OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Are We to Have Good Roads

Until the crusade for state re-trenchment reached its height recently there would be no room in the state for the question: are we to have good roads? It would appear, however, that there is a tendency to carry the demand for re-trenchment to such an extent as to include expenditures for roads.

It seems to me that the question should not be can we afford good roads? but can we afford not to have them? Is there a farmer in the state who can afford not to have a good road in front of his farm? Is there a man in the cities whose additional taxes would be worth while complaining about under the state aid plan, who can afford not to have good roads in his neighborhood? Is there an owner of an automobile, who uses it as in the interest of his family he should, who can afford not to have good roads?

During a portion of last year I used an automobile to the extent of about 4,000 miles in the oldest and richest portions of Wisconsin. From my experience I would be glad to pay from $100 to $200 per year for good roads for a season's drive. There were over 50,000 automobiles in Wisconsin last year. If ten thousand of them drove the country roads as much as I did, poor roads cost them at least $1,000,000, and probably nearer $2,000,000 in the single year. How much did the approximately 200,000 farmers in the state lose because of poor roads last year?

It is wise to carry re-trenchment to a point of including things that we cannot afford to do without? Let's keep up the demand for and progress in good road building, or resolve that the most prosperous state in the union cannot afford them.

Soft Maple Trees in State are in Danger

Thousands of fine, large soft maple trees in southern Wisconsin are in danger of being destroyed by the cottony maple scale. Spray the branches before the foliage appears with a 15 per cent kerosene emulsion or other oily mixtures and save these valuable and ornamental trees. Its now or never. Summer sprays are much less effective.

This is the warning issued by J. G. Sanders, state orchard and nursery inspector, who says that many maples were killed last summer by the scale while others were so weakened that an attack this spring will complete their destruction.

In the winter the scale is about an eighth of an inch long and dark brown in color. With the approach of warm weather the scales grow rapidly, and in June the females produce large cottony sacs which resemble popcorn stuck to the branches. Inside these sacs are the larvae which later feed upon and injure the trees.

Hence it is up to the friends of the maple to get busy and spray. Use kerosene emulsion mixed in this way: dissolve one-half pound hard soap in one gallon of boiling soft water. Remove from fire, add two gallons of kerosene and stir the mixture together with a foot pump until a creamy emulsion forms. Then dilute with ten gallons of water for use on maples in the early spring, or with twenty gallons for summer spraying.

Corn in the Upper Counties

It is time now for the various communities of the upper portion of the state in giving attention to the corn crop of the coming year. Don't let your settlers send away to catalogue houses for the largest corn they can get, as many have been wont to do in the past, but get seed that is suited to the locality. Get the children at work on plots—and see if they can surpass the 150 bushels per acre grown by a boy in Oconto county last year. The people of Oconto county will be willing that you should beat that record if you can. Then they will try to set another task. Such rivalry will to everyone good—and the country too.

LARGE WEDDING AT CAMPBELLSPORT

Miss Myrtle Knickel Bride of F. Guenther. Groom is Teaching School at Centralia, Ill. Many Young People Assist at Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Myrtle Olivia Knickel and Oscar F. Guenther was celebrated today at high noon, First M. E. church of Campbellsport, Rev. W. J. Corr, former pastor of the church, but now of Appleton read the service in the presence of their many friends and relatives.

The bridal gown was of white charmeuse, entrain, with point Valenciennes lace and pearl trimmings. Her veil was fashioned into a Juliet cap fastened on either side with clusters of orange blossoms. Sweet peas, lilies of the valley and Easter lilies composed the bride's bouquet.

Miss Gladys M. Wenzel of Detroit, Mich., acted as maid of honor. Her gown was a creation of pink taffeta with trimmings of point lace. She wore a striped Castle cap.

Six attendants were attired in green charmeuse trimmed with chantilly lace. They wore caps of white lace with a band and streamer of green, to carry out the green and white color scheme.

The bridesmaids, Misses Liyan and Grace Knickel, Campbellsport; Anne Wiggins, Hartford, Wis.; Frieda Hagen, Appleton; Clara Kosanke, Weyauwega and Tuska Guenther of Milwaukee wore corsage bouquets of sweet peas and lilies of the valley.

Walter Clayton Knickel of Madison, brother of the bride acted as best man.

Gertrude Zenk was flower girl and carried a basket of sweet peas. The wedding march was played by Miss Francis Flaherty of Marquette conservatory, Milwaukee. Those ushering at the church were Arthur and William Guenther.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents, on North Fond du Lac avenue. A four course was served. Those assisting in serving were: Misses Frances Upham, Leona Paas, Nellie Farrell, Mary Pesch and Elizabeth Hawig.

The color scheme was carried out effectively at the tables. A feature of the table decoration was a large wedding cake tied with a bow of green ribbon. Smilax and Easter lilies completed the decorations.

Mr. and Mrs. Guenther left at 2:30 this afternoon for Centralia, Ill. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Knickel of this village. She is a graduate of Lawrence conservatory, Appleton, 1910, and studied at Marquette conservatory in 1912. For the past three years she has taught a class in music in Campbellsport.

Mr. Guenther is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Guenther. He was graduated from Carroll academy in 1909 and the university of Wisconsin in 1914. He is now teaching manual arts and agriculture at the high school, Centralia, Ill.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

School re-opened Wednesday after a six day vacation.

The Juniors have chosen May 7 as the date for their annual Prom.

The Freshman have completed the study of grammar and are now studying Composition.

The High School students mourn the loss of Mrs. Wagner, who was always a kind neighbor. If at any time assistance was needed her services were kindly and willingly given to the students.

