CANDIDATE FOR JUDGE

Attorney H. P. Schmidt Former Principal of Our Public School for Judge of the Civil Court of Milwaukee County

Our readers all remember H. P. Schmidt, the principal of our public school, during the years of 1889 to 1891. Mr. Schmidt left here and took a law course in the office of Barney & Kuechenmeister at West Bend and was admitted to the bar in May, 1893. He has been in active law practice in Milwaukee since 1893, excepting four years, from 1899 to 1903, when he served as assistant secretary of state under W. H. Froehlich.

It would be another compliment to Washington county if the voters of Milwaukee county should elect him as judge of the Civil Court. We earnestly urge upon our Milwaukee readers to give him their active support.

Obituary

Joseph Schmidt received the sad news last Tuesday of the sudden death of his father, Wenzel Schmidt, aged 87 years, at Myra, town Trenton, Washington county. Death was due to apoplexy. Deceased was one of the oldest residents of this county. He was born in Lipnic, Bohemia, January 12, 1823, and emigrated to this country in the summer of 1856, settling in town of Trenton, where he resided ever since, with the exception of a few years, when he made his home at Milwaukee. Deceased leaves to mourn his loss, his aged wife, four sons and four daughters, viz: Joseph of Kewaskum, John, Anthony and Frank and Mary (Mrs. Joseph Chesak) of Myra, Anna (Mrs. Martin Chesak) and Katie (Mrs. Harry Burke) of Cherry Valley, Ill., and Rose (Mrs. Chas. Nowak) of Milwaukee. He also leaves besides the aforesaid, 31 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

The funeral was held Thursday morning from his home in Myra, with interment in the Holy Trinity cemetery at Newburg. Rev. Nottman officiating.

North Western Must Build Track.

The North Western Railway company will be compelled to build a spur track to be used by the Independent Lime & Stone company at their quarries at Marblehead. The track is to be about 1,600 feet long and will be connected with the storage track of the Union Lime company. The railway must build the track free of charge. This was the decision made by the railroad commission of Wisconsin in the case of The Eden Independent Lime and Stone company vs. The Chicago & North Western railway, the Union Lime company and the Nast Bros. Lime and Stone company.

Brilliant Northern Lights.

The northern lights that were displayed in the sky Sunday evening were watched with amazement by many of our citizens between 8 and 9 o'clock. The rays or the luminous sheets were exceptionally strong. The phenomenon as it appeared Sunday night was in the form of a luminous cloud at places and in others as rays and arches. It extended from the east to the west, which is another fact that rarely occurs, as astronomers say.

BAD FIRE AT BARTON

Midnight Blaze Destroys Two Barns and a Residence.

Barton had a serious fire last Wednesday night when a house and two barns located opposite the Catholic church property in the village were totally destroyed. The fire started in the Steinmetz barn shortly after 12 o'clock and soon spread to the adjoining, John Lambrecht's, residence and barn, which were also destroyed. Only by the assistance of the West Bend fire department, the fire would have been a disastrous one as a heavy gale of wind was blowing at the time and would have carried the flames throughout the village.

Many buildings in the neighborhood caught fire but were promptly extinguished. Two cows belonging to Steinmetz were burned to death. The origin of the fire is not known.

CONGRESS IN SESSION.

In the Senate.

In the Senate on the 23d the bill providing for a codification of the laws relating to the judiciary was under consideration during almost the entire session. The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, carrying about $40,000,000, was passed by the Senate. Very few amendments were adopted. Senator Owen spoke in advocacy of his bill for the creation of a new executive department to be devoted to the preservation of the public health.

The Senate, on the 25th, again refused to accept to Senator Elkins' request that a day be fixed for a vote on the administration's railroad bill. A suggestion was made that a month or more might be required for the debate on that measure. That day he had acted as counsel he had received assurances that before adjournment there would be a vote on the statehood bill.

The Senate on the 28th adopted a resolution authorizing the state of Oregon and Washington to establish a boundary line between those states. As no one was prepared to speak on the administration railroad measure, the Senate took an early adjournment.

Full authority on the 29th was given a committee of the House to investigate all charges concerning the existence of a lobby to influence ship subsidy legislation, together with incidental matters bearing upon that subject. Mr. Fowler of New Jersey, in an extended speech, defended his own currency reform and spoke vigorously against the establishment of a central bank or postal savings banks. Mr. Martin of Colorado suggested that the attorney general, in his denial that he had acted as counsel for the sugar trust, had not informed the country of the amount of the fee paid to his partner, who acted in that capacity, and whether he had participated in that fee. The committee was authorized to enforce more fully the Sherman anti-trust law was the subject of remarks by Mr. Martin of South Dakota, while the improvement of the Mississippi river was discussed by Mr. Thistlewood of Illinois.

In the House.

The raising of the battleship Maine, now submerged in the harbor of Havana, was provided for in a bill passed by the House on the 23d. Under the provisions of this measure the wreck of the Maine can be examined to determine the manner of its destruction. The remains of the sailor dead that may be found will be interred in Arlington cemetery. The House also passed a bill providing a penalty of not more than $1000 fine or imprisonment for not more than two years in the case of any person who places a place of amusement in the District of Columbia and territories who may refuse admission to a soldier or sailor of the United States because of his uniform.

The pension bill carrying appropriations of about $150,000,000 was passed by the House today. Nearly the entire session was occupied by a contest made chiefly by Republicans against the provision of the measure as related to the abolition of the pension agencies now in operation throughout the country. By a vote of 76 to 94 the house refused to overrule the recommendations of the committee. The committee was sustained chiefly by Democratic votes.

The new committee on rules of the House of Representatives as provided for by the Norris resolution, was elected Friday without debate. The members selected by the Republican and Democratic caucuses were named in a resolution brought in by Mr. Currier of New Hampshire. General debate upon the naval appropriation bill was begun. Mr. Bartholdt of Missouri spoke in favor of arbitration and there would not participate in the decision. It is regarded as unlikely that a successor will be appointed before the decision of these cases. There is only one other chance to avoid a deadlock—a retrial of the two cases—this is not expected.

This is the second death on the supreme court bench in the present term. Justice Peckham died early in the term, and was succeeded by Justice Moody. Justice Moody has been ill for several months and probably will not be back on the bench this term.

Justice Brewer's death will be a big loss to the public in other ways than as a member of the bench. He was the only member of the bench who freely expressed his opinion on large public questions. He was particularly outspoken in his criticisms of the Roosevelt methods.

Sketch of His Career.

David Josiah Brewer was born at Smyrna, Asia Minor, June 20, 1837. He was the son of Rev. Josiah Brewer and of Amelia A. Field, who were, at the time of his birth, missionaries to Turkey, but returned to the United States while he was an infant.

His mother was a sister of David Dudley, Cyrus W. and Justice Stephen J. Field. His early education was received in the schools of Connecticut, and in 1851 he entered Wesleyan university at Middletown, where his father then lived, but afterwards went to New Haven and graduated at Yale in 1856 with high honors.

Upon leaving Yale he entered the law office of his uncle, David Dudley Field, in New York city, in which he spent one year as a student, and then completed his legal studies in the Albany law school, from which he graduated in the class of 1858. In the fall of that year he went west and, after a residence of a few months in Kansas City, started up the Arkansas valley for Pike's peak and Denver.

Returning to Kansas in June, 1859, after a short visit home, he established himself in Leavenworth and resided there until removing to Washington in January, 1860. In 1861 he was appointed United States commissioner, and during 1862 and 1864 was elected judge of

DAVID J. BREWER DIES SUDDENLY AT WASHINGTON.

DEATH ENDS CAREER OF UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT JUSTICE.

HAD BEEN ILL BUT FEW DAYS.

Much Speculation as to Probable Decision of Court in Pending Cases of National Importance.

REHEARING OF STANDARD CASE?

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 29.—Justice David Josiah Brewer of the supreme court of the United States died suddenly Monday night at his home in this city.

Justice Brewer, dying of apoplexy, was found in the bathroom of his house by Mrs. Brewer. She at once telephoned for Justice Gould of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, who lives near at hand. Hurrying to the Brewer home, Justice Gould, with the assistance of two servants, carried the body to a bedroom. Justice Brewer's pulse was still faintly beating.

Women Alone in House.

Mrs. Brewer and a niece, Miss Clara Hall, were the only members of the family in the house at the time. An attempt was made to notify the other justices of the court but it was found too late to reach any of them except Justice Harlan, who sent his son to be of any assistance possible.

Marshall, Wright and Deputy Clerk Maher soon received word, Justice Gould in the meantime summoning Dr. H. Taylor, who lives a few doors from the Brewer house. The physician said that when he arrived the patient was dead. Justice Brewer had not been well for several days. He had suffered several attacks of headache and was unable to attend to his duties. He was much distressed by the details of the death of his friend. The President had learned only the bare fact last night before his departure from Jersey City.

Hold Funeral Thursday.

The funeral of Justice Brewer probably will be held here Thursday and the body taken immediately to Leavenworth, Kan., for burial. Should this plan be adopted the court will probably accompany the body to Kansas, leaving the justice to adjourn court on next Monday, when it must meet, according to its own orders.

