The October term of circuit court convened at the court house at West Bend on Monday. ## COUNTY NURSE ATTENDS MEETING

Cecilia M. Giesing, County Nurse attended the Mississippi Valley Conference at Milwaukee last week. She says: "It has been an inspiration to me to have come in contact with men and women from all parts of the United States and Canada grouped together in one great army in the fight against tuberculosis. It is a winning fight as shown by statistics presented to the audience. We have reasons to be proud of Wisconsin's tuberculosis record. In 1908 when the Wisconsin Anti-tuberculosis Association began its work, the deaths in the state were 2,509, or a rate of 107.7 for 100,000 persons. Last year the total number of deaths was 1,984, a rate of 74.6. This year the death rate has come down to 72.5."

These figures bear out the statement made by Dr. David R. Stewart, Ninette, Manitoba, Canada, who was one of the speakers on the program. He said "It is the power of man to banish germ disease. Dozens of diseases rampant in olden days have been conquered among them the black plague, small pox, malaria and typhoid fever. The conquest of tuberculosis is as possible as the conquest of noxious weeds. The method used in the fight against tuberculosis is education—education as a preventative measure as well as curative. In the sanatorium value of fresh air and sunshine, hygiene, wholesome food, rest, the right sort of recreation and suitable occupation are taught to know themselves. Upon the rigid observation of these health rules a large percentage of the early cases make a favorable recovery. A few years ago, a person afflicted with tuberculosis was doomed to die of the disease. We have also that tuberculosis is preventable, measured by dollars and cents, an unnecessary loss to the individual and community. Education as a preventative measure against tuberculosis and other diseases should begin while young, when habits are being formed. The "Modern Health Crusade" which has been carried on so successfully in all parts of the United States as well as in China, France, Canada and other foreign countries, is one of the best means for teaching health habits. Plans for a program to carry on this work in the schools of Washington County are under way. We hope that the teachers and parents will lend us their support. We are all working for the one great cause "BETTERMENT."

NO ARTERIAL HIGHWAY

From reports received by the Attorney General, no county boards or town boards have the power to designate county highways as arterial highways, and thus compel all vehicles to stop before crossing or turning on said highways. The law of arterial highways applies only to city streets. This being the case the rumor that they have been making the round, to the effect that state trunk highway No. 15, which is changed into an arterial highway is without foundation.

NO. 108 TO BE PUT ON AGAIN

It will be good news to many of our readers and of special interest to the businessmen of Kewaskum and surrounding villages, that passenger train No. 108, south bound, due here at 7:28 A. M., will again be restored to operate on this division of the Chicago and North Western Railroad, after Sunday, October 22nd, 1922. This train was the first of the three trains to be taken off on account of coal shortage several months ago. It was of great importance and vital interest to local businessmen who wanted to go to Milwaukee or Chicago to transact business. A number of meetings had been called by citizens of this village, West Bend and other cities and villages around the road in an effort to have said train placed back into service, but it appeared futile, and for a time it appeared as though it would never be restored. No. 108 will operate daily except Sundays, and will stop at every station between Kewaskum and Milwaukee except Granville. Train No. 206, due here at 9:58 A. M., south bound, will be scheduled to stop at Campbellsport, Kewaskum and West Bend, and on Sundays will stop on signal at Eden, Barton, Jackson and Rockfield to receive and discharge passengers. Station Agent Anthony Schaeffer states that he has not been able to learn whether any of the other passenger trains taken off will be restored or not, but thinks that if business continues to increase at the rate it has been during the past month, there are probabilities of them being put back into service again.

OVERHEAD BRIDGE NOT YET DECIDED

A meeting of the Washington County Road and Bridge Committee was held at the court house at West Bend on Thursday afternoon, at which time matters were taken up in regards to the building of an overhead concrete bridge on trunk highway No. 55, over the North Western Railway a little ways north of the crossing near Aug. Schaefer's place, at the north end of the city limits of Kewaskum. Nothing definite was decided upon. The committee, however, seemed to be very much in favor of building an overhead bridge on half of the cost of constructing, and have turned the proposition over to the Railroad Rate Commission to take the matter up with the Chicago & North Western Railroad Company, in an effort to have the company stand half of the cost of constructing same. Nothing definite can be stated at this time as to just what the outcome will be. The committee plans to hold another meeting some time next winter when the proper action will be taken and an agreement will undoubtedly be reached. The delay in coming to an agreement over this bridge seems to have been the main reason why the highway from the north end of the county line to this village was not paved this year. It is hoped by the time paving will again be resumed next spring an agreement will have been reached so that paving on this stretch of road will also be completed.