The Junior class held a meeting one day last week and elected the following officers: President, Alfred Seefeld; Vice president, Dorothy Driessel; Secretary and Treasurer, Carl Schurr; Manila Klässig was chosen by the class as Junior response.

MRS. ARTHUR EICHSTEDT PASSES AWAY

Mother of Four Small Children is Called Away. Death Due to Heart Trouble. In Ill Health for Several Weeks

To our sorrow we are obliged to publish the news of the death of Mrs. Inga Eichstedt age 32 years, 3 months, beloved wife of Arthur Eichstedt of the town of Auburn, residing two and one-half miles north of this village, which occurred last Saturday, April 3rd. Death being due to heart trouble after an illness of five weeks duration.

Deceased was born in Norway on Jan. 3rd, 1885. She came to this country with her mother and four sisters when a young girl. She was married to Arthur Eichstedt at Kewaskum on February 9th, 1905. Their union was blessed with four children, who together with her husband still survive. The names of the children are: Lehman, age 6; Byron, age 5; Mersel, age 3; and Lester, age 15 months. Deceased also leaves to mourn her mother and four sisters, residing at Baraboo, Wis., and one brother residing in Norway.

Mrs. Eichstedt was always a kind and loving mother and wife. She was a devoted christian and a beloved companion. Her loss will be greatly felt by the surviving relatives and friends.

The funeral was held Wednesday morning at 9:30 from the residence in the town of Auburn with services in the Elmore Reformed church and interment in the congregation's cemetery. Rev. Rommel officiating. To the bereaved relatives we extend our deep heartfelt sympathy.

Through all pain at times she'd smile
A smile of heavenly birth
And when the angels called her home
She smiled farewell to earth
Heaven retaineth now our treasure
Earth the lonelyasket keeps
And the sunbeams love to linger
Where our sainted Inga sleeps.

PASSES TO THE GREAT BEYOND

Mrs. August Wagner, an Old and Highly Respected Resident of The Village Goes to Her Last Reward

Mrs. Beata Wagner, nee Lebelt, passed away in death at her home on East Main street last Monday April 5, 1915 at 10:30 o'clock a. m. after a lingering illness of general debility. Deceased had reached the ripe old age of 87 years. Miss Beata Lebelt was born in Tescherne, Schesing, Germany, on February 5, 1828. In 1850 she was united in marriage to Mr. August Wagner and immigrated to this country in 1852, settling in the town of Kewaskum. About twenty-five years ago she came to her present home in this village, where she had since resided up to the time of her death. Her husband preceded her in death about nineteen years ago. One child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Wagner, which died in infancy. Among the many friends and acquaintances of this kind hearted lady there were none who bore her any ill will; but all can say: Well Done! Thy Life was well spent! The example thou hast shown is well worthy of patronage! Thy remembrance alone will be a guidance to many who are to remain yet awhile before taking their everlasting farewell to earth. Mrs. Wagner was indeed a lady respected and loved by all who knew her; in her the young as well as the old found a true friend, and many are the remembrances of kind words and actions which young and old alike treasure up for the departed one. Deceased was a kind and loving mother, and although bereft of her only child in childhood, she always extended her mother love to the children of her acquaintance, who will long remember her pleasing countenance and words. In her home life she was hospitable and genial, and although living alone for the past nineteen years, scarcely a day passed without several callers coming to cheer the aged lady and sun themselves in the radiance of her good nature which ever seemed to permeate her home. The funeral services were held at 1:30 o'clock Thursday from the Ev. Luth. St. Lucas church Rev. Greve officiating. The remains were laid at rest in the congregation's cemetery. However it be, it seemed to me, 'Tis only noble to be good; Kind hearts are more than coronets, And simple faith than Norman Blood. Tennyson

Fined For Furnishing Liquor to Boys

Assistant Chief of Police Geo. Grollong on Saturday evening arrested Elmer M. Dunton, 123 West Third street, who was taken before Judge John D. Lyons to answer to a charge of having bought liquor and giving it away to boys under seventeen years of age. The complaint was made by Assistant Chief after he had been watching the Dunton place for several weeks and had secured incriminating evidence. Dunton pleaded guilty to the charge and was given a fine of $5.00 and costs, the fine and costs amounting to $4.83. Dunton stated in court that he had learned a lesson and that there would not be any occasion for another warrant of that character.

It is alleged that the Dunton home has for some time past been the rendezvous of a number of lads under seventeen years of age who have been entertained there and have neglected their school duties. Dunton is a man apparently about fifty years of age and has resided in this city for the past six years, keeping bachelor quarters in his home on West Third St. His business is an electrical contractor.

Police officials allege that the Dunton place is equipped with a pool and billiard table, card tables, an excellent library, and in fact everything that would delight the heart of the average young town lad. Dunton wanted to secure the friendship of the young people but the police strenuously objected when he added booze to the other attractions.—Horicon Reporter.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

The appearance of an ox team on Front street Monday afternoon created considerable comment. The team belonged to Mr. Frederick Lomira, who was enroute from Lomira to Fall River via the ox team route. The cattle were fine specimens of the Holstein breed and were harnessed with bridles and attached to a buggy. The day when the ox team was the rule and the horse the exception, had its passing with the passing of the early pioneer days, and today an ox team is as much an object of curiosity as was an airship twenty years ago.—Beaver Dam Argus.

The authorities of Sheboygan county Tuesday were looking for a gang of effete hobos who have a distaste for sardines. If they find such a gang, the officers believe they will have the burglar who robbed the postoffice and general store at Adell last Monday night. In addition to taking a supply of stamps, the burglars practically depleted the store's stock of canned goods. Officers got their first clue Tuesday when they discovered 37 cans of sardines beside the road near Waldo, four miles from Adell.

