TO PREACH TUBERCULOSIS ON SUNDAY, DEC. 18

Wisconsin Pastors Asked to Help Christmas Seal Campaign and Crusade Against Consumption

Next Sunday, Dec. 18, has been designated as Tuberculosis Sunday in Wisconsin and every pastor is being urged to speak of the crusade against consumption and the present Christmas seal campaign, whereby the crusade is financed, on that day. Many ministers in Milwaukee and elsewhere have offered to devote their sermons entirely to tuberculosis.

Christmas seals have taken Wisconsin by storm and in many places the sale is larger than last year. Other towns, however, are holding off and thus lowering the average for the state. While the sale is as good as last year, it will take great effort to keep Wisconsin at the head of the list because at least twice as many seals must be sold in this state to accomplish this.

The prize competitions are not bringing the response they deserve. Although local campaign managers, patriotic citizens who are giving their time and labor to the cause, are working hard, they are not receiving the support needed.

Seals used on mail matter should not be pasted on the address side, but on the reverse. It should be remembered that the use of seals is not confined to mail matter. They should be stuck on anything from a package of needles to a locomotive. One woman's club has sent out children with seals to put one next to every spit mark on the sidewalks. This is a splendid protest against the filthy habit which in itself is responsible for the spread of consumption.

Merchants in many places are offering numerous prizes for local competitions among children and older people in order to stimulate interests in the big prizes offered by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association and the campaign in general. Socials and entertainments are being held in other places and the Christmas seals are being used to buy admission. Only a little more than a week remains before the end of the campaign, December 24th, and everyone should buy seals now.

Cows Affected by Tuberculosis.

Thos. W. Salter, of Salter, Washington county, had his herd of cattle tested on Nov. 25, last, by Milo Salter, who found that seventeen of them were affected by tuberculosis. The deceased stock was immediately shipped to Milwaukee and there slaughtered and examined. Out of the seventeen head two were ordered to be burned, while the others, being only slightly affected, were pronounced fit for beef and ordered to be sold. Mr. Salter was present at the time the stock was slaughtered.—Hartford Times.

Alarm of Fire Causes Scare.

The citizens of Allenton were almost thrown into a panic last week Thursday evening when the fire alarm was sounded. The barn of Theo. Steger, one and a half mile northeast of the village caught fire and together with some farm implements was destroyed. The barn was recently purchased by Mrs. John Bingen, of Allenton. The cause of the fire is not known, but it seems to have been of incendiary origin. There was no insurance.—Hartford Times.

44 Geese Bring $97.15.

Jacob Hassinger of the town of Ashford marketed to L. Rosenheimer's last Thursday a load of dressed geese for which he received $97.15. The load consisted of 44 of the very choicest geese and weighed 670 lbs. It was the best and largest consignment ever received at Rosenheimer's. The market price paid Mr. Hassinger was 14¢ cts. per lb.

DEATHS DURING THE WEEK

Three Well Known Women Have Gone to Their Reward.

MRS. PETER MEETH

Mrs. Peter Meeth, nee Delia Martin, daughter-in-law of Mrs. John Meeth, of St. Michaels, died at her home in Waukesha, Wednesday, December 7, 1910, after a three months illness.

Mrs. Meeth was born in the town of Genesee, Waukesha county 41 years ago, where she spent most of her life. She leaves to mourn her loss, a grieving husband, one daughter, 10 years old, three sons, 8, 6 and 4 years old, seven brothers and three sisters, viz: Thomas of Mukwonago, Wis; Joseph of West Superior, Wis; Edward, Peter and Arthur of Waukesha; William and James at Genesee; Mrs. Katie McCarthy of South Dakota; Mrs. Mary Martin of Rozeville, Iowa; Mrs. Julia Halleth of New Richmond, Wis. The remains were taken to Genesee, the home of her mother where they were buried Saturday morning. Those from this neighborhood who attended the funeral were: Mrs. Math Schladweiler, Mike Jacob and Henry Meeth and John Hecker of St. Michaels and Mrs. Joe Hertel of Sheboygan. Six of the deceased schoolmates acted as pall bearers. May she rest in peace.

MRS. CARL MEILAHN

Gloom has been cast over this community by the death of Mrs. Albertina Meilahn, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Albert Ramel in town Auburn on Monday, December 12, 1910, after a lingering illness of two years with nervous troubles.

Mrs. Meilahn was an old resident of the town of Kewaskum. She was born on Nov. 11, 1841 in Petershagen, Pommerania, Germany. When a girl of 14, she immigrated to North America locating in Canada. In 1861, she married Carl Meilahn, soon after the marriage they settled in town of Kewaskum, where she lived up to January 1909, when she went to the town of Auburn to spend the remaining days with her daughter. Her husband preceded her in death on August 4, 1908. Their union was blessed with 6 children, five of which are still living to mourn the loss and whose names are: Mrs. Albert Ramel of Auburn, John of Cascade, Carl of town Kewaskum, Mrs. Ernest Ramthun of New Fane and William of Madison.

The news of Mrs. Meilahn's death was received with profound sorrow among her many friends and in the neighborhood where she had resided so long. She belonged to that class of sturdy pioneers who settled in the town of Kewaskum fifty years ago. During all those years she was universally respected among her neighbors. She was a true Christian and dearly beloved by everyone.

The funeral was held yesterday, Friday at 1:00 P. M. from the Ev. Luth. St. Lucas church with interment in the congregation's cemetery. Rev. Greve officiating. The bereaved relatives have our sympathy.

MRS. FREDIREKE ETTA

Death again reigned in the Etta family last Thursday, Dec. 15, 1910, when the Almighty called to his own Mrs. Fredireke Etta, of the town of Auburn, at 11:45 a. m., after an illness of only seven days with pneumonia. This was the fifth attack Mrs. Etta had suffered. Deceased was born on Oct. 14, 1846, at Neugart, Germany. In 1869, together with her parents, she immigrated to America, settling at Milwaukee, where they lived for a few years and then removed to the town of Scott, Sheboygan county. On March 15, 1882, she was married to Andrew Etta, after which she lived on the present homestead. Her husband preceded her in death a number of years ago. Their union was blessed with seven children, four of whom still live to mourn the heavy loss, viz: John and Julius at home, William of Beechwood and Herman of Coleman, Wis. Mrs. Etta was well known in this community. She was a woman of sturdy ways and made the acquaintance of everyone she met. She was held in high esteem by all. Her death is a heavy loss to her surviving children. The funeral will be held next Monday, Dec. 19th, from the Evangelical church at Beechwood, with interment in the congregation's cemetery, Rev. Richart officiating. The Statesman extends to the bereaved children and relatives its deepest heartfelt sympathy.

Parents, Attention.

The following is an extract from the school laws, touching upon the attendance of pupils. Give it the consideration it needs and see if it affects you:

"Any person having under his control any child between the ages of seven and fourteen years or any child between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years not regularly and lawfully employed in any useful employment, or service, at home, or elsewhere, shall cause such child to be enrolled and attend some public, parochial or private school regularly for not less than eight school months. The statute defines regular attendance as an attendance of twenty days in each school month, unless the child can furnish some legal excuse.

"Any person who shall violate the provisions of this section shall upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than fifty dollars together with costs of prosecution or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court, for each offense."

Put Your Money in the Banks.