OSHKOSH AUTO KILLS HORSE ON ROAD AT LOMIRA

The floor of the wagon was composed of loose planks and the force of the collision shoved one of these planks through one of the horses, killing it almost instantly. The accident occurred at about 5:30 in the evening at the north limits of the village. The wagon had been used by Mr. Klein, who is a patrolman, for hauling gravel, but was driven by one of his hired men at the time of the accident. The wagon was drawn by a team, the other horse escaped with slight bruises and cuts when he was thrown to the pavement when the wagon was pushed into him from behind. With a national reputation established, there will be by far a large demand for Holstein cattle from this county, which will mean that the dairy industry in Washington county will be conducted on a very large scale in the future. # THREE ARE SLAIN IN ROCK ISLAND

Two Policemen and a Suspect Shot in Illinois City's Underworld War.

MAY CALL STATE TROOPS

Scene of shooting is in the center of the "Redlight" District—Quarrel Over Negro Girl Started the Battle.

Rock Island, Ill., Oct. 16.—Three persons are dead and a fourth seriously wounded as the result of a renewal of the violence which has shaken Rock Island.

Two of the dead were police officers. The third was a colored man whom they attempted to arrest in his home. The wounded man was a policeman.

The tragedy raises the number of persons slain in eight days of fighting in the city to six. The outbreak followed the killing of John Leoney, Jr., son of a local editor, in what was declared to be a battle between rival factions for the control of politics and the underworld.

All available police, police reserves and deputy sheriffs have been called out and sent into the trouble district to prevent an outbreak of race riots.

It is probable that the trouble will result in state troops being sent to Rock Island to aid the federal agents already on the job in clearing up the crime situation. There has been a persistent demand from the city or parliament and the better element for troops ever since young Leoney was shot.

The scene of the shooting was in the center of the "redlight" area and a little more than a block from where the bullet-riddled body of James ("Big") Brown, reputed head of the colored gambling element, was picked up just a week ago.

Shortly after eight o'clock a report was received at the police station of a row over a colored girl in the levee district. Two policemen, one of them Guy Kirsch, were sent to investigate and on the way they picked up two more city officers, Policemen George Green and Edward Miner.

They approached the house of Robert Scott, colored, in Twenty-second street, where the trouble was reported. They walked in, Green in the lead. In the small room adjacent to the stove in the unlighted kitchen cornered Green with a shotgun. Green grasped with the man, but the black opened fire and Miner staggered and fell. Miner, in falling, shot and the bullet struck Green, who was instantly killed.

Other shots were fired and Scott was mortally wounded. Officer Kirsch also was wounded but not seriously. Miner died on the operating table.

NEW TARIFF BOARD

Broad Powers of Commission; Sits as Court.

Members of Body Have the Authority to Prohibit Importation of Any Goods.

Washington, Oct. 14.—President Harding has signed an executive order raising the U. S. tariff commission to a position of authority and importance in the fixing of tariff rates. It is the broadest commission ever established and gives the tariff commission the power to suspend the rates of the Fordney-McCumber tariff law to meet any of the objections raised throughout the country when the bill was in the senate, and to make them conform more nearly to the Republican doctrine of protection without being prohibitive or unnecessarily exorbitant.

The President by the terms of the new law makes the final decision as to the raising or lowering of import duties within the limit of the 20 per cent flexibility clause. But he has turned over to the tariff commission without delay or reservation the authority to take the initial steps in the procedure of revision and all of the machinery, including the power of investigation and recommendation upon which the final decision as to rates will be based.

BRITAIN SPURNS U.S. 'DRY' TREATY

London Government Refuses to Give America Right to Search Ships.

TO HELP CURB ILLICIT BOOZE

Declares International Law Involved Is Too Important for Change—Hughes' Plan Fails—Ambassador Geddes Presents Note.

Washington, Oct. 17.—Under no circumstances will the government of Great Britain consider entering into a regional treaty agreement with the United States whereby the three-mile limit of territorial water would be extended to facilitate the apprehension of liquor smugglers suspected of operating off American shores.

The refusal of the British government to extend the limit to twelve miles was communicated to Secretary Hughes by Sir Archibald Geddes, the British ambassador.

The British answer, dated October 13, was in reply to the American note of June 28 last, in which Secretary of State Hughes asked British co-operation in prevention of abuses in regard to clearance papers and false registries, and at the same time suggested an extension of territorial waters.

In effect, the British foreign office instructed Ambassador Geddes to inform the State department that the principle of international law embodied in the three-mile limit was too important for even considering an infringement of it. Great Britain, the note declared, always had opposed extension, and the situation confronting the United States in regard to liquor smuggling off its shores is not regarded as sufficient ground for a departure from the "principles."

