OF INTEREST TO FARMERS INFORMATION ABOUT WISCONSIN FARMS

Wisconsin has 177,127 farms of this number 152,473 are operated by owners and managers and 24,654 by tenants.

Eighty-six per cent of the farms of this State are operated by owners and managers and 14 per cent by tenants. The farm home owners and managers of Wisconsin cultivate 9,782,000 acres of land and the tenants till 2,126,000 acres in this State.

The value of the land and buildings of the tenant farms in this State is $224,110,000; that of the home owners and managers is $97,923,000.

Farmers Move Frequently

In compiling data for the last Federal Census, the enumerators asked every farmer in Wisconsin this question: "How long have you lived on the farm you now occupy?" This question was answered by 164,169 of the 177,127 farm operators in this State. More than 25,000 stated that they had occupied their farms only one year or less; 30,158 from 2 to 4 years; 34,341 from 5 to 9 years and 14,425 10 years and over. The most restless class of people in this State is the tenant who operates his farm on the share basis. They are 11,896 of these farmers in this State; 11,427 of them made answer to the query and their replies indicated that 5,238 or about 20 per cent of them moved every year.

Result of Frequent Change by Farmers

An official of the Federal Census Bureau, in discussing the report recently issued by the government dealing with the term of occupancy of farms in the United States, said:

"This frequency of moving from farm to farm, or instability of occupancy, very likely forms one of the chief causes for the decline of rural prosperity, or is a hindrance to greater progress. Frequency of removal of farmers results in general shiftlessness; the roads and bridges are generally in a poor condition because the farmers, moving at frequent periods, are not particularly interested in their upkeep. Farm buildings of such farms are not usually kept in good repair, as the farmer who is about to move will leave the repairs for the next tenant to make. The same reason will apply for lack of interest by the 'unstable' farmer in the schools, churches and general welfare of the community. They move frequently; they do not remain on a farm long enough to get the best results from it, consequently they are usually in a poor financial condition."

A Factory on The Farm

A silo is a factory on the farm and therefore lends itself to cooperation of the commercial and agricultural interests. The farmer gets the profit of both producer and consumer.

We need more of these twin agencies of prosperity on the farms of Wisconsin and business men cannot render a better service to their communities than in encouraging the building of silos. The silo is a great business educator. It arouses the spirit of enterprise, develops business ingenuity and awakens the joy of ownership.

A farmer can build a silo for two or three hundred dollars, and it will, under ordinary conditions, pay a dividend of 40 per cent where it is run to capacity.

The Undertaker a Developer

There are in many communities successful business men and farmers who stand like stumps in the highways of progress and in such a situation the Undertaker is an important factor in development. Scarcely a day passes that they do not add a new firm to public spirited citizens in a movement for the upbuilding of their community or by their indifference snag an industrial enterprise.

It takes live men to build a community and there is no sadder sight in life than a few noble spirited citizens staggering under a load of dead timbers. The undertaker is oft times a developer.

VERY PRETTY WEDDING AT ST. MICHAELS

Miss Veronica Laubach, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Laubach, United in Marriage to Mr. William Starck of Milwaukee

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the St. Michaels church last Monday, October 5th, when Miss Veronica Laubach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Laubach, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. William Starck of Milwaukee, Rev. A. Lauer of Alton, a cousin of the bride performed the ceremony.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white messaline with white chiffon tunic and carried a shower bouquet of roses.

Miss Elsa Lartsch, an intimate friend of the bride, was maid of honor, and wore a peach colored chiffon gown and carried white and pink carnations. The bridesmaid was Miss Agatha Laubach, sister of the bride, who wore a gaslight green messaline dress and carried carnations.

Nic. Laubach, a brother of the bride, and Martin Inkmann, an intimate friend of the groom were groomsmen.

The flower girls were the little Misses Constance Dworschak and Alice Bremser, nieces of the bride. After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home with about seventy guests present. The entertainment consisted of games dancing and singing. The house was prettily decorated with white and pink crepe paper and autumn leaves.

The bride is a very attractive and popular young lady and is thought very highly of by her large circle of friends. She will undoubtedly make an ideal companion to the life partner she has chosen.

The groom, although not very extensively known in this community, is a very popular and highly respected young man among his many friends and acquaintances at Milwaukee. He is a young man of exemplary character, industrious and well fitted for the life he has chosen.

The young couple left for a wedding journey through the northern part of the state and will be at home to their many friends after November 1st. At 1728 Clark St., Milwaukee, where the groom owns a grocery store.

This paper together with the many friends of the contracting parties unite in extending congratulations to the happy couple. May their life be one of happiness and prosperity.

High School Notes

Miss Luella Schurr visited school Tuesday.

X Y Z, the up-to-date Junior Jeweler—Phone 1006 Main.

The Juniors were given a test in Geometry on Wednesday.

The school was favored by a visit of the school board on Monday.

The Sophomores wrote their final examination on "The Ancient Mariner" Wednesday morning.

The Seniors claim that the study of "Physics" would be alright if it wasn't for the problems.

The members of the Hikers Club are planning on taking a hike around the section Friday evening. They intend to stop at Prairie Villa for lunch.

The Seniors are fond of eating the Juniors oranges just about five minutes to twelve. It seems that their appetite will not allow them to wait until they reach home.

TO ORGANIZE A BASKET BALL LEAGUE

Fond du Lac, North Fond du Lac, Kewaskum and Schleisingsville to be in the Circuit

North Fond du Lac and Fond du Lac basketball enthusiasts who were interested in the formation of the Central Wisconsin basketball league held a meeting Tuesday evening to go over the situation as it applies to the two locations.

The Fond du Lac club have abandoned the idea of playing games in Fond du Lac and if arrangements can be made will play at North Fond du Lac, the Auditorium to be utilized. This will mean that North Fond du Lac will not only get the North Fond du Lac team games but the Fond du Lac team games as well. It is planned to follow the same plan as features the Co. E. games in Fond du Lac, by having a dancing social follow each game.

Kewaskum and Schleisingsville have each declared in favor of the league idea and will have representatives at the meeting to be held at Fond du Lac later in the month. Campbellsport and West Bend are expected to take some action in the matter this week.

Mrs. E. L. Peck Laid to Rest

The funeral of Mrs. E. L. Peck who died last Saturday morning, was held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the family residence in Campbellsport. Rev. T. J. Reykald of Appleton and Rev. W. J. Corr of Juneau officiated, and interment was at Union cemetery. The bearers were Lloyd Brown, Norton Brown, both sons of the deceased; John Diener, George Barnes and Frank Sievers. The floral offerings were large and beautiful, the whole casket being banked with them.

Some of the relatives from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Barnes, Edison Park, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. John Diener, Harvard, Ill.; Mrs. Charles Campbell, Miller, S. D.; Mr. and Mrs. N. D. Brown and daughter Bernice of Barrington, Ill.; Miss Marcella Sievers, Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Van Blarcom, Bee Van Blarcom, Mrs. Nelson Tice and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sievers of Fond du Lac.

Married at Jackson

The marriage of Miss Amelia Froehlich, daughter of Hon. and Mrs. William H. Froehlich of Jackson to Mr. Wilbert P. Gumm of the same place took place last Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Star of David German Luth. church town Jackson. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. W. Keibel.

The bride was attended by Miss Minnie Froehlich, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and Miss Minnie Pape of Madison, Wis., as bridesmaid. Messrs. Clarence Gumm and Alfred B. Froehlich of Jackson acted as groomsmen.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gumm of Jackson. Mr. Gumm and his bride will make an extended trip through the eastern states. After November fifteenth they will be at home to their friends at 2445 Cold Spring Ave., Milwaukee.

Bus Business at Fredonia Station

Theodore Eisentrout, who for the past two years has been employed as machinist in the Schaefer garage here, resigned his position last week. He has purchased a machine shop at Fredonia Station and will take possession of same just as soon as he can make arrangements to move his family and household goods there. Mr. Eisentrout is a faithful worker and a good mechanic and we doubt not that he will make good in his newly chosen field of labor. Here's success to you Theodore.

NEGRO'S BODY RECOVERED FROM CEDAR LAKE

Was Found Floating in Cedar Lake on Tuesday Morning by Otto Boettcher. Negro Was Drowned Just Six Weeks Ago

The body of Louis O. Bryant, who was drowned in Cedar Lake on Aug. 26th, 1914, was found floating in the lake by Otto Boettcher on Tuesday morning just six weeks after the accident.

Mr. Boettcher was standing on the shore of the lake when he saw a dark object floating in the water about 500 feet from his shore. He rowed out and found the remains of Mr. Bryant, for whose body the entire lake had been dragged in vain. Owing to the fact that the body did not come to the surface sooner, all kinds of rumors were current, and there were many who were of the belief that the negro had feigned drowning, but had swam to shore and ran away. The finding of his body at this time has therefore put a stop to idle talk.

The body, altho in the water six weeks, was in fairly good condition. Mr. Boettcher tied a rope to one of its legs and pulled it ashore and then notified Sheriff Benike and Chairman Peters. It was taken out of the water placed in a coffin and brought to the Kapfer-Zwaschka undertaking rooms in this city. Burial was made in the Pilgrim's Rest cemetery Tuesday afternoon.

Louis O. Bryant was about 29 years old and was in the employ of John Rosenheimer at the Cedar Lake Park hotel, as porter. He was a good swimmer and often rowed out into the middle of the lake to take a swim. On the day previous to the drowning he had done the same thing. He cried for help and the parties that responded learned that he had just fooled them. The next day, when he called for help, the response was not so quick and he lost his life.—West Bend News.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE EUROPEAN WAR

Wm. Klatt of Avon, S. D., Gives Account of The Present European War as it Was at Time of Visit There.

Mr. Wm. Klatt of Avon, South Dakota, who has been spending a few weeks here with the Herman Meilahn family, has been kind enough to give this office an account of his trip in Europe at the time of his visit there the past summer which we are herewith publishing.

