LEARN TO AIM

BEFORE the soldier is permitted to shoot his rifle he is taught to aim it. Over and over again he must practice holding his weapon, and sighting it.

It is discouraging work. With the target before him the recruit naturally wants to try to hit it.

But to permit him to fire too soon would be fatal to his efficiency. He will never shoot well unless he first learns to shoot correctly.

And the long drill in holding the rifle properly, and aiming it properly is never wasted.

These rules are as necessary in life as they are on the rifle range. It is easy enough to aim high, but it is not easy to reach your target. Before you actually set out to accomplish your ambition you must learn how to accomplish it. This means long and often uninteresting toil, but without it all your aiming at the target will be useless.

There can be no success without training, severe and continuous. You can no more become a bank president without learning how to be a bank president than you can go to Chicago without knowing how to get there.

Emerson's advice to hitch your wagon to a star is excellent advice, but it would have been of more practical value if he had added a few details as to how it is to be accomplished.

Do not begrudge the months or the weeks or the years that you spend in learning how to aim. You'll get far more hits if you put in hard work at training than you will if you hope before you have learned to hold your rifle.

Genius can sometimes fire at slight, but even genius often misses unless it learns how to fire. And genius succeeds more often than does ordinary ability because it is great enough to recognize the value of hard work. No one worked harder than did Michael Angelo or Keats or any of the geniuses whose names will endure forever.

Aim as high as you can, always. But always learn how to aim before you fire.

Misunderstanding

By GRACE E. HALL

YOU'RE far away tonight, my dearie, dearie. The sunshine has been mocking me all day. I've strained my eyes 'til they are weary, weary. Longing to see you passing by this way! Within my heart a pain is growing, growing. The truth insists that I shall heed and know That further still you're ever going, going. And oh, I love you dearie, love you so!

The world is very cold, my dearie, dearie. Outside the magic circle of your arms; My heart is pleading to be cheery, cheery. Safe locked against your breast from all alarms; The tears persist tonight in falling, falling. The breezes whisper of an unknown love. And 'twere the silence I am calling, calling— Come back to me, I love you, love you so!

MENTAL EXPLOSIONS

IF BY any chance you should fall into the lamentable habit of becoming truculent, peevish, ill-humored and sharp-tongued in moments of trial, take a new tack and head straight for the delectable part of good-will.

Nothing is more detrimental to the individual happiness and success than mental hysteria, whether they be of a mild or severe form. Often, in spite of himself, the victim of passionate outbursts is plunged into a sea of trouble from which he cannot extricate himself without loss of friends and self-respect.

Men and women have fallen from high estates by allowing a burst of anger to sweep them off their mental balance and been taught a very trenchant principle for future judgment and action, in most cases, however, too late to be of any use to them.

If you will look about you, you will see them among the sad-faced and forlorn, sking out a bare existence in a lowly station from which they are unable to rise because of their ungovernable spirit.

When an automobile has been wrecked by a careless driver it serves as a warning to others, but it fails to restore the car.

Just so do foolish persons who have ruined their life prospects through impetuous impulse serve as warnings to the observing and thoughtful.

And yet the world goes on a large part of it unmindful of what is taking place under its very eyes.

The true conclusion is obvious: if you will apply the experience of others to yourself, profit by their failures and hold your spirit in check when it is about to burst forth into a violent quake, you will have nothing to fear.

SCHOOL DAYS

"It is on the lower slopes of Etna where time and weather have most completely broken up and washed down the ancient lava, that the creative side of the volcano is best seen. Virtually the whole circuit is a garden spot of date palms, bananas, oranges, lemons, olives, figs and almonds. Further up are nut trees—mostly the beautifully ordered filbert orchards near Castiglione—and a forest of chestnuts, cork pine and oak. Above 6,000 feet is the region that fire has kept for its own domain—a dreary, rough, black desert of lava and ash. Down from this region and into the forest and orchard and farm zones, tongues of molten lava have encroached at frequent intervals. These are left, significant warnings of Etna's potentialities for destruction, only so long as they must be. Some enterprising planters have blasted holes in fairly recent lava flows and have made the artificially fractured material support olive and almond and citrus trees.

"Few of the towns and villages near Etna have escaped destruction or serious damage from one or more of the numerous eruptions. One town that seemingly lives a charmed existence is Randazzo which, though less than ten miles from the crater has always escaped. ### Has Anyone Laughed At You Because . . .

You are fussy about the way folk handle books!

"Don't be an old fuss!" This is what the bookish and sometimes the bookish hurl at you. Never mind! You really love a book and you can't stand being a witness to its mutilations. Books mean something to you—probably the laughers couldn't stand seeing you turn their held glasses, or their tennis rackets, etc. A book is a microcosm of a contrived thing, going through hundreds of processes between the brain of the writer and store counter. You, owning it, appreciate it, and appreciation is jealous always of depreciation. Books are one of the greatest of man's possessions and as such deserve a little more than casual care, especially by book-lovers and collectors!

Your get-away here is: At the worst—you are over—"fussy" over something worth being "fussy" about.

Mother's Cook Book

For omelets olives are indispensable. Cut eight rounds of bread and spread with softened butter. The rounds should be about two inches in diameter. Toast them lightly before spreading with butter. Prepare a paste, using six strips chopped fine and then washed with three table-spoons of mayonnaise. Have ready one-fourth of a cup of stuffed olives. Coat the rounds with the paste, then the chopped olives mixture. Garnish with a slice of scallion olive and serve at once.

Zwieback.

Zwieback is often not obtainable and a recipe for it will be cherished by many.

Take a crusty cake softened in one-half cup of warm water. Add two table-spoons of sugar and mix well. Add flour to make a thin batter, about half a cupful. Set aside to rise in a warm place, covering well with a cloth. An hour later, when bubbles form on top, add two more table-spoons of sugar, two table-spoons of melted lard, two well-beaten eggs, cinnamon and salt to a bit more. Beat well cover and let rise again in a warm place. When light make into two small loaves and bake in a hot oven fifteen minutes. Take from the oven, cool, cut in half-inch slices and bake until brown on both sides, in a hot oven. Keep air tight. Fine for babies and convalescents.

Is World's Most Storied Volcano

Etna's Eruptions Have Engaged Attention of Writers Since the World Was Young.

