EARLY LIFE IN WISCONSIN

When Wisconsin Was a Lake

Most of us think of the land upon which we live as staple, permanent, and unchangeable, for the outlines of the lands and oceans of the globe have indeed been but slightly altered during historic times. Close examination, however, shows that this has not always been the case and the fact that certain coasts are rising, others sinking, others wearing away, and yet others building seaward, is well known to the dwellers on the sea coast. That Wisconsin, a thousand miles from tide-water, was for immense ages covered by the waters of an inland sea which extended over nearly all the Mississippi valley, is however, somewhat hard to realize. At the present the surface of Wisconsin varies in altitude from 531 feet on the shores of Lake Michigan to about 1800 feet in the northern part, only a few hills exceeding the greater figure. Scientists are accustomed to demand satisfactory proofs that such movements of the earth's crust have actually occurred as would be required to bring Wisconsin beneath the waves of the sea. The evidence rests mainly upon two points: the character of most of the rocks of the state, and the animal remains preserved in some of these rocks.

The rocks of Wisconsin by which term the geologists mean rocks found in ledges, not loose in the soil, are of two general classes. In the high northern part of the state are found hard rocks, granites, trap slates, quartz rocks, etc., many of them of volcanic origin. Forming a semi-circle about these hard rocks, the rest of the state is underlain by softer limestones, sandstones and shales. It is such rocks which show that the sea once covered the region for in no other way could the sand and muds which have hardened into these rocks have originated. Close study shows that these sand and muds must have come from some land existing at that time since they are the well known products of the weathering and wear of rocks like those now seen in the north central part of the state. They must have been washed into the seas by rivers, sorted over by waves and currents and finally deposited to form what geologists call "sedimentary" rocks as distinguished from "igneous" rocks, those formed by volcanic activity, such as predominate among the older rocks to the north. As further signs that these rocks were deposited in standing water is the frequent presence of "ripple marks," ridges of sand or mud formed by the action of waves in shallow water as may often be seen on the bottoms of modern lakes and ponds. Taken by themselves, however, these facts would hardly be entirely conclusive but in the sedimentary rocks are found sometimes shells, but often only the impressions of many kinds of shell-fish and other animals. That these animals lived when the rock was deposited and are not the remains of modern creatures which crawled into crevices is readily proved. They bear no relations to crabs in the rocks or to the distance from the surface, nor are some of the kinds of animals found alive at the present day. Furthermore, these fossils as they are called, are remains of animals similar to those which live in the present seas so that in all probability they also were marine.

Is Consumptive Dangerous

A former tuberculous sanatorium patient, who was not completely cured, is working in a butcher shop in a Wisconsin village. I am asked if he should be permitted to continue in such employment. In response to the query I cannot answer definitely. Knowing neither the man nor his habits, I cannot judge in this specific instance. Nor is the answer simple as more than one consideration is involved. Why I hesitate to say what I should say is that it is not absolutely safe by cooking, some is eaten raw.

If the man is careful, I do not think the danger to the public is so very great. If he is careless, of course it is I hesitate to say anything which might be construed as making light of the danger of this terrible disease. Nevertheless, we must never lose sight of the fact that tuberculosis is not a terrible contagious disease and that it usually requires prolonged and repeated doses of germs to overwhelm a new victim. Furthermore, we must not forget that there are thousands of unknown consumptives in Wisconsin and that the danger from them is greater than from the known ones. Our consumptive patients must, therefore, be taken care of or take care of themselves. The public is not as yet prepared to support all dangerous consumptives. We must not make it difficult for them to support themselves therefore.

There is more than a sentimental reason for this. Poverty-stricken consumptives are more dangerous than those in comfortable circumstances. Few of us who have an abundance of hot running water and plenty of coal realize how difficult it really is to be clean in the absence of these commodities. An harassed overworked consumptive, exhausted by his efforts to provide himself and his family with the means of keeping his body and soul together, is not likely to be nearly so scrupulous of other people's safety as the patient who has the leisure to consider others.

Every well individual ought to read the article written by William Garrett Brown in the Atlantic Monthly of June, 1914, and reprinted by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association in its January, 1915, Crusader. The author, himself a consumptive, and a very gifted writer, has set forth under the title Some Confessions of a T. B. a point of view seldom glimpsed by even old students of the tuberculosis problem and of tuberculous patients.