The note concluded with the pleas here that the smuggling of which Secretary Hughes complained is temporary, and that the United States government in time will be able to check it by its own efforts. With regard to the abuses such as double clearance papers, given by port authorities, the false transfer of American ships to British registry, and more careful supervision of cargoes, the British government extended sympathy and promised the most complete co-operation.

The survey shows that for four consecutive years Wisconsin has produced large corn crops which matured practically without frost injury. This year a total production of 93,808,000 bushels is forecast from Oct. 1 condition. # The Big Muskeg

By VICTOR ROUSSEAU

A cry broke from Wilton's lips; he raised his eyes and let them fall again. They glared at the jury. Their eyes were riveted on Kitty's face. He knew what had occurred. A disengagement—what an accident!—if all went well, would have been his.

"Thank you," he said quietly. The crowd around the court, who had been watching with interest, came forward to congratulate him.

"You told us, Mrs. Bostock," he said to her, "that you loved him, and still love him. How can you still love him? How can you still love him?"

"I don't know what you mean," cried Kitty desperately.

"The court will," said the attorney, with a meaning glance toward the jury. "Don't let me perplex you. Now please answer me carefully. You perjured yourself to let your husband escape a sentence on Big Muskeg, then to his own, and hidden from the eyes of the court."

"He tried to stop me. I've said that already."

"It has only impressed us, Mrs. Bostock. However, in the end he yielded?"

"He yielded because he thought that I was only interested in the work. He never dreamed I cared until I told him."

"You told him? What did he say?"

"It cut him to the heart."

Only a thread divided the tense drama of the colloquy from inextinguishable pathos. The attorney stopped in:

"In fact, you found him a regular Joseph in his relations with you?"

And the whole court was dissolved in laughter. Even the judge placed his hand across his mouth.

"Then will you tell me how you came to be seen kissing and embracing one evening on the shores of Big Muskeg? But I won't press that question. We shall have further evidence to offer."

The mischief was done. The net that had been woven about Wilton could not be broken by the hypothesis of conspiracy. Kitty's confession of her love supplied a stronger argument against him, and threw the dark shadow of collusion about her, too. Meekly she stood in the doorway.

The judge was with her, and together they supported the frail form of McDonald.

Understand, they went down the courtroom, while the spectators gaped, and suddenly, standing up in their places, gave rousing, rousing cheers, unhesitating and unceasing.

Despite the general belief in Wilton's guilt, a few persons, however, were seen to whisper that the fire had been wisely brewed.

The party went still advancing when Bowyer looked himself in one of his paralytic rages.

"Put them out of here," he bawled. "It's a trick—a staged trick to win sympathy for that man!"

"Often I'd warned him what would befall if he came between me and mine. And when he sent Will Carruthers there to steal Molly from me—for I knew well that was Joe's doing—I knew the time had come."

"Tom Bowyer there had a hold on me. Aye, Tom, your time's come, now, and I've listened to ye so long ye'll listen to me. He was ever at me—threatening me with the ax and threat if I didn't obey. When he came to the store a year ago I spoke of Will Carruthers, and how I feared he'd been sent by Joe to take Molly away from me. Your chance will come, McDonald."

"You'll catch the two of 'em in the bush together. 'I had 'one death on my soul now, I said. He laughed that fox-like laugh of his. 'Ye're afraid,' he taunted me. And that taunt and laugh put the de'il into me."

"Listen now, McDonald," he said, "if ye could kill Joe Bostock and no suspicion come on ye, would ye do it? He knew the ransor that was like a living coal in my heart, and he saw that he'd won. Then he told me his plan. I was to pretend a stroke, so that my foot would be useless, and my arm would hang useless at my side. Then, he said, there'd be no possible suspicion on me. As he said, 'twas nought to feign a stroke—nought at all. Just to lie down and breathe heavy, and never forget I couldna use my arm or leg."

"He went awa' and left me wif the thought. It grew in me until it filled my heart. Then one night he came to me—Molly didna know that—and he

"I killed him," said McDonald, simply.

He told me that Joe and Will Carruthers were coming to the portage, and I could catch them alone. The chance came. Jules was in the bush, and Molly'd gone to the Indian camp."

"I slipped out of bed and took the rifle and one cartridge, put on my snowshoes, and ran across the muskeg. It wasna long before I saw them on the ridge, black against the gray sky. I crept up behind the rocks till I was a hundred paces awa'. Joe Bostock's back was turned. I drew a bead on his heart and fired. They both fell down. I ran back to the store and went to bed. Jules didna see me, and Molly hadn't come home."

He groaned and hung his head upon his breast. The voice of Payne cut the silence like a knife.

"You are telling this of your own free will, McDonald?" he asked.

"As God is my witness! I'm tellin' this because my time's come now, and I wouldn't have Will Carruthers swing for that red fox yonder."