Effect on Oil Trust Case.

The death of Justice Brewer removes any possibility of a deadlock of the supreme court in its decision of the Standard Oil and Tobacco trust cases. These cases will be decided now by a court of five justices, and the nearest to a division that is possible will be vote of 4 to 3.

An account of the continued illness of Justice Moody, who has not set with the eight remaining members of the tribunal was possible. There has been considerable speculation upon this contingency ever since it became apparent that eight justices would pass upon the big trust cases.

Now a different phase is put upon the affair so far as this possibility is concerned. Justice Brewer sat throughout the hearings of the arguments on these cases and participated in the deliberations of the court which have been going on for the last two weeks upon the decision that is to be rendered. But now the weight of his vote will go for naught. The decision will be the decision of the court as it is constituted when the opinion is rendered.

Retrial Is Not Expected.

Nor will the appointment of a successor, if one should be made immediately, serve to affect the decision. The successor would not have had the arguments, and therefore would not participate in the decision. It is regarded as unlikely that a successor will be appointed before the decision of these cases. There is only one other chance to avoid a deadlock—a retrial of the two cases—this is not expected.

This is the second death on the supreme court bench in the present term. Justice Peckham died early in the term, and was succeeded by Justice Moody. Justice Moody has been ill for several months and probably will not be back on the bench this term.

Justice Brewer's death will be a big loss to the public in other ways than as a member of the bench. He was the only member of the bench who freely expressed his opinion on large public questions. He was particularly outspoken in his criticisms of the Roosevelt methods.

THE LATE JUSTICE BREWER.

WICKERSHAM IN DENIAL

SAYS HE NEVER WAS COUNSEL FOR THE SUGAR TRUST.

Partner at One Time Retained in Single Lawsuit—Answers Representative Martin.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 29.—Attorney General Wickersham sent to Representative Bennet of New York Monday a flat denial that he ever was attorney for the sugar trust, as charged by Representative Martin of Colorado, who last week attacked the attorney general in the House for approving the sale of 55,000 acres of Philippine lands to the Havermeyers.

"I never was attorney for the sugar trust—by which I understand is meant the American Sugar Refining company and its allied or subsidiary corporations—nor have I had any professional or business relations with it. The only possible foundation for such a statement lies in the fact that one of my partners was, some three years ago, retained as one of the counsel for the American Sugar Refining company in a single suit brought against it, and, pursuant to such retainer, he assisted in the defense of the company in that action and on an appeal; but in that lawsuit I was neither consulted nor did I render service."

The partner referred to by Mr. Wickersham is Henry W. Taft, the President's brother, and in the case the attorney general had in mind was the suit brought three years ago by the Pennsylvania Sugar company against the American Sugar Refining company, in which conspiracy was charged against the New York concern. The American Sugar Refining company made a settlement out of court, paying over to the Pennsylvania company the sum of $2,000,000. The transaction by which the sugar trust was enabled to acquire approximately 55,000 acres of friar lands was made possible, Representative Martin charged, under the terms of an opinion rendered by the attorney general. This opinion, Mr. Martin alleged, was contrary to the law governing the case.

GETS POISONED CANDY.

Sweetheart of Sender's Old Beau Nearly Becomes Victim Because of an Alleged Wrong.

LITCHFIELD, Minn., March 29.—Because Frank Wurdell, the fiancé of Miss Minnie Luthens committed an alleged "wrong" against Lena Packbrath three years ago, the latter sent Miss Luthens a box of poisoned candy, according to a confession made to County Attorney Sexton today.

The confession was obtained only after hours of examination by the county attorney.

Miss Packbrath said she entertained no malice toward Miss Luthens, but hoped that Wurdell might have been accused of the murder of his fiancée. In the box was a card bearing the inscription "From Frank W."

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 29.—While Mrs. Agnes June was walking on Pine street Monday afternoon, two policemen snatched her new Easter hat from her head and trampled it under their feet.

The policemen paid no attention, but continued to dance upon the wrecked headdress.

KING MENELIK OF ABYSSINIA PASSES AWAY

MONARCH WHO CLAIMED TO BE DESCENDANT OF SOLOMON, DEAD, AGED 66.

PRINCE LIDJ JEASSU IS HEIR.

Ruler Was Stricken with Apoplexy Last Fall and Never Recovered His Health.

ONCE DEFEATED ITALIAN ARMY.

ADDIS ABEBA, Abyssinia, March 30.—Menelik II., King of Abyssinia, is dead at the age of 66 years and in the twenty-first year of his reign.

Prince Lidj Jeassu, grandson of the late monarch, is heir to the throne. The King was stricken with apoplexy last fall, and never recovered his health. For many weeks his death has been expected. When he was no longer able to carry on the affairs of state, Ras Tsemane, the regent, with the approval of the principal chiefs, took over the reins of government. At the same time Empress Haitou was deprived of all power of interference in the government.

Prince Has Child Wife.

Appointments made among her favorites were annulled. Prince Lidj Jeassu was proclaimed heir to the throne on May 18 last. He is 14 years of age, a little less than a year ago was married to the 7-year-old granddaughter of the late Emperor John. The child bride is a niece of Empress Taitou.

The ancient empire of Abyssinia or Ethiopia includes the Kingdoms of Tigre, Amhara and Shoa, with other territories and dependencies. Its area is over 200,000 square miles and the population is estimated at between 9,000,000 and 11,000,000.

Menelik was elected King by the Abyssinian chiefs over Ras Mangasha. He claimed to be a direct descendant of Solomon by the Queen of Sheba, and styled himself "Conquering Lion of the Tribe of Judah, Elect of the Savior, King of Kings of Ethiopia." He was the son of the King of Shoa, but was captured in his youth by the governor of Kondar, who had usurped the throne under the title of Theodore III.

Defeats Italian Army.

Menelik made war on Theodore and his successor, the Emperor Johannes. He finally married his daughter to the Ras Area, the Emperor's son, and was widely acknowledged heir to the throne. Ras Area died, Johannes was killed in battle, and Menelik became Negus of Abyssinia. He refused to acknowledge the domination of Italy over his country and compelled the Italian army to capitulate at Adowa in 1896, when a treaty was signed recognizing the absolute independence of Abyssinia. Since then peace has crowned Menelik's policy toward foreign powers and the country has prospered with the introduction of improved methods of government and commerce.

The Emperor has been imprisoned by the followers of the crown prince.

NO MORE CHEAP MEAT.

Counsel for Cattle Raisers' Association Declares There Is No Remedy for Increasing Prices.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 30.—"Unless some one can find a way to repeal the law of supply and demand, there is no remedy for increasing prices," asserted Samuel H. Cowan of Fort Worth, Tex., counsel for the Cattle Raisers' association of Texas before the Senate food investigating committee.

"The people of the United States need never expect cheap meat again," Mr. Cowan told the committee that in the future it would be necessary for cattle raisers to maintain as high or even higher prices than at present in order to keep pace with the increased cost of grazing land and feed.

Like many other witnesses before the committee, Mr. Cowan thought the present price of beef was due to the decreasing production and the increasing population.

MISSDALY WEDS COUNT.

New York Girl Becomes Bride of Austrian Nobleman—Reception Follows Ceremony.

NEW YORK, March 30.—The wedding of Miss Harriet Daly, daughter of Mrs. Marcus Daly, widow of Marcus Daly, the copper magnate, to Count Anton Sigray of Austria, took place Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride, 725 Fifth avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Richard O. Hughes of the cathedral, and only the immediate relatives were present.

The bride's only attendant was her niece, Miss Margaret Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Carroll Brown, and the best man was Count Pallavicini, Count Czerkay of the Austro-Hungary embassy at Washington, represented the bridegroom's country.

The marriage was celebrated in the large drawing room of the residence under a bower of palms among which were scattered 6000 Richmond roses. The bride was a gown of white satin trimmed with lace, and carried a prayer-book sprayed with orange blossoms. She entered the room with her brother, Marcus Daly, and was given away by her mother.

After the ceremony there was a large reception, during which a collation was served on a buffet table, decorated with strobilanthes and American Beauty roses.

He Could Not Recommend It.

The editor of the Plunkville Argus was seated at his desk, busily engaged in writing a fervid editorial on the necessity of building a new walk to the cemetery when a battered specimen of the tramp printer entered the office.

"Mornin', boss!" said the caller. "Got any work for a printer?"

"I have," answered the editor. "You happened in just right this time. I've got only a boy to help me in the office, and I need a man to set type for about a week. I have to make a trip out west. You can take off your coat and begin right now. I start tomorrow morning."

MINERS TO QUIT IN TWO STATES

PRESIDENT LEWIS STATES PENNSYLVANIA AND ILLINOIS WILL BE TIED UP.

DELAYING STRIKE IN CANADA.

Dominion Law Requires Workers to Give Employers Thirty Days' Notice.

EXPECT NO TROUBLE IN OHIO.

CINCINNATI, O., March 30.—While, as a result of the plan adopted by the coal miners' international convention Tuesday, there will be no country-wide strike of the bituminous miners, President T. L. Lewis of the miners declared today just before leaving the city for Indianapolis, that "Pennsylvania and Illinois will be completely tied up." The miners in the two districts number 130,000.