Washington.—"The newspaper men who are writing hastily about Etna these days were scooped some years ago by at least three rather well-known fellow craftsmen: Homer Pindar and Plato," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society. "For this volcano, greatest in Europe and next in the world, has been pouring out lava and ashes, destroying farms and villages and interesting philosophers and scientists since the world was young. Pindar was the first writer to mention Etna's fires, in 474 B. C. and since that time more than 100 eruptions are said to have taken place.

"A much more remote history of Etna has been pieced together by modern geologists who look upon the whole island of Sicily as a continuation from the great reservoir of molten material under the mountain. They picture a time when the sea rolled over the site of Sicily. Then, presumably in the Pliocene, Etna's tip emerged; and through the ages it has steadily built itself and Sicily up.

Both Creator and Destroyer.

"Etna might be described in the terms of an Eastern religion as both the Creator and the Destroyer. It has created Sicily; its disintegrated lava has given a soil of matchless fertility which supports rich vineyards and orchards; and it has drawn to its slopes, in spite of obvious dangers, hundreds of thousands of tillers of the soil and their towns and villages. As one writer puts it 'towns succeed towns along its base like pearls in a necklace, and when a stream of lava effects a breach in the chain of human habitations, it is closed up again as soon as the lava has had time to cool.' Many of the villages on the mountain's slope are built almost exclusively from blocks of black lava, and have a somber, depressing aspect in consequence.

"It is on the lower slopes of Etna where time and weather have most completely broken up and washed down the ancient lava, that the creative side of the volcano is best seen. Virtually the whole circuit is a garden spot of date palms, bananas, oranges, lemons, olives, figs and almonds. ### Truant Sleeps on Cornice of Building

Two policemen strolling along the street in New Britain, Conn., saw what appeared to be a bundle hanging over the cornice of a four-story building. They went to the roof and awakened Joseph Stanton, sixteen years old, who was asleep on the cornice.

The boy had remained on late the night before, and, fearing parental wrath if he went home, climbed to the roof of the building where he was employed, lay down on the cornice, and fell asleep.

No matter what part of the world you may find yourself in, few things make you feel more at home than to walk into a store and discover your favorite smoking tobacco for sale.

You get a great thrill from your home newspaper in a strange land and an even greater thrill in meeting someone from the old home town. But tobacco certainly comes next in the order of importance away-from-home things.

With your favorite tobacco in your favorite pipe, life is worth living almost anywhere in the globe.

This thought was inspired by the following interesting letter from W. E. Bromley, an Edgeworth smoker from Fort Wayne, Ind.:

Larus & Brother Co., Richmond, Va. Gentlemen:

In some of your advertisements I have seen a picture of a man smoking a pipe. I have a pipe and I have a pipe, but I have never seen a picture of a man smoking a pipe. I have a pipe and I have a pipe, but I have never seen a picture of a man smoking a pipe.

When in Valparaiso, South America, I could get it and when I was in a foreign land, I could get it. I have a pipe and I have a pipe, but I have never seen a picture of a man smoking a pipe.

If that's going some, you'll tell me, Yours truly, W. E. Bromley.

Man and Wife Joint Pastors of Church

Boston.—For perhaps the first time in the history of New England, husband and wife are joint pastors of the same church. Rev. Harold L. Pickett and Rev. Anita Trueman Pickett, just called to the pulpit of the Peabody Unitarian church, will take up their duties on a basis of absolute equality.

Mrs. Pickett is the extraordinary one of the couple. Before she took up the study for the ministry she was a successful lecturer, and was held in high respect by such men as Elbert Hubbard, Ralph Waldo Trine, Dr. Charles Wesley Emerson of the school of oratory by that name, and by such women as Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Margaret Sangster.

She was persuaded to enter the Unitarian ministry and in 1908 went to the Meadville Theological school in Pittsburgh, where she met the man who is now her husband. On their wedding day, she says, both filled pulpits, the husband preaching in the morning and she in the afternoon.

Mrs. Pickett has three children, and devoted herself to their rearing, not being ordained until two years ago. She shares the pulpit with her husband, but runs the home herself.

How Fashion Is Making Fur Fly

Probable Extinction of Certain Mammals Is Cause of Worry to Naturalists.

Washington.—Naturalists all over the United States are worrying over the probable extinction of certain of our mammals due to the decrees of fashion that women wear furs all four seasons of the year. Museums are hastening to obtain specimens for their collections before it is too late. Newspapers say that we are enriching the interior of Africa by wearing monkey fur on our garments. Soon some of the animals which exist in abundance today will be in the class with the dodo and the auk.

"It is only by educating the American public to the need for periods of protection for these animals that we will be able to preserve one of the country's most valuable assets for the enjoyment and profit of future generations," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its Washington (D. C.) headquarters.

Seals Gone From Pacific Island.

"An expedition to the island of Gaudalupe off the coast of Lower California, which the National Geographic society recently helped finance for the purpose of finding if any specimens of the fur seals which once lived there in great colonies still were to be found, proved conclusively that no traces of these animals have appeared on the island for many years. They have been exterminated by unscrupulous fishermen. Unless the public comes to appreciate the danger menacing many of our other fur-bearers throughout the country, their life story may soon be that of the seal.

"It has been estimated that America spends yearly $100,000,000 for furs. The trade of fur merchants in raw and manufactured furs for import and export trade in New York alone being about $275,000,000.

"And for such a trade Billy Beaver, Tommy Marten, Jackie Skunk, and Harry Muskrat—to slip into the nomenclature of bed-time stories—are not only paying with their lives but Minneapolis.—The Minnesota health department has under consideration it was announced, a plan for treatment of the city water with sodium iodide to prevent simple goiter. This method of treatment, the sodium iodide supplying iodine, lack of which is said to cause goiter, was first advocated by Dr. William A. Plummer, goiter specialist with the Mayo clinic of Rochester. It is now being tried out in a number of cities in the Middle West.

Rare Violins Loaned Young Scotch Genius

London.—Two wonderful violins are to be heard in London shortly. One is a Stradivarius and the other a Joseph Guarnerius. Each is valued at £5,250.

They are the property of R. D. Waddell of Glasgow, a collector of violins. He has lent them to the Glasgow youth, William Primrose, who has been hailed by such authorities as Sir London Ronald and Mischa Elman as a violinist who has a bright future.

Both fiddles are now in London, and special measures are being taken to safeguard them. It was in the shop of John Betts in the city of London that the Strad changed hands 100 years ago for a modest guinea. A fiddle on the counter asked for a guinea. Mr. Betts at once paid the sum. Afterward he found that it was

With the threatened existence of their kind. The high prices which have been offered for their pelts have led to intensive trapping to the clearing of woodland and to the draining of marshes. In many parts of our country beavers and martens have been exterminated, and even Alaska is beginning to worry about the growing scarcity of fur-bearing animals within her boundaries.