"What was the nature of Mr. Bowyer's hold on you, McDonald?"

"The crown attorney stood up with a wry smile.

"I object to that question," he said quietly.

"I'll put it in this way then: Why did you mate Joe Bostock?"

"Aye, I'll tell that, too," answered McDonald. "Joe was married when he was a young man, long ago. A good girl. A sweet lass from my ane town in Scotland. They were both young. They quarreled. She wanted

adros, checkered or plaid effects are attained in the sketch and by contrasting color, such as is noted in the illustration herewith.

Speaking of knitted hats, these also express extreme novelty. We picture a handsome type which has the effect of the modish Hindu wrapped turban. It is knitted in colors alternating around the crown a section of blue with white.

The future of the turban is brilliant in more senses than one, for it is scheduled to be worn as a dance hat during the coming winter. Made of cloth of gold or silver, it is embroidered with colored silk floss and adorned with gold or silver beads.

Effects Are Brilliant. Black continues to hold its popularity, but it is usually the background for brilliant effects in beading and embroidery. Beaded velvies are shown, sometimes with the beads forming a paisley design. There are also beaded velvies.

to vex him. She made up a story that showed her to be a bad woman. She went too far. Joe believed her. She went to him and told him that she'd lied. He wouldn't believe her word. Because the foolish girl had manufactured proofs—false proofs; and the lying scoundrel whom she trusted claimed they were true.

"He blackmailed her after Joe had left her. She was at her wits' end. She went to his office to beg him to tell the truth. I happened to go there. I overheard. She became frenzied and drew a revolver on him. He struck her. He got her by the throat. He had a paperweight on the table, a sharp-edged metal thing like a cleaver. I struck him once with it. It split his skull from side to side. He died. Even while I watched him he died."

"The girl was mad wif fear. I took her awa'. I married her, for Joe had divorced her in the States. But that fox, Bowyer, knew. In my folly I'd told him all. He said he'd be my friend. He got me my position at the portage. I've lived there ever since—first with my wife, then with my fears, and always with Molly—with Molly, her child and Joe's."

"The girls cry rang wildly through the courtroom. She reeled and ran toward him. Wilton, unaided, stooped down from the dock and supported her. She clung to him, wild-eyed and helpless. Nobody intervened. Even when Bowyer sprang forward, though the judge rapped his gavel smartly, it seemed only an automatic or perfunctory act, for he made no effort to prevent his speaking.

"Let me finish it!" he yelled fiercely. "I didn't die, you fool—you old fool! Lord, you've been a laughing stock these twenty years! He's here in court, and he's been blackmailing me as he blackmailed you. Clark, the master-forged and safe-breaker—though we didn't need you for that—step forward! Look at his head, McDonald, and then see if you remember him!"

"He's spoken true! The old fool's spoken true! I've handled many a man and woman in my time, but God Himself, they say, can't handle a fool!"

"Keep your wife, Payne!" he howled in wild derision. "You didn't know how Joe died. You're only the thief—the common thief I hired to work for me. You won't swing for this. Neither will I. I took my chances—but, by God, I couldn't handle a fool!"

They rushed toward him, but Bowyer was quicker than they. And, as the single shot echoed through the courtroom Wilton saw that Molly was already mercifully unconscious.

But he knew that all the past would become dimmed with her awakening. (THE END.)

FISH SENSITIVE TO CHANGE

Sudden Variation of Temperature Will Drive Them to Distant Waters or Destroy Them.

Fish are very quick to feel a change of temperature in their native element, and sudden cooling or heating of the water is very injurious to them.

A hot summer has often been known to drive herrings to find cooler waters at a distance. Some years ago, a fearful storm raged along the eastern coast of North America. After it had subsided, the sea was strewn with millions of life, a fish like a cod, but attaining a weight of 50 pounds or more. A vessel was sent to discover the cause of the strange phenomenon. It plowed straight ahead for 150 miles, and estimated that an area of 5,000 square miles was covered with dead fishes. It was discovered that the storm had brought icebergs in its train, and the consequent great cold had proved too much for the fish, accustomed as they were to warmer waters. The cod has an objection to sudden changes of climate, and if put in colder water than that to which it is accustomed, will be numbed. Experiments have been tried to acclimatize English salmon in Tasmania, but the difference in temperatures has caused those experiments to fail.

Congers and pilchards have died from cold off the Cornish coast, and the once plentiful board-fish have never been seen in the shallow waters of Cornwall since a violent easterly gale blew in 1879.