Don't take your money out of the bank and bury it. Skunks or squirrels or dogs will destroy it. Don't put it in your stockings because you can put your stockings to better use by wearing them. Don't wrap it up in an old newspaper or an old rag and hide it in some corner, because the rats will surely get hold of it and destroy it. The house is no place for your money anyway. Burglars get it and carry it off and then you lament your foolishness in taking it out of the bank. If you want to invest your money let it stay in the bank—if it is there. All this drawing money out of the bank and hoarding it contracts the currency and produces a stringency in the money-market. The times may be the best imaginable and all the wise legislation conceivable adopted, yet a panicky feeling can be suddenly started by a concert of action on the part of the people in withdrawing their deposits from the bank.

The money in the banks does not belong to the banks. It is the people's money. It is put in the banks for convenience and safety. The banks use it and the business men borrow it. The great share of the business of the country is done with borrowed money. If the people withdraw their money the banks can't make loans, and the business men, unable to borrow, go by the board, and this condition of things continued any great length of time produces a panic, and then those who have drawn their money out of the banks, and in reality produced a panic, will find they are the first to suffer.

If you have any money you are not using put it in the bank.

LORIMER ACQUITTED

SENATOR IS CLEARED OF BRIBERY BY U. S. SENATE PROBERS.

REPORT IS MADE UNANIMOUS

It Now Goes to Full Committee and Later to Upper House for Ratification—Allegations Are Unsustained by Testimony.

Washington.—The subcommittee of the congressional committee on election which investigated charges of bribery in the election of Senator William Lorimer Monday unanimously voted to report to the committee on elections that the charges were without proof.

The committee took up the evidence in its entirety at an executive session. It canvassed the testimony, weighed the evidence and the arguments and took into consideration all of the facts that have been advanced in connection with the charges concerning Lorimer's election and decided there had been shown no foundation for the charges that bribery had entered into the case in connection with Mr. Lorimer's election.

The motion finally was offered to report to the full committee of the senate that the charges had not been proved. On this motion there was no dissenting vote in the subcommittee. Following this action the subcommittee's report will be prepared for the full committee at once, and the report will be sent to the senate within a short time.

The charge that Senator Lorimer had purchased his seat in the United States senate was first made publicly when the confession of Charles A. White, a member of the Illinois legislature from O'Fallon, was published on April 30, 1910. The names of Robert E. Wilson, Lee O'Neil Browne, H. J. C. Beckemeyer and Michael Link were mentioned as having been involved in the purchase of the senatorial toga. White confessed that he had been paid $1,000 for his Lorimer vote by Lee O'Neil Browne, the minority leader in Springfield. White himself was a Democrat, and Senator Lorimer had been elected by a combination of Democrats and Republicans.

Immediately after the publication of the story all the legislators involved were summoned to the state's attorney's office in Chicago. Under a grilling examination lasting several days and under the threats of prosecution on perjury charges, confessions of the truth of White's charges were gotten from Link and Beckemeyer. An indictment was returned at once in Cook county charging Lee O'Neil Browne with bribery, and another indictment was returned in Sangamon county carrying a similar charge against State Senator John Broderick. Robert E. Wilson was also indicted for bribery and Joseph Clark of Vandalla was indicted on a charge of perjury, he having denied receiving any portion of the money alleged to have been paid him for the Lorimer vote. The indictments against Broderick, Wilson and Clark are still pending in Cook and Sangamon counties.

Lee O'Neil Browne was tried twice in the criminal court of Cook county. The first time the jury disagreed and the second jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

SAVED FROM DEATH AT SEA

PASSENGERS AND CREW OF WRECKED STEAMER SAFE.

One Hundred and Six Persons Are Taken from Olympia in Safety by Relief Boats.

Valdez, Alaska.—All the 106 persons on the Alaska Steamship company's steamship Olympic, which went on the rocks at Blight island, Prince William sound, Saturday night, were taken off the ship, together with the mails and baggage, and were conveyed to Valdez and Elmbar.

The Olympic left Cordova after unloading a large quantity of coal in her afterhold and soon ran into a fierce gale. The empty stern stood too high out of the water, and in the tempest the ship became unmanageable and was spun about by the wind. About midnight she went hard and fast on the Blight island reef.

Wireless Operator Hayes sent out the distress call, which was picked up at Cordova and Valdez, and also gave as much information of the wreck as he could, for the water soon put out the fires and made the wireless unworkable. The government launch Donaldson from Fort Lisicum and the steamship Juno left at once for Blight island and took off the passengers without mishap to any of them. The crew also was saved.

It is hoped to save the freight on the Olympic, but it is feared the vessel will be a total loss. A rock pierced the ship's hold. The vessel was valued at $250,000 the cargo at $50,000.

CUMMINS HITS TARIFF LAW

Begins Contest for Change in Rules to Permit Revision Schedule by Schedule.

Washington.—Contending that the present tariff law imposes excessive duties and that the country at large demands its amendment, Senator Cummins of Iowa delivered a speech in the senate Tuesday in advocacy of his resolution limiting the power of amendment of bills dealing with the separate schedules of the law.

The speech was the first attack of the session on the Payne-Aldrich law, and it precipitated a general discussion in which Senators Aldrich, Hale, Lodge and Carter took part. Declaring then that under existing parliamentary usage in the house and senate the amendment of a tariff law is out of the question, he contended that the first step to be taken was the modification of the rules so as to render it possible to amend an individual provision of the tariff law without taking up the entire tariff question.

"The real issue," he said, "is whether we shall so amend our rules as to permit the amendment of the law, schedule for schedule." Senator Aldrich expressed concurrence with the Iowa senator.

"I think," said the Rhode Island member, "that we are all agreed that it is desirable to take up the tariff by subjects, not by schedules." He expressed doubt, however, as to the adequacy of the Cummins amendment to accomplish this result, contending that the adoption of the resolution would have the effect of curtailing the constitutional power of the house to originate tariff legislation.

Senator Heyburn would not give assent to the proposition that all Republicans are agreed to the policy of piecemeal tariff revision; he advocated the protective policy and declined to be committed to any other policy.

"After an experience with five tariffs, I believe that some way should be devised for the amendment of tariff laws without entering into a general revision," said Senator Lodge, planting himself squarely on Senator Cummins' side. Senator Aldrich thought there might be concurrence on the part of the two houses, but he did not accept the theory that the question could be dealt with by joint legislation.

TAKES UP GREAT PROBLEMS

National Civic Federation Meets to Discuss Trusts, Railroads and Other Matters.

New York.—President Seth Low called to order the eleventh annual meeting of the National Civic Federation and made a brief opening address in which he outlined the matters that would engage the attention of the body during the three days it will be in session.

The most important of the topics that will be considered are: Regulation of corporations and combinations; regulation of railroads and municipal utilities; compensation for industrial accidents; and arbitration and conciliation.

The federation has been organizing councils in every state in the Union, composed of representative business and professional men, and delegates from these councils are attending the meeting. There will be also special meetings of the various departments of the federation.

GOVERNOR-ELECT STAYS AWAY FROM NEW HAVEN ANNUAL BANQUET.

COL. ROOSEVELT IS PRESENT

Connecticut's New Executive Refuses to Sit at Same Table With Former President—Latter is Greeted With Hearty Cheers.

New Haven, Conn.—Gov. Elect Simeon E. Baldwin was not present Tuesday evening at the annual banquet of the New Haven chamber of commerce for the reason that he had refused to sit at the same table with Theodore Roosevelt.

