

HANG WRECKERS, DEMANDS DAVIS

Harding's Secretary of Labor Brands Radicals as Foes of Workers.

SPEAKS AT MOOSEHEART, ILL.

Cabinet Member Deplores Instances of Violence in Connection With the Prevailing Strikes—Says Strife Must End.

Mooseheart, Ill., Sept. 6.—American labor has made great strides in the last year, Secretary Davis of the Labor department declared here in a Labor day address. In spite of unemployment, he declared, it has fought off all attempts to decrease wage levels set up during the war, and safely passed a war crisis. Working men "grown accustomed to comforts in life not known before," he added, "will now find them preserved throughout."

Secretary Davis deplored instances of violence in connection with strikes, declaring that "no gibbet can be built too high for those who execute such dastardly deeds, as the deliberate wrecking of a train recently at Gary, Ind."

"All the power of law and order in America must be extended to the utmost to exterminate the class of men who turn back to the dark ages in their disregard of property and human life," the secretary declared. "They can have no part in our American of today."

"Those who planned or countenanced such horrors, he said, were equally guilty with the actual perpetrators. Referring specifically to the recent 'slaughter' of workmen in the state of Illinois, Mr. Davis described it as a 'revolting spectacle' which 'advanced not a jot the cause in which the men fell.'

"Despite the pressure of a tremendous mass of unemployed, despite the efforts of a few reactionary employers who selfishly sought to take advantage of the distress of labor and the nation, we have kept the general level of wages up," he declared. "I am safe in saying the average compensation of the man who toils today is within a few per cent of what it was a year ago, and some have received an increase."

"Today we have some men in industry who protest with noisy virtue that they favor high wages, and that they pay high wages. A little inquiry into these deceptive averages, however, soon reveals that the high wages are to specialized workers, so-called experts, who work with plat and map. This appeals to me not at all, because they as a class are able to take care of themselves. I am for a saving wage for the man who works with his hands, the man who, in the words of the Scripture, 'earns his bread with the sweat of his brow,' the man who swings a hammer or a pick."

"Confirmation of high wage levels, Mr. Davis predicted, would bring prosperity in the United States, because it would increase the nation's consuming power. There have been industrial outbreaks, he said, referring to the mines, rail and textile strikes, which have meant incalculable loss, and loss that will reach every man, woman and child in America."

"One great prerequisite there is to continued progress on the path of prosperity," he continued, "what is essential upon both sides of each controversy. They open the way to the cruel and calculating, the blood-thirsty and irresponsible."

U. S. GOVERNMENT GETS INJUNCTION

Railway Workers Are Restrained From Interference With Operation.

DAUGHERTY GOES TO CHICAGO

Judge Wilkerson's Sweeping Injunction Apparently Ties Hands of the Union Officials—Is Aimed at B. M. Jewell.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—The United States government has assumed "first place in the nation-wide railroad strike," Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general of the United States, was an injunction in Federal court restraining the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor from interference with operation of the roads of the country.

Mr. Daugherty came to Chicago unheralded. He appeared before Judge James H. Wilkerson in Federal court at ten o'clock as demand what is claimed to be the most sweeping injunction against labor ever attempted in this country.

Judge Wilkerson granted a temporary injunction. The defendants were notified that they may appear in court September 11 and show cause why it should not be made permanent.

B. M. Jewell, president of the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor, is the chief individual named in the injunction. But scores of other union officials are named.

Immediately after the injunction was granted scores of deputy United States marshals hurried away to serve the process. They will be carried to every part of the country.

"Here are the high points in what the injunction prohibits the strikers from doing: Issuing interviews or statements. Using their funds to carry on the strike. Picketing. Holding parades. Urging friends to quit the service of the roads.

Judge Wilkerson in granting the injunction, said Mr. Daugherty's petition "involved the fundamental principles of the government of the United States."

"The 'open shop'—the right of every man to accept employment—was stressed by the attorney general. 'Tomorrow it will be said by some persons, more malicious than truthful, that this proceeding is intended as a death blow to the unions,' he said, 'and inasmuch as falsehood travels twice as fast as truth, let me today state the truth in its way in advance—that in my judgment this movement is necessary for the protection and preservation of the unions themselves.'

"The government of the United States is not opposed to labor unions if they perform such functions as can be performed in law in America. 'Never while the labor unions limit activities to legitimate acts and lawful pursuits not injurious to society, at least while I speak and to the extent that I can speak for the government of the United States, shall a blow be struck at them.'

LOOK WHO CAME UP WITH THE FIRST BUCKET

RECEIVERS FOR ALTON U. S. MARKET REPORT

First Big Railroad to Fall During Strike.

Coal War Principal Contributing Cause of Failure—Unable to Meet Expenses for Several Years.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—The Chicago & Alton railroad was placed under a federal receivership here. It is the first big road to fail during the present period of industrial unrest.

The bankruptcy petition was filed before Federal Judge George A. Carpenter by attorneys representing the Texas company (oil), holding a claim of $33,000 against the road. The petition was not fought by the company.

The coal strike was the principal contributing cause of the failure, according to Sias H. Strawn, attorney for the receivers. Mr. Strawn said the Chicago & Alton is one of the heaviest coal-consuming roads in the Mississippi valley. An immense tonnage is hauled from the Illinois coal fields to the Great Lakes and to St. Louis and Kansas City. The coal strike became effective in April. Since then revenues of the road have steadily fallen.

The railroad strike proved costly. One division of the road was tied up by a walkout of firemen and trainmen. For several years the company has been unable to meet its expenses, according to Mr. Strawn. The company is weighed down with bond issues aggregating $31,000,000 and $14,000,000 in unpaid interest on current bills.

"The company is admittedly insolvent and no opposition was made to the creditor's motion for the appointment of a receiver," said Mr. Strawn. "Everything will be done to effect a reorganization which will place the road on a more firm financial basis."

It is generally believed two weeks will be required to straighten out the measure.

Washington, Sept. 2.—The soldier bonus bill passed the senate, 47 to 22, with 27 members absent or not voting. It was immediately sent to conference with Senators McCumber, Smoot and McLeary, Republicans, and Simmons and Walsh of Massachusetts, Democrats, named as conferees on the part of the senate.

WISCONSIN STATE NEWS

Milwaukee—Perfect weather and splendid patronage rewarded the efforts of State Fair association officials to give Wisconsin a great fair and combined with unusually strong exhibits and amusement features to make the 1922 State fair the greatest ever held. Visitors and officials united in declaring this year's fair a remarkable success. Gate receipts amounting to $108,709.10 and income from concessions estimated at $30,000, to which may be added other income from entries, percentages and miscellaneous payments paid to the fair close to a $470,000 total. Total attendance for the week was second greatest for any Wisconsin State fair, being exceeded only by that of 1925. The turnstiles recorded 256,628 admissions, as compared with 237,014 last year. The 1922 total attendance was 227,254. Waukesha county, in competition with all other counties in the state, carried off the high honors at the fair, winning the sweepstakes with a total of 6,228 points, based on awards granted exhibitors from that county. Milwaukee county took fifth place with 3,814 points. Rock county, with 1,412 points, took second place; Walworth, with 4,130, took third place; La Crosse, with 4,089 was fourth, and Jefferson, with 2,731, was sixth.

Milwaukee—Plans for boosting Wisconsin dairy products throughout the country will be discussed at a joint meeting of committees representing the Wisconsin Dairy Council and the Wisconsin Bankers' association in the Hotel Pfister, Milwaukee, on Sept. 15. The plan is to raise a fund of approximately $2,500,000 to finance the movement. With this sum, an intensive advertising campaign will be started, informing the world that Wisconsin has 2,202,000 cows and that its butter, milk and cheese are superior to the products of other states.