"I have been over to Germany the past summer, leaving New York on June 6th, and returned on Sept. 22nd. My return was made on boat an English ship named Principello and there were about 800 American passengers on board. The trip took 13 days and experienced some very bad storms, about half of the passengers becoming sick, one old lady 63 years passed away when we were half across the ocean. One of the storms was so bad that it effected the ship, rocking it like a cradle. It was impossible to keep the dishes on the table during this storm.

I was in Hamburg at the time the war started. When first war was declared the excitement was great, but after a few days it quieted down. By the time I left there, the worst that there were so many out of employment. It was stated that in Hamburg alone, there were about 16,000 people out of work and had but little money, and that if the war will continue for any length of time, hard times will be felt.

I was not near where the fighting was going on therefore heard none of the roaring cannons. There were, however, a good number of Americans in France near the boundary lines, but as soon as war was declared all made haste and went to Hamburg or Berlin and waited their chance to get out of Germany thence back home to United States. Most of the Americans had to wait about a month before they were able to leave Europe. The biggest number went by the way of Rotterdam Holland and then to England, while others went by way of Norway and Copenhagen. There are however, a large number of Americans still over in Europe."

CLIFFORD W. STARRETT PASSES AWAY IN DEATH

Republican Candidate for Congress of The Second District Succumbs During Saturday Night, Apoplexy The Cause

Mayor Clifford W. Starrett of Plymouth, and republican candidate for congress of the second congressional district, an opponent of Michael E. Burke, suddenly passed away at his home in Plymouth some time during Saturday night or early Sunday morning. Apoplexy is given as the cause of his demise.

Mr. Starrett had just returned from a vigorous campaign in Dodge county attending the Dodge county fair at Beaver Dam. He returned home on Saturday and was in good spirit, although somewhat tired from his week's work. In the evening he left home and went to mingle with some of his staunch friends, and before leaving bid his wife goodbye. Believing that Mr. Starrett deserved a much needed rest, his wife did not share his bed, but he occupied it alone. In the morning at about 5:45, when Mrs. Starrett went into the room to awaken her husband, she was stunned to see his lifeless body. Mr. Starrett, having passed away.

Deceased was four times mayor of the City of Plymouth. He always was a staunch republican, at all times taking a commendable interest in political affairs. He was one of the most progressive citizens of Plymouth, both as mayor of the city and as a businessman.

Besides his wife he leaves two children, one son and one daughter, both of whom are attending school at Plymouth.

The congressional committee will no doubt name a candidate to fulfill the place as republican candidate for congress, left vacant by the death of Mr. Starrett, the nominee.

Rev. Bertram's Will Probated

In the county court in Racine, Tuesday, Sep. 29, the will of the Rev. J. A. Bertram, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church in Burlington, was admitted to probate and Rev. J. H. Schiefen, of New Munster was appointed administrator of the estate.

Most of his property was given to his brothers, Joseph and Christian Bertram of Fond du Lac. The will made the following bequests:

To St. John's Institute for the deaf at St. Francis, and to two Catholic orphan asylums in Milwaukee, each $50.

To G. C. Messmer of Milwaukee the sum of $100 for use on Holy Hill church.

To Joseph Bertram, nephew of the deceased $100 cash and also his library.

To Margaret Rinzel of Hartford his piano and $300 cash.

The residue of the estate the amount of which is unknown, though it is reported to be quite large, will be divided equally among his brothers, Joseph and Christian Bertram of Fond du Lac who are also named in the will as executors.

Joseph Strobel Estate

Joseph Strobel, deceased former chairman of the town of Ashford left an estate valued at $20,000 according to a petition for administration filed in probate court last Friday morning. Mr. Strobel died at Ashford August 9.

The estate consists of $17,000 in real estate and $3,000 in personal property. The heirs are Ottilia Strobel, the widow; Bartol, Henry Lawrence, Verna and Josephine Strobel. Agnes Zehren, Mary Strassman and Zita Mathieu, children.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

Theo. Koenings, of Schleisingsville, in company with his wife and niece, Miss Margaret Wild, had an automobile accident Sunday afternoon which might have ended fatally when the motor of his machine suddenly stopped ascending the big hill just west of Little Cedar Lake. The brakes refused to work and the car went backwards down the hill. Miss Wild saved her self by jumping, but Mr. and Mrs. Koenings were thrown under the car when it tipped over. The auto turned right side up, however, and went the rest of the way down the hill without sustaining any damage. Mr. Koenings' right hand was badly bruised and Mrs. Koenings was slightly injured about the body. The parties escaped from what might have been a very serious accident.—Hartford Times.

The Cedarburg Canning Co. will build one of the biggest cement silos in the country this fall. The silo will measure 40 feet in diameter and 40 feet in height. It is said that the only silo larger than the one to be built by the local company is located in New York state and measures 40 by 60 feet. The massive concrete construction will be used to silage pea vines. The company several years ago built two silos half the size of the one to be built. They have gone into cattle and sheep raising extensively and find the silage of great value.

Gerhard Knoeck, Jr., of the town of Barton is laid up with a fractured collar bone and Fred M. Wick of Trenton was badly shaken up when the motorcycles which they were riding collided on the state road near the "island" midway between Barton and this city last Wednesday evening. Knoeck and Wick were returning to their homes on the machines and were going in opposite directions. Knoeck's injuries were given immediate medical attention. The motorcycles were only slightly wrecked.—West Bend Pilot.

Philip Frey went to Chicago last week to attend the funeral of John Lehner who died last Sunday, Sept. 27. He was sixty six years of age. Mr. Lehner formerly resided in this county, and is well remembered in the vicinity of town Polk. He was a brother of Andrew Lehner of Ackerville and Mrs. Lorenz Guth of West Bend.

GERMAN CRUISER OFF CALIFORNIA COAST

VON KLUCK TURNS ALLIES BACK IN BATTLE ON OISE

Paris Officially Admits That German General Has Gained Ground at Several Points.

BELGIANS DENY FORTS FALL

German Claim That Three Redoubts, With Thirty Guns, Have Been Taken by Them, Denied—Reports From Petrograd Assert Victories Over the Armies of the Kaiser—General War News.

London, Oct. 6.—German resumption of the offensive was signaled in starting fashion by the delivery of two furious assaults.

The first was a series of massed counter-attacks directed at the French and British line north of the Oise river, designed to break the pressure that threatened the German lines of communication into Belgium.

Second, the German left developed surprising strength in counter-attacks delivered during the night and repeated at intervals during the day, but without gain to the enemy, the French holding fast.

In the other sections of the battle front there were no developments of importance.

The German official statements maintain that a decisive check has been administered to the allies' line on the Oise, reaching the proportions of a rout. "Strategic portions of great importance" fell into the hands of General von Kluck, Berlin claims.

The allies maintain that the withdrawal in France is not significant of a general recession. Rather, it means that advanced French and British positions were assailed, and forced to withdraw to the more heavily entrenched and fortified line of the main body, where the big guns afford better protection. The battle in this region still rages furiously, with no decisive result, according to Bordeaux official statements.

Paris Admits a Check.

London, Oct. 6.—Brief messages which are being received here from Paris and Berlin indicate that the attempt of the allies to flank the right wing of the German army has been checked and that the Germans, taking the offensive, have succeeded in making advances at several points.

The messages from Berlin also state that the Germans, taking the offensive, have succeeded in making advances at several points.

The messages from Berlin also state that the Germans are progressing in the region of the forest of Argonne. The latest statement from Paris merely states that at this point, as well as on the heights of the Meuse, the French have repulsed night and day attacks.

On the rest of the long battle line the positions of the rival armies are unchanged.

Conflicts of the Fifth.

London, Oct. 5.—The three weeks' battle in the vicinity of the Aisne river is still undecided.

Neither the Germans nor the allies claim any decisive victory, although the French and British troops have advanced beyond the Aisne and are still crowding back the Kaiser's forces.

On the other hand, the Germans contend that the great battle remains a draw. They are described in official Berlin dispatches as hammering the French positions at various points with heavy artillery and that attempts

FROM LETTERS OF SAILORS

Feelings of British Seamen on Fighting Ships May Be Judged by Their Epistles.

London.—How a black cat saw the British fleet sink several German warships off Heligoland is told in a letter from Alfred Bishop, who was in the fight.

The cat is the mascot of one of the British cruisers and was on deck throughout the engagement. She is

If credence may be placed in the French statements that in most cases the German losses were larger than those sustained by the French, it would seem to be a fair estimate of the German losses, in killed, wounded and prisoners, for the same six weeks at close to 500,000 men in the western theater of war alone, not taking into account their losses in the fighting against the Russians.

Breach in Antwerp Defenses.

Berlin, by Wireless to Sayville, Oct. 6.—An official report from the German army headquarters says that in the siege of Antwerp the forts of Lierre, Woelhem and Koningsvocht and the intermediate redoubts, with 30 guns, have been taken.

"Thus a breach has been made in the outer circle of forts," the report adds, "making an attack on the inner circle of forts and the town itself possible."

Three forts, Wavre, St. Catherine and Dorpweid, fell yesterday, army headquarters reported. The same report said Fort Woelhem was invested.

No Change in Situation.

Antwerp, via London, Oct. 6.—According to official announcement made here the situation of the fortified positions around Antwerp remains without change.

Japs Repulse Germans.

Tokyo, Oct. 6.—It is officially announced that German infantry at Tsing Tao delivered a surprise night attack against the Japanese, but were repulsed. The Germans had 48 killed and the Japanese five killed and eight wounded.

The cannonading on land and sea in the vicinity of Tsing Tao continues. Four Japanese shells hit the German gunboat Iltis, which retired to the inner harbor after the exchange of shots.

Starving Horde in Vienna.

Venice, via Paris, Oct. 4.—The Vienna hospitals and all temporary asylums for sick and wounded soldiers are fearfully crowded. The city council has decided to build additional wooden barracks hospitals, which will be furnished with 10,000 beds.

