

MOON'S INFLUENCE ON TIDES

Survival of Old-Time Superstition Which Has Been Found Impossible to Eradicate.

The influence of the moon upon the weather was in ancient times assumed in much the same way as the influence of the moon upon the tides of the sea was assumed.

But it has no such action on the filmy vapors of the air. An immense number of exact numerical details, depending on the weight of the moon, its position, and movements in relation to the earth at successive moments, consequently of its action in producing the tides of the sea, have been ascertained with astounding accuracy.

GET THIS FOR COLDS Prescription for Positive Results Don't Experiment.

From your druggist get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Globe Compound (Concentrated Pine). Take these two ingredients home and mix them in a half pint of cold water. Shake well. Take one to two teaspoonsful after each meal and at bed time. Smaller doses to children according to age. This is said to be the quickest cough and cold cure known to the medical profession. Be sure to get only the genuine Globe Compound (Concentrated Pine). Each half ounce bottle comes in a tin screw-top sealed case. If your druggist is out of stock he will quickly get it from his wholesale house. Don't fool with uncertain mixtures. It is risky. Local druggists say that for the past six years this has had a wonderful demand. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical Laboratories of Chicago.

TIRED BLOOD AFFECTS THE AGED (Copyright 1915 by the Tonitives Co.)

Aged persons are susceptible to Paralysis, Apoplexy, Poor Blood Conditions, as a result of Tired Blood Conditions, which tend to harden the arteries. Now what is the best safeguard of the soundness of the arteries if it is not in the steady flow of perfect blood through them? Unimpaired arteries, Perfect Digestion, and a constant sure elimination of waste products, are the best guarantee of a healthy and peaceful old age. Tonitives are offered as an aid in securing these fundamental conditions. 75c. per box of dealers or by mail, The Tonitives Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Surprised Him. "There was a fellow who proposed to all the girls just for fun. He had no idea of getting himself engaged, but he enjoyed the preliminaries. So he was disagreeably surprised once and served him right." "Miss Evelyn," he said soulfully, "do you think you could love me well enough to be my wife?" "Yes, darling," she cried. "Well—er—now I know where to come in case I should want to marry." —Detroit Free Press.

Our Discontent. Brand Whitlock, the mayor of Toledo, was talking about discontent. "It is our discontent, our divine discontent," he said, "that will make a great nation of us." and with enjoyment the booky which greeted me afresh at every step.

The dead silence which I had remarked earlier was broken now by the hoarse tooting of a steamboat whistle, somewhere off shore, and by the shrill voices of birds, apparently in resentful protest at this raucous invasion of their sylvan quiet.

I had succeeded in putting aside, for the moment at least, all thought of Cameron, his anonymous letters, and his mutilated portrait, and was dwelling on my disappointment at not having caught even so much as a glimpse of Evelyn Grayson during my morning visit to Cragbolt. It is true that I had gone there with a single purpose in mind—to convey to Cameron what I believed to be an important theory—but underlying this, I realized now, was more than a hope, a confidence even, that I should see Evelyn. I was tempted, indeed, to regret that I had not waited, visited the kennels, and accepted Cameron's invitation for luncheon, which would doubtless have insured me a few words at least with my Goddess of Youth.

While on the verge of this self-reproach my spirits suddenly lifted, for the steam whistle having died away in the distance and the feathered choristers having relapsed into a pleased chirp that merely accented the stillness, there broke all at once on the mute calm of the woodland the silver sweetness of a girl's singing. Clear and resonant it rang through the forest aisles; a voice I knew beyond mistaking. Evelyn Grayson was coming towards me over the scented turf. Still hidden by a bend in the path, the melody alone measured for me her approach. It was a French chanson she was singing, a lyric of Baudelaire's, of which we were both fond.

Sweet music sweeps me like the sea toward my pale star. Whether the clouds be there or all the air be free.

And then she came around the turn. At first she did not see me, for her eyes were lifted with her voice, and I had time to mark the fascinating grace of her long free stride before she became conscious of my presence and checked and shortened it. She wore a frock of white serge, the skirt's edge at her ankles, revealing dainty, snowy buckskin ties and just a peep of white silk hose. And her flower-like face looked out through a frame of Leghorn straw and pink roses, tied snugly beneath her softly rounded chin with the fillest of long, floating white veils. You can imagine the picture she made, there in this green glade, with her big blue eyes alight with glad surprise, and the warm blood suddenly risen in her cheeks.