John Puls, the proprietor of the well known Clover Lawn Farm north of this city in the town of Herman, recently added to his fine stock of registered cattle a Holstein bull calf, six weeks old, for which he paid $3,000. The calf was bought from R. J. Schaefer of Clayton, near Neenah, one of the best known breeders of Holstein cattle in the state.

Mr. Puls has a herd of Holstein that have brought him note throughout the country.—Hartford Press.

The skeleton of a man, wrapped in good but partly rotted clothing was found in the woods a mile south of Jefferson Junction, last Sunday evening by a son of John Ganzer of Jefferson. There was nothing in the clothing to identify the person whose skeleton was found. It is guessed that the body may be that of Otto Krelow who disappeared from that neighborhood in July 1914.—Lomira Review.

Ernest Lieblich, who for a year was employed at Schleisingerville and vicinity, was arrested by the village marshal, having been charged with having stolen a coat and a gold watch of Jac. Basler. The articles were found on his possession. He was given his liberty.—Lomira Review.

The business men of Schleisingerville have organized a company to conduct a moving picture house in that village. Theisen's hall will be used for that purpose.

PARROT & CO.

HAROLD MACGRATH

Author of 'The Carpet from Bagdad', 'The Place of Honeycombs, etc.'

COPYRIGHT BY THE DOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

SYNOPSIS.

Warrington, an American adventurer, and James, his servant, with a caged parrot, the trio known up and down the Irrawaddy as Parrot & Co., are bound for Rangoon. Elsa Chetwood, rich American girl tourist, sees Warrington and asks the parrot to introduce her. He tells her that Warrington has beaten a syndicate and sold his oil claims for $200,000. Warrington puts Rajah, the parrot, through his tricks for Elsa and they pass two golden days together on the river. In Rangoon, Warrington interferes in a row over cards caused by an enemy. Warrington is annoyed by Craig and stabs him with a hatchet. Warrington discovers Elsa on the Singapore steamer. He avooids her. Craig is aboard and is warned by Warrington who ceases to avoid her. Craig starts an evil gossip. Elsa tells Warrington of the hatchet incident and he hunts up Craig on a murder bent. He finds him stretched out drunk on deck and turns the hose on him. At Penang Mallow, who drove Warrington from his plantation who he learned his story, comes aboard. Warrington tells Elsa that Mallow will tell her what she spent money that did not belong to him over the gambling table to Craig, and asks her not to pass two golden days Mallow baits Warrington, who keeps his temper.

Elsa straightened her lips with some difficulty. She possessed the enviable faculty of instantly forming in her mind pictures of coming events. The little swelling veins in the colonel's nose were as plain to her mind's eye as if he really stood before her. "Have him take me in to dinner," she suggested.

"Just what I was thinking of," declared the unsuspecting man. "If anyone can draw out the colonel, it will be you."

"I'll do my best." Elsa's mind was full of rollicking malice.

Contemptively he said: "So you've been doing the Orient alone? You are like your father in that way. He was never afraid of anything. Your mental makeup, too, I'll wager is like his. Finest man in the world."

"Wasn't he? How I wish he could have always been with me! But why is it, everyone seems appalled that I should travel over here without male escort?"

"The answer lies in your mirror, Elsa. Your old nurse Martha is no real protection."

"Are men so bad, then?"

"They are less restrained. The heat, the tremendous distances, the lack of amusements, are perhaps responsible. By the way, here's a packet of letters for you."

"Thanks." Elsa played with the packet, solemnly eyeing the superscriptions. The old disorder came back into her mind. Three of the letters were from Arthur. She dreaded to open them. "I must be going, then. I'm not sure of my tickets to Hongkong."

I'm telling you is on the level. She's been hobnobbing with the fellow all the way down from the Irrawaddy, so I'm told. Never spoke to anyone else. Made him sit at her side at table and jabbered Italian at him, as if she didn't want others to know what she was talking about. I know the man. Fired him from my plantation, when I found out what he was. Can't recall his name just now, but he is known out here as Warrington; Parrot & Co."

The consul general was genuinely shocked.

"You can't blame me for thinking things," went on Mallow. "What man wouldn't? Ask her about Warrington. You'll find that I'm telling the truth, all right."

"If you are, then she has made one of those mistakes women make when they travel alone. I shall see her at tea and talk to her. But I do not thank you, Mallow, for telling me this. A finer, loyaler-hearted girl doesn't live. She might have been kind out of sympathy."

Mallow bit off the tip of his cigar. "He's a handsome beggar, if you want to know."

"I resent that tone. Better drop the subject before I lose my temper. I'll have your papers ready for you in the morning." The consul general caught up his pen savagely to indicate that the interview was at an end.

"All right," said Mallow good-naturedly. "I meant no harm. Just naturally curious. Can't blame me, you know."

"I'm not blaming you. But it has disturbed me, and I wish to be alone to think it over."

Mallow lounged out, rather pleased with himself. His greatest pleasure in life was in making others uncomfortable.

The consul general bit the wooden end of his pen and chewed the splinters of cedar. He couldn't deny that

"I meant no harm."

It was like Elsa to pick up some derelict for her benefactions. Women had no business to travel alone. It was all very well when they toured in parties of eight or ten; but for a charming young woman like Elsa, attended by a spinster companion who doubtless dared not offer advice, it was decidedly wrong. And thereupon he determined that her trip to Yokohama should find her well guarded.

"I beg your pardon," said a pleasant voice.

The consul general had been so deeply occupied by his worry that he had not noticed the entrance of the speaker. He turned impatiently. He saw a tall blond man, bearded and tanned, with fine clear blue eyes that met his with the equality of the fearless.

