OLD SWINDLE REACHES KEWASKUM

Peter J. Haug and S. N. Casper, two prominent businessmen of this village, received letters from Barcelona, Spain last week Saturday. The letters were sent from a man supposed to be in prison in his native country, and offers the local men $120,000, out of $360,000, as their share if they collect the amount given, in an effort to help get him out of prison. The idea is an old Spanish swindle, and it people are not aware of the fact and fall for the scheme, will unquestionably part with some of their hard earned coin without getting value received. Should you receive one of these letters kindly ignore it. The letter which they received reads as follows: "Dear Sir: Being imprisoned here, bankruptcy, I beseech you to help me to obtain a sum of $360,000 dollars I have in America. Being necessary to come here to raise the seizure of my baggage paying the registrar of the court the expense of my trial and recover my portmanteau containing a second pocket given, in an effort to help get him out of prison. As reward I will give to you the third part viz. $120,000. I cannot receive your answer in the prison but you send a cablegram to a person of my confidence who will deliver it to my address as follows: Senor Lamau—Calle Nueva 6 Maurruer, Spain. "All right Haug and Casper—" "Awaiting your answer to instruct you in all my secrets now I remain on 1 R de L. "First of all, answer by cable, not by letter."

FARMER PLAYS BIG PART IN TOWN BOOM

Spends Money With Home Merchants and Helps to Promote Prosperous Conditions Here. ALL INTERESTED SERVED. What has so far been said in this series of articles on the importance of buying of home-town merchants applies with equal force to the farmers residing in the vicinity of Kewaskum as it does to those who reside within its corporate limits. Bringing his patronage to the merchants of Kewaskum means money in his pocket. It is not a question of obligation but a question of profit. Probably by far the greatest progress that has been made in industry in the past 100 years has been achieved as a result of the division of industry. Time was when the farmer raised sheep, cut their wool, raised fodder to feed his flock over winter, dyed the dyes, spun them into wool with family or hired help, wove them into cloth, took them to market and bartered his rolls of goods for something else he needed. All the processes of whatever line of activity he engaged in had to be performed on his farm. And everything had to be run on a small scale or on a large scale. With the introduction of the division of labor there was brought about a big change. Now, besides, to trace this movement step by step, or to go into minute detail, but in a general way the new development worked out so that the farmer was freed of all the operations except raising the sheep and clipping the wool. Some other flocks over winter, dyed the dyes, spun them into a third spun it, a fourth wove it into cloth, a fifth carried it to market, a sixth sold it, and so on. PRINCIPLE IS SAME. If the farmer engaged in something else besides sheep-raising, the details were different but the general principle was the same. Just what these details are is unimportant, but what is important is that he is now responsible for only one of the six or more jobs. He can perform his one job better, as a result, and on a larger scale. Where there were six chances for him to suffer loss before, there is only one chance now, to concentrate his attention on this one job, so that he learns to perform it better than ever before, with less lost motion and on a larger scale. This brings us again to the farmers who today are raising and operating their own farms with their own hands. They grow grain, but they do not have to invest in mills and grind it to flour; they have dairy herds, but creameries and cheese factories free them of the necessity of working their own product into butter and cheese. And so on. Half the people in the United States are on farms—perhaps less than that. To make us a self-sustaining nation, therefore, each farmer must raise enough to feed his family and some other family. But he raises more than that, because he is engaged in farming to make money, and he must produce a surplus for general sale. RAILROADS CARRY SHIPPING. The task of shipping has been delegated to the railroads, and the task of selling has been delegated to the stores. He trucks his potatoes and other vegetables, apples and other hard products, hays, grain, butter, cheese, eggs, cream, milk and whatever else his place yields, to town. He sells them to the elevator and to the general store. They pay him cash and assume the responsibility of getting these products into the hands of the actual consumer. In all fairness, the principle of reciprocity obliges the farmer to patronize the merchants of Kewaskum in turn, for the articles he needs. The hardware merchant and implement dealer deserve his patronage in iron, tinware and tools; the grocery stores, flour and provisions; the butcher, fresh meats; the dry goods merchant, clothing and similar needs, and so on all the way down the line. OBLIGATION TO COMMUNITY. The farmer's duties and obligations to the community are not less than those of the town-dweller. He shares in all those things which make life a desirable place in which to live. His children attend his schools, his family attends church there and with the automobile facilitating distance, he and his wife and children participate in its social life to a large extent. His library, his public gatherings, his concerts and entertainments, his civic activities, his newspaper—all these agencies enrich the lives of the farmer and his family as much as those of the town-dweller. His house and barn are perhaps lighted by electricity from the town plant. The telephone line links him to the town as though to a neighbor next door, so that all he has to do to get the latest quotations is to take down the receiver and ask the merchant on the opposite end, or if there is a solid illness in his family a call to the village doctor brings the latter post-haste to the bedside of the stricken one. Every week there are scores of instances in which the near-by town adds to his profit, convenience and well-being. BEST INTERESTS SERVED. It is no duty we have to urge upon the farmer in return, for he has the best interests served by patronizing Kewaskum merchants. The savings that these make possible for Kewaskum residents, as discussed earlier in this series of articles, are effected also for the farmer. Every word of the argument that has preceded holds for him. Therefore—Buy in Kewaskum! NOTICE. Notice is hereby given to all those who are planning to pull off Halloween pranks, not to destroy any property. A close watch will be kept, and if any are caught they will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Geo. F. Brandt, Chief of Police.