A very limited number of copies of the Crusader containing this article are left, but so long as they last, they will be sent out free of charge upon request addressed to this Bureau. Entirely aside from the health interest, the article, solely for its literary value is worth the trouble of securing and reading it.

WHY WE TURN TO RIGHT?

First Law on This Point Seems to Have Been Passed by Maryland.

Now that many automobile manufacturers are constructing their cars with the driver's seat on the left, interest is naturally aroused in the question as to why vehicles keep to the right in some countries and to the left in others, and as to where our laws to this effect originated.

The Massachusetts Mercury, published in Boston, in its issue of Friday, April 11, 1909, gives the following item among its general news: "A law has been made in Baltimore, that the driver of a vehicle with wheels, in passing another in any street, shall keep to the right-hand side, under penalty of three dollars, for each offense. And likewise a law granting a considerable bounty on the use of broad wheels." From the wording of the item and the prominence given to it, it seems to have been the first law in this country.

Poor Hen Had to Die.

One Friday Mrs. C. P. Waisner bought a hen at an Atchison grocery store, intending to kill, dress and cook it for Sunday dinner. She took the hen home, where it promptly laid an egg. Mrs. Waisner was pleased, and did not kill the hen that day. Saturday the hen laid another egg, and Mrs. Waisner decided to spare the hen's life as long as it laid eggs. It laid an egg every day for a while and then showed a disposition to set. By that time Mrs. Waisner had grown very fond of the hen and named it Emma. So she set Emma on 15 eggs, and in due course of time the hen came off from the nest with 15 chickens. Most of the chickens were roosters, and as they grew up Mrs. Waisner ate them, and finally ate Emma.—Atchison Globe.

WISCONSIN NEWS BRIEFS.

Kenosha.—Government maps and charts show a swing bridge over the river at Main street here, but after two days of work with a dredge waiting to make a trip to the west of the bridge the committee on streets has declared the bridge can not be swung. It is probable the city will be made a defendant in a suit for damages on account of the failure of officials to open a passage way for the big dredge. The bridge has not been swung in three years. Kenosha.—The Franciscan Sisters, a Catholic order in St. Louis, has declined the bequest made to it in the will of the late Katherine Kaiser. Five thousand dollars was offered the sisterhood for a hospital in Kenosha county. The sister superior has notified the executor of the estate the order cannot accept the gift. The same offer will be made to some other Catholic sisterhood. It is possible the money will be used for opening an old people's home. Watertown.—D. W. Hoan, city attorney of Milwaukee, will deliver the Memorial day address here on May 31. There will be a parade to the cemetery, where the exercises will be held, unless rain causes a change to the opera house. T. J. Berto is in charge of arrangements. It is understood Mr. Hoan will also give a Memorial day address at Waukesha on May 29. Madison.—One thousand dollars in cash, supplementing a Carnegie hero medal award last year, has just been received by Miss Grace Bell of Hammond, Ind., a student at the University of Wisconsin, in recognition of her bravery in rescuing a fellow student from death in Lake Winnebago a year ago. Miss Bell is a senior in home economics. Manitowoc.—That Manitowoc county may have one of the most complete law libraries in the state, members of the county bar association appeared before the county board and asked for an appropriation to cover cost of transportation and binding Supreme court cases and briefs. Kenosha.—Sheriff Andrew F. Stahl pulled the star off the breast of a deputy sheriff in court here. Frank Savaligo, a deputy, had been arrested on a charge of intoxication and the evidence showed he carried a bottle of whisky in a pocket with his revolver. "Guns and booze never did mix well," was the declaration of the sheriff. Savaligo was fined for drunkenness. Florence.—The new Florence creamery is in active operation. Over 600 pounds of butter was made the first week. The creamery has thirty customers. Marshfield.—R. R. Williams has signed a contract with J. Chauncey Rodding of Chicago, who will give two fights each day of the fair this fall. Eau Claire.—At the end of this month Wales H. Willard will retire as superintendent of the Eau Claire city water works with the record of thirty years of active service in that department. Chilton.—Contracts were let for the construction of the new St. Mary's church of this city and of an eight room school building for the same congregation, at a cost of approximately $72,000. Beloit.—Samuel Guleso of this city dropped dead in the doorway of a hospital at Rockford, Ill., as he was entering for treatment. Racine.—The new automobile recently purchased for the use of Fire marshal James Cape collided with an auto delivery truck belonging to the Jackson Greenhouse company. The wheels of the chief's machine were smashed, but no one was injured. Some months ago another department machine was wrecked. Corlies.—Don Worthington, road superintendent and well known in Racine county as a contractor, specializing in the digging of wells, was killed to death by a vicious bull. He leaves a wife and two children.