"Some of the states of the Union have realized the danger into which they have fallen and are establishing close periods for the fur-bearers. Until a few years ago the fur-traders and trappers were the only ones who were interested in the fur-bearing animals. Now that some furrier knows that these muskrats can become as valuable as any of the five stock on his place. He protects them during the mating season, and takes only a reasonable number of pelts for market during the dead of winter when the fur is good.

"The great demand for furs has led to the rapid increase of fur-farming throughout this country and Canada. Recent reports say that there are already about 800 fox farms in Canada alone and that the owners of them are growing wealthy on their profits. The small fur-bearers are the ones of most interest to the public. They are the ones who are being exterminated by unscrupulous fishermen. Unless the public comes to appreciate the danger menacing many of our other fur-bearers throughout the country, their life story may soon be that of the seal.

Various methods have been suggested for bringing the fur supply within the neighborhood of the demand. Large tracts in various parts of the country could be set aside as permanent preserves. It has also been suggested that the national forests of Colorado alone might be administered as game preserves, the national forests of Colorado alone being capable of producing $10,000 worth of fur each year by the conservation of the wild animals which already live within their confines.

The United States Biological survey has been making an intensive study of the best methods of raising wild animals in captivity, and reports that foxes have been raised with great success. Silver foxes, blue foxes, skunks and muskrats can be raised successfully, and further investigations are being made into the possibility of raising minks, martens and fishers, which up to the present time do not breed in captivity or else produce inferior animals.

Knitted Drop-Stitch Jacquette; Variety in Summer Wrap Styles

NOW comes the midsummer time of the year when the chief concern of many is to acquire "something cool to wear," yet, without, up to the mark in fashion. This desire to play up to the weather is most satisfactorily realized in knit fiber silk. It is safe to prophesy that were a motion to be put acclaiming knit fiber silk frocks, blouses, sweaters and the like, as ideal for summer wear, a mighty chorus of "aye, ayes" would meet throughout fashionland. Adorable are they over lingerie frocks and the latest is to wear these lovely colorful throws over the strictly plain knit white mouair or jersey slipovers. Present styles in summer wraps are presented in such a variety of materials and in so many different models that it is impossible to designate any particular type as being the fashion. characterize the garments of recent appearance. These are their length and their straight lines. No matter what material or color is used, if a model conforms to the general rule as to length and line, it may be worn with the assurance that it is in good style. For dressy affairs, another whirlwind development of late summer styles has been the return to favor of the old-fashioned Spanish or cashmere shawl. The fortunate woman who possesses one of these treasures may have it adapted to the present mode and so add a colorful and charming garment to her summer wardrobe. The two wraps pictured above are

Every Little Movement. Drapery has followed a rather interesting evolution. It has proceeded from the left side to both sides; then to the front, and now to the back. None of these drapery positions is really out of the mode. All are visible in the current fashions. The apron has given the front draping a new lease on life and it is a toss-up between apron and bustle which one will win. The apron that ties on with a bow in back, shares in both movements.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

To give variety and elegance to formal meals there is no better aid than a well-stocked shelf of jams, jellies and preserves. This is the time of the year when we fill the following are a few suggestions in regard to the use of them:

Any pudding like rice, bread, left-over cake or plain custard, is richer and more tasty when dotted with bits of jam or jelly.
Milk toast is delicious served with blackberry or loganberry jam or jelly.
A firm jelly may be cut into squares to use in fruit salads, or to decorate cake frosting or ice cream.
Jelly roll, jelly tart, jelly doughnuts and jelly omelet are all easy to produce.
Jams and jellies are good to serve on waffles or griddle cakes; piled with butter and jelly between, they may be cut like pie and served as desserts.
Rhubarb jelly is particularly good with ham. Grape, currant, mint and pineapple jelly are served with meats.
When serving game, a spoonful of currant jelly added to the gravy makes a delicious sauce.
Tiny baking powder biscuits, opened and spread with butter, then with jam or jelly, make a tasty hot sandwich.
Crush strawberries and mix with equal parts of sugar, allowing until the sugar is entirely dissolved, then can in tight cans and keep in a cool place. These may be used in winter for strawberry shortcake. If too sweet add a little vinegar.
Use rhubarb with various fruits—two parts of rhubarb to one of fruit such as strawberry, pineapple or raspberry, will make a delicious jam, with not only the flavor of the fruit, but with the increase in bulk which the rhubarb gives.

SUGGESTIONS AND RECIPES

Necessity being the mother of invention, the cook finding she had no sweet milk to pour over her slice of ham for baking, used a cupful of buttermilk. Of course it curdled, but when the baking was over the ham was deliciously tender and tender. Potatoes were added and baked with the ham and the result was a puffy, brown, well-seasoned potato.
Small dairy sandwiches spread with butter, marmalade and grated cheese and placed in the broiling oven to become brown on each side, are delicious for either tea time or a late supper, with hot chocolate or coffee.
Jungle Stew.—Soak one cupful of kidney beans overnight. In the morning boil them in water to cover, add salt and a few minutes, then add a tablespoonful of bacon in the frying pan and cook one large onion finely-chopped; when the onion is brown add the beans with one-fourth of a cup of tomatoes and one-fourth of a cupful of sherry macaroni. Simmer until the macaroni is done, season well and serve.
Dutch Pot Pie.—Cut into dice a half-pound of smoked ham, fry slowly until well-browned through, then add six potatoes sliced and three onions, also sliced. Cook for a few minutes, then add them to a mortar with three plants of boiling water. Cover with biscuits cut into squares and boil 20 minutes well covered. Parsley may be added if desired. Prepare the biscuit as usual, with either baking powder or soda and sour milk. A delicious biscuit (another discovery by necessity) made with buttermilk and baking powder is especially delicious as dumplings.
Queen of Bread Pudding.—Take one pint of milk, one pint of bread crumbs, the yolks of two eggs, one cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of melted butter and one-half of a lemon to a cupful or less of powdered sugar. Beat the white of the eggs very stiff; add two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar; cover the pudding with a layer of the sugar and lemon juice, then cover with the meringue and bake until brown. Serve with cream if desired. This may be served hot or cold.
Salsify Soup.—Scrape twelve good-sized roots of salsify and throw them at once into cold water. Cut into thin slices, cover with one quart of water and cook gently for an hour until tender. Add one quart of milk, two tea-spoons of salt, a few dashes of pepper and two tablespoonfuls of butter cut into bits. Turn into a tureen and serve with oyster crackers. For a more pronounced oyster flavor add a few pieces of soaked, shredded cod fish.