The army of destitute and unemployed people in the Austrian capital is increasing daily. Thousands are threatened with starvation.

German Warns Rumania.

Vienna, via Rome and Havre, Oct. 6.—Dr. von Waldhusten, the German minister at Bucharest, has formally notified the Rumanian government that Germany is determined to declare war on that country if Rumania threatens Transylvania.

The notification practically amounts to an ultimatum and for that reason a meeting of the cabinet was summoned.

It had to be postponed, however, owing to the illness of the king, who is suspected of a diplomatic ailment.

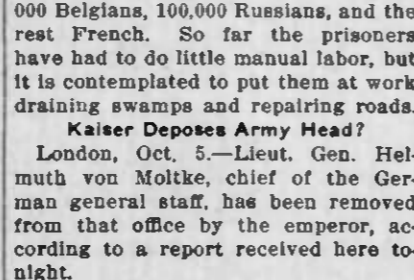

Have 240,000 Prisoners.

Berlin, Sept. 24.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The Germans now claim to have 240,000 prisoners of war, about 7,000 British, 40,000 Belgians, 100,000 Russians, and the rest French. So far the prisoners have had to do little manual labor, but it is contemplated to put them at work draining swamps and repairing roads.

Kaiser Deposes Army Head?

London, Oct. 5.—Lieut. Gen. Helmuth von Moltke, chief of the German general staff, has been removed from that office by the emperor, according to a report received here tonight.

CAPTURED A GERMAN COUNT

Private J. J. Rousseau of the Fourth regiment of Belgian chasseurs chevaliers is one of the heroes of the war by reason of his capture of Count von Buelow, son of the German chancellor. In the photograph he is wearing the Military gold cross, presented him by the Belgian king, and is to be the recipient of the Order of Leopold. Rousseau was injured by a kick from Von Buelow's horse. He took from the count his dispatch box, his uniform and 150,000 francs, which he turned over to the Red Cross.

Casualties Are Enormous.

New York, Oct. 4.—A letter received by a New York physician from a reputable source in France contains the startling information that the French losses (killed, wounded and prisoners) for the six weeks' fighting up to and including the battle of the Marne were slightly over 300,000, perhaps 310,000.

These losses are exclusive of the British casualties, which, the writer says, "have been fairly large in comparison to the small number of their engaged army."

A gunroom officer in a battle cruiser writes:

"The particular ship we were engaged with was in a pitiful plight when we had finished with her—her funnels shot away, masts tottering, great gaps of daylight in her sides, smoke and flame belching from her everywhere. She sank like a stone, stern first. So far as known none of her crew was saved. She was taken to the last, let it be said; her flag flying till she sank, her guns barking till they could bark no more."

During the episode of arrest there was another lull in the bombardment, which began again as we were seated at luncheon.

All through the meal the shells whistled and screamed overhead, and the dishes rattled constantly on the table.

When the meal was over the proprietor called us to witness what had happened to the far wing of the hotel. It was demolished.

"Alert" had just been sounded and the soldiers were running through the streets. We ran out in time to see a building fall half a block away, completely filling the street by which we entered the town an hour earlier.

In a few minutes we heard the sharp crackle of infantry about half a mile away and had a sudden desire to get away before the automobile retreat was cut off. Just then we heard the sound of an aero engine overhead. It was flying so low that through a glass we could easily see the whirling propeller.

There was another lull in the bombardment and we were permitted to pass down the street near a river, where, by peering around a building we could see where the German batteries were secreted in the hills. We were warned not to get into the street which led to the bridge, as the Germans raked that street with their fire if a person appeared. We then took advantage of a lull in the firing and departed to the south at 70 miles an hour, to beat the shells if any were aimed our way as we crossed the rise in the hill.

WRECKAGE-STREWN BATTLEFIELDS LOOK AS IF SWEEP BY CYCLONE

By C. W. WILLIAMS.

Paris.—With several other representatives of American newspapers I was permitted to pass several days in "the zone of military activity" on credentials obtained at the personal request of Ambassador Herrick, that we might describe the destruction caused by the Germans in unfortified towns. Although I had a pledge to say nothing concerning the movement of the troops or of certain points visited, I am permitted now to send a report of a part of my experiences.

We crossed the entire battlefield of the Marne, passed directly behind the lines of the battle on the Aisne, accidentally getting under fire for an entire afternoon and lurching in a hotel to the orchestra of bursting shells, one end of the building being blown away during the bombardment.

We witnessed a battle between an armored French monoplane and a German battery, and also had the experience of being accused of being German spies by two men wearing the English uniform, who, on falling to account for their own German accent, were speedily taken away under guard with their "numbers up," as the French commandant expressed what awaited them.

Likens Battle to Cyclone.

On account of our exceptional credentials we were able to see more actual war than many correspondents, who, when they learned that we permits to get to the front were not forthcoming, went anyway, usually falling into the hands of the military authorities. Getting arrested has been the chief business, of the war correspondents in this war, even our accidental view of the fighting being sufficient to cause our speedy return to Paris under parole.

Going over the battlefield of the Marne, we found the battle had followed much the same tactics as a cyclone, in that in some places nothing, not even the haystacks, had been disturbed, while in others everything, the villages, roads and fields, had been utterly devastated by shells.

We talked with the inhabitants of every village and always heard the same story—that during occupation the Germans had offered little trouble to the civilians and had confined their activities to looting and wasting the provisions; also that when retreating they had destroyed all the food they were unable to carry.

Fire Baptized in Church.

Our baptism of fire approximately came while we were in a church. At noon of the second day we motored into a deserted village and were stopped by a sentry, who acknowledged our credentials, but warned us if we intended to proceed to beware of bullets. But there was no hostile sound to alarm us.

As we drove carelessly over the brow of a hill where the road dipped down a valley into the town, we were in direct line with the German fire, as great holes in the ground and fallen trees testified.

It is a wonder our big motor car was not an immediate mark. On the way we noticed a church steeple shot completely off so, after finding an inn, where the proprietor came from the cellar and offered to guard our car and prepare luncheon, we decided first to examine the church. The inn-keeper explained that we had come during a lull in the bombardment, but the steeple, deserted place lull all sense of danger.

Shell Hits Sanctuary.

The verger showed us over the church and we were walking through the ruined nave when suddenly we heard a sound like the shrill whistling of the wind.

"It begins again," our conductor said simply.

As the speech ended we heard a loud boom and the sound of falling masonry as the shell struck the far end of the building.

We hurried to the hotel, the shells screaming overhead. We saw the buildings tumbling into ruins, glass falling like fine powder, and remnants of furniture hanging grotesquely from scraps of masonry.

All my life I had wondered what would be the sensation if I ever was under fire—would I suddenly become fatalistic? I was under fire with a vengeance, but instead of being afraid I kept saying to myself:

"Being afraid won't help matters; besides, nothing will happen if we just keep close to the walls and away from the middle of the streets."

Accusers Taken as Spies.

On the way we met two men in English uniforms, who later denounced us as spies. We halted them and they replied that they had been cut off from their regiment and were now fighting with the French. Just as luncheon was announced eight soldiers filed into the hotel, arrested us and marched us before the commandant, who saw that our papers were all right, but suggested that on account of the dangerous position we leave as soon as possible. We asked permission to finish our luncheon.

It was lucky that we were arrested then—before the accusation that we were spies—for when that question arose there was no doubt in the mind of the commandant concerning us, so our accusers' charge merely reacted upon themselves.

RUSSIANS ROUTED CLAIM AUSTRIANS

REPORT ENEMY RETREATS IN DISORDER FROM CARPATHIAN PASSES.

STORM BELGIUM DEFENSE

Night Fighting Takes Place Under Glare of Searchlights—Austrians Close Schools Because of Cholera.

Manchester, N. H., Oct. 7.—Dr. Constantin Dumbe, Austro-Hungarian ambassador to the United States, said Tuesday night he had received the following official messages by wireless from Vienna:

"Our troops progress victoriously in all defenses in Carpathians against Russians, who are fleeing in disorder. Two Montenegrin brigades which penetrated in eastern Bosnia were crushed after two days sanguinary fight and are at present fleeing over frontier in panic.

"Several Austrians were found in a horribly mutilated state.

"The whole Serbian battalion was captured by us in northern Bosnia." Dr. Dumbe said the message was signed by Count Berchtold, secretary of foreign affairs.

German Victory Complete.

Berlin (via Sayville, L. I.) Oct. 7.—It is officially stated that the Russians were completely defeated near Suwalki and Augustow, on the east Prussian frontier. The Germans made several thousand prisoners and captured eighteen cannon and many machine guns.

The situation, it is announced, is most hopeful everywhere, for the Germans and Austrians.

Claim Germans Lost.

Paris, Oct. 7.—Telegraphing from Petrograd, a correspondent of the Temps, says that in the retreat across the Niemen the Germans lost 180 guns and all siege artillery. Their heavy howitzers were abandoned before Ostrovetz.

Paris, Oct. 7.—The Germans, in a surprising show of offensive strength, are attempting to cut off the left wing army of Gen. D'Amade and surround it.

Aviators returning from an aerial reconnaissance early in the day reported large masses of German cavalry in the vicinity of Lille, which the observers declared was screening a large force of infantry and artillery moving through the region north of the line from Turcoing, ten miles northeast of Lille, to Amettes.

TURCOS NOT ALWAYS PITILESS

That the French Turcos are not always the ferocious savages they have been called is evidenced by this photograph, in which some of them are seen caring for a wounded German soldier.