Till the last, however, the governor refused to tell whether or not he would attend the banquet and there were a few of the diners who felt confident that Judge Baldwin would put in an eleventh hour appearance at the banquet hall.

Officials of the chamber here, however, had been notified. Neither they nor Judge Baldwin wished it known that he had refused to attend the banquet because any definite announcement of such action by him would have resulted in a stampede by the Democratic members of the chamber and so many of them would have followed the governor in refusing to attend that the banquet would have been a fizzle.

There were 700 present when Colonel Roosevelt entered the Yale dining hall, where the feasting was held.

Colonel Roosevelt was greeted with cheers when he arose to speak. "It seems to me that nothing could be a better augury of the future of this country," he said, "than that a Republican president should appoint an ex-Confederate of opposite political faith chief justice of the United States and receive unanimous applause of his countrymen."

"With your permission I shall propose two toasts: First, to President Taft, and second, to that learned jurist, Chief Justice White."

After the toasts had been drunk Colonel Roosevelt spoke along lines of his speeches made in the west. He said he wished to see the hand of the state and nation placed on the great corporations, to regulate them, but added that the corporations should be treated with an exact measure of justice.

CUSTOMS CRUSADE KEPT UP

SMUGGLERS AND UNDERVALUERS OF IMPORTS MUST SUFFER.

Wickersham Tells Congress What the Government's Legal Department Has Been Doing.

Washington.—In his annual report to congress Monday, Attorney General Wickersham shows that more than $6,000,000 either has been collected by the government or is involved in judgment cases against firms and individuals for smuggling and under-valuation of imports. He promises a continuance of the investigation now in progress and believes more indictments for customs frauds will follow.

There have already been fifty-eight convictions in the southern part of New York, says he, and at least a score more indictments will be found. In this same connection the attorney-general asks congress to pass a law forbidding revenue men from accepting perquisites from importers and another law granting immunity to accused persons who turn state's evidence and assist the government in the prosecution of others. It is also demanded that a heavier penalty be placed upon the statute books for importing firms which refuse to show their books upon the request of the collector of any port in the United States. The present penalty is a $100 fine.

The attorney-general briefly reviews three of the most important cases ever brought before the United States Supreme Court, all of which are now pending. They are the suits to dissolve the Standard Oil Trust and the American Tobacco company—the "tobacco trust"—and the suit to determine the constitutionality of the corporation tax law. All these arguments will be presented in January.

Mr. Wickersham wants the salaries of the federal judges raised and intimates that the government could do better work in the prosecution of trusts if higher fees were paid its attorneys. He points out that corporations are noted for the big sums they pay their counsel.

President Taft granted one hundred and eleven pardons during the year. Only one woman was committed to a federal penitentiary although nineteen women were sent to state prisons. The number of men sent to federal and state penitentiaries were 1,183.

Aged Woman and Three Men Clued to Death—Former Hired Men Suspected.

Kansas City, Mo.—Mrs. Emelie Bernhard, aged seventy-five; her son George, aged forty; Tom Morgan, a trapper, aged seventeen, and a hired man named Worth were found murdered on the Bernhard farm, in Kansas, near Martin City, Mo., 20 miles south of here Saturday, according to Prosecuting Attorney James Little of Johnson county, Kan., who telegraphed the information to this city. All the victims had been clubbed to death.

Robbery is believed to have been the motive, as the prockets of the dead were turned wrong side out. Former hired men and a stranger seen near the farm recently are suspected.

A BROAD EDUCATIONAL FIELD

Woodchopper Chokes Off Inquisitive and Patronizing Female Tourist in West.

In the early days of travel on the western rivers an extremely dangerous calling was that of the men who attempted to supply fuel to passing steamboats. These nomadic woodchoppers who, along lonely stretches of river-bank, braved the perils of Indians, were, in river parlance, called "wood-hawks"—a name perpetuated in the great Wood Hawk Bend, below Fort Rice.

In "The Conquest of the Missouri," by Mr. J. M. Hanson, it is related how two extraordinary characters, called "X" Beidler and "Liver-Eatin'" Johnson, were once taken on board the steamer Nile with their cordwood, and entertained as the boat continued the journey.

They were powerful men physically, ignorant in most matters which civilization holds as knowledge, but profoundly versed in the varied wisdom of the wilderness, which, however, they kept to themselves with the taciturnity characteristic of those whose ways lie in nature's lonely places.

Among the Nile's passengers was a party of eastern tourists. The ladies had been interested in all the novel scenes of the frontier, but when the two rugged wood-hawks appeared on board, they became particularly enthusiastic. Neither Beidler nor Johnson took very kindly to being patronized, as if they were a pair of Sioux, although they maintained their stoical composure.

"Mr. Beidler, are you married?" at length one of the ladies inquired of X.

"Yes!" grunted the wood-hawk. "Oh, indeed? Do you know, I hardly thought that. Is—is your wife, ah—a white woman?"

"Indian." "How delightful! A native of these great plains! Where is she now?" "I've sent her to roam."

"To Rome? To be educated? Just think of such devotion!" she chirruped to her companions. "Mr. Beidler, do you mean to Rome, Italy?"

"No," responded X, grimly. "To roam on the prairie."

At this point the conversation abruptly terminated.—Youth's Companion.

Odd English Words.

"Trug," according to Dr. Wright's "Dialect Dictionary," is used to denote various measures in different parts of the country. In Yorkshire, it means an oblong wooden trough for milk, also a milking pail. In Cumberland it is a wooden box used for carrying coal or peat—in fact, an overgrown or exaggerated coal scuttle.

In Oxfordshire it is a kind of basket used by gardeners, and in several counties a "trug" is a measure of which three go to make up two bushels. Hence "trug corn" or wheat signifies a measure of wheat allowed to a clergyman as a kind of tithe. "Trug corn" was payable at Leominster as late as 1866.

Kent possesses one of these portmanteau words that everyone seems to understand but no one can pin down and define. The word is "bodge." It is a sort of "trug." And this writer once tried to get the definition from a farmer school fellow who is now an eminent agriculturist. And it seemed that a "bodge" was definitely and generally anything that would contain anything.—London Chronicle.

Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin, who landed the other day with Clifford B. Harmon in the balloon New York in an out of the way corner of Ohio, has a dry wit. He is as fond of exercising it as he is of flying around Hempstead plains in his red devil.

"Oh, Captain Baldwin," said a dear old lady recently, pointing to the propeller of the gallant captain's aeroplane, "what's that flapper for?"

"That flapper, madame," gravely replied the captain, "is to scare the birds away when I am flying."

Rosemary—that's for Remembrance

A Christmas Story by S. R. Crockett

THE Morris-Moores had just had their first—no, not quarrel—tiff. Harry was now in his study pulling down books he did not want and piling them up on his table. He selected a row of notebooks bearing title, "The Grisons and the Italian Valleys." He got out extensive white-blotched Swiss survey maps, and files of the little "Ladin" paper printed at Sarnaden. He had got all this up thoroughly on his last journey, and now was the time to dip deep into the pile of printed and annotated "stuff." It would help him to forget anything so absolutely silly as a little wife upstairs in her room, the tears of temper still wet on her cheeks, and employing her small white teeth in reducing to tattered "waste" a soaked lace pocket handkerchief.

Henry Morris-Moore felt himself very superior. He was calm, cold, judicial, and above what he called "infantile tempers."