Menominee—Two serious fires in Menominee did damage estimated at between $150,000 and $200,000. The first fire was at the state fair grounds, where two barns were burned. While the Menominee fire department was fighting this fire another blaze attributed to fireworks broke out in a store block, and this raged furiously and uncontrolled until the fire apparatus made the long run back from the fair grounds. On account of this delay the block was completely gutted.

Antigo—The Jim Chert apple orchard, five miles east of Antigo, is this year more than ever before one of the many wonders of upper Wisconsin. On the Chert 40-acre orchard the estimate of a 1,000 bushel crop is made. There are 28 varieties of apples in the crop and the trees are so heavily laden that it has been necessary for Mr. Chert to let a contract to prop up the branches. Under one tree there are 22 branches propped up.

Oconto—A complaint, recently sworn out by J. D. Angus, charging A. D. Grott with conducting Sunday dances at a summer resort in Oconto county, was dismissed in Justice Stuekel's court at Gillett. It was shown that the Wisconsin statutes do not provide a penalty for operating a dance hall on Sunday, but that those who attend such diversions are liable to prosecution.

Birchwood—Sawyer county will receive about five carloads of picnic acid from the new government consignment recently received in this state. The explosive will be used in land clearing. Picric acid is a saving to Sawyer county farmers and settlers and at the present cost of dynamite, $5,000 will be saved.

Madison—Jimmy Z'Amico, 45 years old, was shot to death in Madison while in his meat market. Several revolver and shotgun shots were fired. The slayers escaped. Police expressed a belief that a family feud was responsible. Z'Amico's brother, Angelo, Chicago saloonkeeper, was shot in a similar manner a month ago in Chicago.

Marquette—The Rev. Mr. Fox, nephew of the late Bishop J. J. Fox of Green Bay, who for many years was pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes church, Marquette, has been named pastor of the Catholic church in Lena. He was stationed in Severson before entering the United States army as a chaplain during the world war.

Monroe—Peace officers of Green county are to make a campaign on automobile drivers who refuse to dim their lights in passing other cars at night. Several accidents, some of them serious, have occurred lately on this account. Offenders are to be brought into court on charges of reckless driving.

Waukesha—Two prisoners held in the county jail at Waukesha on a charge of robbing a Soo Line freight train, escaped from the prison by cutting their way from their cells and through iron-barred windows and then dropping 30 feet to the ground.

Solon Springs—Five kittens joined together at the tails is the freak family born to a cat owned by Edward Cayo, a farmer near Solon Springs, Douglas county. In all other respects the kittens appear normal.

Harding Backs Daugherty. Washington, Sept. 4.—If the federal injunction obtained by Attorney General Daugherty at Chicago falls to solve the rail strike problem, other and more drastic steps will be taken. This was made plain at the White House.

Madison—A settler in Wisconsin who acquires more than 40 acres of uncleared land is entitled to three years' exemption from taxation on the property if he devotes the land to agricultural purposes. R. M. Hoyt, deputy attorney general, held. If he clears and devotes to agricultural purposes more than 40 acres the amount upon which he can claim exemption is limited to 40 acres. Should he clear less than 20 acres a farmer is not entitled to tax exemption.

Hurley—Formal protest on the assessment against the Odanah Iron Co. and the Harmony Iron Co. was made before the board of review at Hurley by attorneys for the companies. The assessment against the Odanah company was increased from $138,000 to $450,000 and that against the Harmony company from $52,000 to $205,000. The Harmony company contends that the Minniewawa and Germania mines have not been producing for 10 years.

Fond du Lac—In spite of the fact that no one pays any attention to the curfew anyway, Mayor R. D. Haentze, Fond du Lac, is planning an effort to have the hour changed from 9 p. m. to 10 p. m. The Fond du Lac ordinance has been on the books since 1889, and the various fire stations ring the bell every night. Mayor Haentze says that if the hour were changed parents would be more likely to feel that their children should heed the bell.

Neillsville—Dr. A. Matheson, Neillsville, 72, was shot twice by his wife, who is 32, after a quarrel over their three children. The couple separated two weeks ago. The shooting occurred at a camp near Black River Falls, where Mrs. Matheson and the children had been staying. Mrs. Matheson had left Neillsville with the children after her husband had obtained a court order making him their guardian, and ordering Mrs. Matheson to give up the children to her husband.

Birchwood—Sixty head of choice Holstein cattle left Barron county last week for Mexico City. Forty head will be shipped from Mexico City to farms in Spain. The shipment was purchased by Dr. D. A. McLane, New Orleans, to get high-grade cattle to build up the herds in Mexico and Spain. He will make another purchase for foreign shipment in a month and will send 200 heifers as foundations for better cattle in the two countries.

Sheboygan—The Rev. J. P. Van Treck, who was raised in the town of Wilson, Sheboygan county, educated in part in Sheboygan and later at St. Francis college, and for more than 40 years pastor of St. Peter Claver church, died at the Sheboygan hospital. Father Van Treck was one of the best known clergymen in Wisconsin, and had taken part in the dedication of more churches than any other pastor.

Whitehall—Moral responsibility for the death of Miss Helen Gunderson, 17, independence, who died from injuries suffered in an accident Aug. 20, when an automobile in which she was riding left the road and overturned, was fixed by a coroner's jury on Martin Peterson, 49, of Independence, driver of the car. The jury declared that Miss Gunderson's death was the result of negligence on the part of Peterson.

Fond du Lac—Soo line shops at Whitefish, abandoned in 1900, will be opened at once, according to an announcement made at Fond du Lac. The Waukesha shops in 1900 constituted one of the most important repair points in Wisconsin. Several carloads of machinery from the shops at North Fond du Lac are being shipped to Waukesha.

Madison—Evidence that Wisconsin passed through a serious influenza epidemic last winter and spring, when popular opinion classed the cases as nothing more than severe cold, is revealed by recent mortality figures compiled by the state board of health, which show 204 deaths due to the disease.

Manitowish—Rats were responsible for a $2,100 fire in the store owned by Mrs. Emma May, Manitowish. The loss was partly covered by insurance. The rodents gnawed into a case of matches, lighting them.

Madison—The fair season in Wisconsin has started and during the next month a number of counties throughout the state will hold their annual exhibits of livestock, farm products, school work and dairy exhibits.

Milwaukee—The demand for labor in Milwaukee is greater than the supply, according to Harry Lippart, superintendent of the governmental employment office.

Sheboygan—Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Kisten, Kistenbush, Sheboygan county, and their two daughters, narrowly escaped injury when the auto in which they were riding was hit by a North Western gravel train and wrecked. None of the four was even scratched.

Ripon—The seventy-sixth annual meeting of the State Medical Society of Wisconsin met, according to Dr. Rock Sleyster, secretary, Wauwatosa, held at Green Lake, Sept. 6, 7 and 8.

Eau Claire—The sixty-fourth annual convocation of the Wisconsin Grand Com-mandery of Knights Templar is to be held in Eau Claire Sept. 6 and 7, the second time in the history of the commandery that the annual session has been held outside of Milwaukee. More than 5,000 are expected to attend.

The Big Muskeg

Joe had succeeded. Big Muskeg was completed, and on the east slope the roadway of the line was being cleared way forward and paving out the way for the metals. Some grading would begin, Wilton's crew would start, and the engines would be moved ahead, and he would have time to think.

He decided that. He had not seen Molly or the factor since that night of the subsidence. He knew that they had paid more than one visit to the store, but he shrugged his shoulders and put it out of his mind.

The workers, after their months of restless labor, had begun to grow weary. There was restlessness in the camp. Once or twice Wilton had seen signs of liquor. He detected it in the morning up of work; he had smelled it in the bunkhouses; the penetrating odor of cheap alcohol, with its suggestion of gasoline.

Anderson, forestalling him, came to him about the time of this discovery. "They're getting that rot-gut again, Mr. Carruthers," he said. "I don't know where. I'm keeping my eyes peeled, but I ain't saying nothing."