BLAME FIREBUG FOR 15 DEATHS

Five-Story New York Tenement Is Destroyed by Flames.

MOST OF DEAD WERE CHILDREN

Other Blaze Set Making Total of 22 Lives Lost Recently—Fire Marshal Finds Clear Evidence of Maniac's Work.

New York, Oct. 23.—A pyromaniac who started a blaze in a tenement at Lexington avenue and One Hundred and Tenth street and cost fifteen lives. Numerous others are in hospitals badly burned. Most of the dead were children.

Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy and detectives found clear evidence that the fire had started in a baby carriage in the hallway, the blackened steel skeleton of which was found beside the charred woodwork.

A total of twenty-two lives are believed to have been sacrificed by the same fire maniacs within a month. Seven lives were lost at a fire of similar origin on Sept. 27 in West One Hundred and Ninth street, near Columbus avenue. In the first case, two baby carriages were ablaze in different hallways at almost the same minute.

Blazes in other parts of the city have been set by the same method of putting paper or old rags in baby carriages and touching a match to them.

The fifteen bodies were taken to Bellevue morgue, several so charred as to be unrecognizable. Two bodies were reported missing, and the missing and the unidentified may be the same.

Flames leaping from the roof alarmed the neighborhood for blocks in all directions before the tenants in the burning buildings were themselves thoroughly roused. The fire had raged up the stair well so swiftly that all escape by that route was out of before the sleeping occupants of the building knew their danger.

ALVIN OWSLEY HEADS LEGION

Young Texan Installed as National Commander of the Organization.

QUIT JOB TO FIGHT GERMANS

Went Overseas and Took Part in Two Major Operations—Illinois Turns Tide in His Favor—Election Made Unanimous.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 21.—Mounted on a figurative "old gray mare," Alvin Owsley of Denton, Tex., rode through the American Legion hall here and was installed on the platform as national commander for the forthcoming year. The young major outdistanced his competitors early in the balloting, and when the end came was more than 300 votes ahead.

Owsley, who is thirty-three years old, is one of the most popular soldiers ever honored with the biggest job of the legion.

A lawyer, Owsley resigned as a district attorney in Texas at the outbreak of the war and recruited a battalion. After serving as division insurance officer and senior instructor for the third officers' training camp at Camp Bowie, Tex., he went overseas and took part in two major operations.

Illinois turned the tide of the election. Opposing Owsley were William F. Deegan of New York, Joseph Thompson of Pennsylvania and John M. McCormick of Colorado. Each nomination brought equal cheers, and the result was doubtful. The first ten states scattered their votes. Then Illinois was called. The leader of the delegates rose and shouted: "Sixty votes for Owsley."

From then on down the list the votes for Owsley came fast and furious, the South voting scidily for the young man. The final count was: Owsley, 574; Deegan, 251; Thompson, 205; McCormick, 12.

The other candidates then withdrew their names and asked that the election be made unanimous. It was done. "There are just four things that the legion needs to push, just four things that are on our standard," Major Owsley said. "They are rehabilitation, hospitalization, adjusted compensation and Americanization. We're going to fight for the adjusted compensation to a finish and we'll win it, too. I will give everything I have to this service."

Chicago, Oct. 21.—A. D. Lasker, chairman of the United States shipping board, told delegates to the convention of the Audit Bureau of Circulations that Attorney General Daugherty's ruling barring liquor from all American ships spells the ruin of American passenger shipping. As the attorney general was the chief speaker of the evening, Mr. Lasker's remarks were looked upon as a direct challenge.