Rose to the Occasion. The doctor had left his instructions sufficient to carry on during his absence through the afternoon. All went well till the phone rang and a sweet feminine voice inquired: "Is the doctor in? May I speak to him?" The assistant, per instructions, explained the doctor's absence and inquired if he would be of any use. The lady caller's voice was worried as she went on: "Oh, I am so sorry. I am phoning for Mrs. Blank, and it is very important. Tell the doctor immediately on his return that Mrs. Blank is having a gynecium coming on, and she wonders if he could do anything for it." The assistant made a hurried note and reassured the caller. "I'll tell the doctor as soon as he returns. And meanwhile tell her to put a mustard poultice on it and renew it every two hours."

The best way to flee from the tempter is to fly to your brother's aid.

Modish Knitted Outerwear; Turbans Again Are Popular

SPORTS apparel departments and specialty shops are fairly bubbling over this season with new ideas in modish knitted outerwear. As one views these garments, whose novelty and charm is of thrilling interest, the wonderment is that only comparatively in the last few years have we grown into an appreciation of the artistry of things knitted. What with insistent appeal of ingenious design,

The turban is a classic in millinery and, while large, irregular and picturesque hats are flourishing like the green bay tree, at the same time new honors are being thrust upon the turban and other small hats. American women like them, especially for the street and in winter time. They are enthusiastic over the spirited and flattering styles which the present season has presented, and are devoted style motif and intriguing color, we find the inclination grows to plan to a great extent one's autumn and winter wardrobe in terms of knitted outerwear.

With the college girl the cloth skirt and gay colored sweater is taking the place of the sleeveless dress, which was such a vital part of the campus wardrobe last year. Blouses are the kind most called for and these come in an entirely different range of effects from other seasons.

Among the latest types is the blouse with collar, cuffs and tight hip bands of black, while the body and sleeves are made of vertical stripes in many well-harmonized colors.

With knitted dresses, scarf sets, also knitted, are very popular. There is a new slyx scarf which has a loop stitch that gives it the effect of knitted astrakhan. Herewith is shown one of the popular brush wool sets, which are admirably worn with suits and sweaters.

Tuxedo sweater coats, all of fine silk, are a happy possession for any time of the year. In woolen knit tux-

Designers have everything at hand to make brilliant, and even gorgeous, bits of headwear, for the small hat can afford to be very rich and ornate.

in velvet and in combinations of velvet and metallic fabrics, as well, and there are many ways of adding a touch of trimming to it. Velvet and soutache braid make the charming turban that finishes the group. It differs in shape from all the rest, is becoming to matronly wearers, and is one of those unusual hats that may be worn anywhere.

The future of the turban is brilliant in more senses than one, for it is scheduled to be worn as a dance hat during the coming winter. Made of cloth of gold or silver, it is embroidered with colored silk floss and adorned with gold or silver beads.

Fur Coats Hip Length. Smart fur coats are made hip length, and terminate in a snug band. The shawl collar, or the close Russian choker is the favorite neck arrangement.

Blouses. Orwa-the-skirt and tuck-in blouses divide favor about half and half this autumn. The tailored models are principally tuck-ins. Striped crepe de

An Ever Growing Surplus

An accurate gauge of the growth, earning power, service, efficiency and conservative management of this bank is found in its ever enlarging surplus because an increasing surplus shows that some of its earnings have gone back into the business—earnings more than sufficient to pay dividends to its stockholders and running expenses, too.

Therefore the security back of the depositors' money here is growing stronger and stronger all the time—reinforced by a larger reserve. Therefore also we solicit checking or savings accounts from timorous people who seek solid, substantial and quick resources which are continually bettering themselves.

Madam, Raisins Cost Less Now

So Get Their Benefits and Their Flavor in Scores of Attractive, Money-Saving Foods

DUE to greatly increased crops, even though production costs are still much higher than in pre-war days, raisins now cost almost as little as before the war.

Use this luscious, energizing, healthful food lavishly, therefore, in scores of "plain foods" like rice pudding, boiled rice, bread pudding, Indian pudding, and in cake, cookies, pie, and with the children's cereals, to give them "luxury flavors" at "plain food" costs.

Raisins are both good and good for you.

Save Newspapers to Save Forests

2,500 Tons Gathered Daily Will Equal the Daily Cut on About 275,000 Acres.

PERFECT DE-INKING PROCESS

Agricultural Department Conducts Laboratory Tests and Finally Perfects Process to Use Old Newspapers.

Washington, D. C.—Saving old newspapers that they may be used again in the manufacture of newsprint may seem far removed from the problems of forest conservation, but as a matter of fact it is directly connected with the work in which the forest service of the United States Department of Agriculture is interested.

About 2,500 tons of old newspapers can be gathered daily in the larger cities, it is estimated, and turned into newsprint by this process. In terms of forest acreage this means roughly the saving of the cut each year on about 275,000 acres. This process carries a crop not produced in a year, but a spruce forest requiring 100 years or longer to grow. That is regarded as an important saving, in view of the fact that the daily consumption of newsprint in the United States is approximately 7,000 tons.