Upstairs Clara wept and fretted. To think, only to think—scarcely ten months married, and it had come to this! Ah, if only she had known! Were all men so cruel, so bitter? Did nobody care for her? She would go to her mother—No (Clara's reflection came refreshingly cool, like a splash of cold water), no—no—well, not quite that! For one thing, she knew her mother; and Mrs. Murray-Linklater would "pack her back to her husband." Clara heard her mother speak these very words.

But—it was over. So much was fixed. Never, never would it be "glad, confident morning again." Henry had settled that when he spoke those words—those cruel dividing words. He had said—had said—well, Clara could not herself swept off the piano stool and installed where, on the rounded arm of a big easy chair, she had little more liberty of movement than that of swinging her feet naughtily and rebelliously, while her husband questioned her.

"What book were you reading so intently this afternoon when I came upon you in the corridor? Let me see it!"

"Eh—eh!" (A time). "Oh, you coward! Because you are strong! I shall go to—to—"

"Where? To whom?" said Harry, easily. "To my—to Aunt Laetitia."

"She wouldn't have you, child," laughed her husband, "and besides, she would charge you board—which I should have to pay!"

"Well, I would pay it out of my own money—there!"

"What own money?"

"My house money!"

"You forget, Mrs. Morris-Moore," said her husband, gravely, "if you run away you wouldn't have any house money!"

Then in a burst, as he shook her, "Oh! you great baby," he cried, "make up. Bring the book! It was a volume of your diary. I knew by the lock. I'll show you mine. Fair exchange! Off with you!"

"Well, come with me, then," said Clara, holding out her hand, "but don't you think I'm giving in. It's only yielding to brute force. My spirit is unconquered."

"Never mind your spirit," said her lord, "fetch the book!"

And in these books, the greater and the lesser, they read late into the night. And this was what they found.

"Christmas eve"—said Clara, "begin there!"

And she paused, waiting, with her finger in its place.

"Oh," said her husband, "I don't think there is much!"

"And you call yourself a writer!"

"Well, shall I begin?" Clara was all on pins and needles now. She could hardly keep still. The quarrel was forgotten.

"Christmas eve" (she read). "A dull day—Paid calls in the lane—Went to Margaret's. Baby is adorable and Tom begins to love me and calls me Auntie-dee-ah. Came home by Grant's and brought back fruit for dinner. There is a man coming, a friend of father's. It is a horrid nuisance."

Here Clara Moore broke off suddenly. "Oh, I wrote everything fresh, you see. I wanted to remember. You've no idea how bad my memory used to be in those days. Being married helps. One has to remember one's husband's iniquities."

"Set in a notebook, learned and conned by rote," murmured Harry.

His wife stopped and looked severely at him.

"Well," she said, "I did write a lot, I know, and yours is no fair exchange. I did it partly as an exercise, you see, for I was considered very good at composition at school, whatever you may think. Besides, I don't believe you have anything in that book at all."

"Oh, yes—I have!" and he flourished a closely written page of memoranda before her eyes.

"Well," she said, with a sigh (and her eyes were dim and distant), "I will read—though I never thought to let anyone see—not even you. But since you have been so horrid to me, I will."

It seemed an odd reason, but Harry wisely nodded. Clara fluttered some leaves thoughtfully. "Where shall I go on?" she asked, knitting her brows.

"You did begin from the beginning," he smiled as he spoke, "why not continue?"

She glanced up with sudden shyness, almost as she spoke, "why not continue?"

She glanced up with sudden shyness, almost like a surprised Eve.

"You were saying that it was a horrid nuisance, having me come to dinner," said Harry Moore, "did you change your mind?"

"Here it is," said his wife, running her eye down the columns of close-knit writing. "11:00 p. m. He is gone. It was not so horrid after all. But I think he likes Edith best. He is big and badly dressed. Why can't writers and artistic people dress humanly? He had on the funniest tie I ever saw, and a beard, and he came in a big gray cloak like one of Millet's shepherds. But he talked—yes, it was worth while hearing him talk. Not much to me, though, but he looked at me a lot, and somehow seemed to be conscious of everything I was doing. Dr. Stonor came in after, and wanted me to look out music for him. We went into the corner together and got out the 'folios, and though he was talking to father, I knew very well he was watching us.' That's all," Clara concluded. She had been reading very rapidly, as if anxious to get to the end. "Now for yours!"

"Mine! oh, mine's no great thing," said Harry, opening his little black pocketbook, "jottings merely."

"Go on, please," cried Clara, stamping her foot, "and mind, don't alter a word or put in more. I shall know!"

"Christmas eve" (began Harry) "worked at Guardian article, took it round, saw proof of yesterday's. Chief wants me to go to Armenia about the atrocities. Shant! To club in afternoon—Clifton, McCosh, Moxon and several of the fellows there, who wanted me to stop. Told them I couldn't. Had to go out to old Linklater's to dinner—girls, music, bore—but I should look in later."

"Oh!" interjected Clara, with her head suddenly haughty, "a bore—was it?"

"You said a horrid nuisance!" remarked her husband, and continued his reading without troubling to defend himself further.

"I got there early—long way out of town—several false trails. At last found the place—a big house under trees. From the doorway I could see in the hall a girl standing on steps, putting up holly and green stuff. Presently old Linklater came and introduced me. 'This is Clara!' I became conscious of two great, dark, steady, grayish-hazel eyes. The dinner went all right after that. Pretty—well, I don't know: a fascinating and glamorous person certainly. There was also a sister."

"Nonsense!" said Clara. "You are making up as you go along. I know you."

Her husband silently handed her the book. Decidedly it was so written.

Clara did not apologize for her unbelief. She only remarked, "Oh, but you are a dear."

And, rubbing her cheek against his coat sleeve, she purred.

"Go on!" she said.

"Dinner quite informal," Harry continued. "Talked too much, but got led on somehow. Everything went well. Doctor fellow there, who put on a lot of friend-of-the-family side—sat in a corner and talked to the girl with the eyes."

"Ah, ha! You see—you were jealous already!" cried Clara, clapping her hands joyously.

"Nonsense!" said Harry Moore. "Of little Stonor? I think I see myself!"

"Read the next day—go on—go on! No, the day you came to Elton again!"

"Went to make my 'digestion' call. Took some flowers up to Elton, and talked to the old lady. Think I made a conquest. But the Lady of the Eyes did not show up. Waited an hour and a half, but don't think I wasted my time entirely. Dear old lady!"

"Harry, you are a cold-blooded wretch!"

"Very much the contrary, Mrs. Moore!"

"Now shall I read?" And without giving him time to answer, Clara opened the solid basil boards and continued, "Dec. 23th: Went out all the afternoon with Miss Grierson. Down the lane—soup kitchen, girls' club, and went home with her to tea. When I got home I saw mother had a secret. You always knew by the satisfied way she has of looking mysterious. She would be disappointed if you didn't ask her at once. So I teased her to tell."

"Do you know whom I've been entertaining all afternoon?" she said, her shoulders shaking with repressed laughter. I understood well enough.

"Oh, the curate," I said, as carelessly as I could. "I saw him going down the lane like a pair of compasses let loose."

"Do you think the curate would bring me those?" said mother, triumphantly. And she showed me a lovely bunch of roses, a wagon-load nearly, which she had set well back in the dusk of the piano, so that I should not see them before mother had her little triumph. My! they must have cost heaps of money this time of year. 'They are all mine,' said mother, 'but if you are good you can have just one bud for yourself. You see what one gets by staring quietly at home!'