Jimmy Didn't Learn to Swim

Because his folks would never let him go near the water and for the same reason many a boy or girl will never study music—"Their parents will object to get a piano and the services of a good music teacher."

Times is the foundation musical instrument and you never have to carry it around with you because practically every youth while home has one.

Learn the piano first for its social value and greater and any small instrument is easily mastered after acquiring a good knowledge of music by means of a piano.

An Ever Growing Surplus

An accurate gauge of the growth, earning power, service, efficiency and conservative management of this bank is found in its ever enlarging surplus because an increasing surplus shows that some of its earnings have gone back into the business—earnings more than sufficient to pay dividends to its stockholders and running expenses, too.

Therefore the security back of the depositors' money here is growing stronger and stronger all the time—reinforced by a larger reserve. Therefore also we solicit checking or savings accounts from timorous people who seek solid, substantial and quick resources which are continually bettering themselves.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

FIRE UNDER ASHES

A GREAT many uncharitable, critical people run down the unfortunate man or woman, standing on the brink of discouragement and failure, without looking for the real cause.

It may be ill health, it may be shock from the loss of a loved one, it may be misfortune, which in spite of utmost vigilance comes to all of us, or it may be inaptitude or inability, but whatever the cause, let us be patient and considerate before we launch our austere criticisms, and throw our hands in condemnation.

If our hearts are right, and it is assumed they are, let us in a humane spirit seek to remove the ashes from the live coals beneath, and fan them into a hopeful blaze.

Whatever may be the prevailing opinion for or against such a procedure, this is the noble way, almost certain to give encouragement to the heartened and lift them up in a new world where hope lives eternally and Truth and Mercy smile kindly, even when the storm beats hardest and the days are darkest.

If we will look deeply into despairing hearts we will find that under the ashes of sorrow there are always coals of living fire, which kindness, sympathy and unselfish helpfulness can fan into a glorious flame.

Even in the souls of the most disreputable and hardened sinners there is ever burning an immortal spark of the heavenly fire hidden somewhere beneath the smoldering gray ashes, waiting to be renewed.

And in spite of the frowns of the world, in spite of courts and prisons, in spite of heresmitage, of poverty, of riches, or pomp, pride or envy, this spark survives all through our earthly existence, down to the final moment when life itself despairingly flares up and goes out, done with its temporal house of clay.

The question may then come to us as to whether we have played our part as becomes true men and women, and likewise whether the spark in our own souls has not been hidden by the ashes which we, through neglect of others, have permitted to cover and darken it.

It is so easy for sympathies and love to go blind from disease that unless we keep them ever burning in our own hearts they will never blaze sufficiently to warn and cheer the hearts of others, lost on the way and too proud or weak to call for help.

KIDDIES SIX

By Will M. Maupin

TODAY

I CARE not what the future holds for me alone. I only know in summer heats and winter colds I'll do the best as I can go.

I fear no future, for I know whatever betide along life's way, For I am master of today.

Not time, nor fate, nor circumstance Can crush the hopes that in me lie; The storms that rage, the lightning's glance, But clear the atmosphere and sky. I fear no future, for I know Whatever betide along life's way, For me the flowers bloom and blow, And I am master of today.

Come good, come ill, I will not yield To sullen frowns nor adverse grasp; With utmost strength I'll stand and wield The weapons that my hands may clasp. I'll waste no time in idle thought Of what the future hides away; As given me, so have I wrought, And I am master of today.

GRANDPA GRAY FOX

"It is too bad, but it cannot be helped," said Grandpa Gray Fox, and all the little foxes said:

"What is it that cannot be helped?" "We like to make our homes in the hollows of old trees, or we like to make them where there are ice caves and rocky dens.

"We do not care to burrow for a home as our cousins, the Red Fox family, do.

"It cannot be helped that we do this way, for it has been the way of gray foxes for years and years and years.

"It is too bad that this is our way and that we should care only for such homes because we can be captured more easily than our cousins.

"Our cousins burrow away and make their home where they can be safe and hidden, but we like homes all ready made for us.

"We're somewhat like people who care to live in furnished homes.

"Others like the kind where they fix it all up themselves.

"It is not that we do not care about our homes, and it is not that we do not care for home life.

"We do.

"But we care for homes already made. They seem to appeal to us most, and we don't seem to be able to change our homes, as I've said.