In its modern development the production of newsprint depends upon the forest for its raw material. The present supply, coming largely from mills in the northeast and lake states is derived from forests in the United States now seriously depleted, or from less accessible forests in Canada. The latter now furnish 65 per cent of the raw pulp used by mills in this country.

Raw Material Scarce.

Many of these mills, representing immense investments, no longer have a supply of raw material of their own, but are dependent either on a foreign supply of pulp or on pulpwood that must be hauled long distances in the United States. Some of these mills have their own supply for only ten or twenty years in advance, and but one mill is known that has a supply strictly its own that is good for more than half a century.

The increasing distances to the fast receding forests mean added freight costs and a higher priced product, while hanging over mills operating on imported pulp is the ever-present possibility of embargo, even now far from a theoretical menace. This is the incentive to the development of a de-inking process is apparent.

The use of old paper stock for the manufacture of paper is very old, and we find mention of the process in Denmark as early as 1295.

It is only in recent years, however, that it has been realized that it would not only be good business to utilize the enormous waste represented in printed paper, but was an absolute necessity if the consumption of newsprint continues to grow and the supply of spruce timber to diminish.

Early in 1921 the forest products laboratory of the Department of Agriculture undertook a series of comparative tests to determine the efficiency of a process using benzolite to accomplish the heretofore almost impossible task of washing all the carbon black out of the macerated pulp after it had been loosened by alkalies. S. D. Wells, the engineer in charge of the experiments, now reports that they were successful.

"In de-inking printed paper and especially newspaper," says Mr. Wells, "it is comparatively easy to loosen the carbon black by dissolving the varnish of the printing ink by use of alkalies. Such treatment will not injure ground wood pulp and if the carbon black could be completely washed out after liberation, a satisfactory material would be obtained.

"Unfortunately the fibers of the paper stock serve as a very effective filter in catching the particles of carbon and there is no means of washing in common use that will permit the complete removal without excessive loss of pulp or expenditure of time, water and power that are prohibitive. In fact, a point seemed to be reached beyond which it is impossible to remove the remaining traces of ink. With benzolite, however, we have a substance that will pass through ordinary filters and with its enormous surface, on account of the extreme fineness of its particles, will carry all the carbon black along with it."

Build Schools That Won't Burn

Safety of Pupils Should Be First Consideration in Planning to House Them.

FIREPROOF MATERIALS URGED

So-Called "Fire Escapes" Are Often Makeshifts That Become Death Traps in an Emergency—Death Toll Is Heavy.

Chicago—School buildings that won't burn can be built as readily as those that do, and at much less additional cost than many persons imagine. It is largely a matter of selection of building materials, and in many cases materials with high fire resisting qualities can be obtained from local sources, according to men connected intimately with the building construction industry. It is just as important to have a fireproof interior as a fireproof exterior. Buildings with exterior walls of masonry, but with a wooden interior, are in no sense fireproof. A so-called "fire escape" does not meet the deficiency, for time and again these makeshifts have become death traps in an emergency. Lack of familiarity with their use, locked doors, obstruction in passageways or other results of carelessness and indifference have contributed to the large

"The possibilities of a process for the recovery of old newspaper stock are apparent to any one familiar with the paper industry," says Mr. Wells. "When the price paid for old paper stimulated collection it is reported that about 25,000 tons per month were collected in Chicago, of which 40 per cent was newsprint. During the same period Cleveland is reported to have handled 350 tons per day, of which 150 tons were news."

"In our large metropolitan centers probably 2,500 tons per day were collected, which would furnish a very considerable portion of our daily consumption of 7,000 tons of newsprint."

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promise of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicine's reputation for success rests on its curative value almost solely itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited in those who are in need of it. A genuine drugist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have used for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, most every man it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale.

It is the respectable appearance of most medicines that makes them dangerous.

Tore Chicken Apart in Contest Held by "Ladies"

The humane society of London, Ont., is investigating reports of alleged cruelty at a picnic in Springfield Park when, it is stated, women competing in a chicken race, tore a rooster to pieces in their efforts to prove that they had won it. The event appeared on the program as a "chicken race for ladies," the bird being set loose and the women pursuing it. Finally, when it was cornered, two of the contestants, each holding by a leg, tore the rooster apart. It is said.

SEE CAPITAL BACK ON RIVER NEVA

death toll charged against the "fire escape."

One type of fireproof construction becoming generally adopted for large schools consists of a reinforced concrete structural frame, comprising all structural parts such as floors, roof, stairs, girders, columns and wall piers, and fireproof interior partitions. This form of construction has been adopted as the standard in Philadelphia, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Seattle and a host of smaller cities.