CHAPTER XIII.

After Ten Years.

The consul general saw before him an exquisite, as the ancient phrase goes, backed by no indifferent breed of manhood. He believed that here was a tall blond man, bearded and tanned, with fine clear blue eyes that met his with the equality of the fearless.

"I should like a few minutes' private talk with you," began the well-dressed stranger. "May I close the door?" The consul general, with a sense of disappointment, nodded. The blond man returned and sat down. "I don't know how to begin, but I want you to copy this cablegram and send it under your own name. Here it is; read it."

So singular a request filled the consul general with astonishment. Rather mechanically he accepted the slip of paper, adjusted his glasses, and read—

The Andes Construction Company, New York: A former employee of yours wishes to make a restitution of $500, with interest to date. He does not give his name to me, but he wishes to learn if this belated restitution will lift the ban against his coming to America and resuming his citizenship. Reply collect.

"This is an extraordinary request to make to me, sir."

"Could I possibly offer that to the cable operator? Without name or address subjected to a thousand questions, none of which I should care to answer. So I came to you. Passing through your hands, no one will question it. Will you do this favor for a poor unfortunate devil?"

Oddly enough, the other could not get away from his original impression. The clothes, the way the man wore them, the clarity of his eyes, the abun-

"I meant no harm."

It was like Elsa to pick up some derelict for her benefactions. Women had no business to travel alone. It was all very well when they toured in parties of eight or ten; but for a charming young woman like Elsa, attended by a spinster companion who doubtless dared not offer advice, it was decidedly wrong. And thereupon he determined that her trip to Yokohama should find her well guarded.

"I beg your pardon," said a pleasant voice.

The consul general had been so deeply occupied by his worry that he had not noticed the entrance of the speaker. He turned impatiently. He saw a tall blond man, bearded and tanned, with fine clear blue eyes that met his with the equality of the fearless.

ant health that was expressed by the tone of the skin, derided such a possibility as the cablegram made manifest.

He forced the smile back to his lips. "Are you sure you're not hoaxing me?"

"No. I am the victim of the hoax," enigmatically. "If one may call the quirks of fate by the name of hoax," the stranger added. "Will you send it?"

The years he had spent in the consular service had never brought before him a situation of this order. He did not know exactly what to do. He looked out of the window, into the hotel court, at the sky which presently would become overcast with the daily rain clouds. By and by he remembered the man waiting patiently at his elbow.

"What is your name?"

"I'd rather not give that until I hear from New York. I am known out here by the name of Warrington."

Warrington, the puzzlement vanished from the older man's face, and his eyes became alert, renewing from another angle their investigation of the stranger. Warrington. So this was the man? He could understand now. Who could blame a girl for making a mistake when he, a seasoned veteran, had been beguiled by the outward appearance of the man? Mallow was right. He was a handsome beggar.

"I promise to send this upon one condition."

"I accept without question," readily.

"It is that you must keep away from Elsa Chetwood, now and hereafter. You made her acquaintance under false pretenses."

"I deny that. Not under false pretenses." How quickly things went about! "Let me tell you how I met her."

The consul general listened; he listened with wonder and interest, and more, with conviction that the young man had been perfectly honest. But the knowledge only added to his growing alarm. It would not be difficult for such a man to win the regard of any young woman.

"And you told her what you had done?"

"Yes."

"Your first misstep?" touching the cablegram.

"My first and only misstep. I was a careless, happy-go-lucky young fool." The sky outside also had attraction for Warrington. A thousand times a fool! "How long ago did this happen?"

"Ten years, this coming April."

"And now, after all this time, you wish to go back?"

"I have wished to go back many times, but never had money enough. I have plenty now. Oh, I made it honestly," smiling. "In oil, at Penang. Here's a cutting from a Rangoon paper."

The other read it carefully. It was romance, romance such as he liked to read in his books, but which was mighty bewildering to have at his elbow in actuality. What a life the man must have led! And here he was, with no more evidence of the conflict than might be discerned in the manliness of his face and the breadth and depth of his shoulders. He dropped the cutting, impatiently.

"Don't you believe it?"

"Believe it? Oh, this? Yes," answered the consul general. "What I cannot believe is that I am awake. I cannot quite make two and two equal four. I cannot . . . Well, you do not look like a man who would rob his employer of eight thousand dollars."

Parrot & Co. It's odd, but I recollect that title. You were at Udampur during the plague."

Warrington brightened. "So that's got about? I happened to be there, working on the prince's railway."

"I will send the cable at once. You will doubtless hear from New York in the morning. But you must not see Miss Chetwood again."

"You will let me bid her good-by? I admire and respect her more than any other woman. She does not know it, for as yet her soul is asleep; but she is one of those few women God put on earth for the courage and comfort of man. Only to say good-by to her. Here in this office, if you wish."

"I agree to that."

"Thank you again," Warrington rose.

"I am genuinely sorry for you. If they say no, what will you do?"

"Go back just the same. I have another debt to cancel."

"Call in the morning. I'll let you know what the charges are."

"I forgot. Here are twenty pounds. You can return the balance when I call. I am very grateful."

"By the way, there is a man here by the name of Mallow," began the consul general.

"Yes," interrupted Warrington, with a smile which was grim and cruel. "I expect to call upon him. He owes me something like fifty pounds, and I am going to collect it." Then he went out.

The consul general dropped Mallow's perfect into the wastebasket and lighted his pipe. Once more he read the cablegram. The Andes Construction Company. What a twist, what an absurd kink in the skein! Nearly all of Elsa's wealth lay bound up in this enormous business which General Chetwood had founded thirty odd years before. And neither of them knew!