"She was teasing me, of course, this dear old sweet-hearted mother."

"You see what one gets for doing works of charity and mercy!" I said. "He would have given them to me if I'd been here. I'll never do a good action again!"

"Now turn on to 'Four Seas Cottage,' and read about that," cried Clara. Her eyes were not gray now, nor yet hazel. The dark pupils had swallowed up all the rest, overflowing everything with the soft blackness of a misty night of few stars.

"Let's see. Easter, wasn't it?" said her husband. "But why skip? Much water had flowed under bridges during these months of spring."

"Oh, I want to get to the end—the end!" Clara whispered, excitedly. "Quick, quick—I can't wait!"

"Well, here it is: 'April 8th. We went a walk along the beach, she and I. We talked. I told her that unless something was going to come of this, I must go away.'

"What," she said, "for altogether?" And I said "Yes." Then she walked a good while silent, and when I looked, I could see—"

"No, you didn't," said Clara. "I could never have been so silly!"

"Tear after big tear rolling slowly down her cheek," Harry continued, imperturbably, "I needed no more than that—who would?"

"You don't want me to go?" I cried.

"She shook her head, still weeping, and not caring now whether I saw or not."

"So I stayed."

They sat long silent that night in their own home, near each other, and happy Harry's heart was softened. He was in the mood for concessions.

"Dear," he said, "if you would like Aunt Laetitia to come and stay with us a month—"

"Oh, bother Aunt Laetitia!" exclaimed Mrs. Henry Moore, "I only want you!"

And thus did Clara Murray-Linklater deny her father's house and cleave to her husband, Tribute to Painter's Skill. One of the still life paintings by Jan van Huysen in the museum at The Hague was recently injured, but it is believed the perpetrator was neither vandal nor thief.

The picture represents a basket of fruit on which a number of insects have gathered. On a pale yellow apple, which is the centerpiece in the cluster of fruit, is a large fly, painted so true to nature, so say the officials of the gallery, that the canvas was injured by some one who endeavored to "shoo" it and brought his cane or hand too close to the canvas. "A tribute to the painter's genius," says the letter recording the fact, "for which the work had to suffer."

What World Lost? It was the worst calamity that ever happened to me," sighed the pale, intellectual high-browed young woman.

"I had written a modern society novel, complete to the last chapter, and a careless servant girl gathered the sheets of the manuscript from the floor, where the wind had blown them, and used them to start a fire in the grate."

"What a burning shame that was!" commented Miss Tartan.

Sense of Taste.

From a series of experiments recently made at the University of Kansas it is evident that the average person can taste the bitter of quinine when one part is dissolved in 52,000 parts of water. Salt was detected in water when one part to 640 of the liquid was used. Sugar could be tasted in 228 parts of water and common soda in 48. In nearly all cases women could detect a smaller quantity than men.

EAGER TO WORK.

Health Regained by Right Food.

The average healthy man or woman is usually eager to be busy at some useful task or employment.

But let dyspepsia or indigestion get hold of one, and all endeavor becomes a burden.

"A year ago, after recovering from an operation," writes a Michigan lady, "my stomach and nerves began to give me much trouble."

"At times my appetite was voracious, but when indulged, indigestion followed. Other times I had no appetite whatever. The food I took did not nourish me and I grew weaker than ever."

"I lost interest in everything and wanted to be alone. I had always had good nerves, but now the merest trifle would upset me and bring on a violent headache. Walking across the room was an effort and prescribed exercise was out of the question."

"I had seen Grape-Nuts advertised, but did not believe what I read at the time. At last when it seemed as if I was literally starving, I began to eat Grape-Nuts."

"I had not been able to work for a year, but now after two months on Grape-Nuts I am eager to be at work again. My stomach gives me no trouble now, my nerves are steady as ever, and interest in life and ambition have come back with the return to health."

Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

"Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest."

A GIRL STANDING ON THE STEPS, PUTTING UP HOLLY AND GREEN STUFF

quite remember what. But, at any rate, it was over. She could never forgive him—for saying that—yes, about dear Aunt Laetitia. Oh, yes, she remembered, "that he could never get her a single night to himself without some stalking old she-patriarch with a reticule coming in to spoil everything."

Clara would not have her family spoken against—not by a score of Henry Moores. She had been educated carefully in the Murray-Linklater cult, and no Vers de Vere could be prouder of her name.

Clara, in her bolted bedroom, was getting out her blotting book and pad to write to her poor wronged aunt. She was going to ask a refuge for the few remaining days of a blasted life. Yes, that was the adjective she was using, and (strange coincidence!) the villain below stairs was also using it, though perhaps in a more colloquial sense. He had just knocked over a whole pile of the neat notebooks in which he stored away his literary material, and was passing off his own clumsiness in invective against inanimate things. This was his man's way of biting his handkerchief.

But the strong arm of coincidence reached yet further.

Stumbling and grumbling, Harry gathered up the fruit of his travel experiences and began re-storing them in the little three-cornered shelves where he kept such things for reference. Work would not "go" to-night, somehow. One remained in his hand—a small pocket notebook with rounded corners, which served to carry about him for the shortest personal jottings. Usually it lay among his keys on the dressing table, and when he shaved he was in the habit of putting down a word or two—oh, as brief and bald as possible.

But this particular stubby volume happened to be his diary of two years ago, and he stood there with one hand mechanically pushing the notebooks into their places, while his eyes, entangled by what he read, transported him to the ragged carpet, the peremptorily furnished lodgings, the solitary walks, hands deep in pockets, overcoat collar up, cap pulled low—of the days when first— But stay, what was Clara doing?

She had got out her blotting book from under "The Songs of the North." The new maid—very hard on the temper of young wives are new maids, as a class—had jammed it into the rack, bending the corners shamefully. And so, when at last Clara had released the folio, lo! a cascade of solidly built volumes in red ball clattered to the ground. She had just time to spring back; for the volumes had solid brass locks, all opened with the same little gold key.

She wore it about her neck, and no one in the world, not even Harry, had ever been allowed to peep within. Indeed, since she was married she had not often done so herself. But now—now that the happiness of her life had foundered beneath her, she would go back—it might be all the pleasure (sob) that was left her—thus to live over a happy past. (A time.)

Watkins, the Moores' new maid, experienced some surprise (and not unnaturally) when, in the exercise of her vocation, she was carrying a copper jug of hot water to Mrs. Moore's dressing room before sounding the first gong, she observed her master and mistress approach each other from opposite ends of the corridor, both intently reading, like people on a stage—he in a small black book, she in one large, fat and red.

A still poorer opinion had Sarah Watkins of her new place when she saw the readers look up simultaneously, suddenly and guiltily close their books, turn on their several heels, and so exeunt.

"And them sez as what they has only been married ten months!" she meditated. "Well—we'll see what's to come of this!"

The family dinner that night was distinguished by extreme correctness of demeanor, and an etiquette almost Spanish in its stateliness. They were nothing if not polite—that is, when Watkins was in the room. But Watkins knew, and stayed a moment on the mat, listening to the silence that dropped like a pall. She entered, smiling to herself, knowing (oh, experienced Watkins) that she would find Clara looking sideways at the pattern of the carpet as though she had never seen it before, while at his end of the table Harry was molding bread pellets as if for a wager. These things do not vary.