That means a fight in the two largest bituminous fields in the United States. Pennsylvania's annual production is 150,000,000 tons and Illinois is 50,000,000 tons. Ohio's production is 35,000,000 tons, giving employment to 60,000 miners.

No Trouble in Ohio.

"I think most of the Ohio districts will be at work after April 1," President Lewis said. "Ohio is one of the states in which the operators can sign up by districts or even subdistricts."

In Pennsylvania the entire bituminous production is in the single district known as the Pittsburgh district, where the miners affected number 120,000. Under the plan adopted by the miners' convention all mines will be idle as usual on April 1, which is the holiday anniversary of the eight-hour day. Then no miners are to return to work the next day unless ordered to do so by their district officials. These officials are not allowed to give that order unless all the mine owners in the district or subdistrict have signed up the preliminary agreement adopted by the convention.

Delay Canadian Strike.

Lewis said a strike in the Canadian mines would be delayed, even in the event of an immediate agreement, because of the Canadian law, which requires the miners to give thirty days notice of an intention to strike.

Situation in Indiana.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 30.—It was announced here today that all work in the mines of district 11, which comprises 152 mines where 18,000 men are employed, will be suspended April 1 unless an agreement is reached by that time between the miners and operators. The regular annual convention of the miners of this district is called for March 31, and arrangements will be made at once to invite the operators to a joint conference.

AGREE ON THE TARIFF.

Canadian and United States Representatives Issue Terms of New Rates on Imports.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 30.—The terms of the new tariff agreement between the United States and Canada were made public here today. The concessions provided by the agreement will cover less than 3 per cent. of all the import business from the United States into Canada in a year.

They will cover business amounting to about $5,000,000 against imports into Canada from the United States amounting to more than $180,000,000 in the Canadian fiscal year of 1902. They include about forty staple commodities. One of the most important concessions made by Canada is that of the omnibus clause in the Canadian tariff. Heretofore all articles under that clause imported from the United States have been subject to the general tariff of 20 per cent. ad valorem. Hereafter such articles will pay 17½ per cent. ad valorem.

A FOOLISH FROLIC.

By the Author of "The Wild Geese," "A Democratic Duchess," Etc.

She uttered no cry—she was probably not aware of her danger—and the guide in front of her did not know what had happened till he was surprised by seeing the three gentlemen at the door of the shed rush suddenly down towards him. Then he looked back. By the time the Duke, Langrishe and Montresor had reached the spot of the lady, with the help of her guide and her own alpenstock, was on her feet again and standing once more on the narrow path from which she had fallen.

"I am not a bit hurt," she was saying in German in a clear laughing voice to the guide, and then, as her would-be rescuers faced her, two of them uttered a faint gasp, which, as she stared at them, she re-echoed.

Kenneth stood gazing at what he thought the most beautiful woman he had ever seen in his life.

The silence, though it seemed long, was in truth only momentary, and then Langrishe recovered himself, and spoke with his favorite slow, cool accent.

"Miss Lavenham, had I recognized you from afar I should not have flown so impetuously to your rescue. I know, whatever happens, you must always fall on your feet."

"I am glad you remember that I bear a charmed life," she answered with a faint echo of his mockery in her tone.

Then she looked at Montresor, and her manner changed. There was an indescribable mixture of dignity and timidity in her manner as she said:

"We too have met before, Mr. Montresor, and she put out her hand. He retained sufficient presence of mind to take it. A great wave of memory had swept over him at the sight of that fair face, confusing and blurring his perceptions. The last time he had seen this fair and gracious woman he had grossly insulted her, had called her liar. And yet was it indeed this woman or another?"

The lightning and thunder had considerably abated by this time, but the snow had begun to fall thicker than before. It was expedient to seek the shelter of the cow-shed as soon as possible.

Miss Lavenham walked on with Langrishe on one side of her and the Duke on the other. Nobody had introduced him, but what did that matter? He introduced himself, and did not know that the lady experienced a slight sensation of dismay at the sound of his name. Neither did he know that he was speaking to the American heiress concerning whom he had been making inquiries the previous night. He had not remembered her name. Agnes, who had been watching the whole scene from the doorway of the cow-shed, started a little as the party approached her.

"Miss Anselm!" she said before the words of introduction which Langrishe had in readiness could pass his lips. Then she suddenly checked herself, perceiving that she had made a mistake, yet still bewildered by the likeness that had misled her.

"This is my sister," Kenneth said, eager to monopolize the beautiful stranger as much as he could. Agnes, who had been watching the whole scene from the doorway of the cow-shed, started a little as the party approached her. "Miss Anselm!" she said before the words of introduction which Langrishe had in readiness could pass his lips. Then she suddenly checked herself, perceiving that she had made a mistake, yet still bewildered by the likeness that had misled her.

"I have," she said, speaking very slowly, "to apologize to Miss Mathison for a very unwarrantable piece of impertinence to which, unknown to her, I subjected her three years ago. Indeed I am bitterly ashamed of it now. You," she added, looking at Agnes, whose countenance expressed unbounded amazement, "knew me as Miss Anselm, a teacher of miniature painting."

There was a moment's embarrassed silence. Langrishe looked with a quick, keen glance of comprehension from Montresor to Denzilia. In Agnes' mind there was a sense of injury. The Duke, with his ingratitude and his real inability, could not imagine what it was all about.

"And I am sure my sister is very glad to see you again under any other name," he said.

With his own words his heart seemed to sink a little, for even while he uttered them he reflected that her speech had meant that she was married.

His words, however, recalled Agnes to herself, and, meeting Langrishe's eyes suddenly, she spoke quickly and cordially, for in an instant she guessed the truth.

"Indeed I am!" She held out her hand as she spoke with an instinctive idea of patronage which her former relations with the girl unconsciously awoke in her and which Miss Lavenham would have resented with true American independence in other circumstances, but which, as things were, she felt positively grateful for.

They all entered the cow-shed, and while Montresor occupied himself in unpacking the luncheon the other men waited on Denzilia.

When luncheon was over the snow had ceased, and the storm had cleared away. As they were all going to return to Zermatt it was almost inevitable that they should return together.

During the business of packing up the luncheon the Duke took Langrishe aside, and inquired the name and state of the lady. Langrishe told him briefly that she was no other than the New York heiress who had so agitated London three years before by her mysterious disappearance. The Duke's excitement was great.

"And she is not married?" he asked eagerly.

"She is not married," returned Mr. Langrishe dryly.

As they made their way down to Zermatt by a different route than that by which they had come the Duke endeavored to advance as rapidly as possible to a better acquaintance with the lovely American girl.

They presently came to a place where the pair in front were compelled to make a halt, for the broken track had been swept away, and, though there were a few tree trunks placed across the chasm, they were so insecurely balanced that it seemed advisable to consult the guides before venturing to walk over it. During the little delay that this occasioned the five persons were necessarily grouped together, and Montresor found himself, he did not quite understand how, standing close to Denzilia. He did not speak to her. She glanced at him once or twice. Then, taking advantage of a moment, when the other two men were listening to some explanation of the guides, and Agnes was apparently absorbed in the bouquet of flowers she had collected, she said quietly—

"Mr. Montresor, will you walk a little way with me? I want to say something to you. It will not take me long, but I want to say it."

He made a slight motion of assent. When the difficulty of getting across the chasm was settled, and they were all safe on the other side, Montresor quietly walked beside Miss Lavenham and began to talk to her so determinedly about events in which the Duke had had no share, and could not therefore talk about, that at last the young man perceived that his company was not desired, and he betook himself to the rear.

When Montresor and Miss Lavenham were at last alone together the gentleman's flow of conversation ceased. His face assumed an air of gravity, almost of sternness. He obviously waited for his companion to speak. She seemed to find it difficult to do so, but, after throwing one or two tentative glances at him, and seeing that she would get no help from him, she said quietly—

"It seems likely that we shall be unavoidably thrown into each other's society for the next few days. Believe me, I am sorry that this should have happened."

He made some slight gesture, intimating that he heard her, but he said nothing. She went on after a moment's pause—

"I cannot leave Zermatt until my friend arrives, or I would do so. As I cannot, would it not be well if we were to agree to entirely forget the past. I can assure you that I—"

She hesitated, and then went on composedly, "I feel no resentment, and I think that whatever you may feel you might put it so far in the background of your mind for the next few days that we may meet on comfortable terms. I am not proposing, as you added with a little enigmatical smile, 'that we should play at being great friends, but I think that for just these few days we might play at being new acquaintances. Afterwards, when we part, we need never meet again, and may resume what mutual attitude we please.'"

When she ceased to speak he answered quietly—

"Your request, Miss Lavenham, was hardly needed. I should not have presumed to treat you as other than a new acquaintance."

"That is all right, then," she said with perfect composure. "Shall we wait for the others?"

CHAPTER XVI.

As Denzilia had predicted, she immediately became one of the Duke's party. No excursion could be made without her, and as her friend did not turn up, and as she was pledged to wait at Zermatt till she did, it is scarcely necessary to say that the Duke could not have been induced to leave either.

