilvered. can be easily removed and resilvered when it grows dim, although two tons are indicated when it is placed on the scales. Through this telescope stars of the six-teenth and eighteenth magnitude are revealed, and it seems to penetrate into the very abysses of the heavens. While the instrument is mounted in the open air, the image is reflected to an eyepiece, in an adjoining building, where the as-tronomer sits and makes calculations in which millions of miles are dealt with as indifferent as the simplest sums in ordinary bookkeeping.

The first look through a great telescope is disappointing, but the novice soon sees that the flat appearance which the heavens present to the naked eye is replaced by a curious concavity; the moon replaced by a curious concavity; the moon and the stars seem to be hung in space rather than spread out on a flat surface, says the National Magazine. For a moment one feels at the telescope like a child watching the swift moving balls kept in the air by a juggler, and expecting to see one of those great, bright bodies fall. Then comes the thought, "What keeps them there, apparently suspended in space with absolutely nothing to hold them firm?" The explanation of to hold them firm? The explanation of the learned astronomer causes the brain the learned astronomer causes the brain of the layman to whirl, and he sees himschich imparts to them a most weird and fantastic appearance.

RING 3200 YEARS OLD.

Worn by Court Beauty of Egypt-Fine Example of Ancient Carving.

The Musee Guimet of Paris has just acquired a priceless treasure, provided that it will bear investigation better than did the notorious tiara of the Louvre a few years ago. M. Guimet, whose name the museum bears, is an antiquarian and voluminous writer on antiquities. He seems quite satisfied that he has added o his collection a ring of the time of Rameses II., who flourished about 1300 years before our era. The ring was acquired from a family of Grenoble in whose possession it had been for long years and the former owners produced documents which satisfied M. Guimet as to the authenticity of his acquisition. The ring bears hieroglyphic inscriptions showing that it graced the hand of Nefritarimeri Mout, one of the wives of the once powerful monarch of

The ring is of thick gold carrying a cornelian stone rectangular, large and flat. The stone is enclosed in gold and the ring itself is ornamented with a fillet The stone tells the story of hieroglyphics said to represent the King and Nefritarimeri. The perfection of the entaillure is considered a proof of the genuineness of the ring, for the modern engraver seldom succeeds with that sureness of cut which is the wonder and idmiration of all who are familiar with the engraving of the ancients.

The ring, we are further told, although gracing the hand of a court beauty of Egypt in the depths of past ages, would be much sought after by a fashionable lady today.-London Globe.

Plain to Be Seen.

A Denver man who visited the museum at City park recently tells of a farmer he saw there. The ruralist stepped in front of a portrait which showed a man sitting in a high-backed chair. There was a small white card on the picture reading:
"A portrait of E. H. Smith, by himelf.

The farmer read the card and then huckled to himself: "Regular fools these city fellers are," he said. "Anybody who looks at that picture 'ud know Smith's by himself. They ain't no one in the paintin' with him."—Denver Post.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands and thousands of women of the ills peculiar to their sex, then we long for an opportunity to do so by direct correspondence. Meanwhile read the following letters which we guarantee to be genuine and truthful.

Hudson, Ohio.—"I suffered for a long time from a weakness, inflammation, dreadful pains each month and suppression. I had been doctoring and receiving only temporary relief, when a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and wrote to you for advice. I have faithfully followed your directions and now, after taking only five bottles of the Vegetable Compound, I have every reason to believe I am a well woman. I give you full permission to use my testimonial."—Mrs. Lena Carmocino, Hudson, Ohio. R. F. D. No. 7.

St. Regis Falls, N. Y .- "Two years ago I was so bad that I had to take to my bed every month, and it would last from two to three weeks. I wrote to you for advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in dry form. I am happy to say that I am cured, thanks to your medicine and good advice. You may use my letter for the good of others." — Mrs. J. H. Breyere, St. Regis Falls, N. Y. There is absolutely no doubt about the ability of this grand old remedy, made from the roots and herbs of our fields, to cure female diseases. We possess volumes of proof of this fact, enough to convince the most skeptical.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit. Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge.

Must of the cheese makers have positions either in their own or in other factories. The majority of the buttermakers have employment in prospect, as the demand for well trained men has been increasing. The class this year showed a high average in scholarship. All had had practical experience before entering the dairy school.

Part of the success with this year's class is attributed to the improved instruction in butter and cheese making, including the tests for dairy products, the use of dairy machinery and the making of the starters. The monthly scoring exhibitions have been closely studied, with the result that there is much greater uniformity in the moisture content of the butter Kohn was largely attended.