But even Watkins the wise did not know everything. Penny fiction does not inform its readers what real people do. So as soon as Clara had escaped out of the dining room, before he had time to open the door for her, Harry sulkily sat down and felt for his cigarette case. He was sure he had left it in the drawing room. Yet he would not go for it. He could hear Clara playing a noisy jig, the wriggle and stamp of which he particularly loathed.

"The little wretch," he said, laughing in spite of himself, "she knows quite well."

"Good evening, Mr. Moore," said his wife, and he rose and went. "Your cigarette case is in the smoking room."

But this time Harry had it all his own way. Six feet of blonde colossus made short work of mere ninricks of the tongue. Clara found —Bad luck is only a man sitting on the corner or lounging around a red hot stove in the corner grocery store with a pipe in his mouth, and expectorating tobacco juice looking to see how things turn out. Good luck is the pluck of a man with his sleeves turned up, hustling like a Turk to make things come out all right.

The MAN in LOWER TEN
 by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
 AUTHOR OF THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

SYNOPSIS.

Lawrence Blakeley, lawyer, goes to Pittsburgh with the forged notes in the Bronson case to get the deposition of John Gilmore, millionaire. In the latter's home he is attracted by a picture of a young girl, whom the millionaire explains is his granddaughter. A lady requests Blakeley to buy her a Pullman ticket. He gives her lower eleven and retains lower ten and retires in lower nine. He awakens in lower seven and finds his clothes and bag missing. The man in lower ten is found murdered. Circumstantial evidence points to both Blakeley and the unknown man who had exchanged clothes with him. Blakeley becomes interested in a girl in blue. The train is wrecked. Blakeley is rescued from the burning car by the girl in blue. His arm is broken. They go to the Carter place for breakfast. The girl proves to be Alison West, his partner's sweetheart. Her peculiar actions mystify the lawyer. She drops her gold bag and Blakeley puts it in his pocket. Blakeley returns home. He finds that he is under surveillance. Moving pictures of the train taken just before the wreck reveal to Blakeley a man leaping from the train with his stolen grip. Blakeley learns that a man named Sullivan leaped from the train near M— and sprained his ankle. He stayed some time at the Carter place. While making inquiries at Carter's, Blakeley finds Alison and kisses her. Mrs. Conway, the woman for whom Blakeley bought the Pullman ticket, tries to make a bargain with him for the forged notes, not knowing that they are missing. An amateur detective thinks he has found Sullivan. Blakeley and the amateur detective go to the home of Sullivan's sister to investigate.

"Couldn't see you," I maintained; "I can't see you now. And your sense of contiguity didn't tell you about that flower crock."

In the end, of course, he consented to go with me. He was very lame, and I helped him around to the open window. He was full of moral courage, the little man; it was only the physical in him that quailed. And as we groped along, he insisted on going through the window first.

"If it is a trap," he whispered, "I have two arms to your one, and, besides, as I said before, life holds much for you. As for me, the government would merely lose an indifferent employe."

When he found I was going first he was rather hurt, but I did not wait for his protests. I swung my feet over the sill and dropped. I made a clutch at the window frame with my good hand when I found no floor under my feet, but I was too late. I dropped probably ten feet and landed with a crash that seemed to split my eardrums. I was thoroughly shaken, but in some miraculous way the bandaged arm had escaped injury.

"For heaven's sake," Hotchkiss was calling from above, "have you broken your back?"

"No," I returned, as steadily as I could, "merely driven up through my skull. This is a staircase, I'm coming up to open another window."

It was eerie work, but I accomplished it finally, discovering, not without mishap, a room filled with more tables than I had ever dreamed of, tables that seemed to wobble and strike at me. When I had got a window open, Hotchkiss crawled through, and we were at last under shelter.

Our first thought was for a light. The same laborious investigation that had landed us where we were, revealed that the house was lighted by electricity, and that the plant was not in operation. By accident I stumbled across a taboret with smoking materials, and found a half dozen match-and there was an odor of scorched leather through the room, from Hotchkiss' shoes. The little detective was found asleep, his dead pipe in his fingers. The cat sat back on its haunches and wailed.

The curtain at the door into the hallway belled slowly out into the room and fell again. The cat looked toward it and opened its mouth for another howl. I thrust at it with my foot, but it refused to move. Hotchkiss stirred uneasily, and his pipe clattered to the floor.

The cat was standing at my feet, staring behind me. Apparently it was following with its eyes an object unseen to me, that moved behind me. The tip of its tail waved threateningly, but when I wheeled I saw nothing.

I took the candle and made a circuit of the room. Behind the curtain that had moved the door was securely closed. The windows were shut and locked, and everywhere the silence was absolute. The cat followed me majestically. I stooped and stroked its head, but it persisted in its uncanny watching of the corners of the room.

When I went back to my divan, after putting a fresh log on the fire, I was reassured. I took the precaution, and smiled at myself for doing it, to put the fire tongs within reach of my hand. But the cat would not let me sleep. After a time I decided that it wanted water, and I started out in search of some, carrying the candle without the stand. I wandered through several rooms, all closed and dismantled, before I found a small lavatory opening off a billiard room. The cat lapped steadily, and I filled a glass to take back with me. The candle flickered in a sickly fashion that threatened to leave me there lost in the wanderings of the many hallways, and from somewhere there came an occasional violent puff of wind. The cat stuck by my feet, with the hair on its back raised menacingly. I don't like cats; there is something psychic about them.

Hotchkiss was still asleep when I got back to the big room. I moved his boots back from the fire and trimmed the candle. Then, with sleep gone from me, I lay back on my divan and reflected on many things; on my idiosyncrasy, on Alison West, and the fact that only a week before she had been a guest in this very house; on Richey and the constraint that had come between us. From that I drifted back to Alison, and to the barrier my comparative poverty would be.

The emptiness, the stillness were oppressive. Once I heard footsteps coming, rhythmic steps that neither hurried nor dragged, and seemed to mount endless staircases without coming any closer. I realized finally that I had not quite turned off the tap, and that the lavatory, which I had circled to reach, must be quite close.

The cat lay by the fire, its nose on its folded paws, content in the warmth and companionship. I watched it idly. Now and then the green wood batted an eye. Through an unshuttered window the lightning flashed. Suddenly the cat looked up. It lifted its head and stared directly at the gallery above. Then it blinked, and stared again. I was amused. Not until it had got up on its feet, eyes still riveted on the balcony, tail waving at the tip, the hair on its back a bristling brush, did I glance casually over my head.

From among the shadows a face gazed down at me, a face that seemed a fitting tenant of the ghostly room below. I saw it as plainly as I might see my own face in a mirror. While I stared at it with horrified eyes, the apparition faded. The rail was there, the Bokhara rug still swung from it, but the gallery was empty.

CHAPTER XXIV.

His Wife's Father.

I jumped up and seized the fire tongs. The cat's wail had roused Hotchkiss, who was wide-awake at once. He took in my offensive attitude, the tongs, the direction of my gaze, and needed nothing more. As he picked up the candle and darted out into the hall, I followed him. He made directly for the staircase, and part way up he turned off to the right through a small door. We were on the gallery itself; below us the fire gleamed cheerfully, the cat was not in sight. There was no sign of my ghostly visitor, but as we stood there the Bokhara rug, without warning, slid over the railing and fell to the floor below.