"The best policy," said Wilton, "the new have worked hard. When this job's finished we'll let them slack up for a day or two. Then we'll get down to business on this proposition. But if you find out anything let me know at once."

A few days later came the spanning of the swamp. On the same afternoon a summons came from the court, together with a letter from Quinn. The police had at last picked up Papillon and Passpartout, and had recovered the rifle and transit compass. Wilton was wanted in Clayton to give evidence against the men.

The call was opportune. Wilton had already determined to put into execution a plan that he had formed. It was now October, and little more than two months remained before the season would be called. That would give Boywer the control of the Mississippi. Driven by the practical realization that he was working for Boywer, Wilton had resolved to go to Clayton as soon as the treating was completed, and try to raise the money to pay Phayre, who, he knew, would not renew the note.

Big Muskeg was spanned. And, on the strength of that, Wilton believed the time had come to give Joe's secret to the world. He would publish far and wide the secret of the wheat lands. He would establish sufficient confidence in the line to make the raising of a loan a possibility.

Before leaving he placed a night guard on duty over the office, and arranged with Anderson to have three or four reliable men on watch in the event of the laborers attempting to cross the portage. He went to Clayton and laid his statement before a directors' meeting. They heard him in frightful silence.

"That's an old story," said Curtis, the vice-president, when he had finished.

An angry wrangle followed, which led nowhere. They flatly refused to spend any money on advertising. All the while Phayre, leaning back in his chair, looked on and took no part in the proceedings.

"It comes to this," said Curtis finally, thumping the table energetically.

"I'm trying to, Will," said Kitty. "But what do you want me to do?"

"I'm proposing this for your sake, Kitty. If you sell your property in Winnipeg you can raise three or four hundred thousand. I believe I could borrow the rest. That will meet Phayre's loan, and you'll hold the line. It's the only way, because no bank would lend you money on the rest of your shares now, after Boywer's campaign against us. And he's made the most of the subsidence. It's speculative—what I'm suggesting. But Joe would have done it. And in a few years it'll mean millions."

"Are you sure, Will?" asked Kitty, eagerly.

"Not sure, Kitty, but nearly sure." "Will, you are Joe's executor. Do you advise me to take that risk?"

"No," said Wilton sharply. "But you just said—"

"As Joe's executor, I can't. It's not sound business. An executor dares not advise throwing away a certainty for a speculation. As Joe's executor—"

"Then why did you advise me to?" asked Kitty innocently.

"That's an old story," said Curtis, the vice-president, when he had finished.

"Well, here to increase our capital. The day has come to our reserves. We'll have to push straight toward our objective, the Transcontinental. Then we'll have the monopoly of a steady freight business."

He could not get them to listen to the story of the wheat lands. Wilton wanted to advertise it widely, to open it up to homesteaders. He had plans for elevators. But the directors, who resented Kitty's control, were dead against him, and he got no thanks for what he had done.

The following morning the Sentinel—Phayre's paper—came out with a cartoon showing a willow dropping her mite into a hot-water pail marked "Mississippi," which boiled over a slow fire of wheat stalks.

Somebody had betrayed the secret, thus forestalling Boywer and enabling him to open his campaign to deride it. But Wilton would not open his mind to suspicion.

He took counsel with Jim Betts. The old man was frankly pessimistic.

"It looks to me," he ruminated, "as if then two snakes'll get the line. Joe must have been mad, or mighty hard put, when he hypothesized them shares." He turned to Wilton. "What d'ye want to worry about it for, anyway?" he asked. "If Joe took a chance like that, he couldn't have felt too strong about it."

He laid his hand on Wilton's shoulder. "Whisky's good," he said in his old way. "So's ginger pop. But the mixture's—h—ll. So's women and business, boy. I'd help ye with that loan if I could see my way. But I can't. I've been stung too bad already, and I've got a grandson to look after. Ye'd better make terms with Phayre."

This was one of the worst blows that had fallen. If Betts had lost faith, who would have kept it? He understood the allusion to Kitty. Betts thought he was in love with her. Then so must other people.

He was due at the court that day, and gave his evidence. The half-broods received each six months of the penitentiary—a light sentence, on the jury's recommendation. Afterward Wilton had a talk with Quinn.

The two men had sullenly refused to give any reason for their flight. If the outlaw Hackett had advised them, they did not put it in that plan.

"The jury had believed that one of them had accidentally shot Joe, and that that had been the cause of their disappearance. So did Quinn, apparently."

"I'm afraid, Will, that we can't hope for anything fresh upon that subject," he said.

This business done, Wilton went to see Kitty, swallowing his pride. After all, it was for Joe that he was pleading. Kitty received him in the old friendly manner, with a touch of reserve that should have put him on his guard. But he began eagerly.

"Kitty," he said, "you know we've crossed the Muskeg."

Then Kitty showed her claws. "I was so glad when I heard of it, Will," she said. "You've been trying to do that all the summer, haven't you?"

"Why—yes, of course," said Wilton, looking at her in astonishment.

She put her hand on his arm with a caressing gesture. "Do tell me what a muskeg is, Will," she said. "I've heard you speak of it so often, and I can never remember the meaning of those words."

And with that the last of Wilton's illusions fell from him, leaving him face to face with stark reality. He faced Kitty very gently.

"Kitty, listen to me now," he said. "I've been in this game for Joe—and for you. When Joe died I saw that we'd have to fight hard to keep the line. I saw a lot of money in it, later, and meanwhile you'd have enough to live on, so that we could use your capital and your control to carry out Joe's plans."

"Yes, Will," said Kitty, with the air of one who listens wearily to a lesson.

"Joe's borrowing on those shares has changed everything. The loan has to be repaid before the year is out. If it isn't, you lose the line. They'll wreck it, and they'll wreck your fortune, and that of the other investors. Then they'll reconstruct. When the line has ceased to have any value at all, Boywer and Phayre will have a new line of their own. Do you understand?"

"I'm trying to, Will," said Kitty. "But what do you want me to do?"

"I'm proposing this for your sake, Kitty. If you sell your property in Winnipeg you can raise three or four hundred thousand. I believe I could borrow the rest. That will meet Phayre's loan, and you'll hold the line. It's the only way, because no bank would lend you money on the rest of your shares now, after Boywer's campaign against us. And he's made the most of the subsidence. It's speculative—what I'm suggesting. But Joe would have done it. And in a few years it'll mean millions."

"Are you sure, Will?" asked Kitty, eagerly.

"Not sure, Kitty, but nearly sure." "Will, you are Joe's executor. Do you advise me to take that risk?"

"No," said Wilton sharply. "But you just said—"

"As Joe's executor, I can't. It's not sound business. An executor dares not advise throwing away a certainty for a speculation. As Joe's executor—"

"Then why did you advise me to?" asked Kitty innocently.

"That's an old story," said Curtis, the vice-president, when he had finished.

"Well, here to increase our capital. The day has come to our reserves. We'll have to push straight toward our objective, the Transcontinental. Then we'll have the monopoly of a steady freight business."

He could not get them to listen to the story of the wheat lands. Wilton wanted to advertise it widely, to open it up to homesteaders. He had plans for elevators. But the directors, who resented Kitty's control, were dead against him, and he got no thanks for what he had done.

The following morning the Sentinel—Phayre's paper—came out with a cartoon showing a willow dropping her mite into a hot-water pail marked "Mississippi," which boiled over a slow fire of wheat stalks.

Somebody had betrayed the secret, thus forestalling Boywer and enabling him to open his campaign to deride it. But Wilton would not open his mind to suspicion.

"Because I thought you cared for the line, Kitty. Because I thought you shared Joe's dream for the future of the Mississippi. I thought that, when if you lost, you'd have your house here, and your forty thousand, and you'd feel—that you'd done what Joe would have wanted. As your executor I say, sell out to Phayre before it's too late. At least—at least—"

He could get no further. Kitty looked up into his face. "Will, I know how you feel," she said softly. "I'm so sorry. I've done what you wanted, Will. But I haven't done it for Joe. I've done it for you. Will, you've made your own mistakes. You've never understood me. It's you I want to help; it's you I want my money for, Will."