"I am not a bad man at heart," he mused, "but I liked the young man's expression when I mentioned that bully Mallow."

He joined his family at five. He waved aside tea, and called for a lemon-squash.

"Elsa, I am going to give you a lecture."

"Didn't tell you?" cried Elsa to the wife. "I felt in my bones that he was going to say this very thing." She turned to her old-time friend. "Go on; lecture me."

"In the first place, you are too kind-hearted."

"That will be news to my friends. They say I have a heart of ice."

"And what you think is independence of spirit is sometimes indirection."

"Oh," said Elsa, becoming serious. "A man came into my office today. He is a rich copra grower from Penang. He spoke of you. You passed him on going out. If I had been twenty years younger I'd have punched his ugly head. His name is Mallow, and he's not a savory chap."

Elsa's cheeks burned. She never would forget the look in that man's eyes. The look might have been in other men's eyes, but conventionality had always veiled it; she had never seen it before.

"Go on," but her voice was unsteady.

"Somewhere along the Irrawaddy you made the acquaintance of a young man who calls himself Warrington, familiarly known as Parrot & Co. I'll be generous. Not one woman in a thousand would have declined to accept the attentions of such a man. He is cultivated, undeniably good looking, a strong man, mentally and physically."

Elsa's expression was now enigmatical.

"There's not much veneer to him. He fooled me unintentionally. He was quite evidently born a gentleman, of a race of gentlemen. His is not an isolated case. One misstep, and the road to the devil."

The consul general's wife sent a startled glance at Elsa, who spun her sunshade to lighten the tension of her nerves.

"He confessed frankly to me this morning that he is a fugitive from justice. He wishes to return to America. He recounted the circumstances of your meeting."

"Uncle Jim, I have traveled pretty much over this world, and I never met a gentleman if Warrington is not one!" There was unconscious belligerence in her tone.

"Ah, there's the difficulty which women will never be made to understand. Every man can, at one time or another, put himself upon his good behavior. Underneath he may be a fine rascal."

"Not this one," smiling. "He warned me against himself a dozen times, but that served to make me stubborn. The fault of my conduct," acidly, "was not in making this pariah's acquaintance. It lies in the fact that I had nothing to do with the other passengers, from choice. That is where I was indiscreet. But why should I put myself out to gain the good wishes of people for whom I have no liking; people I shall probably never see again when I leave this port?"

"You forget that some of them will be your fellow passengers all the way to San Francisco. My child, you know as well as I do that there are some laws which the Archangel Michael would have to obey, did he wish to inhabit this earth for a while."

"Poor Michael! And if you do not obey these laws, people talk."

"Exactly. There are two sets of man-made laws. One governs the conduct of men and the other the conduct of women."

RARE AND MAJESTIC BEAUTY

John Muir's Tribute to the Fascinating of the Yosemite Worth Holding in Memory.

No temple made with hands can compare with Yosemite, wrote the late John Muir. Every rock in its walls seem to glow with life. Some lean back in majestic repose; others, absolutely sheer, or nearly so, for thousands of feet, advance beyond their companions in thoughtful attitudes, giving welcome to storms and calms alike, seemingly aware, yet heedless of everything going on about them. Awful in stern, immovable majesty, how softly these rocks are adorned and how fine and reassuring the company they keep; their feet among the beautiful groves and meadows, their brows in the sky, a thousand flowers leaning confidently against their feet, bathed in floods of water, floods of light, while the snow and waterfalls, the winds and avalanches and clouds shine and sing and wreathe about them as the years go by, and myriads of small-winged creatures—birds, bees, butterflies—give glad animation and help to make all the air into music. Down through the middle of the valley flows the crystal Merced, River of Mercy, peacefully quiet, reflecting lilies and trees and the onlooking rocks; things frail and fleeting and types of endurance meeting here and blending in countless forms, as if into this one mountain mansion nature had gathered his choicest treasures to draw her lovers into close and confiding communion with her.

The Only One Possible.

Pat had an argument with his wife's mother over domestic affairs, and the conversation became so heated that Pat was hailed into court on a charge of disturbing the quiet of the county. "It pains me to think," said the magistrate in reprimanding Pat, "that you should say an unkind word to your mother-in-law. I know a man who never disagreed with his mother-in-law in word, thought or deed. Never did he speak to her unkindly! Never did he—'Beggin' yer honor's pardon,' suddenly interrupted Pat, "might I be askin' a question?" "Certainly," responded the obliging magistrate. "What would you like to know?" "Shure, yer honor," smiled Pat, "an' it's meself that would be likin' to know if the name of the gentlman yer referred to was Mr. Adam?"

Conscious Doors of Kindness.

The conscious doors of kindness are probably the most surprised people in the world. In the first place, they are almost certain to feel that they don't get due credit, that they are misunderstood. They are surely misunderstood by themselves. By others they are not likely to be misunderstood, particularly by those they do good to. If, for example, the virtuous patronizers of the poor could only know how, in many instances, the poor felt toward them, they would at first be indignant and resentful. Then they would wonder how they had escaped with their lives.

Fireproof Wood.

To make wood fireproof, slack a small quantity of fresh lime and add water until it has the consistency of cream; stir well and add one pound of alum, 12 ounces of commercial potash and about one pound of salt. Stir again and apply while hot. Two or three coats will keep wood fireproof for many months.

AUSTRIAN ARCHDUCHESS A RED CROSS WORKER

The Archduchess Maria Josepha (at right), mother of Archduke Karl Franz Joseph, the heir to the Austrian throne, like many other noblewomen of practically all the countries engaged in the war, has answered the call of her country and has taken active charge of the Red Cross work. The photograph shows her acting as a good Samaritan to one of her wounded countrymen.