To Reconstruct Famous Shrine. Plans for the reconstruction of the shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, at Quebec, which was destroyed by fire last year, have now been completed and it is estimated the new sanctuary will cost over $1,000,000. The church will be larger than the one destroyed, and will take over a year to complete.

DIVERSIONS OF THE ROMANS

Sporting Men Used Quail as Well as Cocks for Popular Combats in the Arena.

The Romans used quail as well as cocks for fighting. Quail combats were well known among the ancients, and especially at Athens. The Chinese have been always extremely fond of quail-fighting, as appears from many accounts of those people. The Sumatrans likewise use the birds in the manner of gamecocks.

Cocks and quail, fitted for the purpose of engaging one another to the last gasp for diversion are frequently compared by the Roman writers to gladiators, remarks the Detroit News. A circle was made in which the birds were placed, and he whose quail was driven out of the circle lost the stake, which was sometimes money and occasionally the quails themselves. Another practice was to produce one of the birds, which being first flipped with the middle finger, a feather was then plucked from its head. If the quail bore this operation without flinching his master gained the stake, but lost it if the bird ran away.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.
Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.
Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.
Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.
However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Betty Knew. Betty had her little brother out playing with her. He fell down, and while he wasn't really hurt he set up a yelling.

Do They All Do It? The other day there came to a local hotel a young traveling man of a very ostentatious type. The other men in the hotel watched him with amusement until he took from his pocket a powder puff and mirror and before the whole assembly powdered his chin and nose. Then they laughed openly.

But he was not dismayed. "I just came from Pittsburgh," he explained, "and the coal dust there is so thick that we either have to wash our faces every hour or so or powder occasionally."
However, the other men laughed on.—Exchange.

Fashion in Clocks. Not so long ago the belle was apt to receive ten or twelve clocks among her wedding presents. These were of the large kind adapted to the "parlor" mantle. People needed clocks more in those days than they do now in this day of wrist watches, yet clocks are still needed, but most of them are small and practically noiseless. Such clocks fit a real need on the dressing table, or a desk. The simpler ones are always in demand in the kitchen.

Reasons Why the Transportation Act of 1920 Should Not Be Changed

A CONSTRUCTIVE MEASURE: The Transportation Act provides the basis and specifies the method of arriving at just and reasonable rates. It is a piece of highly constructive legislation and was enacted after a most careful and exhaustive study. It clarified and gave certainty to the then existing law and promises justice to all. It did not guarantee the carriers against loss subsequent to August 31, 1920.

SECTION 15a---RULE OF RATE-MAKING: This section of the Act provides a basis for fixing rates that will produce revenue sufficient to meet operating costs, taxes and a 5 1/4 per cent return upon the value of the property used for transportation purposes, as ascertained by the Interstate Commerce Commission. This is fair to the public and is intended to be fair to the investor. It does not create any new principles, but defines clearly principles which were established by the Federal Constitution and have been repeatedly applied by the Courts.

SECTION 13---CO-OPERATION BETWEEN COMMISSIONS: This section insures a uniform system of state and interstate rates. It protects and maintains the supremacy of interstate rates and denies to the state the power to nullify or disregard rates established by the Interstate Commerce Commission. It clarifies and reaffirms the principles of our Constitution, abolishing the cause of many contentions and frequent litigation over rates, and has for its justification many of the reasons underlying the adoption of the Constitution. It makes it possible for the Federal Government to establish and maintain its interstate rates, and to secure the co-operation of the state commissions, and thereby to simplify the railroad problem.

NATIONAL PROGRESS: Our nation is making progress. Our wealth is increasing. Our commerce is expanding. Our future prosperity is dependent largely upon adequate transportation. It is imperative, therefore, that the regulation of railroads shall be just and wise. This is what the Transportation Act undertakes to establish.

TRANSPORTATION ACT SHOULD HAVE A FAIR TRIAL: The Transportation Act has been in effect a little over three years. During that time the commercial conditions have been very abnormal in this and other countries, and the Transportation Act has not been tested under normal conditions. It has only partially realized the benefits contemplated, but has justified itself, and should be continued in effect until experience demonstrates the need of a change.

PLYMOUTH SELF-FEED ENSILAGE CUTTERS

"Plymouth" Feed Cutters are the result of twenty-five years' experience and practical study of conditions and needs in the farm and dairy field. They embrace every advantage known to other similar machines, and many vital features which are original with us and can be had only in the "Plymouth Self-Feed." Below are some mighty strong points for you to think about before you buy a feed cutter.

Automatic Self-Feed—This feature consists of a traveling feed chain, made of heavy iron links riveted to a chain which passes over the lower feed roller. Throw the fodder into the feed box and the "Plymouth" does the rest.

Danger-Proof Self-Feed Rollers—Here's another strong feature original with the "Plymouth." It consists of four large rollers of cast iron. The traveling feed chain passes over the lower roller, just passing the lower front roller, which is six inches in diameter, and smooth. The upper and lower hind rollers are ribbed. The 8-inch automatic roller at the top, to the right, is a special feature of the "Plymouth." It acts as a lever or weight to keep the fodder passing through continuously, depending on its own gravity to keep the material going through without a hitch. Two coil springs serve to exert even and steady pressure on the automatic roller as the volume of fodder increases in going through. The spring feature is entirely automatic and is only to be had in the "Plymouth." It absolutely prevents clogging.

MAGNUS JOHNSON WINS BY 50,000

Farmer-Labor Candidate Defeats Gov. Preus of Minnesota for Senate.

HE'S A LA FOLLETTE MAN

Going Back to the Farm at Kimball and Help His Boys Get in the Rest of the Hay.

St. Paul, Minn., July 17.—Magnus Johnson, a practical farmer of Kimball, Minn., was elected United States senator from Minnesota in succession to the late Knute Nelson by 50,000 majority.

He defeated Gov. J. A. O. Preus, who came out on a platform supporting the Harding administration.

Governor Preus, in conceding Johnson's election, made only a brief statement "thanking those who labored so earnestly and unselfishly for my election."