"Of course our cousins are safer. But we will have to run the risks for the sake of doing our own way.

"And, after all, it is quite natural. Quite natural.

"It is true, too, that our fur is more popular than that of our cousins, the Red Fox family; but I will not talk about that."

And all the little foxes shivered and said:

"Please do not talk about that."

"Then, too," Grandpa Gray Fox continued, "we're not as shrewd and cunning as Mr. Red Fox and all of that family.

"We must admit that they are smarter than we are in knowing how to escape and in knowing how to fool those who're on the lookout for them.

"But we know how to climb trees. Ah, yes, we know that."

"It is something we love to do, too," said the little foxes.

"Good!" said Grandpa Gray Fox, "for from a tree you can often see away into the distance. At any rate you can see further than if you were down on the ground.

"And up a tree you are safe if a dog is hunting you."

"But, best of all," said the little foxes, "it is such fun to climb trees."

"The Gray Foxes," Grandpa Gray Fox continued, "are good to their children, just as the members of the Red Fox family are good to their young.

"We would think it disgraceful not to be kind and good to the dear little foxes. Both the Daddy Gray Foxes and the Mother Gray Foxes are very devoted to their children.

"It is the same with the Daddy Red Foxes and the Mother Red Foxes, as I said, too.

"And we are all happy in our homes. The Mother and Daddy Red Foxes and the Mother and Daddy Gray Foxes are devoted to each other.

"Such happy fox mates as there are!"

"Grandma Gray Fox has been my devoted mate all my life. She is such a dear, dear Fox."

"And Grandma Gray Fox smiled at Grandpa Gray Fox.

"You've talked to the little foxes quite awhile," said Grandpa Gray Fox, "and I know that they've enjoyed it so much that they've doubtless worked up an excellent appetite. I've prepared a little banquet for them."

"Now, children," said Grandpa Gray Fox, "you see what a wonderful grandmother you have; so dear and kind and thoughtful of the little foxes."

And the little foxes grinned and began to frolic at the pleasant thought of the banquet.

Then Grandma Gray Fox brought forth a banquet of nuts and fruit and the foxes ate until they could eat no more, which was something they thoroughly enjoyed—as it is something so many enjoy, animals and other creatures!

A QUESTIONNAIRE

By HATTIE OXFORD

(By McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

"Jerry Mayfield is just about so-so." The head of the office force briefly and carelessly summed up the ability of the man who had been working a few weeks in a minor clerical position for the Stockgood company, manufacturers of electrical goods.

"So I should judge," the superintendent assented easily. He wasn't going to worry; there had to be a certain number of "about-so-so" men in a minor capacity in his employ anyway.

For a few weeks more, this same Jerry kept on his "about-so-so" way with a sloazy conscientiousness; and then, without warning, he changed his habits and became a puzzle that neither superintendent nor head of the office force could solve. Instead of smoking and fooling away his time during the noon hour, he began to study. A history of the American Indians kept him occupied for several of these noon hours; next, transportation from its crudest forms to its present amazing development; next astronomy. It presently seemed that there was no subject in the universe that Jerry did not intend to get acquainted with.

And his studying did not interfere with his efficiency in the office; indeed, it even raised it to a grade higher than the "about-so-so" grade.

Sometimes in the office, when there came those moments of nothing special to do, Jerry would talk over what he had been reading in such a simple, interesting, vivid way that he compelled the attention of all within hearing, including the superintendent. The latter discovered to his surprise that Jerry had a fertile brain; the ideas he put into it from his reading would sprout, grow and bear an original, spiky kind of fruit. Later a rush of delight came over him when he learned that Jerry had been looking into the history and the make-up of the Stockgood electrical appliances until he knew more about them than the superintendent himself.

Why this change in Jerry? His associates questioned.

"Ah, ah," stammered Jerry, his cheeks growing red when the question was put to him straight. "I ran across a big idea one day and it got me hard. I'm preparing to answer a questionnaire. It's being given in installments and it will be the stiffest kind of a test. A man able to answer it proves himself educated, brainy and resourceful. Don't know as I can do it, but I'm going to try."

"Elaborate?" queried one.

"Some Harvard professor's."

"No, I'll tell you something. I want to see how it works out first."

The questioner had to be satisfied with that.

Jerry had been keeping on with his self-improvement course about a year, when one day the superintendent called him into the office.