AMERICAN HORSES FOR THE FRENCH ARMY

Thousands of horses gathered from all parts of the United States brought together in large herds at Yonkers, N. Y., and shipped to France for the cavalry and artillery service. The photograph shows some of the horses on the dock.

RISE OF APARTMENT HOUSE

Idea When Introduced into America Was at Once Recognized as a Good Thing.

With the introduction of apartment houses in the early '70s New York entered upon a new era in its history. The "French flats," as they were then called, became popular at once, though many wisecracks shook their heads dolefully and declared that they would soon be followed by "French morals"—an ancient Anglo-Saxon term for general depravity. It is impossible to state with accuracy the influence exerted by the apartment house upon morals, but in the important problem of living with one's means the results have been far-reaching and beneficial. It has provided homes for thousands of families who could not afford houses, and such is the saving in the work of housekeeping that the wealthy are glad to avail themselves of its ad-antages. At present there are about a million separate apartments—not apartment houses—in the various boroughs of New York. Of these nearly twenty-four thousand are in Queens; there are five times this number in the Bronx. It will not be long before we shall see apartment houses built farther afield. A country apartment house on the edge of a golf course would prove a godsend to those who wish to escape the noise and turmoil of the city. —New York Herald.

To The Farmers

Ever notice how the most successful farmers do business? Do they keep their money hid about the house or buried in the cellar, or carry it around on their person? Not much. Pick out the most prosperous farmers in your neighborhood and see if they all haven't accounts at the bank. They pay by check. They leave their surplus money with us, where it is safe. They do business in a modern way. If it is a good plan for the most successful ones, why wouldn't it be for you? We make a specialty of farmers' accounts, offering every possible convenience and accommodation.

Vom Schauplatz des europäischen Völker-Krieges

Auf der ganzen Linie, die auf russischem Gebiete parallel mit der Südgrenze von Ostpreußen läuft, ist die Lage die gleiche geblieben. Im jedes Dorf wird heiß gekämpft, und an den Uferbergen der das Schlachtfeld durchfließenden Flüsse, der Vistula und des Dniepr, spielen sich hartnäckige Kämpfe ab, die bisher keiner Seite einen entscheidenden Erfolg gebracht haben.

Die Lage im Westen.

Die Kämpfe bei Neu-Chapelle und St. Ois in Flandern nehmen immer noch immer die Hauptrolle in den Nachrichten vom westlichen Kriegsschauplatz ein, als nun allmählich die ferneren Verluste der Engländer in diesen Kämpfen bekannt werden.

Am Zusammenhänge mit den Verwundungen der Engländer ist die Meldung der Londoner "Evening News" von Interesse, in der mitgeteilt wird, daß seit Ausbruch des Krieges nicht weniger als 110 englische Aeroplane von den Deutschen aus der Luft geblasen wurden und daß 72 englische Blüher dabei ihr Leben einbüßten.

In der Champagne.

Auf den Blutzetränkenfeldern des französischen Schaumweingebietes sind die Kämpfe noch keineswegs zum Abschluß gekommen. Bei Reims u. a. O. bemühen sich die Deutschen, die über den Rhein gekommenen französischen Truppen zu vernichten.

Die Kämpfe im Ost.

Mit nicht minder bewundernswerter Ausdauer, die sie in den Argonnenkämpfen bewiesen, hängen die Franzosen in den Vogesen an ihren zu Anfang des Krieges eingenommenen Stellungen auf dem Hartmannsweilerkopf, nordwestlich von Wattweiler, und dem Anzellerkopf, südlich von Steinbach. Die Tatsache, daß die Franzosen die Gipfel dieser Höhen besetzt halten, macht es den Deutschen unmöglich, sich in den Vogesen weiter auszuweiten.

Deutschland hat Heberlein an Geld für Kriegszwecke.

Berlin, drahtlos. Bei der zweiten Sitzung des Finanz-Budgets im Reichstag verhandelte Finanzminister Helfferich, daß die Subskription auf die zweite Kriegsanleihe die erste bereits bei Weitem überstiegen habe und neben Millionen Mark erreicht hätte.

Nicht genügend Schiffe vorhanden.

New York. Noch niemals ist im Hafen von New York soviel Fracht nach England und Frankreich verladen worden als jetzt. Allein an den Chelsea Piers liegen ein Dutzend oder mehr große Dampfer, die Tag und Nacht beladen werden und trotzdem geht in Schiffahrtstreifen die Klage, daß man nicht genügend Schiffe habe, um alles von den Allierten hier bestellte Kriegsmaterial, denn nur um solches und um Nahrungsmittel handelt es sich, befördern zu können.

So wird aus Bridgeport, Conn., berichtet, daß die dortige Metall-Zubehörfabrikation zum Werte von $30,000,000 von den Allierten erhalten hat. Was in Bridgeport an Metall-Fabrikation vorhanden ist, und es sind über mehr als 300, fertigt Kriegsmaterial für die Heinde Deutschlands und Österreichs - Ungarns an.

Fabrikanten die wirklich Neutral geblieben sind.

Die Zahl der Fabrikanten in unserem Lande, die sich geweigert haben, Waffen und Munition herzustellen, ist in der Tat sehr gering. Die meisten Fabrikanten in unserem Lande, die sich geweigert haben, Waffen und Munition herzustellen, sind in der Tat sehr gering.

Deutsche Reichsbank hat großen Goldvorrat.

Die Engländer und auch die Anglo-Amerikaner können nicht verstehen, wie es möglich ist, daß der deutsche Reichsbank immer noch mehr Gold zugeführt wird, trotzdem sie gut wie gar kein Gold von auswärts in's Reich hineinkommen.