The senator-elect was jubilant when informed that he had won. His first statement was:

"I don't know what I am United States senator? What do you think of that?"

"Well," he said later when he was assured of election, "of course now I'll go back to the farm and help the boys get in the rest of the hay and then finish the harvest, and then I'll go out organizing again. You see we used it."

"I will do this because I believe that the farmers and the workers and the business men can by united action better their conditions."

The senator-elect declared he was against the world court and the league of nations and against any foreign entanglements, and he insisted that he did not want to go on record.

"You see," he said, "I will not until I talk to my colleagues, Brookhart and such, before I decide."

"Recognition of soviet Russia? Well, I don't want to go on record on that now. Leave Russia out. Between you and me, I am for recognition right away, but I don't want to go off half-cocked."

"Prohibition? Leave that to me. We will have to see what to do about that."

"Soldiers' bonus? Well, I am going to work for a bonus and for the expenses to be paid by excess profits, but it might be that we will have to put part of it on taxes."

Take Reichsbank, Police Officials and Funds in Reprisal for an Alleged Act of Violence by the Germans.

Dusseldorf, July 14.—French troops have occupied Eberfeld, Barmen and the edge of the Ruhr region. Limburg is just beyond the Coblenz bridgehead.

Leaving Hasslinghausen, the troops proceeded to Marum, where they occupied the public buildings and the railway station. The manager of the local reichsbank and a number of police officials were taken as hostages by the French, who also seized a fund of $300,000,000 marks.

Although they have separate governments, Eberfeld and Barmen are practically one town. They are situated on the Wupper, on the southern edge of the Ruhr district. For five miles they stretch along the river.

Each of the towns has a population of approximately 170,000. Industries form the principal economic basis. There are paper mills, chemical and iron works and textile plants.

The seizure of Eberfeld and Barmen is attributed by the French to an act of violence by fifteen of the German security police. Finally their weapons, now unloaded, were returned to them, and they were escorted to the edge of the occupied area.

Insists in Speech at Senlis That No More Concessions Will Be Made—Asks Adherence to the Treaty.

Paris, July 16.—Premier Poincaré, in a speech, at Senlis rejected the British proposals on reparations even in advance of the receipt of those proposals in written form.

The British draft of the proposed reply to Germany is expected here Thursday or Friday. But the main outlines of that reply were delineated in Prime Minister Baldwin's frank statement in the house of commons, and Premier Poincaré was equally frank in his speech.

"I always was favorable to an entente with England, but I always conceived this friendship as leaving both people full independence and freedom of language," said the premier.

"I consider it as designed to conciliate their interests and not subordinate them to one another. I considered that the entente would find its staunchest support in a constant effort at reciprocal comprehension and mutual respect."

"Since the treaty was signed, Germany has inspired the chorus everywhere to the same song, 'Bellicent France, Militarist France, Imperialist France.'"

Although he did not name the United States, the premier referred to her when he declared the reparations question was a matter of interest to the creditors. Other nations should not interfere, he said.

At the same time he voiced the prevalent French attitude toward the debt to the United States, which, the French hold, should be cancelled on grounds of morality.

Important Events of the Week Around the Badger State

Appleton—The seven colleges comprising the membership of the Wisconsin Colleges association will successfully carry out their plans for the raising of a $5,000,000 fund within the five year period in which the money was to have been obtained, according to announcement of Dr. Samuel Plant, president of Lawrence college.

The campaign to obtain for the seven colleges interested, Beloit, Carroll, Lawrence, Ripon, Marquette University, Campden and Northland, began in November of 1919, but proved at first a disappointment in that only a little less than $1,000,000 was pledged of the $5,000,000 needed in the drive.

Madison—Income tax returns back to Jan. 1, 1915, were opened to the tax commission by Gov. Blaine's signature to the Barker bill. As a result of this new law, corporations and individuals face further investigation by auditors operating under an increased appropriation allowed by the legislature. By extending back eight years the period over which the tax commission may search for unpaid income taxes, the legislature was of the belief that a large amount of revenue would be realized.

Kenosha—Pooling for the first time in years the thrill of driving a race-horse around the track, proved too much excitement for F. W. Smith, 60, Kenosha, a veteran horseman. He fell dead, stricken with apoplexy, after driving Capt. E. A. racehorses, around the training track at Hansen brooders farm near Kenosha. In years gone by he was known as a skillful driver and had guided many a horse to victory in the old Wisconsin racing circuit.

Madison—Gov. Blaine has signed the finance committee bill appropriating $200,000 to the tax commission for the next biennium to be used in paying special examiners to check up and verify income tax returns. In urging passage of the bill the commission set forth that many times the cost of this work would be paid into the state treasury in delinquent taxes as a result of the work of the examiners.

Madison—The bumper Wisconsin potato crop of 1922 brought a reaction that resulted in a 17 per cent cut in the acreage of the 1923 crop, the state crop service has announced. A series of unprofitable potato years caused the reduced planting, the lowest since 1908, according to Paul Nyhus, crop reporter. The estimated acreage of the crop is 272,000, compared to 328,000 acres last year.

Madison—The dog population in Wisconsin is on the decrease. It is declining at the rate of 20,000 a year. In 1920 there were 247,000 dogs in the state, according to A. B. Alexander of the state department of agriculture. In 1922 the dog population decreased to 226,000 and this year, according to official figures, the population has dropped to 200,000. If this ratio continues the dog will be exterminated as a species in Wisconsin in a period of ten years.

Birchwood—Barron enjoys the distinction, which probably is not shared by any other municipality in the Northwest, of having as a member of the city council an alderman who served thirty-five years ago. It has also the distinction of having its first municipal judge, one who served in a similar capacity as justice of the peace when the city was first organized thirty-six years ago. The alderman is Simon Christenson and the judge is Fred B. Kinsley.

Madison—From Jan. 1 to July 1 of this year the secretary of state sold $4,465,946.25 worth of automobile license plates. The first half of the fiscal year brought in $2,859,859 making a total of $4,794,995.25 for the entire 12 month period. Wallace, night telephone operator of the Cambridge exchange, to leave her post after threats by a gang of supposed robbers, is believed to have saved the city from a number of robberies. The men were cutting the telephone wires when discovered by the operator. She put in a call for help and the men left after making threats.