Afterward Wilton could not imagine how he had found strength to resist her. With Molly lost, Jim Betts himself counseling surrender, and Kitty caring nothing for the line, why did he not let it go? In that black hour the temptation of her presence, the human love that was his for the taking, screamed their weak counsel in his ears.

It may have been the fiber of Puritan ancestors, or simply the inborn instinct to fight to the end, that gave him his strength. But he did not know how he left her till he found himself in the street.

He went to the bank, the last place, and the last, hopeless effort, face doomed to failure. He went into Phayre's office.

"Good morning, Mr. Carruthers," said the president. "What can I do for you?"

"Big Muskeg's bridged," said Wilton. "That should send up the value of the shares. I suggest that you renew Mr. Bostock's loan when it falls due."

"My dear Mr. Carruthers, that's a queer proposition to make to me!" said Phayre. "You're not a simpleton. Need I say anything more?"

"You know the collateral is good." "Good? It's splendid! I only wish all our paper was as reliable."

"Well? Other banks may think the same—"

"But they won't," said Phayre, smiling. "In ten years, when those wheat lands are in bearing, this will be the newest granary of Canada. Only, they don't know it."

"How do you know it, then?" Phayre chuckled and began to drum his fingers on the desk.

"You pledged your word to the directors," he answered. "Of course, there were rumors of it before. But your word is good enough for me, Mr. Carruthers. I'm a booster for Clayton. I believe in those wheat fields—and I'm going to have them. Better throw up your job, Carruthers, and take one with us. What do you say?"

"I'm going back to work for you and Mr. Boywer right away," said Wilton. "At least I guess it looks like coming to that. But I've got my job to finish Joe's going to do it."

CHAPTER X
The Abyssal Depths.

Molly did not see Boywer for two months after Kitty's departure. His next visit was as unexpected as all of his. It was in the afternoon, and the girl came back from a walk along the shore to see him seated in the store, sleek, red, and self-satisfied, and her father standing beside him, with that look of awful fear on his face. She had a momentary impression as if the factor stood up like a well man; but, as she entered, the right leg went dragging under him, and the arm fell limp at his side.

"How d'ye do, Miss McDonald?" called Boywer. "I just dropped in to have a chat with the factor in passing. Big things happening here, eh? The Mississippi's mighty slow in crossing Big Muskeg."

Molly flamed at the insult to Wilton. She looked at her father, and the expression on his face went to her heart. She turned swiftly to Boywer.

"I don't want you to come here again," she said.

He started up, spluttering. "We don't want you," she continued. "And we won't be persecuted by you. There's law in this country."

He burst into mocking laughter. "You never spoke a truer word, Miss McDonald!" he cried. "I came here as a friend."

"You can go as an enemy," she reported. "And you can go now. And remember—there are men about here who can use a whip!"

He glared at her, but went without a word, and Molly ran to the factor.

"You can count on me, Mr. Boywer," answered Kitty, loathing herself and him. "But how about yourself? I understand from you that you were going slow. I hope you're not going too slow?"

"I'm going to speed things up soon," he answered, frowning. "What's happened helps things along. I don't know what the trouble was. I thought at first it was one of those lover's quarrels. But it's lasted. His face grew red. 'I went there,' he said thickly. 'She wouldn't have anything to say to me. Ordered me off the place.'"

Boywer leaned forward confidentially. "See here, Mrs. Bostock," he said. "If I get her out of the way—if I guarantee that Will Carruthers and she won't meet again, how'll that suit you?"

"You've changed your mind about marrying?"

"Maybe yes. Maybe no. I'm not a marrying man. Nobody is. It's generally an accident—or a trap. But I can promise you there'll be no trouble from that quarter. Also, that shall be out of the district before winter."

AGREE ON RAIL PEACE TERMS

Jewell Calls Union Executives to O. K. Pact Made in Secret Parley.

RAISE 7 CENTS FOR MEN

Compromise on Seniority Rights, But Temporary Workers Will Be Protected—Acceptance of the Plan Is Expected.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—The railroad strike is near settlement. A tentative peace agreement has been reached between representatives of the striking sleep crafts and representatives of the railroads. Final action is expected to be taken tomorrow.

Negotiations have been conducted secretly in the East, it became known here.

E. M. Jewell, president of the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor, directing head of the strike, is expected to reach Chicago today. He is scheduled to call a meeting of the 90 members of his policy committee. It is expected the committee will ratify the agreement.

The terms of the agreement have been closely guarded, but are said to provide that the railroads grant the men an increase of 7 cents an hour over the scale defined in the decision of the United States railroad board, against which the shippers struck.

Compromise on Seniority.

A compromise was effected on the matter of seniority right, but, according to information reaching here, most of the old employees will get their jobs back. It is expected that the most competent of the new men will be retained.

The conference, it was learned, was held within 50 miles of Washington. Mr. Jewell and other representatives of the striking shippers attended. The railroads were represented by executives from those roads that had already expressed willingness to accept the proposals suggested by President Harding as a basis of settlement. Those terms were rejected by the executives of a whole.

The "die hard" roads, it was pointed out, had not participated in the conference, but it was held with their knowledge and it was expected they would eventually accept the terms.

The meeting, it was said, was held without knowledge of the government, and the terms of agreement were made independently of the labor board or other government agencies.

Injunction Now a Problem.

What effect settlement of the strike would have on the injunction issued in Federal court here last Friday against the strikers was problematical. The unions might go ahead and fight the injunction, or it was said, a motion might be made to vacate it. It was also pointed out that the settlement of the strike might apply to certain roads, leaving the injunction in force.

Railroad executives claimed many of their old shippers have returned to work. The injunction gave them an excuse, it was said.

"The injunction gives the men an excuse to return to work," said Charles H. Markham, president of the Illinois Central. "Ninety per cent of them want to return to work. They have no feeling in the matter aside from some bitterness toward certain men in the unions."

In well-informed circles it was generally agreed that there will be some modification of the temporary injunction granted by Judge Wilkerson when a motion to make it permanent comes before him September 11. The court is expected to define the law on picketing, issuing statements and collecting and distributing funds.

Comparative quiet was reported from all strike centers. A few arrests were made for alleged violations of the injunction, but no drastic action was taken by government agents.

BODY OF GIRL IN SACK

Remains of Child About Twelve Years Old Found Floating in Missouri River.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 6.—The body of a girl, apparently about twelve years of age, found tied in a gunny sack and floating in the Missouri river near here, became the subject of a searching police inquiry.

The body was clad in a blue gingham dress and was wrapped in a gray blanket. There were no marks of identification. The body had evidently been in the water several days. The skull was fractured, and the nose had been crushed by a blow.

IRISH REBELS USE BOMBS

Lose One Killed and Two Wounded in Attack on Barracks in County Monaghan.

Belfast, Sept. 6.—Irregular forces made a fierce attack on the barracks at Carrickmacross, County Monaghan, at 2 a. m. They maintained a heavy fire on the front and rear with machine guns, rifles, revolvers and bombs. The 40 defenders, however, successfully withstood the attack. The irregulars lost one man killed and two wounded.

Crepe Negliges.

A negligee of white crepe is covered with a printed design in bright red. It is almost suggestive of one of those tablecloths that sometimes adorn kitchen tables in its persistent effect of red lines against a white background.

Wool Roses.

Wool roses were used formerly to trim the outfit bags. But now they are in high favor for trimming the elderdown bathrobe and felt slippers.

NEW U. S. JUSTICE

Ex-Senator Sutherland to Succeed John H. Clarke.

Supreme Court Judge to Retire at Age of 65—Wants to Return to Freedom of Private Life.