Agnes made no secret to herself that her motive in desiring to encourage her brother's fancy for Denzilia was in the first place purely selfish, Denzilia, once married, she might hope that Langrishe's heart would really turn to her as she wished it turned. But she was not altogether proof against Agnes' charm apart from this motive.

The American heiress laid herself out to win back in Agnes' affections the place she had once held there as the miniature painter.

"Tell me honestly, Lady Agnes," she asked her boldly the first time she had an opportunity of a confidential talk with the English girl, "do you think my conduct in assuming two disguises in London a very heinous thing?"

"I do not know enough of the circumstances to know whether it was so or no," Agnes answered cautiously.

"It was thought so by my own opinion I valued," Denzilia murmured softly. "It was a freak that cost me my life's happiness."

Agnes looked at her.

"You do not mean Mr. Langrishe?" she said quickly and involuntarily. "I beg your pardon. I did not mean to ask impertinent questions."

"You need not beg my pardon," Denzilia answered. "I was not alluding to Mr. Langrishe. Mr. Langrishe does not really think highly enough of me to be alluded to at my doing a risky thing."

"I think you wrong Mr. Langrishe," said Agnes steadily.

"Do I?" returned the other carelessly. "Perhaps I do." She paused, and then added very deliberately—

"I wish to think so. I have several times refused to marry Mr. Langrishe, and of late he has ceased to ask me. And I take this as a sign that he has seen some one he likes better than me. I sincerely hope it is so."

She did not wait for Agnes' answer, but entered the hotel, went into the reading room, took up a paper, and seated herself near the window which opened out to the verandah, where she had left Agnes sitting. She was, however, behind the curtain, so that any one on the verandah, even though quite close to her, would remain unaware of her vicinity.

Agnes had a book on her lap, and when Miss Lavenham left her she opened it and made a pretense of reading. Langrishe sauntered up a few moments later and seated himself in a chair beside her. She glanced at him for a moment and then went on reading.

"Lady Agnes," he said in a rather low voice, "what have I done?"

Denzilia, from her place in the reading room, could hear and recognize their voices, but as she could not hear their words she did not think it necessary to move or give them any intimation of her presence.

Agnes laid down her book.

"Mr. Langrishe," she said, taking no direct notice of his question, "I should strongly advise you to leave Zermatt."

"I am sure you mean well," returned

Langrishe, "but I have no intention of taking your advice."

Before more could be said Montresor and the Duke came up, and sat down near Agnes.

"We have decided to go and see the gorge this afternoon," said the Duke. "Mother won't come. She has found an old lady to look after, and she will be quite happy."

Agnes answered rather languidly and went on reading, or pretending to read. Presently there came on to the verandah a party of Americans. There were two men and three ladies. They were laughing and talking rather loudly, and they stood to continue their conversation near the Duke and his friends and close by the window behind which Denzilia was sitting unknown to anybody.

"All I can say is that she is a very beautiful girl," said one of the men with a heat which seemed to imply that some one had been saying something derogatory to the person he spoke of.

"I do not wish to deny that. It is a self-evident fact," said a lady. "I merely remark that I am quite sure she is the same New York girl who went to London, and while the police were looking for her everywhere, and her relations were spending oceans of money in the endeavor to trace her, she was masquerading about dressed in men's clothes. If you consider that a nice thing for a girl to do I have nothing more to say."

"I do not consider it a nice thing to do," rejoined the first speaker angrily. "But I am perfectly sure it was not this lady."

The lady repeated—

"I am quite sure it was the same person. It was a Miss Lavenham."

At this point the Duke suddenly rose from his chair and advanced towards the group.

"I beg your pardon," he said, raising his hat very courteously, but with an unmistakable ring of anger in his voice. "Miss Lavenham is a friend of mine, and I must ask you not to speak of her in these terms aloud in public places. She is a lady worthy of all respect."

The curtain over the window beside which the group stood was suddenly pushed aside, and Denzilia stood up straight and tall before them.

"It is kind of you, Duke," she said in her clear tones, "to be willing to defend me against all comers, but I want to say that these ladies and gentlemen are right. I am the New York girl who went to London and masqueraded in men's clothes, though the detail about my relations is founded on a misapprehension." She smiled slightly as she spoke, but her face was flushed, and her glance wandered to the spot where Montresor and his companions still sat listening to this extraordinary conversation.

"But I would ask you to be merciful, and not to blazon abroad this story in the years that have passed since then to be very bitterly ashamed of it, and I would fain have all those who know me forget it."

It was a curious scene. The girl spoke with a gentle dignity that took off from what might have otherwise seemed the eccentricity of her conduct. After a moment's embarrassed pause the gentleman who had so loudly proclaimed his disbelief in her identity took off his hat, and said in exactly the same tone that he might have used in apologizing for having trodden on her dress—

"Indeed we have reason to be ashamed of ourselves for having uttered a lady's name aloud in a public place. I can assure you that we shall respect our countrywoman's confidence, and it shall not be through any of us"—he indicated by a slight wave of his hand to his own party—"that it is talked of again."

Denzilia smiled, and, dropping the curtain, disappeared from view.

When they met at the midday dejeuner Miss Lavenham was not smiling. She was unusually grave and quiet. Once she raised her eyes and met Montresor's with that half-deprecating look which always gave him a sensation of uneasiness and discomfort. She had no business to look at him like that.

As soon as luncheon was over they started on their afternoon's excursion with Heironymous in attendance. They always took Heironymous, even when the services of a guide were perfectly superfluous.

They started in their usual order, the Duke beside Denzilia, Langrishe beside Agnes, and Montresor ahead with the guide. Sometimes Agnes or Langrishe would range along side of the guide, but Denzilia was never allowed by her cavalier to quit his side. If she wanted to walk to the guide the Duke took his place on the other side of her. She seemed to accept his devotion without any reluctance, but the lookers on thought that she hardly took it seriously.

MONSTER HORNET NEST.

One 36 Inches in Diameter Found in Ohio.

E. E. Walston of Williamsport, Pickaway county, brought to Columbus an unusual monster hornet nest. It was found on the farm of W. I. Woods, a mile and a half north of Williamsport. It measured about 36 inches in diameter and was about 2 feet deep.

"It is the largest I ever saw," said Mr. Walston. "It is a very large nest, and is made from moss from trees and fence rails and are waterproof. A family of from 300 to 500 live in each nest and they leave when the cold weather comes. The next spring the queen returns and deposits eggs and a new family is raised. Hornets will attack you more quickly than any other insect. They are always on the alert for trouble. One or two stand guard at the entrance to the nest and they spot an enemy fifty or seventy-five yards away and will fly out to give battle to him."

"When these sentinels see trouble they give the signal to those inside and then hurry to meet the enemy. If you should raise your hand at a distance they would see the movement and interpret it as a hostile one, and then look out. If you do not bother them they will not bother you, but do not get in their way. They sting whatever they hit," Columbus Dispatch.

A Big Profit.

As the result of a $500 investment made several years ago, W. C. Arp of Terre Haute, former master mechanic at the Panhandle shops at Logansport, Ind., is said to have become independently wealthy. With some railroad friends he invested $500 in vanadium mines in South America, and these mines were recently sold to an English syndicate for $500,000. Arp receiving $600,000 as his share.

Just closed, the Yarmouth and Lowestoft herring season has yielded 1,000,000 herrings, which sold for $5,000,000.

ONE SHOT FAILS; RELOADS GUN TO TAKE HIS LIFE

WISCONSIN MAN, BLEEDING FROM Gaping Wound in Side, FIRES SECOND CHARGE.

POWDER SETS FIRE TO CLOTHES.

Stole $1000, Returned It and Was Pardoned, but Smittings of Conscience Drove Him to Suicide.

KIND WORDS ADD TO REMORSE.

REEDSBURG, Wis., March 30.—[Special.]—Death, self inflicted, ended the morbid contrition and smittings of conscience which Oliver Smith found intolerable and worse than the unknown mysteries in the hereafter. His body, still warm, and the clothes afire, was found a few minutes after he had fired two shots into himself from a single-barreled shotgun.

Smith was a youth of 25 years who drove a dray wagon route between Lavalle and Lime Ridge, and enjoyed the confidence of his patrons to a high degree. Last week a package containing $1000 was entrusted to his care, but when delivered in Lavalle, only blank paper was found where the money had been.

Admits Taking Money.

The consignee put Smith through a close examination and after being questioned at considerable length the young drayman broke down and admitted that in a weakness he had just abstracted the $1000 and substituted blank paper in its stead.

Inasmuch as the money was returned intact, none of the persons interested cared to prosecute Smith and beyond giving him a sound lecture, they let the matter drop. Heretofore, the young man had been honest and hard working and his penitence was so genuine that the owners of the money heartily pitied him.

However, the kind words of those who might have sent him to the penitentiary seemed only to add to Smith's remorse and seemingly the pangs of conscience finally proved too much for him to bear.

Reloads the Weapon.