RUSSIANS HAVE HAD TRAINING IN REAL WAR

St. Petersburg.—Due to their experience in the war with Japan, the officers of the Russian army were said to be the best trained in Europe at the beginning of the present titanic conflict. The education of the modern officer has radically changed during the last few years. The development of present-day warfare has rendered it necessary for him to acquire an ever increasing burden of knowledge so that on the continent today the military officer is certainly one of the hardest worked members of the community. Every year maneuvers are made more realistic. But after all, the best training for war is war. The Russian army today contains the only men in Europe who have had this training, so far as war on a vast scale is concerned. Tens of thousands of officers and men who are in the field with the Russian army today have had the actual experience in modern warfare on which the textbooks of the other contending armies are based. Among the endless battalions who are fighting the Germans and the Austrians are any number of officers who have made the inevitable mistakes committed by troops facing fire for the first time. It is probable that every regiment of Russian troops in action today contains seasoned men who faced the inferno of Japanese fire.

Corporal O'Brien is one of the men who took part in the memorable charge of the Ninth British lancers under Captain Grenfell at Mons. He was wounded and sent home, and is shown here appealing to the men of Great Britain to enlist. His two brothers were killed within a hundred yards of him.

FOLKESTONE IS BUSY CARING FOR THE REFUGEES

Folkestone, England.—Since British wounded and Belgian refugees began to arrive in England on every boat, this quaint old coast town has been put "on the map" and is known, perhaps for the first time, to the whole world. Folkestone slowly but surely is waking up to find itself famous. It is not at all certain that the town welcomes the "war" but unexpected honors with it. For as each day of the war passes and the boats from the continent arrive with victims of the German invasion Folkestone has to unbend and work as it probably never has done before. Suddenly it has developed from a typical English seaside resort into a huge caravan. The number of French and Belgian refugees has grown into a very serious problem. All sorts and conditions of men, women and children are there. Hotels and boarding houses are full, and the people are asking themselves, "What shall we do with the hundreds to come?" Fortunately for Folkestone and the refugees themselves, the problem is being faced boldly and generously. Those with ready money or credit are finding the large hotels considerable and ready to help, and the poorer refugees are being placed in homes or sent up to London by the relief committee, which is working in conjunction with the government.

Professors as Mail Carriers.

Berlin.—Several of the older professors of the University of Goettingen are reported to have accepted positions as rural letter carriers to relieve the loss of men in this service during the war. Great numbers of members of the Students' association have gone to the front. Almost all of the students "Germania" in Berlin are in the field, including even the "alte Herren," or former students.

Youngest French Volunteer.

Paris.—Paul Levitler, aged seventeen, attached to the Twenty-sixth regiment of chasseurs, is the youngest French volunteer. There are ten volunteers between the ages of seventeen and eighteen at the front. The oldest French volunteer is Lieut. Col. Royal, seventy, who rejoined as a private.

Washburn.—The expenditure of $4,000 in addition to the $16,000 already expended is to be made on the "long bridge" route at the head of Chequamegon bay by Bayfield county.

La Crosse.—As a result of injuries received in a fall from a street car, Otto Koeller was awarded the sum of $5,000 from the Wisconsin Railway, Light and Power company.

Oconomowoc.—Mrs. Charles A. Canterbury died suddenly at her home of heart trouble. Mrs. Canterbury was about 40 years old. She was well known as an artist.

BADGER NEWS NOTES

Sheboygan.—A pair of spectacles laid across the conductors of a telephone instrument put the train dispatching system of the Milwaukee Northern Electric road out of business for several hours. Linemen traced the wires from Sheboygan to Port Washington without finding the trouble. When the owl car reached Oostburg the woman operator picked up her spectacles preparatory to going home. This relieved the short circuit and the phone was in working order again.

Waukesha.—The effort to have the district schools of Genesee consolidated into one graded and high school was lost. Saylesville, Genesee Depot and Bethesda all favored the proposed combination. The town of Genesee sends many persons to Waukesha High school every year, and the expense to the town is high.

Elm Grove.—Work has commenced on wrecking the old Ramstack tavern here. It was built in 1870 by John Ramstack, to accommodate farmers from the west along the Watertown Plank road. The landmark will be replaced by a modern building at once.

La Crosse.—A unique harvest is being carried on in the marshes between the two sections of the city. It is that of marsh potatoes, a delicacy highly prized by the Chinese. The roots, which this year are of unusual quality, command a high price, local Chinese paying as high as $10 per barrel for them.

Washburn.—A resolution protesting against the present highway aid law and the present income tax law was passed by the county board of Bayfield county this week and a copy will be forwarded to the next Wisconsin legislature.

Amery.—Having been compelled to cease his duties as pastor of the Amery Congregational church by ill health, the Rev. A. F. Newcomb has resigned, but may take an extended vacation and return at the request of his congregation.

Delavan.—O. A. Williams, while on his way to this city on a motorcycle early Saturday night ran into projecting timbers on a load of lumber at the Sage Field Lumber company yards and was severely injured. Manitowoc.—Samuel Hall, Sr., pioneer business man of the city, died suddenly after eating dinner. He was in the grain business many years. Mr. Hall was 82 years old and was born in Ireland.

Menasha.—The funeral of the Rev. Peter Schmitz, pastor of St. Mary's church, Menasha, who died at St. Elizabeth's hospital, Appleton, following an operation performed for appendicitis, was the largest ever held in Menasha.

La Crosse.—Because his launch was damaged and sunk, David Gantenbein, a local fisherman, has brought suit against John Deere, a Moline, Ill., millionaire, for $1,600. The fisherman's boat was practically demolished by the Deere houseboat.

Superior.—The proposal of Douglas county officials to levy $100,000 for roads at the annual meeting next month is to be opposed by the city. The city commission holds the amount is entirely too high and the plan of expenditure unjust to Superior.

Merrill.—The North Central Division of the Christian Endeavor ends its session in this city. Delegates from Marathon, Lincoln, Langlade, Shawano, Oneida, Vilas and Forest counties, besides many Presbyterians from different parts of the state were here.

Washburn.—The expenditure of $4,000 in addition to the $16,000 already expended is to be made on the "long bridge" route at the head of Chequamegon bay by Bayfield county.

EDITORIAL

Maine's reputation for good, hard Yankee common sense is safe.

The problems of farming are as serious as the multiplication tables.

He who plows can produce anything, including health and happiness.

Successful farming and marketing are the basis of all human progress.

Only a few log rolling politicians are kicking against the war taxes.

Good roads broaden our sympathy, lessen distance and increase our usefulness.

It's the man who really counts in farming. Fertile land is necessary, but a master mind must solve the problem of production and marketing.

The Progressive rank and file has evidently reached the conclusion that the progressive thing to do is to line up with a real progressive Woodrow Wilson.

And now come Gallinger, of New Hampshire, and Smoot of Utah, survivors of that notable political era when certificates of deposits nested under Senatorial dinner plates, fanning the air with charges of "graft" in the river and harbor bill. Why, the word was invented when they were running the Government.

Senator LaFollette in an editorial in his weekly says, "Incidentally the country rejoices that Wilson is President." The Honorable rejoices by this means that the Senator is not the only one there are others and many right at home.

LaFollette Praises Wilson's War Policy

Those who mocked at his Mexican policy now offer up prayers of thanksgiving that we are not involved in an endless and fruitless war with Mexico.

This is Senator LaFollette's editorial today to President Wilson's course with respect to the European war. "Because of his course with dealing with the European war," he says, "President Wilson today holds a supreme place in the confidence of the people of the United States. In the estimation of his character and service all other subjects are subordinated to the one great fact that everywhere finds spontaneous expression in the simple phrase: 'He is keeping us out of war. President Wilson's every move for peace, every act for strengthening neutrality, has the stamp of sincerity, of wise caution and fearless purpose. Full in the eyes of the world he maintains a calm poise in direct ratio to the responsibility that rests upon him. Incidentally the country rejoices that Wilson is President.'"—Evening Wisconsin.

FLY NETS AND LAP ROBES. How It Feels to Freeze. Freezing to death is preceded by a drowsiness which makes the end painless, the body actually feeling warm and going comfortably to sleep. Experiments have been made with animals to show just how freezing to death proceeds. In one of these experiments, in which the animal was placed in a temperature of from 25 to 150 degrees below zero, the breathing and heart beats were at first quickened, the organic heat of the body actually rising above the normal, which is 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit. This showed a sudden and intense effort on the part of the functions to preserve the body's temperature. Then violent heart action gave out suddenly, and death came when the temperature of the body dropped to 71 degrees Fahrenheit.—Popular Mechanics. "Blind and Deaf"

An old lady recently called her trusted family physician to relieve a distressing cough. The physician is a conscientious man who doesn't go it blind. He insisted on examining her chest most thoroughly. The patient hindered the examination.

When one side of the chest was thoroughly gone over she said there was no occasion to examine the other. With gentle but uncompromising persistence, the physicians discovered a cancer of the breast so large that it extended through the chest wall. The cancer was the mechanical irritant which caused the cough by actually pressing upon the lung. It was then too far advanced to offer any hope of cure.

Of course the patient knew of this growth. In attempting to keep her physician from learning of it she was attempting to escape a truth by the primitive device of closing her eyes.

Nearly a year ago a physician was consulted by a patient about a small growth in her breast which was gradually growing larger. He advised immediate removal. He was very suspicious of an early cancer. She and her husband tried to dodge an unpleasant truth.

They went from one doctor to another. Fortunately, it so happened that none was so dishonest or stupid as to give what they were so anxious to pay for viz., assurance that they might ignore the growth. Very recently they screwed up their courage to have the operation done. It wasn't so hard for them as they dreaded. But it was much harder for the surgeon.

It is to be hoped that all of the cancerous tissue was removed. The chances, however, are not one tenth as favorable as they would have been a year ago.

A Thousand to One

Ever think about this? There seems to be a thousand ways to spend money by one chance to make it.

Doesn't it seem that way to you? It does to most of us, and that's the reason why you should take care of it after you have made it. The very best plan to take care of the money you have made is to place it in a good, safe, reliable bank like ours. It will be subject to your check but you will not be so liable to spend it or lose it as you are by carrying it around or hiding it around the house.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of "THE MAN HIGH UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

SYNOPSIS.

