THE POOR MAN'S DOLLAR AND THE MILLIONAIRE'S

Every town has some citizens who occupy the attitude of indifference toward the community interests. They say: "Well, let the others boost the place. It can get along without my help." This attitude is well expressed and excoriated in a pamphlet recently issued by the Commercial club of Hannibal, Mo., Mark Twain's town:

It may be that some of limited means, opportunity or earnings may consider that their share in the upbuilding of their home city is nil; that they have no responsibility and lack influence. This is not true. No man can evade responsibility—not one. The poor man's dollar counts one hundred cents. The dollar of the millionaire has neither more nor less, nor does it circulate to better communal advantage.

The poor man who sends his dollar out of town to buy things from the mail order houses in the great cities evades his responsibilities, just as does the millionaire who sends or carries his dollar away to buy goods outside of his own town which he might better have bought at home.

Hatch Many Chicks at Varsity Poultry Yards.

Fifteen incubators full of selected eggs are hatching out this week at the poultry department of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin. Those incubators have been in charge of students of poultry raising. The work of managing and caring for the incubation and brooding of a batch of chickens is one of the assignments of each member of one of the classes. Each member of the class was given eight to ten dozen eggs per incubator, about 75 per cent of which hatched out. The students perform these tasks under the careful supervision of the professor. The practical experience is of great value as each man gets a fair working knowledge of how chickens should be hatched and brooded. The University flock will be increased this year as the new house for laying hens is available. The interest in poultry raising among farmers is growing and the department is being called upon to give advice through correspondence.

Gentle reader, you who owe us for this paper you are reading, as well as several of its ancestors: Did you ever see an editor's pocketbook? Well, it is just as fallible and prone to emptiness as those of other common mortals. The newspaper business hasn't yet been brought to that degree of perfection that it can be run without expense, and until that is successfully done we shall be under the painful necessity of asking you for a little cash now and then, especially now. We have been patient—in some cases long-suffering—knowing that your pocketbooks were about as lean and lank as our own. But now, the harvest is past and some of you have sold your hogs. When the big round dollars begin to jingle in your breeches pockets, please remember that vacuum in the editorial purse.

—Feast and your friends are many; fast and they cut you dead; they'll not get mad if you treat them bad, so long as their stomachs are fed. Steal if you get a million, for then you can furnish bail; its the great big thief who gets out on leave, while the little ones get to jail. Advertise and the dollars come to you; quit and they fall to come in, for what care the men who have money to spend, for the men who don't care to see them.

Better Mode of Testing Cattle.

There is so much spoken of the present tuberculin test law at the present time and so many farmers seemed to be opposed to the law that I am tempted to give my opinion on the subject through the columns of this paper. I myself think that the law is not right. If the law could be repealed and a law enacted to have the farmers test their own cattle free of charge by farming associations and have qualified committees appointed to do the testing in the same manner as they have the milk testing associations. Of course there naturally would be some expense connected and a farmer joining such would naturally have to pay something to become a member. I think that most every farmer would feel proud to belong to such an association and certainly would feel proud to say that his cattle were sound and good. I have been told that doctors have an understanding among themselves that is one doctor or his family becomes sick the other doctor will help him or doctor him free of charge. For that reason I do not see why farmers cannot be taught to test their own cows by keeping a herd book and keeping every critter on record by number. It could easily be detected whether the farmer was getting rid of his poorer cattle or not and how he disposed of them. The law may be fixed so that it includes other sicknesses of cows, beef cattle or for breeding purposes. Yours truly, Chas. Techtman.

Destroy the Green Fly.

Within the next few weeks there will be noticed on the windows of every house one or more large, dusty greenish flies that have crawled out of their winter hiding places. They are all females loaded with eggs, which they will deposit at the first opportunity if allowed to do so. To show the importance of killing them at once, let us consider the probable results of allowing these eggs to be deposited. Each female lays about 120 eggs. These hatch in a few hours and become full-fledged flies in ten or twelve days. There is time then for at least ten generations to be raised during the summer at the latitude of Merrill. We will suppose that only seven generations are produced and that only half of the eggs come to maturity. It is fair to suppose that half of each generation will be females. We will disregard the males and inquire simply how many females will there be in the seventh generation alone? It is a simple problem in geometrical progression. The first term is 1, the common ratio 30 and the number of terms 7. Making the computation we find the number to be 729 million. That is, if only half the eggs laid become flies and if all the first six generations die by the time the seventh is hatched, there will still be left as the female descendants of that dusty specimen on your window madam housekeeper, the enormous number of flies mentioned above, not to speak of the male members of that generation, which would be equally numerous and equally offensive. Don't you think you would do well to kill the fly?

—A wisely conducted newspaper is like a banquet, says an exchange. Everything is served with a view to variety. Help yourself to what you want and do not condemn the entire spread because pickles and onions may be included. If you do not relish them some one else may find them palatable. Be generous and broad enough to select gracefully such reading matter from the newspapers as will be agreeable to your mental taste. You, as an individual, are not compelled to swallow everything. We do not all think alike on every subject and it is a good thing, as it makes more variety, and variety is the spice of existence.

My friend, help the Editor in his wild eyed search for news. When your friend comes to see you, if you are not ashamed of it tell him; when your wife gives a tea party, if you have recovered from the effects of the gossip, drop in with the news; when a baby arrives fill your pockets with cigars and call; if you go to a party, steal some of the things, and leave 'em with the item in our sanctum. If your wife licks you come in and let us see the scars and tender sympathy thru the paper; if your mother-in-law has died don't be bashful about it; give in all the common place news. In short, what ever makes you feel proud, sad, lonesome or glad submit it to our 24 karat wisdom, see our matted locks part and stand on end with gratitude, which will pour from every pore like moisture from the dew besprinkled earth—Ex.

—A number of girls recently invited their friends to a party, saying that a feature of the entertainment would be a swimming match between two girls. Everyone went and found that this part of the program was carried out by two girls sitting at a table with a bowl of water between them in which a match floated. The men felt that they had been cheated.