The charge failed to prove instantly fatal, and although bleeding copiously over the great wound in his side, Smith reloaded the weapon and fired a second charge of shot into his body. So close did he hold the muzzle that the burning powder set fire to the suicide's clothing and when the sound of the shot attracted neighbors they found the corpse burning. The suicide caused a sensation here when the facts became known.

Laborer Commits Suicide.

SHERBOGAN, Wis., March 30.—[Special.]—Fred Diehl, aged 30, a laborer, committed suicide by shooting himself in the head with a .38-caliber revolver in a hospital, where he died a half hour later.

SCARLET FEVER CLOSES ASYLUM.

Mild Epidemic Breaks Out at Mendota and No New Patients Will Be Admitted.

MADISON, Wis., March 30.—[Special.]—A mild epidemic of scarlet fever has broken out at the state insane asylum at Mendota and it has been quarantined by the board of control. An attendant came down with the disease ten days ago. Then Dr. Mary Sauthoff was stricken and soon two inmates, a man and a woman, contracted the fever.

The board of control today is sending out circular letters to county judges all over the state telling them they must not commit any patients to this institution for the present. The hospital is crowded and in order to make room for any more it would be necessary to remove some of the chronic patients to county hospitals and to transfer those who have been exposed at Mendota to other hospitals, might precipitate a widespread epidemic.

"The situation is not alarming, but at the same time the greatest care must be exercised," said M. H. Tappin, secretary of the board of control today.

COUNTY BOARD ENJOINED.

Poor Commissioner Takes Drastic Step to Prevent Being Ousted.

LA CROSSE, Wis., March 30.—[Special.]—The La Crosse county board of supervisors today removed Poor Commissioner Hauser from office for charges of insolent treatment toward applicants for charity, has been tied up by an injunction prohibiting it from taking any action in the matter and at the same time quo warranto proceedings were started in circuit court to deprive twenty-one members of the board, constituting a majority, from office on the grounds that they are members or interested in companies which sold supplies to the county, thereby disqualifying them from holding office. The case was started by Hauser's attorney, who will put up a bitter fight.

BONFIRE CAUSES DEATH.

Woman Burns Ravings and Fire Spreads to Her Clothes.

GALESVILLE, Wis., March 30.—[Special.]—While raking the yard and burning ravings, a woman named Mrs. D. C. Hunt of Independence and before help could reach her she was a living torch. On some parts of her body the flesh was burned until the bones were exposed. She lived but a few hours. Deceased was 62 years of age.

Millions Not for Lobsters.

Where Checkers Are Made.

It seems inconceivable that two men can be kept steadily employed the year round making checkers. Yet that is what is done in a mill at Bethel. The average output of checkers from the mill is 800 barrels. It has been as high as 1000 and down to 600, but 800 is the average. This does not sound very large, but when the figures are worked out it is found to be a lot. In every barrel shipped there are 30,000 checkers of the ordinary size, while in 800 barrels there are 28,800,000, or 1,200,000 sets of twenty-four checkers each. That is to say, with the output of this Maine mill 2,400,000 persons could be playing checkers at the same time.—Kennebec (Me.) Journal.

NEBRASKA HAS STORM

FOUR INCHES OF SNOWFALL AND DRIFT BADLY.

All Wires West Are Down and Northwestern Traffic Is Completely Tied Up.

NORFOLK, Neb., March 30.—The Rocky mountain storm swept over into northwestern Nebraska today. Four inches of snow fell and drifted badly. All wires west are down and northwestern train traffic is completely tied up. No trains were sent into the storm because of the loss of wires and through trains being held up at various points.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 30.—March's Leonine exit which began with the prostration of telegraph and telephone wires and the blocking of railroad trains in the Rocky mountains and eastward made itself felt in a diminishing degree in Minnesota today. In the northern part of this state snow was predicted.

The telegraph companies reported conditions between Denver and Kansas City worse, if anything, than Tuesday. The blizzard continued around Littleton, Castle Rock, Limon and Kimball, Colo., and the snow is said to lie 6 inches deep in the city of Denver. In the railroad cuts it has drifted to a height of 5 and 6 feet. Owing to the loss of wires railroads are without definite knowledge of some of the mountain and prairie trains. Rotary plows are at work in the cuts.

OGDEN, Utah, March 30.—On account of conditions arising from Tuesday's storm, Southern Pacific trains were sent west from Ogden over the old Central Pacific line north of the great Salt Lake today. Work trains are rapidly repairing the storm damage to the embankments.

ONCE TOOK BRIBES; SEEKS OFFICE AGAIN.

Albert L. Gray, Green Bay Alderman, Will Run for Alderman—Citizenship Restored.

GREEN BAY, Wis., March 30.—[Special.]—Albert L. Gray, a former member of the city council, who pleaded guilty to accepting bribes in connection with city contract work several years ago, and Henry Porth, one of Gray's crowd, who also was convicted of grafting, are candidates for the office of alderman at the spring election of Tuesday, April 5.

Both of these men, aided by their friends, prevailed upon Gov. Davidson to restore them to citizenship about a year ago. Now Gray is a candidate for a seat in the council from the Seventh ward and Porth from the Third ward.

Thus far there has been practically no fight against Porth, but representative merchants in the seventh ward have put up a candidate who is expected to beat Gray. This man is John L. Wilcox, who has been active in public affairs for a number of years. He was put up to keep Gray out of the council after two other candidates had been prevailed upon to withdraw from the field.

The present representative, Theodore Leicht, is one of the candidates who agreed to pull out of the race to keep Gray out of the council, and H. F. Camm is the other candidate. Support is being given Mr. Wilcox by voters in other wards and there is much sentiment against Gray and Porth.

MAY LIVE A CENTURY.

Widow Will Celebrate Her Ninety-ninth Birthday Soon and Has Good Health.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., March 30.—[Special.]—Mrs. Anna Pavay of Oak Center will celebrate her ninety-ninth birthday, Friday, April 1. In spite of her advanced age she is still in fairly good health and continues to take an active interest in current events.

"Grandma Pavay," as she is generally known, was born in Hurdley, England, married William Pavay in 1828, and moved to Watertown with her husband, who resided there until death. Her only living relatives are two grandsons, E. H. Pavay of Oak Center, with whom she resides, and Mary Pavay of Beaver Dam.

WILL ADVERTISE WISCONSIN.

State Immigration Commission Plans Exhibits at State Fairs.

MADISON, Wis., March 30.—The state immigration commission has decided to authorize the making of exhibits of the products of Wisconsin at the state fairs to be held in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Ohio next fall. The exhibits, which will be made under the direction of Secretary A. D. Campbell of the immigration committee and Secretary Frederick Cranfield of the State Horticultural society, arrangements also was made for an exhibit at the meeting of the national land congress in Chicago next winter. The publication of a variety of literature in the interest of immigration promotion was authorized.

Plaster Doctor Procures Papers After Much Opposition from Officials.

HUDSON, Wis., March 30.—John Till, healer of plaster fame, has been admitted to full citizenship by Judge Helms, after a somewhat stormy passage, brought on by R. S. Coleman of St. Paul, special agent of the immigration department. Objection to issuing the papers had been made on the grounds that Till has four times been arrested charged with violating the Wisconsin law relative to the practice of medicine without a state license, and that the immigration department charged Till is not a bona fide resident and likely any day to go back to Austria.

Wisconsin Man Passes.

FOND DU LAC NEWS.

GREEKS QUIT COLONY.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., March 26.—[Special.]—The Greek colony has been depopulated to such an extent that it soon may be but a memory. During the last two or three days 150 of the 200 Hellenes have left the city to take employment on the railroads. Most of them said they would not return but would go to live in the larger cities. The departure of the Greeks is welcomed by the police department as many disturbances occurred in the colony regularly.

FIRE KILLS CHICKENS.

A fire that destroyed the barn of Frank E. McKee, Walnut street, Friday night, twenty-five chickens were smothered. A lamp exploded.

FISHERMEN ARE ARRESTED.

Gail McKibbin, J. Schramm, W. Sonnenberg and J. Pommerich were arrested on the charge of violating the game and fish laws by Deputy Game Warden A. R. Brunet. When arraigned in police court they pleaded guilty and paid fines of $25 and costs each. Fred Gallagher, who was arrested for springing a fish with the aid of a lantern, had his case adjourned until this morning.

FOOD CONCERN WISCONSIN.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., March 28.—[Special.]—The National Food company, one of the largest concerns of its kind in the country, intends to treble the capacity of its present plant within the next two years. At the annual meeting of the company the officers elected were: President, Robert Zinke; vice president, T. E. Pritchard; secretary, treasurer and manager, A. H. Richardson. The company is gradually extending its business into all parts of the United States.

PREPARE FOR CONTESTS.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., March 28.—[Special.]—The contest over the estate of Harvey Durand will be held in circuit court the last week in April, according to Attorney H. E. Sweet, representing the contestants. The attorneys for both parties in the action have been engaged for the past three weeks gathering testimony for the trial. It is expected there will be sensational developments, as many prominent society people are involved.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

At a party held Saturday afternoon the engagement of Miss Elsie Collins to Rev. Forest H. Woodside, a Methodist pastor of Boston, Mass., was announced, the wedding to take place in June.