Mark Truitt, encouraged by his sweet-heart, Unity, starts to seek his fortune. Simon Truitt tells Mark that it long has been his dream to see a steel plant at Bethel and asks the son to return and build one if he ever gets rich. Mark applies to Thomas Hunley, head of the Quincy Iron works, for a job and is sent to the construction gang. His success in that work wins him a place as helper to Roman Andruski, open-hearth furnace taker. He becomes a boarder in Roman's home and assists Plotz, Roman's son, in his studies. Kaszia, an adopted daughter, shows her gratitude in such a manner as to arouse Mark's interest in her. Heavy work in the mines loses Unity's health. Mark goes to Kaszia and Kaszia cares for him. Her father, Roman, also succumbs and Mark goes to the hospital. Roman's death and Kaszia's illness cause Mark to resign his position at the Quincy Iron works. Five years elapse during which Mark has advanced to the foremanship, while his labor-saving devices have made him invaluable to the company. In the meantime Kaszia has married one Jim Whitting. Mark meets with an accident which does not seem to be a crippling one. He returns to Bethel intending to stay with his father, but is met by another man and wins her back. Unity urges him to return to his work in the city. Mark goes rapidly to wealth and power in the steel business, but the social ambitions of his wife make his married life unhappy. The big steel interests are secretly anxious to get hold of stock in the Irons and Unity is supposed to be worthless. Timothy Woodhouse seeks financial assistance from Mark and the latter buys Woodhouse's Irons stock at a small figure. Henley forces Quincy to let Mark have stock in the Quincy company. Mark finds Plotz making a socialistic speech on the street and the boy shows to him a picture of Kaszia. Mark finds Kaszia, who is divorced and is now a hospital nurse, caring for Roman's son, and is advised by his physician to stop taking drugs and take a long rest.

CHAPTER XVII—Continued.

"It did," he answered. "But you didn't invite it. You weren't the sort of girl that needed to invite it—you aren't that sort of woman now!" Eyes, no less than tongue, were eloquent of his admiration; but she was looking away. "But most women wouldn't be so ready to forgive. They would remember only hurt vanity. I'm at your feet for your charity. I've seen little of it in my life."

"Have you looked for it?"

"No. Nor had it. Nor valued it—until now."

"And now?"

"Why now I—need it."

Somewhat the confession, an unconsidered remark that, however, the ring of sincerity impulsive sayings are apt to have, seemed to establish even more firmly their intimacy. It served him to his next remark.

"Kaszia, don't you think you could tell me what has happened to you during all these years?"

"You'll be disappointed," she began abruptly, "because there isn't much and it's commonplace enough. I married Jim and lived with him a year. Then I left him. Not because he wasn't kind—he was, in his rough way. But he was shiftless and he drank too much. He had no ambition and I wasn't happy with him, so I left him, though I knew it hurt him."

"A woman can do that," he interrupted quickly.

"Some women do it, you mean. I've always been ashamed, though I never went back to him. Later, I got a divorce. I went to live with Uncle Roman, but Plotz, who had hated Jim, made it so unpleasant I had to leave. He hated me, too, I think."

"Or loved you, in Plotz's peculiar fashion. But go on."

"After a while I found work in a tobacco factory, rolling cigars. Not the kind you smoke, but cheap vile things. It—it wasn't nice."

"I've heard of those heels," he muttered. "You there—why—"

"I was one of many," she went on. "In two years I was sick and in the hospital, a heavenly place where there was ventilation and nothing to do and good things to eat. I used to pray I'd never get well."

"There isn't much more. I didn't have to leave the hospital. One of the internes took an interest. He had influence and helped me to register as a nurse. I've a knack for surgical work, and since I passed my examination I've always had cases. For the rest, I'm not educated. I've merely read a little, here and there, as I've had time."

"That's all and not what you seemed to expect. Just cruel selfishness in the beginning and a little luck afterward. Which is not the success you worship."

"But I see more than that. I read between the lines." Long afterward, recalling this scene, he remembered her quick questioning glance, but then he gave it no thought. "I see the courage to make a fight, the will to rise and being equal to the opponent when it came. And I've heard that the really charitable are never so to themselves."

"Oh, if you will—" She broke off with a shrug. "Let us talk of something else."

When at length he broke the silence, his voice was a caress. "I wouldn't have you different. What you've lost is nothing compared with what you've gained."

She turned her head slowly toward him. For a long minute their eyes held. Then with one accord they looked away. Not the heart of a boy of twenty could have beaten more violently.

As they drove on, the silence became awkward, self-conscious. Neither seemed able to break it.

Rounding a curve in the tortuous driveway, they met a landau, a beautifully enameled affair drawn by high-stepping horses in elaborate silver-mounted harness. In it sat two women. They bowed to him, the younger with a pointed smile.

Kaszia heard him mutter: "had forgotten!"

"Who was she?"

"The older? That was Mrs. Thomas Henley, of whom you may have heard."

"Yes? But I meant the other."

"That," he answered in a dry constrained voice, "was Mrs. Mark Truitt."

After a while: "Ah!" she breathed. "That makes it unanimous," he said shortly.

It had ceased to be the pleasant time he had had in years. A heavy cloud had settled upon their intimacy. Why dream of the possibility of a mighty primitive passion? It was not possible. . . . But it was a characteristic of the man to want most the things farthest away, the things forbidden.

"We've gone far enough," she said. True words, however she meant them! "And it is getting too cold for you. Let us turn back."

He made no protest. He swung the team around and drove toward the hospital; at a reckless pace, that he might not have to talk. He had no wish for commonplace speech with her. From other speech the habit of self-repression saved him.

But not wholly. For as they were nearing the hospital, he drew the horses down to a soberer gait.

"When," he asked, "will you drive with me again?"

"Not again."

He had known, even before she spoke, what her answer would be. And he knew—so had she given it—that it was irrevocable.

"I wonder why you came today."

"I'd been thinking of you. And I was—curious. To see what sort of man you had become."

They swung into the hospital grounds and up to the entrance. Over her protest he descended to help her to the ground. He took a queer pleasure in the pain the needless little services gave him.

He sought her eyes. "Was it only curiosity, Kaszia?"

Her answer was not in words. Slowly she mounted the stairs to the doorway, and turning, looked steadily down upon him. Her face was white, but her eyes were lustrous—and un-speakably sad.

"Kaszia—"

"Good-by."

He had had the answer he wanted. But he received it with a heart as heavy as lead. He wanted her as he had desired nothing since life began. And he could only stand and, helpless, see her leave him.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Sundered Bonds.

Dinner, on the rare occasions when the Truitts dined together and alone, was marked by a careful formality that was but a thin disguise for their mutual dislike. At no other time, save by hastily cured accident, were they apt to confront each other. The quarrel of the night of their first invitation to Henley's house had never been healed. Each had gone a separate way, ignoring as far as possible the other's existence.

With Unity the dislike had been genuine. She believed that when her easy husband had so suddenly and definitely put an end to her supremacy, she had been robbed of a right that she, a woman and therefore a superior finer being, should enjoy. Fear, of him and of what the man she now perceived him to be might do if unduly provoked, kept desire alive and hot.

With him it had been rather contempt for her airs and vanities, for the uselessness to which, even in a woman, he could not become reconciled.

"A wife—yes. You'll hardly claim the title."

"Do you deny it to me?"

"A wife has something to give her husband. But you— What is it you have to say? By your manner I judge you think it important."

"It is. You're too ill to work, but it seems not too ill to go driving in the park with striking looking women. With an effort he kept his voice cold. "And you object, is that it?"

"I do."

"Very well. You've registered your protest. Is that all?"

"No, it is not." She leaned sharply forward, forgetting to pose and to smile, the delicate prettiness of face eclipsed by a cloud of vixenish temper. "It is not. I have some respect and regard for our position, if you haven't. Do you suppose a husband means nothing to me but a name?"

He glanced hesitatingly toward the door, meditating retreat. Then, with a grim tightening of his lips, he returned his gaze to her.

"You really want an answer? Then, I had supposed a husband means to you a name and a check book. With inexhaustible energy he turned to her.

"So you begrudge me the money I spend? You grow—"

"Your expense account, fully met, is the best answer to that, I think."

"But I want more than money. Do you think a little money—a little patri money—can repay me for your neglect and selfishness?"

"So you scorn money? It's nothing to me. But I think you've nothing to complain of."

"Nothing," she cried. "Is it nothing that I have to go everywhere alone, always having to listen to whispers behind my back of my husband's foolish attempts to play the man about town? You see, you couldn't keep your escapee of last year from me. Or that you've turned the old set against me by cheating poor Timothy Woodhouse out of his last property?"

He winced and flushed painfully at that. She saw and believed she had pierced his armor. She rose again, that she might deliver her final thrust most effectively.

"Do you call it nothing that you, who have no time or thought to spare your wife, brazenly flaunt your women in public, on the streets and in the parks, for all the city to see and gossip about?"

He was standing rigid, both hands gripping his cane, his gaze fixed unwaveringly on her. The tightened lips had become the merest line.

"If you refer to Mrs. Whitting," he began at last steadily, "you will please use more respectful terms."

"You reprove me on her account! This," she cried tragically, "is too much. I suppose this Mrs. Whitting—that's her name—is your mistress, perhaps I should say, your latest mistress."

"Why, you—"

The storm burst, choking back speech, but finding an outlet through his eyes. He reached out swiftly and caught her hand in a cruel clutch, crushing the soft useless member until her rings bit into the flesh and she cried out in pain.

"Let me go," she gasped. "You're hurting me."

He released her and sank back into a chair.

"I think we've come to the end of our chapter, Unity. But I'll give you—no more chance."

"You'd think I were a criminal!"

"We both are—but let that go. Hereafter you're made our life. And you've failed. Since your first month, we've never been really happy, at least in each other. Now let me choose. Let's go away somewhere—"

"To New York or abroad?"

"Not to New York or abroad. To Bethel or some place where we can live a quiet, decent, natural life. Let us begin over again and try to recover what we've lost—or rather what we never had."