Has Many Advantages.

Advantages claimed for this type are the homogeneous character of the structure, a better sequence of construction with a consequent saving of time, great strength and rigidity, and a slight reduction in the general dimensions of the building because of the thinner exterior walls and interior partitions. Saving in time is possible because the entire structural frame, including the floor and roof slabs, may be completed without interruption, after which the brick veneer or concrete surface finish, as the case may be, may be started and completed without interruption.

Another type frequently employed for exterior and corridor walls is a double wall of reinforced concrete formed by an adjustable metal mold. The dead air space between the two wall sections provides insulation against cold and heat. The exterior is usually coated with stucco, which should be of specially selected material such as white sand and white Portland cement. The interior plaster is applied directly to the concrete, since the dead air space within the wall makes furring unnecessary. This eliminates the cost of laths.

So-called artificial stone, which is in reality a cast block of concrete, usually made with high-powered machinery and faced with specially selected aggregates, often mixed with white cement, is used quite extensively in many sections of the country where the art of its manufacture has been well developed. Only experts can distinguish it from natural cut stone.

For the interior, reinforced concrete floors, stairs, and roof provide a high degree of fire resistance. Because of the comparatively light floor loads, one of several of the lighter types of reinforced concrete floors are generally the most economical. Interior partitions can be made of concrete partition block, usually obtainable from local sources. Plaster may be applied to these blocks without the use of lath, the corrugations in the block providing a firm grip. Portland cement plaster on metal lath also makes a highly fire-resistant partition. The floor finish itself may be a so-called mastic or composition finish applied directly to the concrete slab. This makes a floor that is quiet, comfortable, easy to keep clean and pleasing in appearance.

The general plan of the building must be so arranged that a fire originating in the contents cannot spread in a horizontal direction and all stairways must be enclosed so that it cannot spread in a vertical direction. In such buildings school children are entirely free from the menace of fire.

proximity, by land and sea, to western Europe.

Shrewd citizens are now buying Petrograd property and holding it against the day when the now almost depopulated city will again be the crowded capital.

Richard Lloyd Jones says

We Must Unbend Backs

Hanging heavily about his neck, the sack of seed bowed down the ancient sower. Today, without weight, he only holds the reins that drive the faithful team that haul around his harrowed field, the modern seeder.
Today we no longer have to walk in the furrow of the plow. We can mount the seat on the sulky and till vast acres where once we turned the soil of the patch.
Once we used to bend our backs to drop the kernels of corn and finger over the soil that covered them. Today we ride the planter that does the bigger job in the better and easier way.
We used to tether hay by hand but now we tether by horse. Maud Mueller had to walk the stubbled field when she raked the new-mown hay. Today a loader lifts it on the rack and a harpoon throws it into the stack.
Millet, the great French painter of peasants, pictured the harvester bending low to swing his sickle. Then came the cradle. At last a Cyrus McCormick found a reaper which in its turn became a harvester, cutting and binding the ripened grain.
Threshing once done by flaying the floor is now done by the threshing machine without which the great fields of grain we now sow could never be gathered in huge elevators.
We have made more work possible by making work easier. We let the wind lift our water. The tractor has come to release the horse.
The inventor is the great farm helper. The machinist has multiplied both the muscle and the skill of the farm hand. We work more, produce more and labor less. Dull drudgery is fast being made a story of the past.
The soil that cultivated sullenness in the days of Millet is cultivating skill and prosperity today.
The telephone has brought the farmer into conversing distance with his next county neighbor.
The automobile has changed the measure of distance. We talk not of miles but of fitness of the roads.
The moving picture has brought the farmer into conversing distance with his own town opera house.
The farm that once was the young man's idea of what he should flee from is now beginning to lure the town boy as the ideal vocation to work toward.
Throughout all the world the basic business is the production of food and shelter. The farm is the bulk producer, the town the refiner. That business has grown more productive and more profitable as it has grown less irksome and more alluring. The business farmer is the machine farmer.
We build bigger as we unbend backs. When the tiller of the soil is emancipated from toil, when he is able to stand erect and be a worker, as every business man is a worker, using more head than hand, then do his eyes behold the beauties of the countryside of which the poets preach. Then does the farmer become not the man with the hoe, but the man with the hope.
Nothing puts this world forward faster than unbending backs.

LEADERSHIP TO ASSERT ITSELF

Co-operation, Under a Careful Guardianship, Spells Prosperity for Home Town
MUST SUSTAIN LEADERS
What one thing won the war?
It was leadership.
We in this country are not willing to admit that the weight of our army and navy did not play a large part in bringing hostilities to a close, but without the unified command we might be fighting yet.
Leadership was what won for the allies in their fight to make the world
"safe for democracy." In all the world, throughout all history, there never was a bigger job than this, and the leadership of Gen. Foch finished it.