"Man or woman?" Hotchkiss inquired in his most professional tone. "Neither—that is, I don't know. I didn't notice anything but the eyes," I muttered. "They were looking a hole in me. If you'd seen that cat you would realize my state of mind. That was a traditional graveyard yowl."

"I don't think you saw anything at all," he lied cheerfully. "You dozed off, and the rest is the natural result of a meal on a buffet car."

Nevertheless, he examined the Bokhara carefully when we went down, and when I finally went to sleep he was reading the only book in sight—"Elwell on Bridge." The first rays of daylight were coming mistily into the room when he roused me. He had his finger on his lips, and he whispered sibilantly while I tried to draw on my distorted boots.

"I think we have him," he said triumphantly. "I've been looking around some, and I can tell you this much. Just before we came in through the window last night, another man came. Only—he did not drop, as you did. He swung over to the stair railing, and then down. The rail is scratched.

SAVED OLD LADY'S HAIR

"My mother used to have a very bad humor on her head which the doctors called an eczema, and for it I had two different doctors. Her head was very sore and her hair nearly all fell out in spite of what they both did. One day her niece came in and they were speaking of how her hair was falling out and the doctors did it no good. She says, 'Aunt, why don't you try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment?' Mother did and they helped her. In six months' time the itching, burning and scalding of her head was over and her hair began growing. Today she feels much in debt to Cuticura Soap and Ointment for the fine head of hair she has for an old lady of seventy-four."

"My own case was an eczema in my feet. As soon as the cold weather came my feet would itch and burn and then they would crack open and bleed. Then I thought I would flee to my mother's friends, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I did for four or five winters, and now my feet are as smooth as any one's. Ellsworth Dunham, Hiram, Me., Sept. 30, 1909."

Why Do They.

Why women like the baldheaded man it is somewhat difficult to define. It may be because he appears to be: Thoughtful and kind. Trustworthy and confiding. Whimsical. Past the follies and frivolities of youth. Usually successful. A man of property. Opinions why women like the bald-headed man obtained by the Daily Mirror are as follows: He is not silly like young men. He accepts refusals of marriage so nicely that one is sorry one did not accept him. The bald patch looks so clean and nice. One would like to kiss it. A doctor welcomes baldness when it comes to him, as it is a sign of sedateness and dignified learning, which invariably increases his practise.

Progress in Railroad.

"Yes," says the lady whose dress case is covered with strange foreign labels, "the way railroads are run nowadays is a great improvement over what they were 50 years ago."

"But surely you had no experience as a traveler 50 years ago," says her friend.

"I don't mean that. But nowadays, don't you notice, when there is a wreck it is always had at some point convenient to a cluster of farm houses where the victims can go for coffee and to get warm?"

Does Your Cat Cough?

Poor pussy! As if the immemorial charges against her of keeping us awake o' nights and of eating canary birds whenever she gets the chance were not enough, the doctors have just discovered that for years she has been responsible for the spread of diphtheria. Dr. G. J. Awburn of Manchester, England, having traced an epidemic of this disease in a suburb of that city to a pet cat belonging to one of his patients, has found, after much clever investigation, that all cats are peculiarly susceptible to diphtheritic affections of the throat. He has therefore recently been warning all families who own cats to watch them carefully, and if they develop coughs, to forbid their being hugged and petted. Dr. Awburn further recommends that if the cough persists and the cat begins to grow thin to have the animal destroyed at once. The only really safe way, he says, is to let the first wheeze be pussy's death warrant.

Russia's Growing Population.

This year's census of the Russian empire adds another five millions to the population as enumerated in 1908. The czar's subjects now number 160,000,000 and increase every year by 2,500,000 despite wars, epidemics and internal disturbances. As there is no lack of cultivated soil in Russia there seems no reason why this big annual increase should not continue.

Literary Accuracy.

"You write of your hero as stealing home in the darkness," said the editor.

"Yes," replied the author.

"Well, you ought to know better than that. He couldn't steal home in the dark. If it was dark enough to be worth noticing the game would have been called."

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province show other excellent results—such as 4,100 bushels per acre from 120 acres, or 531.2 bu. per acre, 25,000 and 40 bushels per acre were numerous. As high as 152 bushels per acre to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

The Silver Cup

At the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grain, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) are to be had in the choicest districts. GRANTS STAY IN TRIAL OF DIETZ

JUDGE REID CONTINUES CASE FOR MURDER OF DEPUTY HARP TO MARCH 6.

FAIRNESS FOR DEFENDANTS

Court's Decision Based Upon Wish to Place Trial Above All Suspicion or Bias—No Decision Reached on Bail for John Dietz.

Hayward, John, Hattie and Leslie Dietz, charged with the murder of Deputy Oscar Harp, have secured a continuance until March 6, Judge Reid according to the plea of Attorneys Rubin and Wittig, Milwaukee, for more time to prepare the defense.

Judge Reid ruled that, although he considered the application for continuance fairly in the strict legal sense, he was satisfied that the defendants, if brought to trial now, would be under a disadvantage which the court, in its discretion should not impose. He declared he wished particularly that this trial should be free from all criticism as to its fairness.

In the interim John Dietz will again make application for bail, and may in a few days be given his liberty on a joint bond, authorized by Judge Reid, who both Dietz and his attorneys declare is perfectly fair and impartial.

"John is being treated all right, as long as they will let me see him often," said Mrs. Dietz.

For the first time since his arrest, John Dietz walked the streets of Hayward without being handcuffed to the sheriff or one of his deputies. He was taken to the jail by the sheriff in company with Mrs. Dietz and her son Leslie, Dietz with both hands in his pockets, and the sheriff likewise protecting his hands from the cold.

MAY APPOINT GOVERNOR

Madison Rumor Says Davidson Will Get Place as Internal Revenue Collector.

Madison.—The appointment of Gov. J. O. Davidson as internal revenue collector for the western district, is the latest political rumor.

He has not been an active candidate for the position, but his friends have been working in his behalf, and it is well known that he is a warm personal friend of Senator Stephenson. The fact that he has bought a home in Madison and that he will live there after his term as governor expires, lends color to the belief that he will succeed Collector Bentley in February.

Executive Clerk R. L. Thurber confirmed the rumor that the governor will accept the position if it is offered him and that work is being done in the effort to thus honor the retiring governor.

LaCrosse.—That there was nothing crooked in the operations of Monceau Dunn, inventor of the coupon ballot in his disposal of stock, and that none of the county supervisors were implicated in any deal which could be classed as "shady" is the verdict of the special committee appointed to investigate the report and charges that members of the county board were offered stock in the coupon ballot corporation for their support of the measure before the board.

Long Trial Comes to End.

Juneau.—The longest trial in the court history of Dodge county came to an end when the jury in the contest over the will of the late Janet Nisbet of Trenton returned a verdict sustaining the will.

Janet Nisbet was the sole survivor of her family. Her wealth was appraised at nearly $150,000, only a small portion of which was disposed of by will.

All of the next of kin, in Scotland, opposed the will on the grounds of undue influence and want of testamentary capacity. The trial lasted three full weeks, including night sessions.

The census returns give Milwaukee county a total population of 433,187. This is an increase of more than 35 per cent over 1900, when the total population was 320,017.

As the city population is 373,857, the county, exclusive of the city, has 59,330. Comparing these figures with the preceding decades, the county shows as wonderful a growth as does the city.