Madison—In a recent bulletin issued the State fair board has announced that no games of chance would be permitted at the 1923 fair and sideshows bordering on the immoral and demoralizing will be conspicuous by their absence. The fair board goes even farther this year than the state law requires. It has ruled that "under no circumstances will privileges of a questionable nature be let or tolerated on the grounds or in any of the buildings. The only concessions granted will be those of a legitimate character." Both Gov. Blaine and Mayor Hoan lauded the attitude of the board in eliminating objectionable features.

TOMMY AND TUPPENCE

"I should think I did! Wasn't the old cat in a rage when she found out? Not that she was a bad sort really, old Mother Greenbank! Good old hospital—demolished like everything else, I suppose?"

Tuppence sighed. "Yes. Lou too?"

Tommy nodded. "Two months ago."

"Spent?"

"Oh, Tommy?"

"No, bit thing, not in riotous disposition. No such luck! The cost of living—ordinary plain or garden living—nowadays is, I assure you, if you do not know—"

"My dear child," interrupted Tuppence, "there is nothing I do not know about the cost of living. Here we are at Lyons, and we will each of us pay for our own. That's that!"

And Tuppence led the way upstairs.

The place was full, and they wandered about looking for a table, catching odds and ends of conversation as they did so.

"Funny scraps one does overhear," murmured Tommy. "I passed two Johnnies in the street today talking about someone called Jane Finn. Did you ever hear such a name?"

But at that moment two elderly ladies rose and collected parcels, and Tuppence deftly ensconced herself in one of the vacant seats.

Tommy ordered tea and buns. Tuppence ordered tea and buttered toast. "And mind the tea comes in separate teapots," she added severely.

Tommy sat down opposite her. His bare head revealed a shock of exquisitely slicked-back red hair. His face was pleasantly ugly—no descriptor, yet unmistakably the face of a gentleman and a sportsman. His brown suit was well cut, but perfunctorily near the end of its tether.

They were an essentially modern-looking couple as they sat there. Tuppence had no claim to beauty, but there was character and charm in the plain lines of her little face, with its determined chin and large wide-set eyes that looked mistily out from under straight, black brows. She wore a small bright green tunic over her black bobbed hair, and her extremely short and rather shabby skirt revealed a pair of unbecomingly dainty ankles. Her appearance presented a valiant attempt at smartness.

The tea came at last, and Tuppence, rousing herself from a fit of meditation, poured it out.

"Now, then," said Tommy, taking a large bite of bun. "Let's get up-to-date. Remember, I haven't seen you since that time in hospital in 1916."

"Very well," Tuppence heaped herself liberally to buttered toast. "Abridged biography of Miss Phipps Cowley, fifth daughter of Archibald Cowley of Little Missendell, Suffolk. Miss Cowley left the delights and drudgeries of her home life early in the war and came up to London where she entered an officers' hospital. First month: Washed up six hundred and forty-eight plates every day. Second month: Promoted to drying aforesaid plates. Third month: Promoted to peeling potatoes. Fourth month: Promoted to cutting bread and butter. Fifth month: Promoted one floor up to duties of ward-maid with mop and pail. Sixth month: Promoted to waiting at table. Seventh month: Pleasing appearance and nice manners so striking that an promoted to waiting on the Sisters! Eighth month: Slight check in career. Sister Bond ate Sister Westhaven's egg! Grand row! Ward-maid clearly important matters cannot be too highly valued. Most of all again! How are things? Found a friend of my childhood in Lieutenant Thomas Beresford (how Tommy), whom I had not seen for five long years. The meeting was affecting! Tenth month: Reproved by matron for visiting the pictures in company with one of the patients, namely: the aforementioned Lieutenant Thomas Beresford. Eleventh and twelfth months: Parlor-maid duties resumed with entire success. At the end of the year left hospital in a blaze of glory. After that, the talented Miss Cowley drove successfully a trade delivery van, a motor-buggy and a gentleman. The last was the pleasantest. I've forgotten his name now. I had several very enjoyable tea parties. I had intended to become a land girl, a postwoman, and a bus conductor by way of rounding off my career—but the armistice intervened!

"Certainly not," agreed Tommy hastily. "No one would ever think of sentiment in connection with you."

"That's not very polite," replied Tuppence. "But I dare say you mean it all right. Well, there it is! I'm ready and willing—but I never meet any rich men! All the boys I know are about as hard up as I am. No marriage is fraught with difficulties. Remains—to make money?"

"We've tried that, and failed," Tommy reminded her.

"We've tried all the orthodox ways, yes. But suppose we try the unorthodox. Tommy, let's be adventurers!"

"Certainly," replied Tommy cheerfully. "How do we begin?"

"That's the difficulty. If we could make ourselves known, people might hire us to commit crimes for them. Look here, Tommy, shall we really? Shall we form a business partnership?"

"Trading under the name of the Young Adventurers, Ltd.? Is that the idea, Tuppence?"

"It's all very well to laugh, but I feel there might be something in it."

"How do you propose to get in touch with your would-be employers?"

"Advertisement," replied Tuppence promptly. "Have you got a bit of paper and a pen?"

Tommy handed over a rather shabby green notebook, and Tuppence began writing busily.

"Shall we begin: 'Young officer, twice wounded in the war—'"

"Certainly not."

"Oh, very well, my dear boy. But I can assure you that that sort of thing might touch the heart of an elderly spinster, and she might adopt you, and then there would be no need for you to be a young adventurer at all."

"I don't want to be adopted."

"I forgot you had a prejudice against it. Now listen—how's this? 'Two young adventurers for hire. Willing to do anything, go anywhere. Pay must be good.' (We might as well make that clear from the start.) Then we might add: 'No reasonable offer refused—like flats and furniture. How would that strike you if you read it?'"

Tommy was holding the paper thoughtfully. His face burned a deeper red.

"Shall we really try it?" he said at last. "Shall we, Tuppence? Just for the fun of the thing?"

"Tommy, you're a sport! I knew you would be! Let's drink to success." She poured some cold drips of tea into the two cups.

"Here's to our joint ventures, and may it prosper!"

"The Young Adventurers, Ltd.," responded Tommy.

They put down the cups and laughed rather uncertainly. Tuppence rose.

"I must return to my palatial suite at the hotel."

"Perhaps it is time I strolled round to the Ritz," agreed Tommy with a grin. "Where shall we meet? And when?"

"Twelve o'clock tomorrow. Piccadilly Tube station."

The two young people went off in opposite directions. Tuppence's hostel was situated in what was charitably called Southern Belgravia. For reasons of economy she did not take a bus.

She was half-way across St. James park, when a man's voice behind her made her start.

