CHANGES IN THE CHEST CLINIC PREMIUM LIST AT KEWASKUM

County-wide interest is being manifested in the Traveling Free Chest Clinics of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association, which are to be held in Washington county in the following towns: West Bend, September 14, Court House, Kewaskum, September 15, Library. The clinic at Kewaskum was secured through the Christmas seal sale. The hours will be from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

An important phase of the preliminary work is that of reaching all families in which there is or has been a known case of tuberculosis and of inducing them to attend the clinic, and to bring every member, especially the children, in for examination. Miss Cecilia Geisinger, county nurse, with the co-operation of people interested in health is actively engaged in this preliminary work.

"We place the greatest stress on the importance of contact cases of tuberculosis being examined frequently," says a statement from the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association. "We have found, as so often in our clinic work, that several members of families, which have been exposed to tuberculosis, have become infected with this disease, although they do not in the least suspect it, until the careful chest examination reveals this fact, a person in the early stages is not sick, and very often does not feel the need of going to a doctor until the disease has made such progress that it is a very difficult matter to check it. Children are especially susceptible to the disease, although very often the disease does not develop until they have grown up. It is to find these unknown cases of tuberculosis in the very early stages when proper care will bring about a cure and to prevent the spread of the disease, that the state association sends its traveling Chest Clinic into all parts of the state to take free medical examination and expert advice right to the doors of the people. In this way, tuberculosis will be prevented from sweeping through the community, as is so often the case. No one should be afraid to know they have tuberculosis—knowing is the only chance to get well and any person can recover from the disease if he takes the proper course in time."

In addition to the contact cases, the clinic is also especially urged to make sure of their condition by an examination at the clinic. Persons having any symptoms of tuberculosis, or who for any reason are concerned about their lungs; children that are 10 percent underweight; persons who have pneumonia, and pneumonia and other diseases of the lungs; ex-cisive men pronounced tuberculosis, and men rejected in the draft for lung trouble and former sanatorium patients.

All Ready But The Horses

TO ENLARGE SHERIFF OLWIN MANY CANDIDATES TAILORING BUSINESS GOING STRONG IN THE FIELD

I. S. Aaron, the Chicago Tailor, who for over a year has successfully conducted a tailor shop in Kewaskum, has decided to enlarge the business by opening branch shops in all the surrounding villages of Kewaskum. Mr. Aaron has taken into partnership an expert tailor, Mr. S. Gelick of Chicago, who has just moved his family and household goods to this village, and is now busily engaged in the tailor shop. The purpose of opening branch offices in the surrounding villages, is to have people living in those places bring their clothes to that place on certain days and times when Mr. Aaron will be there. The clothes will then be taken care of at the local shop. Messrs. Aaron and Gelick are now in a repair shop on both men's and women's clothes and gents. All work will be nice and neatly done, and given prompt attention.

The places where they will open branch offices and the day and hours are as follows: Mr. Aaron will be at Tuesday, Sept. 5, at Madison at Marjorie Gilroy's place. Time 9 a. m. to 12 noon.

September 6th—Beechwood at Mrs. Chas. Koehn's place, from 1 to 5 p. m.

September 7th—Boltoville, at Burkholder's place, from 1 p. m. to 5 p. m.

HIGHWAY OPENING FOND DU LAC CO. ONE BIG EVENT FAIR'S 60th YEAR

(By Browne in Milwaukee Journal). The most momentous event in the history of Wisconsin highways—the opening of Highway 15 to through traffic—was celebrated with due ceremony at 3 p. m. Saturday by a delegation of state, county and city officials and groups from all organizations interested in good roads promotion in Wisconsin. The ceremony was held a short distance south of the Strapp bridge, two miles south of St. Lawrence.

More than 300 persons gathered about the spot, where two wide bands of ribbons stretched across the highway. Twice that many remained in their cars, while traffic, both north and south, was suspended while the programme was carried through in an unusual climax, when Elizabeth Frey, little daughter of L. W. Frey of the Washington county highway commission, untied the center streamers and followed by five little flower girls, strewn blossoms on the newly laid concrete, gave the opening of Highway 15 official recognition.