"You are absurd!"

"Is it absurd for a man to ask his wife—you've claimed the title—to share the life he wants and needs?"

"You forget to consider what I would have from such an arrangement."

"You would have me."

She answered with a contemptuous shrug. "I will do nothing so silly. You ask too much."

"Ah! You're franker than I thought you could be. I'm glad you're frank." He rose, looking curiously down at her. "If you look back, you'll find I've never asked you anything until now. I've been content to take—at least, I've taken—only what it suited your whims to give me. And you've given exactly nothing."

"And what," she flung back, "have you given me?"

"From another woman that might be a crushing retort. I've given you very little. But, as it happens, it's been all you wanted. You wouldn't take, you never wanted, the only worth while thing I had to give." He paused again, his manner hardening. "However, all that is ended. I go away tomorrow morning. I don't think I shall ever see you again."

"Event had been relented. If she had given him excuse. But she gave him no excuse.

"You're asking for a divorce?"

"Yes."

"I suppose," she sneered, "you want to marry that woman, your mistress."

He held himself under rigid self-control. "She isn't my mistress, though I love her. She was the girl I gave up years ago out of loyalty to you."

There was nothing lovely about Unity Truitt just then.

"And now you want to renew the broken romance. Very pretty! But," she laughed in vindictive pleasure in her fancied ability to thwart his desire, "you shan't have her. I don't choose to be a divorced woman. And I know you can't get a divorce without my consent."

"I think you will consent," he said quickly.

"Will not. I don't choose—"

"The choice is with you, of course. But you must understand it. You're through with me in any case. But if you consent to the divorce, I'll make a settlement that will satisfy you. If not, I will make only the allowance I think you're earned."

She went pale at that, the one threat which could reach her. "Why," she gasped, "you couldn't do that. Even you couldn't be so brutal—"

"Choose."

"But you couldn't. You—I must have time to think—"

"You must choose now." He was inflexible.

She sat transfixed, beginning to comprehend the reality of his purpose. Her confidence suddenly melted. Fear shone in her eyes. She rose, and with a piteous pleading gesture, too frightened to be conscious of her hypocrisy, she went to him.

"Why, Mark—Mark dear! You can't mean that. You couldn't cast me off like this. Why, we're husband and wife—and I know I haven't been fair to you, but I can't let you go. Let me make up this last year to you. Let us go away, as you say, and begin over. We can be happy—"

The stammering incoherent cry halted, silenced by the unrelenting quality of his steady eyes. The outwith a man whom he had used to like and who, he had reason to believe, had not been without interest in him.

"Why, hello, Baker!" Mark held out a friendly hand, with a genial smile that was part of his new resolve. Baker took the hand, but released it quickly. "Ah! How are you, Truitt?"

"Bully. Just back from a long stay in the woods. Dine here with me to-night, won't you?"

"Thanks, no. I'm probably not dining here. Excuse me. Some men I must see—"

Baker broke hastily away, passed a few words with a nearby group and went out. The ruse was obvious. Mark, feeling as though he had received a blow in the face, stared after the retreating figure. The genial smile faded. Then he went to the rooms he had engaged. Passing the group that had helped out Baker's ruse, he was conscious of their furtive curious glances.

Arrived in his rooms, his first act was to have back newspaper files sent up to him. For two hours he read boy, while he was winning back health in the wilderness and planning a life of amity with his fellows, his name had been bandied about on the tongues of slander and gossip. As he read in the light of what had just happened the amazing accumulation of suggested fifth, only here and there brushing the outer edges of fact, utter bewilderment filled him. Shirley's brief communication, making mention of "some talk," received at the edge of the wilderness, had not prepared him for this.

"It's all a pack of dirty lies," he cried. "How could these men, who've seen me go in and out every day, believe it? What rotters they must be themselves to be able to believe it! By God! Ill—He stopped, with a sudden feeling of dismay. "Why—why can I do nothing?"

He was helpless.

"Then I am not free! She has put a mark on me that a lifetime can't rub out. Must we pay forever for our mistakes? . . ."

One evening, when his residence at the club had continued about three weeks, the affair came to a climax. He was entering the grill for dinner. At the sound of his name from a nearby group of diners, he halted involuntarily.

"That's all well enough," one of the diners was saying. "A club's a club and, of course, we have to allow a certain latitude. Still, when it becomes the refuge for a man so notorious we couldn't have him in our homes—"

The speaker was checked by a warning kick.

Mark, sweeping the group with eyes from which the mask had momentarily fallen, met Baker's embarrassed gaze. With a contemptuous smile, he passed on to his own table and ordered a dinner which he made such show of eating as inward rage and pain allowed.

His coffee and cigar had just been brought when Baker crossed the room and stood by his table.

"Well," he began uncertainly. "Truitt—"

"May I sit down for a minute?"

"Aren't you afraid of catching the plague?"

"I'm more afraid of being kicked for my impertinence."

"I understand," said Mark grimly. "I'm a pretty tough customer, but I don't commit assaults in public. Sit down."

Baker sat down, looking earnestly across the table at Mark. "Look here, Truitt. There are things on both sides of your fence I don't approve. But I particularly disapprove this Pharisee business. I felt like a cad when you caught us over there. I want to apologize for my part in it, though it wasn't an speaking part."

"All right," Mark lighted his cigar. "You've done your duty."

"But this is a little more than duty. Baker hesitated. "Oh, hang it all! Some things become so painful only plain speech serves. You don't need to be told of the stories going around. Lately it's occurred to me that you've been letting us take them at face, without trying to contradict

At the trial, to be sure, the testimony was a distinct disappointment. It proved merely commonplace desertion and touched but lightly on only one short-lived period of dissipation during which Truitt, at certain mid-night suppers, had shared with other men the more or less interesting company of sundry nameless women. The public, deprived of the scandal for which its mouth had been watering, decided that Mrs. Truitt had been overly magnanimous in thus sparing her husband and let its heated imagination supply the lacking details. Truitt entered no defense and a decree was quickly handed down. Mrs. Truitt was ordered to pay $10,000.

He halted a cab and gave the name of a club that to cabbie brought visions of a liberal tip. In a few minutes the destination was reached and the passenger descended to the pavement. At that moment a woman, whom he recognized as one of Unity's familiars, approached. He lifted his hat and bowed. She looked squarely at him and passed on without greeting. Red surged into his cheeks.

"Cut!" he muttered. "I suppose Unity's given her version of our smash-up. Unity would."

He paid his fare and entered the portals from which no rich man had ever been excluded. At the desk a well dressed and usually very polite young clerk so far forgot himself as to look his amazement.

"Mr. Truitt! I supposed you were out of town, I thought—" He stopped in confusion, remembering that it was no part of his business to think.

Mark looked hard at him. "You thought?"

"I thought you were out of town," stammered the clerk.

"I was. And now I'm back," Mark answered dryly. "So I think I'll arrange for rooms here indefinitely."

Nor was this all of the city's greeting to the returned wanderer. The rooms arranged for, he turned away from the desk, to come face to face with a man whom he had used to like and who, he had reason to believe, had not been without interest in him.

"Why, hello, Baker!" Mark held out a friendly hand, with a genial smile that was part of his new resolve. Baker took the hand, but released it quickly. "Ah! How are you, Truitt?"

As he read in the light of what had just happened the amazing accumulation of suggested fifth, only here and there brushing the outer edges of fact, utter bewilderment filled him. Shirley's brief communication, making mention of "some talk," received at the edge of the wilderness, had not prepared him for this.

"It's all a pack of dirty lies," he cried. "How could these men, who've seen me go in and out every day, believe it? What rotters they must be themselves to be able to believe it! By God! Ill—He stopped, with a sudden feeling of dismay. "Why—why can I do nothing?"

He was helpless.

"Then I am not free! She has put a mark on me that a lifetime can't rub out. Must we pay forever for our mistakes? . . ."

One evening, when his residence at the club had continued about three weeks, the affair came to a climax. He was entering the grill for dinner. At the sound of his name from a nearby group of diners, he halted involuntarily.

"That's all well enough," one of the diners was saying. "A club's a club and, of course, we have to allow a certain latitude. Still, when it becomes the refuge for a man so notorious we couldn't have him in our homes—"

The speaker was checked by a warning kick.

Mark, sweeping the group with eyes from which the mask had momentarily fallen, met Baker's embarrassed gaze. With a contemptuous smile, he passed on to his own table and ordered a dinner which he made such show of eating as inward rage and pain allowed.

His coffee and cigar had just been brought when Baker crossed the room and stood by his table.

"Well," he began uncertainly. "Truitt—"

"May I sit down for a minute?"

"Aren't you afraid of catching the plague?"

"I'm more afraid of being kicked for my impertinence."

"I understand," said Mark grimly. "I'm a pretty tough customer, but I don't commit assaults in public. Sit down."

Baker sat down, looking earnestly across the table at Mark. "Look here, Truitt. There are things on both sides of your fence I don't approve. But I particularly disapprove this Pharisee business. I felt like a cad when you caught us over there. I want to apologize for my part in it, though it wasn't an speaking part."

"All right," Mark lighted his cigar. "You've done your duty."

"But this is a little more than duty. Baker hesitated. "Oh, hang it all! Some things become so painful only plain speech serves. You don't need to be told of the stories going around. Lately it's occurred to me that you've been letting us take them at face, without trying to contradict

At the trial, to be sure, the testimony was a distinct disappointment. It proved merely commonplace desertion and touched but lightly on only one short-lived period of dissipation during which Truitt, at certain mid-night suppers, had shared with other men the more or less interesting company of sundry nameless women. The public, deprived of the scandal for which its mouth had been watering, decided that Mrs. Truitt had been overly magnanimous in thus sparing her husband and let its heated imagination supply the lacking details. Truitt entered no defense and a decree was quickly handed down. Mrs. Truitt was ordered to pay $10,000.