Washington, Sept. 6.—Resignation of John H. Clarke of Ohio as associate justice of the United States Supreme court and the appointment of ex-Senator George H. Sutherland (Utah) as his successor, were announced by the White House.

Justice Clarke's resignation will take effect September 18, on which date he will be sixty-five years old, the age of retirement for the federal judiciary. It is not wholly due to his age, however, that Justice Clarke is quitting. For some time it has been known that he has found the restraints of the United States Supreme court distasteful, and wished to return to the freedom of private life, where he could take part unhindered in political affairs and the discussion of public matters. As Justice Clarke himself put it, he desired to retire "in order to conform to his own philosophy of life and serve his neighbors and some public causes."

The resignation of Justice Clarke and the appointment of ex-Senator Sutherland will slightly change the complexion of the Supreme court. Justice Clarke's nomination to the Supreme court by President Wilson in 1916 aroused some criticism in conservative quarters because of his liberal tendencies. He lived up to his reputation, and usually joined with Judge Brandeis in minority opinions when the court split on big issues.

Mr. Sutherland is a conservative of widely recognized ability. His appointment will leave Justice Brandeis as the only "radical" member of the court, although Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes shows strong liberal sentiments when questions involving the rights of free speech are at stake.

Ex-Senator Sutherland is a close personal friend of President Harding. He was born in Buckinghamshire, England, in 1862, and received his education in the schools of Utah and at the University of Michigan. As a member of the senate his ability commended the respect of his colleagues and he established a reputation for his knowledge of international law.

U. S.-GERMANY DEAL HELD UP

Negotiations for Money Order Exchange Off for Present, It Is Said.

Washington, Sept. 6.—The Post Office department announced that inasmuch as Germany was reported to have terminated all money-order exchange transactions with all nations that negotiations between the United States and Germany for a money-order convention would for the time being be held up.

ASKS NEW PANAMA PACT

President Harding in Message to House Urges Present Treaty Be Replaced.

Washington, Sept. 6.—Abrogation of the present treaty arrangement with Panama, which he said was intended to operate only during the construction of the Panama canal, and the negotiation of a new treaty with that government was recommended to congress by President Harding.

WEDDING JOINS 2 FORTUNES

Miss Burnett, Heiress to $20,000,000, Bride of Guy L. Waggoner, a Texas Millionaire.

New York, Sept. 6.—The marriage here of Guy L. Waggoner and Miss Anne Burnett of Fort Worth, heirs to two of the largest fortunes in Texas, was announced by the bride's mother.

Crown Prince Is Still Alive.

Doorn, Holland, Sept. 6.—Rumors circulated in Berlin of the death of former Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm of Germany, who is staying here, with his father, were denied today by the latter's personal physician.

Movie Lore.

She had been reading "The Life and Letters of Sir Wilfrid Laurier" and had been enjoying, to the full, accounts of the thrilling political and historical factious which had been part of the growth of Canada.

She suggested the book to a friend of hers.

"Laurier? Laurier? Who was Laurier?"

"Why, don't you know? He was premier of Canada—he was one of Canada's most famous men."

"Oh, yes, yes, now I remember. I've seen his picture in the movies."

Isn't it often true that what we do not possess we want, but that which we have we do not appreciate?

Not What He Asked.

"So you go to school, do you, Bobby?" asked the clergyman of the ten-year-old hopeful of the Briggy household.

"Yes, sir," answered Bobby. "Let me hear how you spell 'bread'." "B-r-e-a-d."

"The dictionary spells it with an 'a,' Bobby."

"Yes, sir, but you didn't ask me how the dictionary spells it. You asked me how I spell it."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Marcel Bad but Will Try Again

French Orphan, Mascot of A. E. F. Brigade, Determined to Be American Citizen.

HAS BEEN DEPORTED TWICE

Returns as Sailor, Deserts Ship and Enlists in United States Army, but Will Be Sent Home a Third Time.

San Antonio, Tex.—Passed as the mascot of a brigade of the American army in France, Marcel Jules Dupuy, a French orphan boy, longed to become a citizen of the United States.

The recorded history of the boy began when a government transport returning to the United States in 1919 was found to have a little French stowaway among its stowaway passengers.

Adopted as Army Mascot.

Before that date his story was that of many of the children of France. His mother was dead and his father, an officer in the French army, was killed at the battle of Verdun.

When the transport reached New York, Jules was held by the Ellis island authorities to be sent back to France immediately under the immigration law, which provides that minors are not eligible into this country unless accompanied by a parent or guardian.

His American benefactor took the matter up with the immigration authorities at Washington, promised to support and educate the boy as his own son, and was allowed to take him in charge.

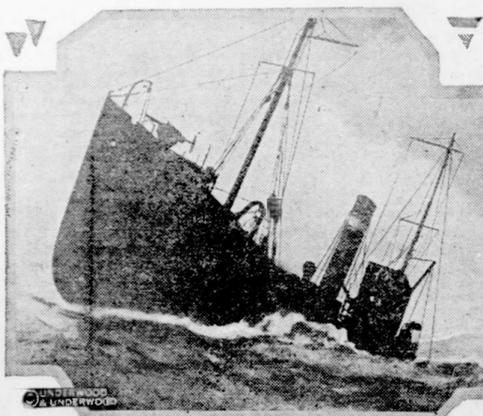

Ex-Premier Briand Is Seized as Hen Thief

Rouen, France.—Police headquarters here, following an epidemic of petty chicken-coop thefts, recently sent out instructions for all the commissaries of this district to be on the lookout for suspicious characters.

A young ambitious gendarme, recently appointed, halted a pedestrian along the high road. The gendarme escorted his prisoner to the nearest police station for further examination.

Upon arriving at the station-house the prisoner was allowed to telephone to the public prosecutor here, who ordered his immediate release.

Going to the Bottom With All Hands

This remarkable photograph shows the British steamer Blue Sky, which was lost with all hands recently, going to the bottom in the North sea.

Modern Girls Bad Tempered.

London.—A great English surgeon has recently expressed the view that bad-tempered women are sick women, especially women sick in a digestive sense.

The wise woman knows how to be foolish when her husband wishes to be clever.

COWGIRL SEAS ADVENTURE

Blanche Severny of Nebraska Going to Tour Europe Alone, Maybe as a Boy.

Lincoln, Neb.—Miss Blanche Severny of Round Valley, cowgirl and much-loved daughter, is going to tour Europe alone. She says she is going for the sole purpose of finding out if adventure is dead.

She is taking with her a wig and a boy's suit, and by this means she is able to transform an eighteen-year-old girl into a sixteen-year-old boy.

"I learned that he was at Camp Travis and that he had made illegal entry, and investigation of the case disclosed the boy's peculiar history and the fact that he has been deported twice before.

Drug Peddlers Grow Shifty

Those in London Are Driven to Novel and Ingenious Methods of Late.

POLICE ARE AFTER THEM NOW

Packages of Dope Are Stuck on Lamp-posts, Wrapped in Bus Tickets or Thrown into the Gutter in "Empty" Matchboxes.

London.—The prospect of severer measures against traffickers in cocaine is causing the vendors, according to G. T. Crook in the Daily Mail, to devise new and often subtle methods for disposing of the drug.

"Fourth lamp-post on the right," a trafficker whispers in the ear of a cocaine victim.

The other day a man was seen by a detective to be dropping rolled omnibus tickets on the pavement. The proceeding struck the detective as strange.

There is no end to the dodges resorted to by these wily dealers. One of the latest is to throw an apparently empty matchbox into the gutter.

Another Ingenious Scheme. One ingenious scoundrel carries his packets of cocaine in the turned-up ends of his trousers.

In reality he takes out a packet, places it beside a doorstep or on the pavement, and leaves it there for a "customer" to pick up.

A coursed man, who was caught, was observed to be loitering near unattended motorcars. It turned out that

TIPSY MOUSE DEFIES CATS

Staggers About Pittsburgh Police Station, Eluding "Dry" Agents, Frightening the Women Clerks.