Belgier werfen ein Auge auf Luxemburg.

Berlin, via Sanville. Die Presse des Großherzogtums Luxemburg, darunter die hochgeachtete "Luxemburger Zeitung", ist entrückt über den belgischen Minister Runderwede, der in London erklärte, daß Belgien sich beim Friedensschluß in den Besitz Luxemburgs setzen müsse.

Pretty and Popular Shirt Waists

The women of America, at least, are faithfully devoted to the sensible and smart shirt waist. Manufacturers of these essentials of the wardrobe have entered the field with models very close to the original design and have found them more heartily appreciated than ever.

Gown of Semitransparent Fabric

The pretty gown shown in the picture is developed in a net-top lace with heavy pattern of embroidered flowers and scalloped edges. It would look just as well made of shadow lace, voile, embroidered batiste, chiffon, or any other of those semitransparent fabrics for which women show an increasing partiality.

Silk in Hatdom. This cleverest play of flower and leaf cannot be bought right away in the millinery markets; it has to be concocted by the artist in hats. The silk hat is not only a very nice feature just now, but almost a necessity, because the straw-hat-making quarters are hampered by the lack of both dye and paint.

DAIRY

BIG MISTAKE OF DAIRYMEN

Young Bulls Disposed of Before Thoroughly Tested—Dehorning Greatly Modifies Temper.

One of the greatest mistakes that dairymen make is that of disposing of breeding bulls while they are young and before their get is tested by work in the dairy. Some of the very best bulls are discarded when two or three years old.

Nucleus of Fine Dairy Herd.

When a bull is a constant menace and should be removed, then he need not be sacrificed before his breeding value becomes known. We must depend upon inbred bulls if we are to secure the transmission of the qualities of our best cows to their progeny, and it is best to secure the first breeding bull by breeding the sire back to one of his daughters.

MANAGING THE KICKING COW

Animal Can Be Handled Successfully If One of Front Feet Is Tied Up by Means of Strip.

If a cow kicks during milking it is said that she can be handled successfully if she is tied securely and one of the front feet held up by means of a strap reaching around her body just back of the shoulder.

REASONS FOR COW TESTING

Enables Farmer to Discard Animals Not Paying for Feed—It Is Plain Common Sense.

A few of the many reasons for cow testing are: It enables the farmer to eliminate cows that do not pay for their board. It saves many a good cow from the shambles. It is an encourager of good feeding and good care.

Be Kind and Gentle.

Care includes kindness, regularity in feed, water and milking, as well as the quarters. But above all be kind and gentle. If you have a cow that it is not possible to be kind to (and there are a few such unregenerates) better fit her for beef, than to worry along with her because the profit will not be nearly so much as with a cow responsive to kindness, aside from the worry they are to the milkers.

Warts on Teats.

The ordinary, small, scabby wart is generally quite easily cured by smearing it with pure olive oil, sweet oil or carbolic vaseline. If, after treatment of this sort for several weeks, the growth does not disappear, it may be necessary to cut it off with a pair of sharp scissors and touch the sore with a stick of caustic potash.

Milking.

Before milking, the cow's udder and flanks should be wiped off with a damp cloth to remove any dust and loose hair which might fall into the pail. The milkers should milk with dry, clean hands, and should practice cleanliness in every respect while handling the milk.

Deserves Good Feeding.

The dry cow deserves good feed, for at this time she is building up her stamina for use during the next period of lactation.

Banish Foot Misery

BENT bones, corns, bunions, ingrown nails, flat foot, and all foot ills are caused by the pinching pressure of pointed shoes. Go "near-barefooted,"—which means: wear Educator Shoes. And Nature will relieve or free your feet from all these blemishes.

EDUCATOR SHOE

Wisconsin Directory

Official Denial. No War Tax on Homestead Land in Canada. The report that a war tax is to be placed on homesteaded land in Canada having been given considerable circulation in the United States, this is to advise all persons that no such tax has been placed, nor is there any intention to place a war tax of any nature on such land.

Feel All Used Up?

Does your back ache constantly? Do you have sharp twinges when stooping or lifting? Do you feel all used up—as if you could just go no further? Kidney weakness brings great discomfort. What with backache, headache, dizziness and urinary disturbances it is no wonder one feels all used up.

A Wisconsin Case

"My heart was so weak it could not do its work properly. My husband would sometimes have to carry me from the table, and it would seem that I would never breathe again. The doctor told me that coffee was causing the weakness of my heart. He said I must stop it, but it seemed I could not give it up until I was down in bed with nervous prostration. For eleven weeks I lay there and suffered. Finally husband brought home some Postum and I quit coffee and started new and right. Slowly I got well. Now I do not have any headaches, nor those spells with weak heart. We know it is Postum that helped me. The Dr. said the other day: 'I never thought you would be what you are.' I used to weigh 92 pounds and now I weigh 158. Postum has done much for me and I would not go back to coffee again, for I believe it would kill me if kept at it. Postum must be prepared according to directions on pkg., then it has a rich flavor and with cream is fine."

Postum

A Soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed For Douches. In the local treatment of woman's ills, such as leucorrhoea and inflammation, hot douches of Postum are very efficacious.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost per cup about the same. "There's a Reason" for Postum. Sold by Grocers.

WHEN it looks like trouble—remember there's peace and calm content in "the little chew that satisfies."

The whole world is friendly to the man who hands out a smile and a kindly hint about the Real Tobacco Chew.