He halted a cab and gave the name of a club that to cabbie brought visions of a liberal tip. In a few minutes the destination was reached and the passenger descended to the pavement. At that moment a woman, whom he recognized as one of Unity's familiars, approached. He lifted his hat and bowed. She looked squarely at him and passed on without greeting. Red surged into his cheeks.

"Cut!" he muttered. "I suppose Unity's given her version of our smash-up. Unity would."

He paid his fare and entered the portals from which no rich man had ever been excluded. At the desk a well dressed and usually very polite young clerk so far forgot himself as to look his amazement.

"Mr. Truitt! I supposed you were out of town, I thought—" He stopped in confusion, remembering that it was no part of his business to think.

For Myself and Family

Peruna has Done Wonders. Mrs. Emma Stolt, No. 697 Atlantic St., Appleton, Wis., writes: "Peruna has done me a great deal of good since I began taking it, and I am always glad to speak a good word for it."

Worth the Punishment. I well remember the time, about years ago, when I was caught with a pocketful of young field mice and turned them loose in the kitchen.

We ran out and closed the door from the outside, leaving my mother and auntie in the room. They were busy and had not noticed me.

Some Men Do That. Big Sister—What did Mr. Smith say while waiting for me in the parlor? Little Brother—He didn't say anything. He just talked.

Save the Babies.

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five; and one-half before they are fifteen!

J. J. BLAINE SEEKS GOVERNOR'S TOGA

BOSCOBEL MAN ENDORSED AS INDEPENDENT CANDIDATE BY MILWAUKEE MEETING.

LA FOLLETTE WILL NOT RUN

Senator Sends Telegram Declining to Enter State Contest—Says Call Without Voters' Action Insufficient.

Milwaukee, John J. Blaine of Boscobel announced his candidacy for governor as an independent, following a conference of Progressives in this city. A statement given out by the conference endorsed the candidacy of Mr. Blaine.

Mr. Blaine's announcement was short, reading as follows: "I hereby announce myself as a non-partisan progressive candidate for the governorship. With two pronounced reactionary candidates before the people, I have deemed it my duty to give the people of Wisconsin an opportunity to vote for a Progressive. I shall make a more extended announcement at once."

Mr. Blaine announced that he would begin active work at once; that headquarters would probably be opened within a few days. His nomination petitions will be sent out immediately from Madison. Mr. Blaine's name will go on the election ballot under the head of individual nominations.

Mr. Blaine's political career began with his election to the state senate as a republican in 1908. He was the father of the resolution that resulted in the investigation into the election of Isaac Stephenson as United States Senator. He was succeeded in the state senate by Robert Glenn in 1910. In 1912 he was a delegate to the republican national convention, making a speech on the floor favoring La Follette. Afterward he became identified with the democratic party and worked for the election of President Wilson.

La Follette Refuses to Run. "I shall not be an independent candidate and shall so publicly announce."

This is the final reply of Senator La Follette to the Wisconsin progressives who appealed to him to enter the state contest as an independent candidate for governor.

The answer is contained in a telegram received by John J. Hannan, the senator's secretary, who is now in Madison, for Richard Lloyd Jones. The message says, in part: "In justice to myself and the cause to which I have given some years of my life, allow me briefly to suggest my reasons. The primary vote was small, the nomination was by a minority and involved a complete reversal of the established policy of the state. For these reasons it has been my personal opinion that there ought to be an independent candidate. But I do not think these facts warrant a public official, who has been elected to serve in another capacity, in becoming an independent candidate upon the call of a voluntary conference without action on the part of the voters on which to predicate such candidacy. It is my view that, as I have been assigned to serve in the senate by the people of Wisconsin, I have no right, arbitrarily to throw over that employment and permit myself to be urged upon them for another."

STUDENTS FIGHT POLICE. Nearly 100 Injured Before Clash Was Suppressed—Police Station Almost Wrecked.

Madison.—A fight between students of the University of Wisconsin and boys of Madison as a result of the attempted raiding of a Madison freshman in the lake, a riot, which at one time threatened to develop into a tragedy, occurred here. It required the united efforts of President Van Hise of the university, Mayor Kayser of the city, and school heads advisers among the upper class students to quell the riot.

Nearly 100 students, city boys, spectators and policemen were injured before the riot was suppressed. The police station was nearly wrecked as a result of the riot. Angry students broke all the glass windows in the building. Six students and four city boys were formally arrested.

Jefferson Gets New Park. Jefferson.—Stoppach brothers have given the city a ten-acre tract of land for park purposes. The elder Stoppach, father of the present members of the firm, was one of the first settlers in this section and did much to build up Jefferson.

Farmer Gored by Heifer. Sheboygan.—Adolph Henshel of Kiel was attacked by a 2-year-old heifer and perhaps fatally injured. The animal knocked Mr. Henshel down and gored him frightfully.

Aliens Want Green Hats. Beloit.—A green cap fashion mania has seized the foreign colony here. Seeing scores of Beloit fellows fresh in wearing the rat tail lish, many of the city's alien born population thought it a general fall fashion fad.

New Bank at Rockland. Madison.—The state commissioner of banking issued a charter to the Rockland State bank of Rockland, La Crosse county. The bank is capitalized at $10,000.

Heavy Timber Brakes Leg. Prairie du Sac.—A timber, weighing over half a ton, fell on Peter Ivich, employed by the Heyworth Construction Co., at the new dam. In the timber was a long bolt which pierced the man's leg and broke it.

Waushara County Pioneer Dies. Marshfield.—George Sexton, pioneer merchant and politician of Waushara county and well known throughout central Wisconsin, died at Colby. He was a veteran of the Civil War.

TRY RED CROSS TEST CASE

Thirty-two Defendants Are Notified to Appear in the Federal District Court.

Milwaukee.—Federal prosecution of municipalities, business concerns and individuals for alleged unlawful use of the Red Cross emblem will be taken up in United States district court before Judge Geiger.

The defendants are the cities of Milwaukee, Racine and Kenosha; E. H. Karrer company, Coin Controlling Lock company, Milwaukee Auto Specialty company, Western Motor Supply company, Julius Andrae & Sons company, Philip Gross Hardware company, Good Samaritan hospital, William C. Feerick, Gust Triandaphilopoulos, Edward A. Kolpin, Percy C. Eldredge, Frank W. Harland, Theodore Kerner, Michael J. Walsh, James S. Putnam, William A. Curtis, Truman H. Curtis, Harry G. Oakland, Louis A. Kaufmann, August F. Kaufmann, Camille A. H. Fortier, Abraham Rosenbloom, Joseph H. Becker, Frank B. Millard, Herman Goldfish, Isaac G. Goldfish, Maurice Altman, Albert E. Yanke, George H. Kriz.

Because these are test cases, among others in the country, all entered pleas of not guilty, at the suggestion of the court.

INSURE FAIR STRUCTURES

Use Motion Picture Films of 1914 Fair to Boost and Advertise Next Year's Fair.

Milwaukee.—Secretary J. C. MacKenzie, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, has made a report of the cash on hand, which amounted to $23,000, and the bills receivable, $18,000—a total of $41,000. It was asked to send three delegates to the Northwestern Road congress to be held in Milwaukee. A decision was reached to hold the spelling contest next year and an effort will be made to have representatives from every county.

Secretary MacKenzie reported that the new buildings erected had been insured for $301,000. It was announced that the motion picture films of the 1914 state fair would be used to boost and advertise the fair next year.

Discover New Cabbage.

Racine.—A new variety of cabbage, evolved after eight years of study by Prof. L. R. Jones of the University of Wisconsin, will be the basis upon which a truck growers' association in Racine and Kenosha counties will be built. It showed that, while in diseased soil the common or commercial variety of cabbage failed to grow at all, the new variety showed a yield of 99 per cent.

Prof. Jones, in speaking of his discovery, said that while the plant would resist the yellows, it was not immune to other diseases peculiar to cabbage, such as club root and black rot.

Cheese Makers Choose Milwaukee.

Fond du Lac.—Milwaukee has won out over Fond du Lac for the state cheese makers' convention, which will be held at the Republican house Jan. 6, 7 and 8, 1915. Fond du Lac is in the heart of the cheese producing district and many of the cheesemakers of this section insisted upon a change in the meeting place this year. The convention met in Fond du Lac eight years ago. There has been some talk of a rival exhibition at Fond du Lac.

Celebrated Golden Wedding.

Beloit.—Nearly 1,000 former parishioners and friends joined in helping Dr. R. W. Bosworth, retired, one of the oldest clergymen in point of service in the state, and Mrs. Bosworth celebrate the golden anniversary of their wedding. The event was marked with a reception at the First Methodist Episcopal church, which was built during Dr. Bosworth's pastorate here from 1900 to 1905.

For Schoolwork Consolidation.

Baldwins Mills.—A movement is on foot for consolidation along public school lines in connection with the social center work recently inaugurated here. The local teachers are not satisfied with teaching the "three R's" but are giving themselves to social community work as well—one of the pioneer attempts in the state in this direction.

Declines Nomination.

Madison.—Dr. Jacob S. Tenney of Alma, who was nominated a Democratic candidate for member of the assembly for the Buffalo-Pepin district, notified Secretary of State Donald of his declination of the nomination.

Court Frees Patrolman.

Janesville.—William E. Gower, a patrolman, was freed of the charge of assault and battery in the Municipal court. Charges were preferred by Clayton E. Moore, whom Governor arrested on the charge of drunkenness.

Honor Madison Pastor.

Madison.—Rev. E. L. Benson, pastor of the Pilgrim Congregational church in this city, has been honored by appointment as national chaplain of the Sons of Veterans.

Church Cornerstone Laid.

Manitowoc.—The cornerstone of the new St. James Catholic church at Cooperstown was laid with impressive ceremonies. It is the second church built by the congregation within nine months.

Woman's Body in Dock.

Superior.—The body of an unidentified woman about 30 years old was discovered when the shipyard's drydock was emptied, following the docking of a steamer for repairs.