ASSAULTS OLD MAN.

Joe Steffens was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs in police court Saturday afternoon for committing an unprovoked assault upon Nicholas Thielmann, an aged resident of Marytown. It is said that Steffens, while in a drunken condition, followed a young lady to the Thielmann home and while he could not gain an entrance went to the barn, where he pounded Thielmann until the latter became unconscious. It is feared Mr. Thielmann may not recover.

AGASSIZ, HEAD OF BIG COPPER COMPANY, DEAD

PRESIDENT OF CALUMET & HECLA PASSES AWAY ON STEAMSHIP ADRIATIC.

MADE FORTUNE IN A MINE.

Developed Deposits in Famous Shaft of Lake Superior County, Starting in 1866.

AUTHORITY ON NATURAL HISTORY.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 20.—Alexander Agassiz, the eminent naturalist and president of the Calumet & Hecla Mining Company, died yesterday on the steamship Adriatic, Southampton for New York. The news came in a wireless message from Rodolphe Agassiz, his son, to Maj. Henry L. Higginson of Lee, Higginson & Co.

Sketch of His Career.

Alexander Agassiz was born in Neuchâtel, Switzerland, December 17, 1815. He followed his father, Louis Agassiz, to the United States in 1849. His early education was received abroad, and after his arrival in this country he prepared for Harvard, graduating in 1855. Then he studied engineering at the Lawrence Scientific school where, in 1857, he received the degree of B. S., after which he took a further course in the chemical department, and also taught in his father's school for young ladies.

In 1859, Mr. Agassiz went to California as an assistant on the coast survey, and was engaged on the northwest boundary. He collected specimens for the museum at Cambridge, and visited the principal mines. In 1860, he returned to Cambridge and became assistant in zoology at the museum, taking charge of it in 1865 during his father's absence in Brazil. In 1865, he became engaged in coal mining in Pennsylvania and during the following year in the copper mines of Lake Superior, where he was engaged until 1870 as superintendent of the Calumet and Hecla mines. He developed these deposits until they became the most successful copper mines in the world.

Made Fortune from Mines.

From the wealth which these mines brought to Mr. Agassiz, he made gifts to Harvard amounting to $500,000. During the next two years he went to Europe where he examined the museums and collections of many countries. He was made curator of the museum at Harvard upon his father's death, but resigned in 1885, owing to ill health.

Mr. Agassiz wrote a number of books on zoology and was considered an authority on natural history. The news of Prof. Agassiz's death came as a great surprise to his friends and relatives. He had been heard from frequently since he went abroad about New Year's time, and was supposed to be in the best of health.

Prof. Agassiz, besides being president of the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company, was a director of the Illinois, Centennial, Manitowish and Smuggler-Union Mining Companies, Frontenac Copper Company, New England Exploration Company, Marysville Dredging Company and Tecumseh Copper Company.

PRISON FOR MARKERS

INDIANA BANKERS GET FIVE AND SEVEN YEARS.

Judge Sentences One to Longer Term for Trying to Place Blame Upon His Brother.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 20.—"I hope I may never see a lower depth of depravity than that which you reached when you tried to escape by making your brother out a thief," said Judge A. B. Anderson in the United States district court today, as he sentenced William H. Marker, former cashier of the First National bank of Tipton, Ind., to ten years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., for embezzling $100,000.

The brother, Noah R. Marker, who was assistant cashier of the bank, was sentenced to seven years, "because," the judge said, "he is the younger brother and pleaded guilty, while the elder brother stood trial and committed perjury."

"I want to point out to the national banks of Indiana," said Judge Anderson, in sentencing the brothers, "that I could sentence William Marker to any term ranging between 5 and 850 years, and Noah Marker to from 5 to 510 years."

"At this one term of court have come before me ten cases of bank defalcation. I am going to try severity as well as celerity in such cases from now on. This thing must stop."

LAND FOR UNIVERSITY.

Two Million Dollar Estate of Theodore Kearney of Fresno, Cal., Goes to State Institution.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 20.—According to a decree of the appellate court, the $2,000,000 estate of Theodore Kearney of Fresno is to become a part of the land holdings of the University of California as directed in the pioneer's will. Dennis Kearney of Sand Lot fame, claimed to have been a cousin of Theodore Kearney, and who contested the will, died while the case was pending.

Death Among the Unmarried.

Dr. Jacques Bertillon, the great French statistician, is making a special study of marriages and longevity. He says: "Take 1000 bachelors and 1000 married men and count the death rate within a given period, and you will find the death rate among the bachelors to be double that of the married men. My figures cover from the ages of 18 to 84, and the death rate of the bachelors is double throughout." Continuing M. Bertillon said that the mortality of unmarried women was also greater than that of the wives and mothers. Death plays the greatest havoc among widows. The doctor said he had proved that the mortality among young widows from 20 to 25 years of age was double that of married women of the same age. His statistics cover many countries and many different races of people.

POSTAL SUSPECT ONCE ESCAPED IN JANESVILLE

NEW YORK POLICE BELIEVE THEY HAVE MAN WANTED FOR RICHMOND AND OTHER THEFTS.

MANY REWARDS FOR "EDDY FAY"

Caught with Accomplice While Trying to Get Away with $30,000 in Stamps in Trunks.

OWNS STRING OF RACE HORSES.

NEW YORK, March 30.—With the lining up today at police headquarters of Frederick Cunningham and Frank Chester, the two men caught Tuesday night while trying to get away with trunks containing $30,000 in stamps stolen from the postoffice at Richmond, Va., the detective force stated its belief that it had made one of the most important captures in years.

One of the men arrested, the police believe, is "Eddy Fay," a much wanted fugitive, and for whose apprehension a total of about $20,000 in rewards have been offered in various cities. This prisoner is the one known as Cunningham. According to the detective bureau, "Fay" is wanted in Los Angeles, Cal., for blowing the safe of the postoffice in 1905 and getting away with $10,000 worth of stamps and $4000 in gold. There is $1000 reward for his capture for this job. Five years ago in Peoria, Ill., he blew the safe of the postoffice and got away with $30,000 worth of stamps. A year later he again blew the same safe and this time made off with $74,000 worth of stamps.

Broke Janesville Jail.

He was convicted and sent to jail in Springfield, Ill., in August, 1897, but broke out a short time later. He also broke jail in Janesville, Wis., where he had been sent for safe blowing. The detectives say there is a record of four murders against him.

"Fay," detectives say, is worth from $200,000 to $300,000 and owns a string of race horses. The police say they do not know much about the man caught with "Fay."

Both, after arraignment in the Tombs court, will be turned over to United States Commissioner Shields.

MANY CORPORATIONS NEGLECT TO PAY TAX.

One Thousand Fail to Make Returns to Internal Revenue Bureau on Income Statute.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 30.—One thousand corporations in existence at the time of the enactment of the new tax law last summer failed to make returns to the internal revenue bureau under the provision imposing a tax of 1 per cent. on their net income above $5000. A number openly disregarded the statute requiring them to submit such returns by March 1, and they will be subjected to heavy penalties. Others obtained extensions of time, while in numerous cases the organizations had dissolved before the close of the calendar year. As to these Attorney General Wickens has been asked for an opinion on which will depend the question whether action should be taken for the recovery of the taxes which they should have paid.

About $2,000,000 has been paid to the treasury on account of the corporation and twenty-two clerks are at work examining the 312,000 returns made, and are disposing of them at the rate of 10,000 a day. Their labors will be completed by May 10. The assessments which will be payable by the end of the fiscal year will be in the hands of the corporations by June 1.

SEES SPANISH REVOLT.

Lisbon Newspaper Says Government Has Discovered Plot Among Frontier Soldiers.

LISBON, March 20.—A sensation has been caused by the assertion of the Seculo that the government has discovered that a great number of the sergeants in the regiments garrisoned at Estremoz and Beja, near the Spanish frontier, are affiliated with secret revolutionary organizations which are planning to overthrow the monarchy. The paper says that there are suspicions and fears in other parts of the country.

FIGHTING IN LIBERIA.

Skirmishes Between Natives and Troops Continue—Intervention by Great Britain Desired.

LIVERPOOL, March 20.—Advises received here state that the fighting between the natives and Liberian troops at Cape Palmas, Liberia, continues, and is growing more serious. Rev. Mr. Speare, a native pastor at the mission in Cape Palmas, has been shot and killed, and the lives of the white residents are said to be in danger.

Hostile natives appear to be getting the better of the troops. The latter were sent in to stop the native trade in French territory. It was their excesses that caused the outbreak. The natives are said to be anxious to have a few Englishmen killed, with the object of bringing about intervention by Great Britain.

The Liberian gunboat Lark, temporarily commanded by a German officer, has bombarded the native villages, but this little damage. A German gunboat arrived, and its commander offered to bombard Hoffman station and Pluke, but the authorities declined assistance.

A Clergyman Seeks Fortune.

Rev. D. E. Mulvihill of Des Moines, Ia., has gone to Mexico to prove immense mining claims in the province of Sonora left by a man of similar name whom he believes to be an uncle. A German gunboat arrived, and its commander offered to bombard Hoffman station and Pluke, but the authorities declined assistance.