A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—cut fine, short shred—seasoned and sweetened just enough, cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shred so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with gaudiness and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

RHEUMATISM YIELDS QUICKLY TO SLOAN'S

You can't prevent an attack of Rheumatism from coming on, but you can stop it almost immediately. Sloan's Liniment gently applied to the sore joint or muscles penetrates in a few minutes to the inflamed spot that causes the pain. It soothes the hot, tender swollen feeling, and in a very short time brings a relief that is almost unbelievable until you experience it. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25c in any Druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

The Biggest Alfalfa Farm

The largest alfalfa farm in the state is probably the Cornfield farms of the Swartz Brothers near Waukesha. Last year this farm had 150 acres of alfalfa, to which an addition of forty acres was made. In 1915 this farm will have 190 acres of alfalfa. The task encountered by the owners of this farm has been in increasing the supply of stock sufficiently to consume the surplus of alfalfa. Last year some of the alfalfa had to be sold—one load brought over $1—some load of hay!

EARLY LIFE IN WISCONSIN

At the bottoms of the seas were many of the beautiful stone lillies now found in the rocks of southwestern Wisconsin. These were not lillies at all, but in reality were little animals growing at the top of slender stems. They were dainty creatures, waving gracefully backward and forward with living animals we should say had many delicate arms whose motion caused the water to carry very minute animals into their mouths, for the mouth of the stone lily was very small.
But perhaps the most common animal we should have seen was the trilobite, a strange fellow left no descendants. If we compare him with living animals we should say that he looked most like the crayfish. Indeed the trilobite was related to this common inhabitant of the stream. He was very different from the crayfish, however, because he had no pincers and his broad flat head and tail looked very much alive.
No picture of the ancient seas would be complete without the finny folk. There were great numbers of them here too. Some were armored with huge bony plates and carried large jagged spines on their backs. They were cruel creatures relentlessly devouring their less protected neighbors. Their mouths were filled with big crushing teeth, against which the thin shells of smaller water folk were no protection to their owners.
All these have long been gone from Wisconsin, and have left only shells and skeletons to tell us of their presence. Since the withdrawal of the last sea millions of years have elapsed, and were it not for records in other parts of the continent we should be most ignorant of many thousands of queer beasts that followed them, and likewise passed away. In many parts of the United States we have records of great swimming lizards, huge dinosaurs, and even flying reptiles and birds with teeth.
It was not until the ice age that Wisconsin again took up the record. Then the life was greatly changed, but still not like that of today. In the lakes and marshes and the stream washes that were formed then, many skeletons were buried. There were skeletons of large deer with enormous antlers, many flesh eating creatures, and even enormous elephant-like creatures, the mammoths, and the mastodons. As a rule all that we find of their remains is a tooth, a portion of a tusk, or a few fragments of bone. They are not rare, however, and complete skeletons are not lacking. But the picture of these animals of the ice age is a story in itself.

Handkerchiefs Carry Contraband

It is a common practice of mothers and fathers to use their own pocket handkerchiefs to wipe the noses of their young hopefuls. The practice is by no means limited to common people. I have frequently observed it among friends who have their nails manicured each week, who take daily baths, and are most scrupulous in all ordinary conceptions of cleanliness.
A used pocket handkerchief is, at best, not a very clean article from the viewpoint of a physician. A snow-white handkerchief of a consumptive or of the victim of a common cold is a veritable menagerie of disease germs. On the other hand, a handkerchief may be grimed by weeks of contact with clean earth or coal dust and be comparatively clean.
Dirtiness and cleanliness are relative terms. To a physician, with his knowledge of the nature and spread of disease germs, dirt comes to signify material, however clean it may appear, which is likely to carry more than an ordinary dose of disease germs.
It has been said that the Chinese find our practice of carrying more or less soiled handkerchiefs in our pockets most offensive to their ideas of cleanliness. We, on the other hand, are rather shocked by their practice. This, I am informed, is to carry a number of paper napkins, which are thrown away after wiping lips or nose. Except for the indiscriminate tossing away of such papers, their practice is undeniably cleaner than ours. Indeed, in the most approved tuberculosis sanatoria, the Chinese method is employed, except that the soiled napkins are placed in oil paper bags and destroyed by fire, bag and all.
The common handkerchief must take its place in the discard with the common roller towel. As a carrier of disease it is much more important than either of the latter two while the state can and does prohibit the use of common towels and drinking glasses, it can not be expected to regulate intimate details of personal and family toilet.
This gives an excellent illustration of the impossibility of personal and public health by law. It also illustrates the need of in many instances of regulating personal information and the safeguard that knowledge furnishes thinking people who will take the pains to understand the few primary principles which underlie disease spread and prevention.

Health Book Sold is Purely For Personal Profit

Milwaukee, Wis., April 6—Special Have you been approached by a solicitor selling a book entitled Health and Longevity, sold in the name of the Home Health Society? Such a book is being sold, but do not buy it with the idea that you are helping out any public cause. This society is purely an activity of a publishing company and its agents get the support of the people by claiming to be nurses of the tuberculosis society.
So many complaints were received about this work that the State Tuberculosis Association had it investigated. It was found that the Home Health Society was organized about 1900 and is purely an activity of the Historical Publishing Company. Their book is sold on the installment plan in one and two volume editions of $10.00 and $12.00. The officers denied that there was any devotion of proceeds to the National Association or any other health or charitable agency, and said that no agent had been authorized to make such a claim.
Most of these books are sold in homes where they can least afford to buy them, according to a visiting nurse in one of the smaller towns of the state. By going into a home and merely saying I am the new nurse their solicitors some of whom go in nurse uniforms, prey upon the confidence of the people which has been established through visiting nurse work. The people are made to believe that they need the book and also that in buying it they will be helping the Crusader against Tuberculosis.