BAPTISTS TO HOLD STATE CONVENTION

CHURCH WORKERS TO GATHER AT RACINE BEGINNING WEEK OF OCTOBER 12.

IMPORTANT QUESTION UP

Matter of Changing Apportionment Plan Will Be Taken Up by Delegates—Noted Speakers Will Address Meeting.

Milwaukee.—The seventh annual Wisconsin Baptist state convention and the fiftieth annual meeting of the Wisconsin Baptist ministerial union will be held the week of Oct. 12 in this city. It also will be the seventieth and the fiftieth anniversary of both organizations.

An important matter to be taken up will be the apportionment plan. According to the present plan the general apportionment committee of the Northern Baptist convention apportions the states while the state committee apportions the churches, whose boards apportion the churches. The question that has been raised is whether the state committee shall continue to apportion the associations, leaving the boards to supply the churches.

Among the speakers who will be heard are the Rev. W. T. Dorward, the Rev. O. B. Wheeler, the Rev. R. S. Schwedler, D. W. Hubbert, Milwaukee; F. A. Agar, New York; Dean Shaffer Matthews, Mrs. John Chapman and the Rev. Warren P. Behan, Chicago, Ill.

Meekins will be held in the First Baptist church. One hundred and seventy preachers are connected with a hundred laymen from all parts of the state. It is expected, will attend. The annual meeting of the Baptist Women's Missionary Society of Wisconsin will be held in the Presbyterian church Tuesday morning.

PLYMOUTH OFFICIAL DIES

Clifford W. Starrett, Republican Candidate for Congress, Suffered Stroke of Apoplexy.

Sheboygan.—Clifford W. Starrett, serving his fourth term as mayor of Plymouth, this county, and the Republican candidate for congress in the Second district, died suddenly of apoplexy at his home in Plymouth. In 1898 he became connected with A. C. Dow of Chicago and Plymouth, wholesale cheese dealers, and for fifteen years was departmental manager. He came to Plymouth in 1898. Ten years later he was elected mayor of the city, which position he has held since. He was nominated for congress at the last primary.

Four Hurt in Wreck.

Beloit.—Four persons were injured, one fatally, when an automobile, the property of a Janesville garage, ran into a carriage on Prairie avenue. George Jones, Janesville, had his skull fractured and back broken. He died in Beloit General hospital. The injured are: William Cushing, Janesville, three ribs broken; Maud Sorrows, Janesville, badly bruised; Alvin Morris, Beloit, also bruised.

Grant Bank Charter.

Madison.—The state banking commissioner has approved articles of incorporation of the First State bank of Dodge, Trempealeau county. The capital stock is $100,000. The commissioner issued a certificate of authority to commence business to the Randall State bank of Madison, which has a capital stock of $25,000.

Has "First Aid" Class.

Sheboygan.—A class to study "first aid for the injured" has been formed among juniors and seniors of Sheboygan high school and if it proves successful other high school classes will be included. It is believed Sheboygan high school is the first in the state to install such a class.

Authorizes Rate Increase.

Madison.—The New York Independent Telephone company was authorized by the railroad commission to discontinue its rate of 75 cents per month for telephone service and to substitute a rate of $1.25 per month, allowing a discount of 25 cents on bills paid on or before the last day of the current month.

Patmont Conducting Mission.

Stevens Point.—The Rev. Louis R. Patmont, is conducting a mission for Poles here. His brother is assisting him.

Court Frees Patrolman.

Janesville.—William E. Gower, a patrolman, was freed of the charge of assault and battery in the Municipal court. Charges were preferred by Clayton E. Moore, whom Governor arrested on the charge of drunkenness.

Easily Fixed. A negro truck driver backed his wagon into the space allotted to a rival transfer car at a railway freight depot in Dallas, Tex. "Hey, dar, niggah!" yelled the driver on whose territory the other had transgressed. "I'll knock yo' outa yo' house and home of yo' don't back up!" "Ise got no home," retorted the offending driver. "Now what yo' gonna do 'bout dat?" "I'll dig yo' one, niggah—I'll dig yo' one!"

Surely. Mr. Flatte—Don't you think what we do is reflected in our faces, dear?

Mrs. Flatte—Yes, William; I notice when you are examining a long bill your face is also long.

CUT loose from the big bulgy wad. For a clean, small chew there's nothing like "Right-Cut." It is the Real Tobacco Chew that you hear men boasting to their friends.

Pure, sappy tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough. You get the taste of the richest tobacco grown.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter of the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary coarsely cut tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and sweeties. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

WORLD'S QUEER FOLK

MANY OF THEM IN ACTUAL LIFE AND IN BOOKS.

Freaks and Caprices of Nature, Added to Almost Daily, a Source of Wonder and Matter for Study.

We read in the old books catalogued by booksellers as " quaint," books like the "Wonderful Museum," or the "Eccentric Biography," about misers, hermits, gargantuan eaters, strong men, men with horns, women with whisks, and we wonder at the freaks and caprices of nature, but there is material every year for still more encyclopedic volumes, year books of "Living Marvels." Read the newspapers. There are wild men in the New England states. Mr. John D. Rockefeller, not believing in holidays, because they "too often lead to extravagance," kept the laborers on his "estate" hard at work on September 1. Letters to the New York Times inform us that there are persons, otherwise sane who are endeavoring to color meerschaum pipes.

There was a hermit in the heart of London a few years ago. He lived in a cellar, "the sole vestige of a house in Clare Market, pulled down and forgotten by its owners." Tradesmen of the neighborhood gave him food, and he was lazily happy until a journalist discovered him. The hermit was then interviewed and photographed, and the workhouse authorities pulled him out of his cellar and cleaned him, so that his glory as a hermit faded. Mr. Chris Cranger of Brooklyn on August 24 ate 29 lobsters weighing from a pound to a pound and a quarter. Not long ago he ate a 15-pound bluefish, six green peppers, nine potatoes, two loaves of bread at a sitting, and, heeding not physicians who advise against drink at table, gaily put down 10 bottles of beer. Truly, this is a little world of great wonders.

Go back a few years. Did not John Ruskin deserve a place in an "Encyclopedia of Wonders? We do not refer to his handling over Mrs. Ruskin to his artistic friend, Mr. Millais; we do not allude to his crusade against railways and factories. When he suffered from any malady, he always asked what would be the worst for him; then he ordered it and ate it. The physicians told him that pepper was dangerous. He scattered it profusely over every dish. An obstinate man, when he was most disobedient, recklessly perverse, he recovered.

Some of us remember the old man who for 40 years had a telescope at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-third street, in New York. Mr. Frederick J. Seybold, known to thousands only as the professor. This learned stargazer invited the public by little placards to see the Man in the Moon or the Mighty Jupiter. He had studied medicine, chemistry, law. He was a profound astronomer and an ingenious inventor. He was a member of the Grand army. Why did he become a street astronomer? No one knows, and when he died a few days ago in a hospital at Hoboken, all that could be said of him was that he died chiefly from starvation. Living on the canal barge on the Hudson, he had burned all his papers.

Did Edward Harrigan have him in mind when he sketched the part of the street astronomer in "Squatter Sovereignty"? It was not one of Harrigan's best parts; yet the performance was amusing—Philip Hale in Boston Herald.

HOME AND THE HOME MERCHANT

The Seminary of All Other Institutions.

HOME PARADISE TO ADAM

By Home Buying the Consumer Helps Not Only His Town, but Helps Himself—Every Man With a Heart Loves Home and Town—Some Should Be Conscience Stricken.

(Copyrighted, 1914, by Thomas J. Sullivan.) Only the home can found a state. It is the seminary of all other institutions. There is magic in that little word home. It is a mystic circle that surrounds comforts and virtues never known beyond its hallowed limits.

We need not power or splendor, Wide hall or lordly dome, The good, the true, the tender— These form the wealth of home.

Destroying Your Paradise.

The retail mail order houses are trying to destroy your home and your paradise by inducing you to buy your necessities from them instead of your local merchants, to the injury of your home industries, home market and home town.

There is so much difference in buying goods of a home place of business and ordering them by mail from a catalogue house from a mere picture or description that I want to point out a few facts that many may never have thought of.

May Examine and Select.

At the home store you make your wants known; the salesman shows you the desired article, helps select or suggest the article best suited to your needs.

Will Exchange or Refund.

When you get home and upon a rigid examination you find a flaw or mar on your purchase, or the article may be too large or too small, or a black instead of a blue, then the next day or the week after you go to your dealer and explain, and he will gladly exchange the item or refund the money.

Buy Big Things at Home.

Remember a store cannot be kept up with small purchases if the local money is sent away for the big things.

The local stores would soon exist only in memory.

You would then be at the mercy of the mail order houses entirely and be obliged to send away for everything.

Remember a Store cannot be kept up with small purchases if the local money is sent away for the big things.

This method will result only in ruining your home trade and in helping to build up an enormous corporation in some faraway city.

The failure to patronize home merchants decreases the value of farms, and town property becomes less valuable, as you well know that if a town goes back both local and surrounding values decrease.

Send your money away; you get nothing but the goods. Spend your money at home; it will come back to you in better towns, better stores and better social advantages.

Help Build Up Your Own Town.

Is it not more to your interest to help build up your own little city or town than to contribute to the up-building of some faraway large city?

Is it not a fact that if your own town had 10,000 population instead of 1,000 it would be much better for all residents?

Would there not be much more employment?

Would not the consumption of products be greatly increased and consequently a farm within a radius of ten miles be worth from $10 to $50 an acre more?

This being the case, is it only a good thing for the merchant or tradesman if you buy from him?

Or is it equally as good a thing for you?

True Citizenship.

To Adam paradise was home. To the enterprising among his descendents home is paradise.

True citizenship is not all in rallying round the flag of our country and singing "Hail, Columbia."

The true spirit of patriotism is shown by the man who patronizes home industry first, last and all the time.