But what has this to do with our home town? you ask.
We'll show you in just a minute.
LEADERSHIP IS ESSENTIAL.
What mobilized all America so that it was able to put the weight of all its 110,000,000 people, of all its industry, of all its wealth and of all its natural resources behind the blow we struck for humanity?
Leadership, again. What this country did in providing the world with a merchant marine, is a case in point.
The Emergency Fleet Corporation was the embodiment of leadership in the task it performed, and D. F. Barber, the efficiency manager of this organization, makes this assertion:
"One of the great fundamental truths that the manufacturer and the worker and the capitalist are missing is that neither labor nor money can produce progress or prosperity these days. It is management, and not money, it is leadership, not labor that produces all the progress and all the prosperity on earth."
The community must build on a firm foundation if it is to perform the tasks of reconstruction facing it.

Returning soldier and sailor boys must be returned to their peace-time pursuits. We can look for no help outside. It is our own special job, and we must do it; we must be united, or we will fail.
If we pull in opposite directions we,
the community, will suffer. China has 400,000,000 men, each one of whom can outwork an American. Russia has a large population, and great natural wealth, yet neither China nor Russia are prosperous. They lack real leaders.

MUST SUSTAIN LEADERS.
Kewaskum must sustain leaders if they are to guide the way during these reconstruction times. When we give them the largest measure of support, then we can hold them accountable for the progress of the community.
We know that they are true leaders, because we had experience with their leadership in the past. It is the right kind of leadership because it is unselfish, for we have seen that whatever prosperity comes to this city as a result of their effort is shared by you and me and every single individual in the community.
This is democracy in its highest form.

With the merchants of Kewaskum
there is no indolence in running up a record for sales this month compared with last month, or with last year.
If that were their aim, they would be unworthy of the confidence placed in them by the people of this community.
Their purpose is to make Kewaskum strong and prosperous, and in the realization of this purpose you benefit as much as they. Your wants, and those of your family, must be supplied, whether you buy here or elsewhere. If you buy elsewhere, and your neighbor buys elsewhere, the movement of money which constitutes the sinews of our local business system--will be away from Kewaskum.
Home trade will suffer, merchants will have to go out of business, stores will become vacant, houses will be for rent, taxes will go up on your property if schools, roads and other improvements are to be maintained at the present standard.

DON'T BANKRUPTCY ROAD.
You are starting yourself on the downhill road to bankruptcy unless the buying power of your fellow-citizens is pitted against you to offset the influence of your example.
But when you buy at home, there is an entirely different picture to paint. The money goes the rounds and leaves strength and confidence behind with every transaction through which it passes. You save what would otherwise be wasted in an expensive shopping trip to the city. Increased trade means a larger assortment of goods offered by the home-town stores. All the buildings are occupied and more are needed. Everywhere there is confidence. New buildings go up, and property values rise. Your house and your lot increases in value, sharing in the general prosperity, by which all profit.

ADD TO PEACE OF MIND.
No falling off in your standard of living, as there is when times are bad.
The comfort and well-being of your family add to your peace of mind. You have no cares and no worries. There is no need to take your boys and girls out of school to help support the family. They enjoy a healthy, wholesome youth, and they enjoy the training that is to fit them for useful manhood and womanhood.
This is your great opportunity. Help to bring prosperity to Kewaskum and reap a double profit for every cent
you spend at home.

HOW to BOOST

The merchants of Kewaskum are here to stay. They choose to locate here because they believe in Kewaskum.

They are not interested in a quick "clean-up," in running up sales records; but to grow steadily with the growth of the town.

Nothing can contribute to the growth of any place like a strong mercantile backing.

Nothing is asked of the merchants of Kewaskum that they are not glad to give off freely.

You can help them to help the town—you can help yourself by trading at home.

And the best of it is, when you keep your money at home

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING OF TODAY
It wasn't many years ago that one could drive along the country road and read advertisements of every description. And at that time advertising must have been just as interesting as it is now, as many who were driving by would stop and scan a poster, a board that had been painted, or any other kind of ad that had been posted. Now days the advertiser uses the country newspapers and the subscriber sits on his front porch and reads every ad just as religiously as he reads the news. In fact it is news—good news—news that brings results to the customer because it has proven hundreds of times that the well advertised product can be sold more cheaply than the non-advertised product. The STATESMAN has always been in the market for reliable advertisements, such as you would care to run, and it is still in the market. Whether you are an advertiser or not we want you to keep reminded that this paper is working for your interests, even while you sleep, and that newspaper advertising does bring results.