TWAIN'S TIN HALO.

Andrew Carnegie Tells a Funny Story in San Francisco.

When Andrew Carnegie was in San Francisco, recently, the Chamber of Commerce gave a banquet in his honor. Carnegie added to the good cheer by telling a story that concerned himself and Mark Twain.

"Mark Twain and I are firm friends," he said, "and write funny notes to each other—that is, his notes are funny. Just before I left New York I went to see him and he told me that he was having great difficulty in getting any really good Scotch 'work'.

"Now, I have some that is eighty years old, I gave some to President Harrison once. He had it with him on his campaign. I think it had something to do with the success of that campaign. It is good 'work,' so I sent some to Mark. A few days afterward I slipped on the street and wrenched my knee. When Clemens read about it, he said: 'Poor Carnegie, he ought to have sent me all that 'work'.

"When he wrote to thank me for it, his note was like this: 'If I had known what you were going to do when you stood by my bedside, I would have presented you with my halo. It is a good halo; it is pure tin and I paid the duty on it when it came down.'

Beautiful Wall Coatings for Homes.

In line with the progress of all other things in these modern days is the beautiful, perfect and sanitary wall coatings for our homes. Alabastine is the name of a rich, soft and velvety preparation for the decoration of walls and ceilings. It adheres to the walls of its own adhesive qualities. It is inexpensive, clean, artistic and so easily put on that any one can follow the printed directions on every package. Any shade or tint is easily produced. Alabastine is proof against insects or disease germs so prevalent in wall paper. It does not rub off and flake like kalsomine. A complete color plan for the walls of the home and stencils to help make the home beautiful, together with a book about home decorations and samples of color effects will all be sent free by the Alabastine Company, 482 Grandville avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich. This liberal offer to home decorators deserves careful perusal.

A Burned Child.

Richard A. Ballinger, secretary of the interior, tells of his first law case which he had at Kankakee, Ill. "I had hung out my shingle a good while before my client arrived," he said. "Finally, one came. He was a young fellow, a boy, whom three determined women had wedded in rapid succession, and he was being tried for bigamy. As all of the wives appeared against him we lost the case, and he got a term of two years, but this did not seem to worry him; in fact, he seemed anxious for more. He was taken to the penitentiary, and just before his term ended I got a letter from him. 'Do you think,' the bigamist wrote anxiously, 'it will be safe for me to come out?'"—Green Bag.

BATH HOUSES OF JAPAN.

George Ade Tells How the Little Brown People Enjoy Their Tub.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 25.—George Ade, international humorist, playwright, fancy stock breeder, globe trotter, past grand master of slang and what not, is at Hot Springs enjoying himself and contrasting the methods of baths and bathing with those which he enjoyed while in Japan.

"They have got hot springs over there, too, and when I say that I have seen a good deal of the bathers of Japan, and that they have seen a good deal of me also, I am not speaking figuratively. I am dealing in plain, naked facts. The bathhouses over there are not much like the ones down here. They are merely places where one can get wet. They sink a tub of water in the ground and you get in it and splash around until you have made a big noise and then get out and roll around on a mat until you think you are dry. In their eyes a bather is not judged by the thoroughness of his bath, but by the noise he makes when taking it. Well, I guess that is the general state of affairs of the world over, though, come to think about it, it is the fellow that makes the big splash that gets the credit. There was a man over there once who gained a great reputation as a bather, for every time he went into the water he made a noise like a snorting pig. One day the bathhouse stage carpenter rung up the drop curtain on him and there he was sitting at the edge of the tub, full dressed, and pounding on the water with a paddle.

"In former days over there both sexes bathed together promiscuously. Then a Jap legislator was seized by a reform spasm and had a law passed providing that each bath must be covered by a screen sheet. But he forgot to specify how it should be covered, and so the bathhouse proprietors got the sheets and hung them horizontally over the baths like a roof. Then the legislator came back at them again with another bill which provided that the sheets should be hung perpendicularly between the baths. But he forgot to specify the size of the sheet. I will show you that sheet that they hung up in front of my bath to screen me. Ade, who was in his bureau drawer. 'I can't find it. I must have used it for a handkerchief by mistake and sent it to the laundry.'

"Speaking about how to become successful, according to my idea the way to do is to keep hitting away in the same place until you have made an impression.

"That is the way a boxer does, doesn't he? He does not very often win by a single blow, but he keeps on striking away and after he has landed forty or fifty times in the same locality he has made a mark. The hit that wins is generally the last one. Now as an illustration take this here. One bath at this or any other place is not going to do any body much good. You have got to keep at it until the villainy is boiled out of you."

STYLES FOR MEN.

Gray, Blue, Green and Brown Popular in Their Order.

I have made a careful study of the colors of the new spring clothing and there is no doubt that grays will be the most popular, but in very few cases will they be plain grays. The majority will have purple, green, brown, blue or white stripes introduced, which will, however, be so fine that they will only give a tinge to the gray, but will, nevertheless, effectually destroy any somber appearance.

Next to grays, blues will be the most popular, and while many of these will be finished with twill or diagonal patterns, others will have very neat stripes woven in the pattern. These have a very stylish effect, combining in a marked manner neatness and smartness.

After gray and blue, the two most popular shades will be greens and browns. The shades in which these colors are offered are so subdued that they present a most refined appearance, and really make a pleasing change from the more popular colors.

The new patterns are mostly stripes of a subdued character. For instance, the stripes may be from one-half to one inch and a half apart, but they are indistinct in that many cases they are scarcely distinguishable except in the general effect they produce.

By far the larger number of materials prepared for spring wear are finished in what is known as the "clean" style; that is, they are smooth and have no rough hairs on the surface. Many of them have the worsted series finish, varied with a glossy stripe or a few silk threads introduced at intervals with good effect.

Such cloths have a very bright appearance and are very effective. They are varied by the duller surface woolen tweeds, which are also finished as smoothly as is possible.

In the effort to get this smooth effect in all the material to go into the fashionably dressed men's clothes this spring the manufacturers even go so far as to clip the hairs from the surface of all woolsens.

Thus the prevailing note in the new materials for the spring is subdued smartness, dressiness without pattern without loudness and color without being conspicuous. The variety offered is enormous.—W. D. P. Vincent, Editor Tailor and Cutter.

New Steamer Ordered for the Austro-American Line.

According to an agreement which the Austro-American line has with the Austrian government regarding their service to South American ports, they are compelled to build, within the next five years, new steamers which are to be constructed on Austrian wharves. To comply with the conditions agreed to, the steamship company has placed an order with the Cantieri Navale Triestino at Monfalcone for a new steamer which will be the fastest and largest in the Austro-American mercantile marine. This steamer will be 500 feet long, 62 feet in breadth and 28.6 feet in depth, and will have a double bottom according to the Zellular system, also 9 water-tight compartments. Two large cylinder double machines of 12,000-horsepower, will give the steamer a speed of 10 knots per hour, and her displacement will amount to 15,000 tons. The steamer will be equipped with Marconi wireless and all modern improvements for her safety. She will be able to carry comfortably in luxurious cabins, 100 first-class passengers, and 300 in the second-class. The accommodations to be allotted for third-class passengers will amount to 1650. The building of this steamer will commence at once so that she will be able to make her first voyage during the second half of 1911.

A Ragpicker's Fortune.

Mordecai Wolf Chasman, a rag-picker and second-hand clothes man, who was supposed by people of his neighborhood to be in abject poverty, died in St. Joseph's hospital last January. Just before his death he turned over to his wife several bankbooks, each showing an account under a different name and representing a total of about $5000.

Several days ago, it was learned yesterday, the widow, who lives at No. 314 Henry street, applied, through her lawyer, Sophie Mayer, for letters of administration, and found letters had already been issued to S. Mesch, who represented himself as a nephew of the dead man.

Mesch told the surrogate that Chasman had a wife still living in Russia, where Chasman and left her eighteen years ago, and claimed the estate in her name. A number of hearings were given by the surrogate, and the case has been adjourned until April 15 to give Mesch an opportunity to get evidence of his claims from abroad.—New York American.

MUSKRAT FOOD VALUE.

The Skins of These Animals Bring Seventy-five Cents Apiece—Supply Is Diminishing.

Musk rats are scarce down the river these days and the heretofore welcome legend, "Muskrat supper here tonight," is now seldom seen. In years gone by the salt marshes of Ecorse have yielded hundreds of thousands of muskrats, while the number spared and caught in traps now is numbered by the dozen only. This state of affairs prevails all over Michigan, and it is prophesied that next year the furriers will send the price of "near seal" coats many per cent. higher.

Various reasons are given by different people for the scarcity of "rats." The local dweller will tell you that the high water this year is to blame and that the muskrats are being drowned by landslides because they cannot reach the surface of the water for air. Others say that the burning over of the marshes is another prime cause. The fur men say, however, that the wonderful rise in price of muskrat skins causes a greater slaughter than ever before.