In 1890 there was a total of 236,101 people in the city and county, while the city had 204,498. This left a total of 31,603 living in the county. In 1900 the number of people in the county, outside of the city, was 44,702.

Turns Tables in Divorce Suit

Janesville.—A startling demouement in the divorce action brought by Mrs. Sophia Davy against George Davy of this city was disclosed in circuit court when Judge George Grimm refused Mrs. Davy's petition for divorce but granted an interlocutory decree to her husband, who stated in a counterclaim that at the time of his marriage Mrs. Davy had at least one other husband, alleged to be Eli J. Felton of Soldiers Grove.

Mrs. Davy, who brought action on the grounds of desertion and non-support, is a woman of striking personal appearance. She came to this city from Milwaukee about a year ago and after her marriage moved in the best society.

Mrs. Davy is said to have disappeared. It is not known whether or not the charge against her will be pushed.

Tony School Burns.

Tony.—The staid graded school here was destroyed by fire. The loss is $80,000. Five teachers were employed and the attendance was 250. A modern building will be erected at once.

MEYER WILL LEAVE R. R. COMMISSION

WISCONSIN OFFICIAL TO RESIGN FOR PLACE ON INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

EXPERT ON RAIL PROBLEMS

Meyer a Long Time Student and Authority on Questions of Valuation and Regulation—McGovern May Have Naming of Successor.

Madison.—Prof. Balthasar H. Meyer, appointed by President Taft as a member of the interstate commerce commission to succeed Chairman M. W. Knapp, who is made a member of the new commerce commission, has been a member of the Wisconsin railroad rate commission since its organization in 1905. He accepted the appointment at the hands of Gov. La Follette for one of the short terms only, as he then wished to return in a short time to his chair of political economy in the University of Wisconsin.

Upon the resignation of Chairman John Barnes in 1907, Prof. Meyer succeeded to the chairmanship of the commission. He has made a study of railroad conditions in this country and in Europe and became so interested in his work that he has remained with the commission and has come to be recognized the country over as one of its strongest members and as one of the best posted men on railroad problems in the United States.

He has been selected by the president on several occasions for special work in connection with federal questions among lines on which his work on the Wisconsin commission had rendered him an authority and his selection for the federal commission has been forecasted by the press for some weeks. He was a special agent of the census bureau and interstate commerce commission in charge of the valuation of railroads.

Prof. Meyer's retirement from the Wisconsin railroad commission will probably leave the appointment of his successor to Gov.-elect Francis E. McGovern, as Gov. Davidson, it is known, has been indisposed to make appointments in the closing days of his administration.

BUSY YEAR FOR RIFLEMEN

Wisconsin National Guard Plans to Compete in Both National and Departmental Rifle Matches.

Appleton.—There will be a double inspiration for riflemen of the Wisconsin National guard to work next spring, according to Lieut. George Hantzicker, coach of the Wisconsin team in the national match. The state will be represented by two teams next year, one in the national match, another in the department contest.

The department of the lakes includes Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Tennessee. In the big match this year, Wisconsin was third among the state guards, Michigan fifth and Ohio seventh. It is believed the Badgers can pick a second team which can head the department.

While plans are not fully matured, it is presumed the high fifteen will constitute the state team to shoot in the national match, while the next fifteen will go to the department contest.

Material changes will be found at Camp Douglas next year. Lieut. Hantzicker says that there will be enough new targets on range No. 3 to permit all of the preliminary firing being done in one day. Hereafter it has taken two days. This will allow competition being taken up on Tuesday while all, not in the rifle class, will have one more day for drill.

CORNELL EVADES PRISON

Fond du Lac Bank Robber Is Paroled After Receiving Three-Year Sentence.

Fond du Lac.—Because District Attorney Frank W. Chadbourne believed Harry E. Cornell, son of a wealthy Chicago hardware merchant, was crazed from the effects of a drug when he attempted to hold up and rob the Cole Savings bank of this city in August, Cornell, after being sentenced to the state penitentiary for three years, has been paroled by Circuit Judge C. A. Fowler.

Cornell's attempt at holding up the bank resulted in his capture after a running battle of several blocks, in which several shots were fired. Soon after his arrest he declared that he remembered nothing of what had happened.

Ashland.—The Ashland Lighting Company is preparing to begin the work of constructing a power dam on the Bad river near Mellen by the beginning of the new year, and to push the work during the winter so as to have power available early next season.

Racine.—George Hadek, 26 years old, an inmate of the Racine county insane asylum, obtained a bottle of carbolic acid and swallowed three drams. He died in a short time.

THRESHING RETURNS FROM WESTERN CANADA.

They Reveal Larger Average of Wheat and Oats Than Anticipated.

The returns from the grain fields of Western Canada as revealed by the work of the Threshers, show much larger yields than were expected as the crop was ripening. It is a little early yet to give an estimate of the crop as a whole, but individual yields selected from various points throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta show that the farmers there as a rule have had reason to be thankful over the results. Excellent yields are reported from many portions of Manitoba and a large district of Saskatchewan has turned out well, while the central portion of Alberta is splendid. There will be shown at the land exposition at St. Louis a sample of the Marquette wheat—a new variety and one that appears to be well adapted to the soil and climate of Western Canada—that yielded 53 bushels to the acre. The exhibit and statement will be supported by affidavits from the growers. This wheat weighs well, and being a hard variety will find a ready market at the highest prices obtainable for a first-class article. It is interesting to point out that a field of one hundred acres of this wheat would give its producers 5,300 bushels. Sold at 85 cents a bushel would give him $45 an acre. Counting all the cost of interest on land at $20 an acre, getting the land ready for crop. Seed sowing, harvesting and marketing, the entire cost of production would not exceed $8 an acre, leaving the handsome net profit of $37 an acre. Is there any crop that would yield a better return than this, with the same labor and initial expense? Cotton fields will not do it, apple orchards with their great expense of cultivation and the risk to run from the various enemies of the fruit cannot begin to do it. While what is considered an exceptional case just now is presented, there is no doubt that this man's experience may be duplicated by others who care to follow his example. As has been said the growing of this wheat is but in its infancy, and wheat growing is still largely confined to other older varieties that do not yield so abundantly. Even with these we have records before us of farmers who have grown 40 bushels to the acre, others 35, some 30, and others again 25 bushels. Taking even 20 bushels, and some farmers report that amount, it is found that the returns from such a yield would be $17 an acre. This wheat will cost to get to market, including all expenses, about $8 an acre, and the farmers will still have a net profit of about $9 an acre. Certainly the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba are progressing, settlement is increasing and there is a general contentment all over the country. The social conditions are splendid, the climate is excellent, and there is every condition to make the settler satisfied. At the farming congress, held at Spokane in October, wheat shown by the Alberta Government, took the silver cup, awarded by the Governor of the State. It completely outclassed all other specimens on exhibition, and it was but an ordinary selection, hundreds of fields in Alberta and Saskatchewan being able to duplicate it. There are still available thousands of homesteads, as well as large areas of first-class land—that is being offered for sale at low prices. The agent of the Canadian Government from whom the above facts have been learned expects that the rush to Canada will next year largely exceed the numbers who have gone this year.

The Human Heart

The heart is a wonderful double pump, through the action of which the blood stream is kept sweeping round and round through the body at the rate of seven miles an hour. "Remember this, that our bodies will not stand the strain of over-work without good, pure blood any more than the engine can run smoothly without oil." After many years of study in the active practice of medicine, Dr. R. V.