Pittsburgh.—A heavy drinker, partaking freely of the contents of confiscated kegs and dripping stills in the county detective headquarters, appearing in the offices in a highly inebriated condition, frightening women clerks, but eluding the efforts of 30 sleuths to capture him, is the latest scandal in liquor law enforcement here.

The toper is often seen, but even when he is blind, staggering drunk, which seems to be most of the time, he is too fast and wary for detectives.

TURKEY'S BIRTHRATE FALLS OFF

Refugees in Russia and the Balkans May Be Brought Back Home.

Constantinople.—The decreasing birthrate in Turkey, and the gaps in the population brought about by the war, are causing serious alarm.

The Kitchen Cabinet

A mind without convictions is like a road that begins everywhere and leads nowhere.

WHAT TO EAT

Nicely cooked pork chops are always acceptable, though they are more often ordered in the restaurant or underdone.

Graham Gems.—Take one cupful of graham flour, one cupful of sour milk, one-half teaspoonful of soda, the same or less of salt, one egg, beaten, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and three tablespoonfuls of melted shortening.

Fried Egg Plant.—Pare egg plant, cut into slices one-half inch thick, then cut the slices into quarters, dust with salt and pepper, dip in beaten egg, roll in crumbs and fry in deep fat until a crisp and golden brown.

To Make Sauerkraut.—Select large white heads of cabbage; shred them very fine. Line the bottom and sides of a clean keg or barrel with the outside leaves of cabbage.

OLD FAITHFUL IS OUTDONE

New Yellowstone Geyser Starts Business on Fiftieth Anniversary of the National Park.

Yellowstone, Wyo.—With a prodigious cough on the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of Yellowstone park as a national playground, a new geyser spatulated into the air from an old hot mudhole, shooting higher than "Old Faithful" and snowing all previous records for altitude.

Why give a thought to that which has been done? No triumph can crown the past but in the future there is not a height where we from his cannot win a new delight.

UNUSUAL GOOD THINGS

For the vegetarian the following dish will be helpful in planning a main dish:

Vegetable Tamale Loaf.—Chop and brown one-fourth of a pound of salt pork, with one onion, one clove of garlic also chopped. Add one quart of tomatoes, a can of corn or hominy, one tablespoonful of chili powder, three tablespoonfuls of oil, one tablespoonful each of butter and salt.

MUTE HERO NOW TALKS AGAIN

French Surgeons Supply Rubber Tongue for Man Maimed in the World War.

Paris.—Modern surgery has accomplished another uncanny feat. Insertion of an artificial tongue, enabling Sergeant Villa, a Verdun wounded war veteran, to talk, has just been reported at the Val de Grace hospital.

When the surgeon had finished his job, there was only the base of the tongue left, and Dr. Eugene Quenelle set to work to fix up a rubber tongue and palate.

Steak and Peppers.—Spread over a round steak the following mixture: A cupful of crumbs, one small onion chopped, one cupful each of fresh chopped tomatoes and green peppers, seasoned with salt, pepper, cayenne and a pinch of poultry dressing.

As Big as Small Potato.

Charles, aged 5, was telling his father about a peculiar looking stone that he had found while playing in the yard.

Company Makes or Mares. It is certain that either wise bearing or ignorant carriage is caught, as men take disease, one of another; therefore let men take heed of their company.—Shakespeare.

Poetry is truth set to music.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

THE SHREWS' MATE

Once more the little fairy went to call on the little musk shrew to ask him about himself.

"You also told me how you had to eat as many ounces or as much as your own weight is and that you had to do this every twenty-four hours.

"Then too, you told me that your whiskers helped you. They could feel either side when you were rumbling through tunnels. And you told me of escapes you had had from bigger creatures than you were.

"I'll tell you some more," said the shrew. "I'll tell you of the time I had with a water snake. This is true. Everything I tell is true, for I don't think there's any sense in not telling the truth about one's self.

any one could make up or invent."

"But continue about your experience with the snake," urged the fairy.

"The snake was a water snake and he was having a fine time feeding on fishes. Now if he thought he could feed on me he was mistaken. That snake never fed on me.

WHITE ONES

By ETHEL M. RICE

Mandy replaced her iron on the stove and turned toward the opened window. "For the land sakes, Silas! If here don't come all the white hens!"

"My gorry!" he cried. "I must have left the henhouse door open! Where in tunket do you s'pose they've been now? Makes the third time that's happened in the last two weeks! My gorry, I wonder whose garden they've been into! Ezra! Ezra!"

Silas waved toward the feathered tribe. "Shoo them hens back into the henhouse in a hurry, son, and bear in mind that we'll be just as healthy if you don't take pains to spread the news that they've been out walkin'."

One hour later Ezra lay stretched on the grass, oblivious to all save the "Adventures of Scout Bob in Wild Man's Cave." My, but it was interesting. The boy could almost feel cold shivers chase up and down his spine as he read. "Softly Bob crept into the cave, dragging with him the can of oil—"

"Great Jumpin' jinnies! The oil stove!"

Bob and his adventures ceased to exist for Ezra, as he tore off in the direction of the henhouse. One glance was enough to convince him of the error of his ways. The wick was indeed "worked up"; the hot air was thick with soot; the walls hung with it, and not a white hen was to be seen—every gasping one of them appeared in garb of deepest mourning.

Ezra groaned. "Gosh! What'll I say? And him so proud of them pure white feathers. And what'll I get! Oh, gosh!"

At 5:30, after one and a half hours of ceaseless labor, all signs of the recent smokeout had disappeared—with the exception of the hens, who still wore their dirty plumage. The boy looked them over doubtfully.

"I'll tackle you after supper," he promised.

But the best laid plans of mere man do not always carry, and before supper was half over Silas put in a worried appearance.

"Mandy, were up against it!" Mandy gulped down her swallow of tea. "Up against it! Up against what?"

"Well, I'll tell ye. I just met Sam Pike up the street here. You know old man Marner that bought the Newbury farm about two months back—the feller that forgot to pay me for the grain I sold him? Well, Sam says he's mad enough to lick the hull town. Claims somebody's bunch of hens has got into his garden two or three times and raised ruction with it. He don't know yet who owns 'em, but he's got Officer Ryan on the job, and they're going to make trouble for somebody.

It kind of listens, Mandy, as if that somebody was me. Ryan's always seemed mighty friendly to me, but at the same time duty is duty, and I—my gorry, here they come now!"

Silas drew himself up with all the dignity of his five foot nine. "Evenin', gentlemen. What can I do for ye?"

Marner came directly to the point. "Own any hens, Mr. Lewis?"

"I do."

"What kind?"

"Furry good ones."

"I'll thank you to lead us to those hens of yours," the officer told Lewis.

Silas reached for his hat. "Why didn't you explain what you wanted in the first place?"

Silas threw open the door. He gasped, choked and finally managed to gulp: "Gentlemen, them—them—them's my hens."

Surprise and defeat showed on the faces of the two men.

"Humph!" grunted Marner. "I understood your hens were white, Mr. Lewis?"

"They was—that is, they used to be—I mean, I used to keep white ones."

"Well," said the officer, "I guess we may as well move on, Mr. Marner. Sorry to trouble you, Lewis. You see, we're particularly interested in white hens just at present—white ones, you understand."

Part way down the walk he turned and retraced his steps.

"By the way, Lewis, you'd better fix the latch on that henhouse door; them hens of yours are apt to get out some time when you're not lookin'."

Silas' eyes twinkled, and the corners of his mouth stretched into a grin as he turned to the scared-looking boy in the background.

"Ezra! Come here! Come here and shake hands with your dad. I—I guess I won't lick ye this time, Ezra."

Timed.

"When is loughand quicker than shortland?"

"When it is on a clock."—Boys' Life.

MRS. LULA VANN FULTON, ARK.