Prior to the opening ceremony, an introductory talk was made by Carl Pick of the Washington county commission. The dedication address was delivered by John A. Hazelwood, Milwaukee, president of the Wisconsin highway commission. Mr. Hazelwood said Highway 15 had formerly been a "territorial road" and that even in 1836 the promoters had been a rough, crude trail between Milwaukee and Fond du Lac. He said the route was still practically the same.

"The Wisconsin stretch known as Highway 15 is only a portion of the great road which runs from northern Michigan to St. Louis," he said. "I now make a plea that this 1,000-mile highway be known as the Greater Sheridan road. Let's give it a name that all can share in." Mr. Hazelwood declared Wisconsin the leading state in road construction and bridge and culvert building, and said it was second to none when it came to maintenance and road markings. "The finishing touches put on Highway 15 today," he said, "see a triumph any state would be proud of. I fully believe that Highway 15 is one of the greatest roads in the middle west, if not in the entire country." In concluding Mr. Hazelwood made a plea for beautiful highways, that the trees along waysides be kept standing, and that every possible device be used to make them scenic as well as transportation routes.

Other speakers who paid tribute to the highway included Frank Cannon, Madison, secretary of the Wisconsin Good Roads association; W. O. Hotchkiss, Madison, director of the Wisconsin natural history and geological survey and secretary of the Wisconsin highway commission; J. T. Donaghey, Madison, maintenance engineer of the highway commission; and Henry P. Schmidt, district attorney of Washington county. Mr. Hotchkiss is known as the "father of the good roads movement in Wisconsin."

The different county representatives present included Milwaukee county, C. C. Jacobs, president of the Good Roads Association of Wisconsin; Claude Weymouth, highway division engineer; A. Hanson, mayor of Watonsa; William Coffey, county business manager; Fred Oefflein; E. A. Howard of the highway commission, and Les Broid of the Portland Cement association.

Washington county was represented by Louis W. Frey, Jacob Leicht, Alfred B. Froehlich, August Schauer, Carl Pick, Henry P. Schmidt, Charles Johnson, county highway commissioner, and C. A. R. Distelhorst, county engineer.

Fond du Lac county had present Jack McCullough, county engineer; Geo. Trevelan, county highway commissioner; John Rosenbaum, secretary of the highway commission; F. Henning, patrol superintendent, and Chas. Atkins.

A. R. Hirst, state highway engineer, wired his regrets from Madison, saying that unavoidable delay had made it impossible for him to arrive on time.

IN MEMORY

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear mother, Mrs. Marie Jung, who passed away one year ago Aug. 31, 1922.

In her lonely grave she sleeps,
And the shadows onward fall,
As our loving hearts are weeping,
No more her presence we can call.
Do not ask us if we miss her,
Oh there's such a vacant place
Oh we think we hear her footsteps,
Or we see her smiling face.
A loving mother true and kind,
No friend on earth like her we'll find
But in our hearts she lives on,
It is true you're gone but not forgotten.

Your memory shall never fade,
Our lonely hearts still ever linger
Around the grave where you are laid
May God grant you eternal rest,
Sadly missed by surviving children.

THE BIG MUSKEG

By VICTOR ROUSSEAU

"GOOD NIGHT, MOLLY!"

STRETCHING—Looking over Big Muskeg, a seemingly impossible road in the path of the Missouri Pacific, the engineer and his assistants, the crew, are considering the situation. A rifle shot in the distance, the sound of a train, the sight of a distant light, are all things that they must be prepared to meet. The men are scattered about the track, some are working on the road, some are watching the train. The night is dark, the stars are shining brightly in the sky. The sound of the train is heard in the distance. The men are all looking towards the train with interest and anticipation.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued.