"You truant!" I cried, in jocular reprimand, "are you always going to run away when I visit Cragbolt?" She pouted prettily. I detest a woman who pouts, ordinarily. There is usually such palpable affectation about it. But Evelyn's pouting was winsome as an infant's. Besides it was only momentary. Then her eyes flashed and her foot was planted very hard, so that a tiny thing in the green grass blades.

"I'm not a truant," she declared, with feigned indignation, "and I never thought of running away. That's just your conceited, egotistical imagination. You fancy that everything I do can have but one cause, and that is yourself. How, pray, was I to know you intended paying me a morning call?" "Tut, tut," I caught her up. "What a little spiteful we have here! If you hadn't deserted me so shamefully last evening, I shouldn't have minded this morning, so much. As it is, it seems as since I saw you."

"Now she smiled until her dimples nestled. "That is much better," she returned, gayly, "and deserves a reply, just as my action of last evening deserves praise, and not rebuke. I sacrificed myself and my pleasure for one I love."

From an Australian Diary

Voracious Ants of All Kinds—One Species that Exhibits Fondness for Sheet Lead. About noon it got too hot for anything and I took a well earned swim in a secluded creek, amid shoals of fish, large and small, who apparently resented my intrusion, from the way they came and stared at me. I found on emerging from the water that a host of blue brown ants had taken possession of my clothes, and when they were shaken out they re-venge themselves by biting my bare feet in a way which was exceedingly painful. There are thousands of ants everywhere, says a writer in the Gentlewoman. Some of the ant hills are three feet high and six feet across—but except for a sharp nip at the time, the ordinary ant's bite is not noticeable. But if a soldier ant or a bull ant or a green head (an ant about one and a half inches long, with a green head) bites you, it is not to be forgotten, because they take quite a big piece out. Then there are the white ants (not really ants, but termites), which cheerfully eat the inside out of the beams of the wooden houses, and recently have been eating the sheet lead on the top of the Sydney museum. The city fathers thought this was going a little far, so now the ants are preserved inside the museum with samples of the half consumed lead as warning to all who allow their appetites to run away with them.

Imprisoned Tailor Strikes. The latest Australian strike is one of the Gilbertian order. A prisoner in Penitentiary, a tailor by trade, refused to work on the ground that it would be contrary to his principles as a trade unionist. He sent a letter to the Tailors' union officially notifying it of his action, but that body expressed neither sympathy nor disapproval, preferring silence.

Shield for Searchlights. Searchlights used to guide vessels through the Suez canal at night are prevented from blinding the pilots of approaching craft by cutting off some of the rays so as to project a dark angle.

and with enjoyment the booky which greeted me afresh at every step. The dead silence which I had remarked earlier was broken now by the hoarse tooting of a steamboat whistle, somewhere off shore, and by the shrill voices of birds, apparently in resentful protest at this raucous invasion of their sylvan quiet. I had succeeded in putting aside, for the moment at least, all thought of Cameron, his anonymous letters, and his mutilated portrait, and was dwelling on my disappointment at not having caught even so much as a glimpse of Evelyn Grayson during my morning visit to Cragbolt. It is true that I had gone there with a single purpose in mind—to convey to Cameron what I believed to be an important theory—but underlying this, I realized now, was more than a hope, a confidence even, that I should see Evelyn. I was tempted, indeed, to regret that I had not waited, visited the kennels, and accepted Cameron's invitation for luncheon, which would doubtless have insured me a few words at least with my Goddess of Youth.

While on the verge of this self-reproach my spirits suddenly lifted, for the steam whistle having died away in the distance and the feathered choristers having relapsed into a pleased chirp that merely accented the stillness, there broke all at once on the mute calm of the woodland the silver sweetness of a girl's singing. Clear and resonant it rang through the forest aisles; a voice I knew beyond mistaking. Evelyn Grayson was coming towards me over the scented turf. Still hidden by a bend in the path, the melody alone measured for me her approach. It was a French chanson she was singing, a lyric of Baudelaire's, of which we were both fond.

Sweet music sweeps me like the sea toward my pale star. Whether the clouds be there or all the air be free.

And then she came around the turn. At first she did not see me, for her eyes were lifted with her voice, and I had time to mark the fascinating grace of her long free stride before she became conscious of my presence and checked and shortened it. She wore a frock of white serge, the skirt's edge at her ankles, revealing dainty, snowy buckskin ties and just a peep of white silk hose. And her flower-like face looked out through a frame of Leghorn straw and pink roses, tied snugly beneath her softly rounded chin with the fillest of long, floating white veils. You can imagine the picture she made, there in this green glade, with her big blue eyes alight with glad surprise, and the warm blood suddenly risen in her cheeks.