Suggests to Suffering Women the Road to Health

Fulton, Arkansas.—"I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a soreness in my side. I would suffer so badly every month from my every walk down that I could not be on my feet half the time. I was not able to do my work without help. I saw your Vegetable Compound advertised in a newspaper and gave it a fair trial. Now I am able to do my work and my every walk down that I don't even have a backache every month. I cannot praise your Vegetable Compound enough and highly recommend it to those who have troubles like mine. I am willing for these facts to be used as a testimonial to lead all who suffer with female troubles, as I did, to the right road to health."—Mrs. LULA VANN, Box 43, Fulton, Arkansas.

It is this sort of praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, given by word of mouth and by letter, one woman to another, that should cause you to consider taking this well-known medicine, if you are troubled with such symptoms as painful periods, weak, nervous feelings, miserable pains in your back, and cannot work at certain times of the month. Here is a woman who is so grateful and glad to be relieved from a painful and nerve racking physical condition that she wishes to tell all sick women.

Wins Trade Through Music. A music dealer on East Forty-second street, New York city, has a novel scheme of attracting attention to his photograph and record display, reports the New York Sun. In the front window he placed a photograph with the horn flush against the window.

In a coal chute cover on the sidewalk he bored several holes and concealed another machine beneath the walk. Records are played on the machine underneath the sidewalk. Passers-by are mystified by the sounds coming from beneath their feet. Naturally they turn to the photograph store for a solution.

Backache Is a Warning!

Those agonizing twinges across the small of the back, that dull, throbbing backache may signify serious kidney weakness—serious, if neglected, for it may lead to gravel, stone in the kidneys, bladder inflammation, dropsy of facial Bright's disease. If you are suffering with a bad back, have dizzy spells, headaches, nervous, despondent attacks or disordered kidney action, heed Nature's warning. Get after the cause. Doan's Kidney Pills have helped thousands. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

STATES GETTING WAR MATERIAL FOR ROADS

All Sorts of Supplies and Equipment Delivered.

Texas and New York Lead With Nearly $8,000,000 Worth and Other States Go Over Million Dollar Mark—Lots Left.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Surplus war material valued at $139,733,886 was delivered to the states for use in road construction up to July 1, reports the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture. The material, which consisted of all sorts of supplies and equipment suitable for road building for which the War department had no further need, was distributed on the same basis as monetary federal aid.

In value of material delivered, Texas and New York lead with nearly $8,000,000 worth of material, and every state with the exception of five of the smaller ones received supplies valued at over $1,000,000. This material has been of great value in road construction, and there is hardly a county in the United States in which some of it has not been used.

Probably of greatest value has been the 29,325 motor vehicles distributed, consisting of 24,752 trucks and 4,573 automobiles, and in addition a large number of tractors. The system of distribution has been so arranged that the states requisition only material useful to them. In some cases they fall behind in allotments in order to wait for material particularly desired. Many of the states have shown great ingenuity in conditioning worn equipment, using war material to equip shops in which other war material is made suitable for use.

NEED PERMITS FOR BANDING

Biological Survey Is Anxious to Have as Many Collaborators as Possible for Success.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Federal permits are necessary in all cases for bird-banding work, says the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture. The survey is anxious to have as many collaborators as possible, but success depends largely on complete cooperation between officials and collaborators.

State permits also are required in many cases. Some states issue them without charge to collaborators, when notified by the biological survey that the applicant has a federal permit.

Bird With Band on Leg.

Others have taken the position that the federal permit is sufficient authority. Each operator should be informed as to the attitude of his state game officials and be prepared to co-operate with them at all times.

BOYS INTRODUCE PUREBREDS

Among Other Things, Wyoming Club Brings Into County Nearly 200 Poland-China Pigs.

A boys' pork club, organized three years ago in Niobrara county, Wyo., according to reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture, has accomplished the following: Introduced nearly 200 purebred Poland-China pigs into the county, including one of the best boars in the state; helped organize a county purebred Poland-China association; developed a county standard for purebred Poland-Chinas, and contributed materially to the success of county, county and state fairs through its exhibits and its interest in stock judging.

SWEET CLOVER GOOD SILAGE

Growing of This Kind of Hay Provides Valuable Forage for Both Steers and Cows.

Sweet clover, as you know, spoils easily, and is probably one of the hay crops most difficult to put up in good condition during rainy seasons. Yet the growing of this kind of hay not only provides valuable forage for both steers and milk cows, but also enriches the soil wonderfully.

Keep Fowls in Good Flesh.

The hens or pullets should be in good flesh the year around, and if they come to molting time in good flesh they will be better equipped to continue laying until late in the fall, which is desirable.

By-Products of Beets.

The by-products of the sugar beet crop when properly handled and fed have a value equal to the entire cost of what is commonly termed "beet labor" in producing the crop of beets.

FOR AFTERNOON WEAR; STYLES IN STREET CLOTHES

A FROCK of cotton crepe and one of crepe-satin, among the first contributions to the autumn modes for the afternoon, find themselves now representing styles that are assured. They could hardly help making a success, having done so well with the new points in the mode which they chose to include in their makeup.

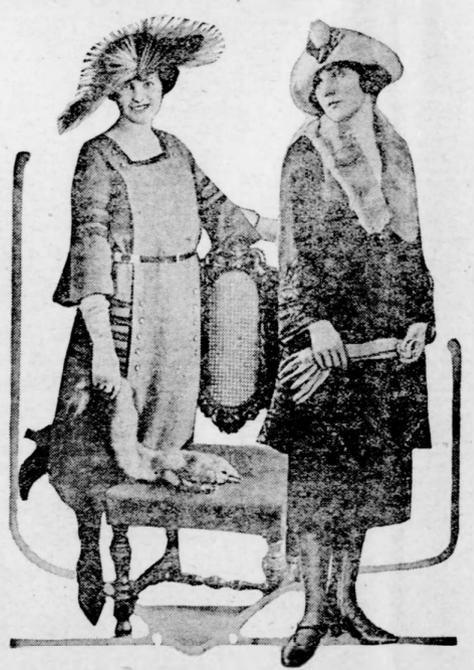

The dress at the left takes advantage of the fine draping qualities of changes overnight, it seems, from ocean to ocean. Women, from Paris to Honolulu, wake up some fine morning all inspired by a determination to wear larger hats or longer skirts or earrings and nice mitts. Maybe it is mental telepathy broadcasting the ideas of the powerful French and American designers.

This change of heart is apparent in clothes for the street. In the dresses, suits and hats that pronounce fashion-cannot crepe, and uses it in black, combined with crepe de chine in a light color, to form the lower part of the flaring sleeves. The skirt slopes to points at the left side and is slashed there. Having bestowed this daring and telling touch to it, the designer centered his thoughts on the giraffe and bodice and accomplished something new in each of them. Three strands of silk cord form a belt across the sides and back and fall in long ends at the front, finished with slender silk tassels. The bodice blouses over the giraffe at a low waist line. An applique of black silk braid over the lower part of the sleeves is immensely effective. The round neck with a little "V" shaped slash at the front is faced back with crepe de chine, which forms a piping for it, and the two silk buttons and loops finish it perfectly. An afternoon dress which will do double duty if one chooses to wear it for evening, is made of crepe satin, as shown at the right of the picture. All the emphasis in this gown is placed on the sleeves of beaded georgette and a long, full panel of georgette that is placed over the skirt at the left side and hangs below the hem line. The bodice blouses over a sash of the crepe satin.

Some things are mysterious and perhaps they always will be. Among them is the mood of the mode which line Siberian squirrel, in the natural color. The attractive street dress, at the left, is made of Sorrento blue novelty fabric, resembling kasha cloth, and has wide front and back panels, with a square neck. Braid and buttons are artfully used in its decoration, the three-quarter length sleeves flare at the elbow and are split, revealing a satin facing. The belt is of leather and silver.

Decoration Hints.