Kitty rose. "I don't know what I've done right," she said. "I hope you won't come to have any feelings against me, dear. Only you didn't seem to mind me saying anything to do with Mr. Boyer. If you feel that you don't care for him."

Day by day the trestling grew, and the embankment appeared about it until the first part was hidden under the permanent way. Thousands of feet of logs had gone into the building. Each day the engine pushed the load of logs further out upon the existing trestling structure. Then the pressure of the logs, tons of debris discharged through the frame of the trestling, and the engine went smoothly back toward the trestling, dragging the empty trucks behind it.

He took the road across the Muskeg. Wilton saw the girl upstairs, at the factor's side. A book was on her knees and a lighted lamp behind her. She was not talking to him, however, but staring out the window, and yet she did not see Wilton as he came to the door.

"Who did it?" asked Wilton, speaking slowly and carefully. "Jules, who was still watching him, suddenly turned and, with lightning movements, drew a caricature of Lee Chambers on the workwood of the wall.

In any case, Wilton could afford to take no further chances with him. It would serve no purpose to accuse him of having tampered with the trestling. He would give him a post somewhere where he could do no harm, and thus get rid of him. Fighting about the burning rage in his heart, he went down the road toward the shack which the engineer occupied. This was a reconstructed shed. There was only one room in it, but Chambers had asked to have this rather than share the quarters of the other engineers.

At his knock she came downstairs more slowly than usual. When she opened the door to him he saw that she was trembling. Her cheek was icy cold beneath his kiss.

"Good-Night, Molly," he said. "I've heard you say that you don't care for him. I hope you won't come to have any feelings against me, dear. Only you didn't seem to mind me saying anything to do with Mr. Boyer. If you feel that you don't care for him."

"I guess he took it with him," said Andersen. "Have the staples pulled out at once." Wilton waited, fuming, until Andersen reappeared with the tool. The foreman wrenched out the staples and Wilton burst open the door. As he had expected, the shack was completely empty of all Chambers' belongings.

He took the road across the Muskeg. Wilton saw the girl upstairs, at the factor's side. A book was on her knees and a lighted lamp behind her. She was not talking to him, however, but staring out the window, and yet she did not see Wilton as he came to the door.

It was his habit to talk, although the deaf-mute could not hear his voice, Jules had an instinctive faculty of understanding. He looked at Wilton and nodded back.

Three months later an engine pushed two ballast trucks from the west to the east shore of Big Muskeg. The swamp was spanned. The corduroy had been laid upon the sink-holes, and had borne the ballasting. The trestling ran from bank to bank and carried the metals firmly, but the foundation was only as yet laid halfway, and the final part had yet to be made.

Gold Miners Entombed at 4,500-Foot Level by Fierce Blaze.

COMPANIONS GIVE UP HOPE

Governor of State Advised by Assistant Forester That 32 Americans and 20 Aliens Perished in the Deep Shaft.

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 20.—Latest reports to the state department of forestry from Jackson indicate that 52 miners, 32 of whom are Americans, lost their lives in the Argonaut mine there. It was learned through a telegram sent to Governor Stephens by W. D. Rider, assistant state forester.

Discovered by Workers. Jackson, Cal., Aug. 20.—The fire in the Argonaut gold mine was discovered shortly after midnight when Clarence Bradshaw and two other miners left their companions on the 4,500-foot level and started for the surface. When they reached the 3,000-foot level they found it blazing. They made a mad dash through the flames and arrived safely at the surface.

Believed Dead. However, the entrapped miners may not live to be rescued in this fashion. In fact, experienced miners hold grave fears that they are already dead.

RAINED OUT. History furnishes frequent instances of the destructive powers of torrential rainstorms. When the United States took over the Philippines one of their first tasks was the construction of a railway road, 50 miles long, between Dapitan and Begulo, at a cost of $2,000,000. It was opened with imposing ceremony, and one of the speakers declared that it had been so well and truly built that it would "endure long