"Excuse me?" it said. "But may I speak to you for a moment?"

Tuppence turned sharply, but the words hovering on the tip of her tongue remained unspoken, for the man's appearance and manner did not bear out her first and most natural assumption. She hesitated. As if he read her thoughts, the man said quickly:

"I can assure you I mean no disrespect."

Tuppence looked him up and down. He was a big man, clean shaven, with a heavy jaw. His eyes were small and cunning, and shifted their glance under her direct gaze.

"Well, what is it?" she asked.

The man took a card from his pocket and handed it to her with a bow.

Tuppence took it and scrutinized it carefully. It bore the inscription "Mr. Edward Whittington." Below the name were the words "Esthonia Glassware Company," and the address of a city office.

"Certainly not," agreed Tommy hastily. "No one would ever think of sentiment in connection with you."

"That's not very polite," replied Tuppence. "But I dare say you mean it all right. Well, there it is! I'm ready and willing—but I never meet any rich men! All the boys I know are about as hard up as I am. No marriage is fraught with difficulties. Remains—to make money?"

A Permanent Concrete Crib.

Many Advantages of Fireproof Crib

Concrete Is Ideal Because It Won't Burn and It Keeps Out Harmful Rodents.

The storage of farm crops is becoming an increasingly important problem. Indeed, some authorities assert that the time is not far distant when negotiable warehouse receipts will be issued to farmers who have their grain in storage. It will go far toward preventing a glut in the market at harvest time.

Safe Storage of Grain.

Naturally the issuance of warehouse receipts will be made dependent upon safe storage of the grain. For this reason it will be necessary to build granaries of fireproof materials. Concrete makes an ideal protection for grain since it will not burn and since rats and mice cannot gnaw through it. It has been estimated that every acre in the United States eats or destroys 84 worth of food in a year. Let him make his home in a concrete and he will spoil more than 84 worth. An additional advantage of a concrete crib is that there are not expensive paint bills to undertake. The first cost is practically the only one.

Double Crib Most Popular.

The plan of crib most popular in the corn belt is the so-called double crib, shown in the illustration, with a drive way between two parallel sets of bins. The crib is usually placed in the side bins. Overhead a special bin is provided for the storage of small grain. In eastern states it is not safe to make corn cribs more than five or six feet wide, but this dimension can be increased to eight or nine feet in western states of the corn belt.

Concrete floors in cribs are very much to be desired. When properly made they are absolutely satisfactory since they are dry and smooth. Concrete mixed in the proportions of one sack of cement to two cubic feet of sand to three cubic feet of pebbles is recommended for floor construction. A smooth surface finish is desired as it will not retard the scoup shovel when sliding over it.

Hay Should Always Be Cured in the Windrow

Hay should always be cured in the windrow in preference to the swath. The side-dwelling rake has been found to be of value not only for putting the hay in windrows, but also for turning over hay which has been rained upon.

Production of the very finest quality of hay comes when the crop has been bunched or coked soon after cutting. This practice, of course, involves more labor, but in the case of alfalfa or a fine quality of clover hay, it is usually well worth the extra work necessary. In the case of alfalfa, in a rainy section, it has been found profitable to cap the cocks. Observations made at the Wisconsin experiment station have disclosed the fact that alfalfa which was thus protected had a decidedly higher content of bone and muscle-building materials and vitamins than alfalfa which was exposed to weathering.

Poisoned Bait Is Very Good to Control Moles

Poisoned grain can be inserted in the runways and more or less effectively control moles. To poison corn for this purpose, dissolve one ounce of strychnia sulphate in eight quarts of hot water, preferably rain water. In this solution, after cooling, soak one peck of corn for 48 hours, using as a container a vessel that will close tightly enough to prevent evaporation. When draining the corn at the end of this period of soaking save the poisoned water, as there will ordinarily be enough to soak half a peck more of grain, if needed. When the corn so treated is thoroughly dried it will return to its former bulk and will have its germinating qualities unimpaired.

Farm Animals Harvest Many Different Crops

Live stock are our greatest harvesters; they consume 100 per cent of our hay, 85 per cent of our corn, 75 per cent of our oats and barley besides using vast amounts of straw and forage of various kinds. We must keep live stock on our farms and we wish to give them the best of care and gain the largest profit. The silo lowers the cost of feeding an animal from 25 to 35 per cent, and it also increases production and growth.

Cow Responds to Care.

A cow pays well for good care. She does her best when her needs for plenty of water, air and feed are met, and when her bodily comfort is considered.

Spray Your Onions.

Onion thrips cause "white blight," "white blight," or "silvot tip" in onions. Spraying with tobacco extract will control this pest and prevent the ruin of the crop.

Vetch Also Valuable.

Another winter leucine that is invaluable as a winter cover and a hay crop is vetch. It has not risen to great prominence, but where used has made good.

Testing Compounds for Contact Insecticides

Most of Materials Examined Showed Little Toxicity.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Investigators who are studying insecticides will be interested in a contribution to the subject just published by the bureau of chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture, as Department Bulletin 1199.

The investigation involves a study of the toxicity of the more readily available organic compounds which are used as contact insecticides. In addition, a number of compounds which offered possible value as insecticides or which served to indicate working theories of insect toxicology were made in the laboratory. It is expected that this investigation will form the basis for future study and possibly lead to the discovery of compounds of commercial importance.

Most of the compounds tested showed little toxicity. These were ordinarily used in but few experiments unless questions of theoretical significance appeared to be involved. Those compounds which showed appreciable toxicity were subjected to greater study when available in sufficient quantity. Particular attention was given to the compounds which offered possible commercial value.

This bulletin is intended to furnish entomologists, chemists, and others who are working on insecticide problems, information concerning the relative value of a number of organic compounds not at present used on a commercial scale. Those interested may secure a copy of this bulletin free of charge by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Lessen Ravages of Flies by Applying Repellent

While there is probably no cheap, handy and effective method of keeping all flies off cows in summer, their ravages may be much reduced by applying to the skin of the animals every alternate morning a little of a mixture of seal or fish oil and crude carbolic acid in the proportion of a tablespoonful of carbolic acid to a quart of oil. It is readily applied with a brush. Another preparation that is highly recommended is a mixture of pine tar and lard in the proportion of one part of the former to ten parts of the latter. It is put on with a cloth and rubbed down the neck, back, chest and loins, where the flies are most troublesome.