A good looking tray for either the dressing table, desk or dining room can be made from the cover of a wall paper—a striped paper dainty design is attractive—and then fit in a piece of glass in the bottom to form the tray. If a piece of glass the right size cannot be found about the house a cheap picture, purchased for the glass alone, will answer nicely. Drape the window according to its shape rather than a passing fad, for a tall window with side drapes is as badly proportioned as a tall person in stripes.

Shoes Must Suit Gowns. Shoes must suit the gowns they walk with, according to this season's footwear vagaries. Whether they be all black, all white, or black and white combined, crown, part brown, or two shades of brown together, whether they be high or low of heel, broad or slim of toe, in personality they must be congenial to the costume above them.

10c Makes Old Waists Like New. Putnam Fadeless Dyes—dyes or tints as you wish. Was a Bridge Tender. "There's no fool like an old fool," of course. A week or two ago one of our members of the Legation-Grave club got caught in a bridge fight that lasted until the small hours. He was not much concerned about it since his good wife, once parked for the night, sleeps on through, or, at least, has the grace not to ask when he got in. However, merely as a matter of habit he turned the key softly and was slipping quietly to his room, when the childish voice of his small granddaughter piped up through the open door of her bedroom: "Granddaddy! Where did you get a job as night watchman?"—Indianapolis Star.

Laxatives Replaced. By the Use of Nujol. Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. MERE MATTER OF AMUSEMENT. Arkansan Could Easily Afford to Treat Such Amateur Shooting With the Contempt Deserved. "What's that?" cried a tourist to whom a resident of Straddle Ridge, Ark., was showing the scenery of the region. "Aw, just Tug Bald or his brother-in-law taking a shot at me from over across the hollow," was the nonchalant reply. "Them fellers have been cutting that caper off and on for six weeks or such a matter." "Great grief! What do you do about it?" "Nuffin' in particular. They're the poorest shots on the Ridge and never come nigher to me than ten feet or so. Maybe that hill is not there, after all—

VERY often the hill we seem to be climbing is made out of the common mistakes of diet which starve tissues and nerves and slow down energies.

How smooth and level the path seemed to be when we were younger.

Simple, natural food may level that hill to a smooth path again.

Why not try it? Begin today with a dish of Grape-Nuts with cream or milk—and fresh or preserved fruit added if you like.

Keep on with this crisp, delicious, strengthening food in place of heavy, ill-assorted, starchy breakfasts and lunches—and see if the old-time zest and speed on the old-time level path doesn't come back again.

COUNTRY'S HEART IN OWN COMMUNITY

Merchants of Our Town Aid in Raising Funds to Win World War Quickly

MANY SACRIFICES MADE

Every community in this country has gone through a new birth as a result of the demands for service, Kewaskum with the rest. The war was the worker of this modern miracle, across the seas as fighters, and the young women followed them as nurses; while their elders, on account of their age or on account of obligations of dependence and other causes, remained behind to "keep the home fires burning." Kewaskum with the rest of the world, is singing the praises of the torch as the heroes who kept the torch of civilization flaming when a barbarian horde threatened to extinguish it; but not much has been said yet for those other heroes and heroines who did so much to sustain the front line of defense by knitting together the people in each community in a closer bond of brotherhood. It is the latter who are pointing the way for the new awakening in Kewaskum which is entailing the effort of our leading business men.

GOLDEN RULE HOLDS

"Do unto others as you would have others do unto you" is the foundation upon which this community was first built. Nothing more than the Golden Rule could be relied on for the co-operation necessary for the founding of a new town. Our pioneers early dedicated themselves on the altar of service, or Kewaskum would never have lasted to this day.

The settlement that marked the beginnings of this thriving city could not have survived a week but for the spirit of helpfulness to others that actuated those who founded it. Even with this determination on the part of our pioneers it was difficult to keep the small hamlet from disappearing from the face of the wilderness. Had this been lacking, nothing could have saved it. The rigor of hard conditions imposed upon Kewaskum in its early days kept this spirit alive. Everybody helped everybody in the seed time, at harvest time and at threshing time. There were logging bees, and raising bees, and shingling bees. When a neighbor fell sick, there was always some warm-hearted woman from the next cross-road to come in and nurse him to health again. The men got together and built the church for the old folks to congregate at on Sundays and likewise they built the little school house on the hill where their boys and girls were trained in the rudiments of American citizenship.

CITY IS A MELTING POT

Our big cities are the melting pot, and the problem of absorbing into the body politic the foreign elements coming to our shores often bring on troubles in our national life that are nothing short of political, economic and industrial indigestion. Frequently there are elements which can not be absorbed, and then they must be expelled; deportation, such as we have had recently, is the only means of relief. None of these upheavals find their way to our smaller towns and cities. Here the development of American ideals and American institutions proceeds along the lines laid down by Washington, and Jefferson and Lincoln.

AIDED IN RAISING FUNDS

If there was danger that we might depart from this path, as a result of the easy prosperity that came to all the nation from the unprecedented development preceding the war, the necessities of wartime co-operation brought us back to it. The individual again became submerged in the community. His selfish demands had to give way before the needs of others. Food Crops funds had to be raised. Liberty Loan quotas met and the behests of the Federal Food administration complied with. Often it was hard for the individual to do what was asked of him, but there was the community's quota to meet—so nothing remained but to combine and bring the community "over the top." Lack of space forbids going into greater detail, but these brief references will suffice to bring the point home to readers of this newspaper who are now brushing these lessons aside and patronizing others than home-grown business men. The Kewaskum merchants have been trained to community leadership. Their money is invested here, and they are vitally interested in the community's present and future. It is their home, consequently they will make every sacrifice for its continued progress.

WHERE CREDIT IS DUE

It was natural for them and other public spirited citizens to take the lead in all the war "drives" demanded of Kewaskum. The favorable renown that came to the community reflects commendation upon us as well as the rest, but the credit ought to be placed where it belongs. To stop working for the community now is to let the splendid edifice that has been built up crumble and collapse, ignoring the big lesson that has been taught by the war. "Spend your money in the community in which you earn it. You help yourself by helping your home city. Buy from your local merchants. Next week we will talk to you about the actual dollars-and-cents saving that this means for 1919."

CO-OPERATION

Co-operation means mutual help.

It always results in benefit.

It constitutes a power for good. It means profit and accomplishment.

The welfare and growth of Kewaskum depends upon co-operation.

The merchants of Kewaskum have established themselves and invested their money here and constitute a power factor for the growth and betterment of the town.

But they need your co-operation, expressed in patronage.

When you send or spend your money outside of Kewaskum it cannot be spent by the merchants to help build the community.

HOW TO GET ACTION QUICKLY

This is a story that is going the rounds and has a moral as long as the tail of a comet. A professor of steam engineering was starting a bunch of boys out in his particular line and was telling them of the power, the action, the pep, the jinnegar (only he didn't use that word) and the various causes to which steam could be utilized. His preamble was of considerable length, and as some of the lads were just being initiated into a class of steam engineering, their minds were considerably occupied with where they had been, or what they had been doing on the previous evening—or, what they were going to do that night—and their thoughts were far from the class room. But the professor kept up his preamble and then went into the lecture proper. In his hand he held a tin can, and at the completion of his story, or lecture, he looked down at one of the boys and said: "James, will you please tell the class what you would do with this can, were you to get speed, action, power, and pep into it in the shortest period of time possible." James spent a fraction of a quarter of a second in thinking; composed himself and said: "Yessir! I'd tie the can to a dog's tail." The moral to this story is, that regardless of what is being taught or talked of, if it is anything worth while, there is speed, action, pep, jinnegar, and power mentioned, and when you see a successful merchant, you see one that has speed, jinnegar, action, etc., and he keeps up his speed by advertising. He keeps his home folks advised as to the possibilities of getting quality goods at his place, and he keeps them advised all the time. He doesn't take a burst of speed and soon quit—he's JoTunny at the rat hole—all the time.