Difference in Shooting. Henry Miller in the following story proves how wit can effectually save a man from humiliation. "During the Civil war, at a camp in Ohio, a captain fresh from civil life and grand in a braud-new uniform, happened to observe two men shooting at a target. "Hello, boys," said he. "Let me show you how to shoot." "Taking a gun in hand, he fired and missed. "That," said he to one of the soldiers, "is the way you shoot." "He fired a second shot and hit the bull's-eye. "And that," said he, "is the way I shoot."—Youth's Magazine. Unduly Influenced. "What are you reading?" "A bulletin on how to raise fruit," replied Farmer Corntossel. "Do you understand it?" "Of course I do. After seein' how many chances you've got to take on insects an' weather an' soil conditions, I'm goin' to quit raisin' fruit."

PERSONAL recommendation counts a lot—and the right kind of men are glad of every chance to do their fellow men a favor.

You see it illustrated every day—users of the Real Tobacco Chew telling friends the glad tidings about the small chew that satisfies.

A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough—cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.

THE REAL TOBACCO CHEW IS NOW CUT TWO WAYS!!
W-B CUT IS LONG SHRED. RIGHT-CUT IS SHORT SHRED.

Take less than one-quarter the old size chew. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just take a nibble of it until you find the strength chew that suits you, then see how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end. The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up. An excess of licorice and sweetening makes you spit too much.

“Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste.”

Warning Against the Fly Pest
Warnings against the pest of every community—the common fly—cannot be uttered too often nor too strongly. As Secretary John N. Hurty, of the Indiana State Board of Health, says: The way to accomplish a great reform is to commercialize it. "Make it a question of 'business,' put it up to the merchant that there is money in it, convince the head of the family that window and door screens and wire cloth cost considerably less than doctor's services and undertakers bills and the "great reform" becomes an accomplished fact. Merchants should familiarize themselves with every point and argument made against the dirty fly and those who can should commercialize the subject by talking screen doors and windows to every one of their customers.

Recent issues of the medical journals have devoted much space to literature on the fly and its menace to health, and a vigorous campaign has been started against the pest. Once flies were considered merely a nuisance, but since science began delving successfully for causes of the ills that afflict mankind it has been discovered that they were the carriers of disease germs and primarily responsible for many of the fevers that are deadly during the summer months. In the interest of health it therefore becomes important to devise means of eliminating flies or reducing their number by as many millions as possible. Screens and due attention to the flies that manage to force entry to the house afford protection, but the greatest safeguarding of health in general lies in preventing the pests from breeding.

SHOWS NEED OF PLAY FOR COUNTRY CHILD
Milwaukee, May 13th (Special)—Teaching the teachers in the rural schools to teach country children how to play is the mission of Miss Maynard Downes of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association on a tour which this morning of the County Training Schools. Starting last week at New London, Miss Downes is visiting in turn Grand Rapids, Merrill, Antigo, Eau Claire, Rice Lake, Mellen, Viroqua and Reedsburg.
Teaching the principles of health unconsciously through play is the primary object of the work that Miss Downes is doing. This work which she is introducing in the County Training Schools is unique as a part of the rural school program, it being an effort to extend to the country child some of the benefits of organized play which the child in the large cities gains from the wisely supervised public playgrounds.
Demonstrations of various games which may be played with advantage to the health of the children in rural schools where play ground equipment is not available, are being given at each County Training School, the demonstration being with the aid of children from the community in which the session is held. Breathing exercises so arranged that they seem like play are also given. Another interesting line of work in which Miss Downes is seeking to gain the cooperation of the rural teachers, is the health instruction through the medium of story telling. Miss Downes was formerly a children's entertainer at Chautauque meetings and has written and arranged a number of stories which are entertaining and at the same time teach some vital health truth.
"Children need to be taught how to play," says Miss Downes. "Unless they are taught they generally spend their recess periods standing around waiting for the bell to ring. The best games for rural school work are the simplest and those which provide exercise for as many children as possible at the same time. There is almost constant activity, while games played with a basket ball are also splendid exercise besides being great fun. On the other hand, I do not care for ring games like drop the handkerchief

Maynard Downes of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association Speaks Before County Training Schools

Milwaukee, May 13th (Special)—Teaching the teachers in the rural schools to teach country children how to play is the mission of Miss Maynard Downes of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association on a tour which this morning of the County Training Schools. On the other hand, I do not care for ring games like drop the handkerchief because comparatively few children get the benefit. Teachers tell me that it sometimes seems almost impossible to get children to play. That is why I am so interested in finding new games for them. I believe that games and story telling can be made invaluable in giving health instruction in the schools, and I have found that the country schools welcome both games and stories as eagerly as do the children in the city.