"We have considerable difficulty getting the carcasses," said William Anspach of the River Rouge clubhouse yesterday. "Just a few years ago it was not so serious, but now the trappers formerly captured hundreds each winter they are satisfied with a score now. Last winter the retail prices of the carcasses was but 10 cents, or two for a quarter when the muskrats were in raw furs, and cannot get one for less than 20 cents and from that up. We used to get large numbers from Monroe, but that source of supply also is cut off now."

"Muskrat skins are coming in slowly," said C. C. Blair, dealer in raw furs, recently. "The supply is running low, in my opinion, because there is a great demand for the skins. Michigan muskrats are greatly in demand and bring splendid prices. Good skins now fetch 75 cents each, while but a few years ago 10 cents was considered a good price. Muskrat skins are converted into the 'near seal' coats and are used for a great many other purposes. The government uses a large number in the making of caps for the soldiers.

"It is a mistake to suppose that the marshes are yielding fewer animals now because of the approach of the dwellings along the river. The animals are scarce because they are more closely hunted for their skins."

It was not many years ago that muskrat was a daily dinner for French residents down the river. No one can cook a carcass like an old French matron. Many years ago the Catholic church removed the ban on the flesh of the animal so that it could be eaten on Friday. The muskrat is one of the cleanest animals known. Not only is it careful of what it eats, but before eating a root or anything else the little animal patiently scrubs it free from dirt, not until every particle is removed will it eat it.

The name has had more influence in keeping people from eating the flesh than anything else. It is considered great fun to make a novice in eating muskrat. He is told that it is spirrel or any one of a dozen other animals to induce him to eat it. In ninety-nine cases in 100 the novice is converted at once after the compliments, and there was a crash never tires of singing the praises of the meat.—Detroit Free Press.

A LOVER'S DEATH.

Asphyxiated on the Eve of Return for Bride.

The cable carried the news to a girl in Santa de Collato, Spain, that Francis Vileo, for whom she had waited eight years, had died. Vileo was expected to marry within two weeks, would never return to her. Vileo was found dead in his room at 290 Windsor place, Brooklyn. In some manner the gas jet in his room had been left open and he was asphyxiated as he slept. Eight years ago Vileo, then 27 years old, wooed the girl in Spain and won her love. Her father, however, did not think Vileo rich enough and refused his consent. "I'll go to America," Vileo told his sweetheart, "and earn the money if you will wait for me."

Fortified by her promise that when he returned he would find her waiting, Vileo sailed for New York. He worked hard, and in a few years had saved enough to start a factory of his own on Fulton street, Manhattan. He prospered and saved, adding to his bank account each week.

Every week and sometimes more frequently, came a letter from Spain, always in the same handwriting, and every letter Vileo answered. Two weeks ago he told his landlady, Mrs. Ernest Morandez, that he had enough money, and that he would sail for Spain tomorrow. He intended to marry and bring his bride back to Brooklyn.

He returned home in the best of spirits. He had arranged his business so that he could go for several weeks, had taken passage on a steamer, and had drawn $800 for his expenses. He showed Mme. Morandez a beautiful diamond ring he had bought for the girl in Spain and had talked of his plans for the future. Mrs. Morandez went to his room to call him, next morning. As she approached the door, she noticed the smell of gas. She opened it and found Vileo dead in bed. The diamond ring, in its case, was under his pillow. Dr. Murray, who was called, said he had been dead four or five hours. In his pocket was found $769 and in one of the drawers in the dresser were more than 200 letters from the girl in Spain.—New York American.

START DAMAGE ACTIONS.

Injured Workmen Sue Brewing and Traction Companies.

Richard Zimmerman, a carpenter, had brought suit against the Schlitz Brewing company for $1000 damages, and injuries sustained while shingling the roof of a building owned by the brewing company, at Seventh and Chestnut streets. He fell twenty feet, breaking his right arm and collarbone.

Joseph F. Rygel, a machinist, has begun a $5000 damage suit against the United States Light and Heating company of Maine. While employed in the Milwaukee branch of the Maine corporation, Rygel set up that he was ordered to do work with a rip-saw, and that four of his fingers were permanently crippled.

The Real Authority.

"Are you going to take your motor car out today?"

"I don't know," answered Mr. Chuggins in a tone of slight embarrassment. "If you take it out, where will you go?"

"I can't say positively."

"How long would it take you to get to Philadelphia?"

"Look here! There's no use of questioning me in that matter. I'm only the proprietor of the car—not the chauffeur."—Washington Star.

A Diet of Wild Honey.

Wild honey as a change is an agreeable sweetener, but after a few days constantly partaking of it the European palate rejects it as nauseous and almost disgusting. Our experience extended over a fortnight, during which period our food consisted solely of it and maize. It has escaped the Biblical commentators that one of the principal hardships that John the Baptist must have undergone was his diet of wild honey.—National Geographical Magazine.

Not an Inch of Healthy Skin Left.

My little son, a boy of five, broke out with an itching rash. Three doctors prescribed for him, but he kept getting worse until we could not dress him any more. They finally advised me to try a certain medical college, but its treatment did no good. At the time I was induced to try Cuticura he was so bad that I had to cut his hair off and put the Cuticura Ointment on him on bandages, as it was impossible to touch him with the bare hand. There was not one square inch of skin on his whole body that was not affected. He was one mass of sores. The bandages used to stick to his skin and in removing them it used to take the skin off with them, and the screams from the poor child were heartbreaking. I began to think that he would never get well, but after the second application of Cuticura Ointment I began to see signs of improvement, and with the third and fourth applications the sores commenced to dry up. His skin peeled off twenty times, but it finally yielded to the treatment. Now I can say that he is entirely cured, and a stronger and healthier boy you never saw than he is to-day, twelve years or more since the cure was effected. Robert Wattam, 1148 Forty-eighth St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 9, 1909.

Double-Track Difficulties.

"We've got a grand road now," said an enthusiastic Grand Trunk man to a Canadian Pacific man. "We've got it double-tracked clear through to Chicago."

"Huh!" said the Canadian Pacific man to the Grand Trunk man. "I don't see what you want with two tracks. You can't keep your trains on one."—Saturday Evening Post.

Have You Tried?

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? We can furnish positive proof that it has made many remarkable cures after all other means had failed.

Women who are suffering with some form of female illness should consider this.

As such evidence read these two unsolicited testimonial letters. We guarantee they are genuine and honest statements of facts.

Cresson, Pa.—"Five years ago I had a bad fall, and hurt myself inwardly. I was under a doctor's care for nine weeks, and when I stopped I grew worse again. I sent for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, took it as directed, and now I am a stout, hearty woman."—Mrs. Ella E. Aikie, Cresson, Pa.

Baird, Wash.—"A year ago I was sick with kidney and bladder troubles and female weakness. The doctors gave me up. All they could do was to just let me go as easily as possible. I was advised by friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. I am completely cured of my ills, and I am nearly sixty years old."—Mrs. Sarah Leighton, Baird, Wash.

Evidence like the above is abundant showing that the derangements of the female organism which breed all kinds of miserable feelings and which ordinary practice does not cure, are the very disorders that give way to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are afflicted with similar troubles, after reading two such letters as the above, should be encouraged to try this wonderfully helpful remedy.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

The Overland The Simplest Car

The Overland outsells all other cars, largely because of its matchless simplicity.

The Overland—hardly more than two years old—has become the sensation of motordom.

Four factories, employing 4,000 men, turn out 140 Overlands daily to meet the overwhelming demand.

Texas takes 1,500, Kansas 1,000, Iowa 1,000, Nebraska 750—all for this season's delivery. So it is in every section where this remarkable car has been known for a year.

One reason is that the Overland is almost trouble-proof. The usual complex features have all been eliminated.

A child can master the car in ten minutes. A novice can run it and care for it.

One simply pushes pedals forward or backward to get on low speed, high speed or reverse. It is as simple as walking.

The car almost cares for itself. Every motor Many an owner has run from 7,000 car lover should read them. Cut out to 10,000 miles without even cleaning this coupon as a reminder to write a spare plug.

WEST BEND MARBLE and GRANITE WORKS.

Having installed a pneumatic plant at my works, I cordially invite you to visit my place of business at any time when convenient, to see the new cutting and lettering device. With this new plant I am able to do work considerably faster than by the former hand method, and can therefore give you better prices on all kinds of work. Solicit a share of your business and thanking you for past patronage.
J. HOMRIG, Proprietor.

Nervous Collapse.

This is generally the result of worry or overwork. Nature will in time repair the damage done, but nature often needs assistance. Not only must the nerve forces be restored, but the system must be nourished and strengthened.

Drink Lithia Beer

This is a splendid restorative and invigorator. The hops induce refreshing sleep. The nutritive element of the barley assists in rebuilding wasted tissues. Lithia beer produces a good appetite, aids digestion and its mildly stimulating effect brings about a cheerful state of mind.

Sometimes you break your glasses

Or the mainspring of your watch, or a ring, and then you need our services—badly. Maybe you want a rush job done.

Bring it here. Tell us to hurry, and we will oblige you at the earliest possible moment. That is what we keep a repair shop for. We like to be busy, and you can't very well work us too hard.

The little job that brings us cents is accepted as gladly as something with more money in it.

Please remember this when you require the services of a jewelry fixer.