"Now she smiled until her dimples nestled. "That is much better," she returned, gayly, "and deserves a reply, just as my action of last evening deserves praise, and not rebuke. I sacrificed myself and my pleasure for one I love."

Such an explanation is not unreasonable. The thing, really, must have been done in some such way. "And don't you see," I hurried on with my advantage, "how utterly cheap this makes the whole affair? There's nothing at all impressive in that performance when you find out how it was done. If the next demonstration is no better than such claptrap, you may rest assured you have a very picaresque sort of mountebank villain to deal with. So, cheer up, my dear man, and I'll show you a few tricks at tennis that may be equally eye-opening."

Unquestionably my friend appeared relieved. But I came to fancy later that the appearance was feigned for my benefit. Certainly he was not convinced, and in that proved himself possessed of an intuition, a world more accurate than my own.

CHAPTER III. The Target. The set at tennis having finished with victory perching on my banners, I made excuse to put off the inspection of the collie puppies until another time, resumed my walking boots and, with a parting if futile admonition to Cameron to "think no more about it," started on my homeward way. My route lay again through the miniature forest, for the day had waxed uncomfortably warm with the approach of noon, and there was scant shade on the high-road between our two houses. In the wood, however, the air was gratefully cool, and I strode on at a good pace, breathing and with enjoyment the booky which greeted me afresh at every step. Extensive improvements were made possible through the good will of the members of the congregation. A new heating system was installed. A new chimney built and a basement arranged under the church. The three altars were neatly repainted in white and gold, a new confessional installed, and shortly before Christmas a new Way of the Cross, costing $600 was erected. New gasoline lights were also installed in the church and parsonage. All of the improvements, excepting the heating plant and the chimney, were donated by kind benefactors of this congregation. The old year closed with solemn services at 7:30 o'clock in the evening. An excellent sermon was delivered by Rev. Beyer, after which followed Benediction and Te Deum. Farewell 1912; welcome 1913!

President of the Associated Doctors Institute

The chief consulting physician of the Associated Doctors Institute will be at KEWASKUM for one day only SATURDAY, JANUARY 11 when he will receive and examine patients.

The Associated Doctors are the specialists whose many wonderful cures have caused comment by the press, pulpit and public, not only in WISCONSIN but all over the country. These specialists have founded a school of medicine which embraces all the good points of all the old schools and leaves out the bad. They use allopathic drugs when they are needed, they use homeopathic drugs where they are needed, and Electric treatment where they are needed, and in some cases they use a combination of Electric treatments with Homeopathic or Allopathic drugs in the same case. The Associated Doctors have united the various schools and "isms" of medicine to form a perfect system of curing diseases.

The object of the Associated Doctors in visiting this community is to secure a few cases, but they want these cases to be only the most difficult ones. They know that if they cure a few of the worse cases here, that others will hear of it and go to one of their institutes for treatment. A cured patient is their best advertisement.

While the Doctor is at the EAGLE hotel for this one day's visit on SATURDAY, JANUARY 11 he will examine all cases free of charge, but will accept only curable cases for treatment, as it would not be a good advertisement to treat any case unless they were sure of a cure. To the cases selected for treatment a special reduced price will be made.

The diseases treated by the Associated Doctors are diseases of the nerves, blood skin, heart, stomach, kidneys and liver, including rheumatism, paralysis, neuralgia, loss of nerve force, goitre, constipation, catarrh, epilepsy, dyspepsia, indigestion, piles, fistula, weak back, bloating, dropsy, eczema, scrofula and diseases of women and diseases of men and all diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat.

The daily papers throughout the country are continually publishing reports of the wonderful cures that have been made by the Associated Doctors.

While the Associated Doctors will not accept any incurable cases for treatment, no one should give up hope simply because other doctors have failed to help them. It must be remembered that this new system of medicine has quickly cured many cases which could not even be helped by other doctors or medicines.

The Associated Doctors' treatment is all home treatment so that frequent visits to the office are not necessary. This treatment may be used in any home, anywhere, without necessary inconvenience, publicity or annoyance and without detaining the patient from his or her usual occupation.

This wonderful new system of treatment is what these noted doctors are bringing to KEWASKUM. He will be here on SATURDAY, JANUARY 11.