"Mayfield, you're wasted where you are. I'm going to make you assistant to our advertising manager; you know the goods so well." He named the salary.

After a while Jerry came to sufficiently stammer his thanks and ask a few questions.

He burst in on his wife that evening. "Say, Mildred, we can have an electric stove and a washer and—"

"Why, no we can't, Jerry; I'd love them, but we can't afford them."

"We can; I tell you we can," he sang joyfully. "We can afford heaps and heaps of things; electric toys for Harold and I'm going to earn—" he whispered in her ear.

"Jerry, you're not either; you've gone crazy."

It was a few weeks later at a picnic of the Stockgood local constituency.

"Say, Mayfield, loosen up and tell us the author of the questionnaire that brought your promotion," commanded a former office associate.

"I will," agreed Jerry, promptly and cheerfully. "It was this way:"

The whole company sprang to an attitude of attention.

"A magazine article on 'Child Training' convinced me that was criminally negligent of my nine-year-old Harold because I didn't answer his thousand-and-one questions fully and accurately, and also that my job as a father was bigger than my Stockgood one. After that I tried to treat the boy's questions seriously; but, gee whizz!" He mopped his brow. "To answer fully and accurately the questions of any youngster from four up to the 'teen age, when he knows more than all his elders put together, is some job."

Many in the audience laughed sympathetically.

"Well, I've just been educating myself along the lines of Harold's interests. He just had to know all about the company's goods for one thing. Mind you, I don't say I've been able to answer all of his questions, some were too silly to answer, but some demanded my best thought and I tried to give it. The questionnaire is oral, to be continued indefinitely. Harold is the author."

Vinegar From Apple Parings. To make vinegar from apple parings follow these instructions: Pour clear water over the parings, stir and let stand over night. In the morning press, strain and add a cake of yeast foam to the liquid. It may be kept in a stone jar covered with two thicknesses of cheesecloth. When fermentation ceases, get a little mother of vinegar and add to it.

This Bird Is Fat. Young albatrosses are so laden with their own fat that one of them may go five months without taking any nourishment, says the American Forestry Magazine. This is likewise true of young penguins and other sea fowl.

Why the Salmon Is Pink. Men of science were long puzzled to know why the various salmon and trout have red or pink flesh. Now they believe that the color comes from the food they eat. All of the salmon family are fond of shellfish.

Richard Lloyd Jones says

About Our New Crop, Culture

In 1847 a play by an American author was produced in a New York theatre. It was the custom then, as long since, for Americans themselves to believe that that which represented purest culture must come from over seas.

Before the curtain rose on this new play, the leading actor stepped before the footlights and read a poem-prologue which scoffed at the idea that an American could write a drama, and then rebuked the sneer by emphatically declaring that an American can. The audience greeted the patriotic plea and the play with cheers.

Since that day many Americans have written many great plays. An American culture has expressed itself as well in the field of fiction, poetry and philosophy; in art, music and in science.

Culture is just as much a crop as corn. It is the refinement of the product of the cultivated field. Growing great crops, producing great bulk, we have refined our output into the best makes of food and clothes the world has ever known. From the earth we dig both gold and iron ore, and through the refining processes we produce the delicately intricate watch.

The genius that can dig out the hillside and convert it into a watch can find the melody of the brook in the string of the violin.

An American pianist who had acquired international note went abroad to play. With the skill of 1922 she had the frail faith of 1847, and had to go abroad to discover America.

In her first performance on y'once, and then for an encore, did she play a composition penned by an American composer. The critics rebuked her.

"We know what European music is," they said. "We came to get your message. We came to rejoice over the harvest of your crop of culture. Give us not that which is ours; give us that which is yours."

America is developing an architecture as distinct and as secure as that of Ancient Greece or Rome. One of our greatest sculptors found his art on the parched plains of Utah. One of our greatest painters came from a little town hidden in the foothills of the Adirondacks. He has pictured for the future historian the romance of the opening West.

O. Henry, the master artist of short-story writing in the English language, found his fiction in the ranch life of Texas.

When a $10,000 prize was recently offered for the best contributed movie scenario, it went to an unknown writer from Apalachicola, a small town with a big name. Brains are found on Main Street as well as on Broadway.

The phonograph, the radio and the moving picture screens are building, not only appreciative, but the creative genius to which appreciation responds.

We need no longer look east for the finer things. That east is looking westward for that which we have to give.

We are ripening a crop of culture just as surely as we are ripening a crop of corn.