Postal Savings Extension
Every person in the United States ten years old or over may open an account in a postal savings bank after July 1st, according to an instructive leaflet on the Postal Savings System just issued by Postmaster General Burleson. This important extension of the service will be made possible by permitting persons living in communities so sparsely settled as not to justify the designation of their local post offices as regular postal savings banks to open accounts by mail.
Governor Dockery, Third Assistant Postmaster General who has direct supervision of postal savings, was so impressed by appeals from all over the country to open postal savings accounts by mail that he took up the task some weeks ago of working out a feasible and safe method for meeting a demand well illustrated in a letter from a Saline County Missourian who resides many miles from a postal savings bank.
"Having a few hundred dollars saved from fifty years of hard and arduous labor and skipping economy on the part of my wife and myself, we concluded to deposit it in the Postal Savings Bank of—, We wrote to the postmaster of that place and received reply to the effect that none but patrons of that office could deposit in that office which is very disappointing news to us. Our little farm is not large enough to support us and land is so high that it is impossible for us to buy more with what little we have saved and we are so old that we can't labor much now and we would be glad to lay by at least enough to put us away in decency."
Under the plan adopted by the Postmaster General for opening accounts by mail an intending depositor, residing where there is no regular designated postal savings bank will apply to his local postmaster who will see that necessary identification data is prepared and forwarded to a nearby post office authorized to receive deposits. The intending depositor will then be given a check to forward his first and subsequent deposits by money order or registered mail direct to the post office of the banking point which which receives or certifies the deposit. He may withdraw or any part of his postal savings by mail and on demand together with any interest that may be due him.

The new leaflet points out that any person ten years old or over may open an account in his or her own name; that an account may be opened by a married woman free from any control or interference by her husband; that post office officials are forbidden to disclose to any person, except the depositor, the amount of any deposits; that withdrawals may be made without previous notice and that the Government guarantees to repay all deposits on demand with accrued interest.
The leaflet will soon be printed in 22 foreign languages for distribution for local post offices. The foreign born citizen has taken very kindly to postal savings, and literature in his own language will be of great assistance to him. In a recent article Postmaster General Burleson commented on the foreign depositor as follows:
Upwards of 500,000 depositors now have accounts in the Postal Savings System and they represent every nationality on the earth. They also represent almost every known occupation—professional men, theatrical people, mechanics, laborers, fishermen, pack peddlers, etc. But the majority are wage earners and of this class the foreign born largely predominate. A census of depositors taken by the Post Office Department shows that approximately 40 per cent 200,000 of the depositors are foreign born citizens and they own more than 50 per cent of the deposits—splendid evidence of the confidence of our newly acquired citizens in the ability and good faith of their adopted country to fulfill its obligations.
There is another reason which led emigrants unfamiliar with our language and business methods, to turn to the Government to safeguard their humble savings, and that reason is the disastrous experiences many of them have had by the failures of bogus private banks offered by swindlers, of their own tongue who have preyed mercilessly upon their loneliness and credulity.
Postal Savings receipts have broken all records the past year. During the eight months prior to April 1st there was a net gain in deposits of $19,000,000 as against a gain of $8,000,000 for the same months the year before. Thousands of new accounts have been opened and the millions made up largely of hidden savings have been turned back into the channels of trade just at a time when there was pressing demand for every dollar.
Have your names printed at this office. We do good work, give prompt service and charge reasonable prices.

"Clean Up and Paint Up"

A WORD FROM THE WOMEN.
Say! ain't it funny what a lot of things men overlook. They seem to feel we women never do a thing but cook. They really think they run the house and everything that's in it. But gee! they couldn't get along without us for a minute.
We women are the ones who keep the woodwork shining bright—Who buy enamel for the bath to make it glistening white.
We women varnish tables and we buy the stains for chairs.
And we buy the proper colors to brighten up the stairs.
We women are the ones who say what paint goes on the halls—Which shades for parlor and for den—for baseboards and for walls.
We women stain and wax the floors, or else we make the man.
We women are the ones who keep the whole town spic and span.