For a spraying mixture that may be made at home there is perhaps nothing better than coal oil emulsion—a mixture of coal oil and soap. This has to be applied every day when the flies are bad, and it evaporates in the course of several hours. A good way of applying a spray is to have a large sprayer, arranged to strike the animal at all points, stationed beside a wall built of poles, having a door at each end, so that the cows can be quickly sprayed and run through one after another.

The ideal summer treatment of cattle, whether dairy or feeding cattle, is to give them access to a darkened barn or shed in the heat of the day when flies are most troublesome. Gunnybags hung over the windows shut out the light without interfering materially with the circulation of air, and the doors may also be draped with this material.

Soy Bean Straw Makes Good Roughage for Cows

Straw which is obtained from threshing soy beans for seed makes a very good roughage for all kinds of stock. It will not dry up cows, but on the contrary it has been found that it will increase milk production. It is a common practice in sections where the crop is grown extensively for seed to bale the straw after threshing and sell it to dairymen and stock feeders.

Soy bean straw contains almost as much digestible nutrients found forage as does timothy hay. It is slightly richer in protein but contains a little less carbohydrate material. Those who have soy bean straw will make no mistake in feeding it to dairy cows or to any other class of stock, but the ration will need a protein supplement such as cottonseed meal or oil meal.

Use Capons as Brooders or for Raising Chicks

Capons have been used with very good results for hatching eggs. They have large, soft bodies, and are content to remain on the nest. For hatching the best breeds to caponize are the medium breeds, such as Rhode Island Reds, Plymouth Rocks or Wyandottes. People differ in their regard for capons as brooders, or for raising young chicks. This has seldom been a real help, as most people use an artificial brooder after the eggs are hatched by the capons.

Good Thinning of Fruit Will Hasten Maturity

Thinning should be done as early in the season as it is possible to determine that the fruit is set. In all events before the seeds are formed. Proper thinning of pears and early apples will hasten the maturity of the fruit and will advance the time of picking at least a week. This is a decided advantage in marketing, as first pickings of early fruit bring more than later pickings.

MRS. HICKEY SO WEAK COULD HARDLY STAND

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health

Worcester, Mass. — "I had some trouble caused by a female weakness and got so run-down and weak from it that I could hardly stand or walk across the floor. The doctor gave me all kinds of pills, but nothing helped me. I happened to meet a friend who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I thought I would try it. After taking it a week I began to improve, and now I feel fine and am doing all of my housework, including washing, sewing and house cleaning. I have recommended your medicine to my friends, and I am willing for you to use this letter as a testimonial, as I would like to help any one suffering the way I did from such a weakness." — Mrs. DELIA HICKEY, 4 S. Ludlow St., Worcester, Mass.

HERE IS SPORT FOR STRENUOUS

Angling With Rod and Line for Swordfish Can Be Guaranteed to Furnish Thrills.

Swordfishing for broadbill swordfish with rod and reel no doubt holds the list of the most strenuous kinds of angling. This remarkable form of sport has been practiced for a number of years on the Pacific coast in the neighborhood of Santa Catalina Island and to a less extent, and more recently, along our own Atlantic seaboard. In many respects it is the most fascinating of all forms of fishing. C. K. Stillman writes in the Health Builder. There is considerable difficulty in finding the prospective victims as the swordfish or float solitary near the surface of the sea, and more yet when found in persuading them to bite. Once hooked, the swordfish is a very energetic antagonist and hard to resound. The angler never knows what is going to happen next and is never entirely free from apprehension that the fish may attack his boat. No fishing is more productive of super thrills and of grievous disappointments. To the swordfish angler the landing of one fish is a season's triumph. Many have gone out year after year for swordfish without success, but they keep on doggedly in the knowledge that a lucky turn of events may at any moment bring achievement.

Monster Planet.

Everything connected with the sun is staggeringly big. Those little dark sun-spots which you peer at cautiously through the medium of a smoked glass are, most of them, many thousands of miles across. One was measured and found to have a diameter of 13,000 miles—which means that the earth could have been pitched into it like a golf ball into a pail of water.

New Zealand Bird a Plague.

The kea, a parrot of New Zealand, as large as a chicken hawk, has been known to kill thousands of sheep yearly to satisfy a craving for kidney fat.

every mortal blessed thing. I've screwed and saved and pinched! But it's no good. I shall have to go home."

"Of course I don't want to! What's the good of being sentimental? You see, there are seven of us at home. It's awful! All housework and mother's meetings! I don't want to go back, but—oh, Tommy, what else is there to do?"

Tommy shook his head sadly. There was a silence, and then Tuppence burst out:

"Money, money, money! I think about money morning, noon and night! I dare say it's mercenary of me, but there it is!"

"Same here," agreed Tommy with feeling.

There was a pause.

"Of course," resumed Tuppence. "marriage is my best chance. I made up my mind to marry money when I was quite young. Any thinking girl would! I'm not sentimental, you know." She paused. "Come now, you can't say I'm sentimental," she added sharply.

"How much do you know? And how much do you want?"

Education of Chinese Girls.

Because they marry as soon as they leave the grades the little girls in China receive chiefly a moral education in school. The average girl enters school at the age of ten and is married shortly after she finishes her brief educational course. The proverbial Chinese politeness is taught in the school as well as in the home. From their very entrance into school up to the time when they leave the classroom the little girls learn how to greet, how to receive visitors according to the old Chinese laws of ceremony, how to offer tea, how to offer an umbrella to an aged lady or how to share it with a companion. Home economies are taught. Girls help their mother in the household and clean father's books. During the last year in grade school, the young Chinese daughters of modern families learn civics and receive a sort of patriotic instruction.

We Want to Talk to Every Prospect Who Plans to Pay More Than $500 for a Car

We want to tell you something about the Studebaker Light Six Touring Car. Want you to examine it—and to drive it.

Stop in and let us prove what a vast difference there is between the Light-Six and other cars at about the same price—or between the Light-Six and cars of other makes costing several hundred dollars more.

To be able to buy a Six, practically free from vibration, for less than $1,000 is an opportunity not duplicated anywhere in the world. Elimination of vibration adds immeasurably to the life of the motor. It is one of the reasons for the universal high resale value of the Light-Six.

The Touring Car body is all-steel—even to its framework. Seat cushions—of genuine leather—are ten inches deep and are placed at the most restful angle.

The one-piece windshield is handsome and practical because it gives unobstructed view of the road ahead and is rain proof. The quick-action cowl ventilator and the parking lights are but indications of the quality and completeness of the appointments.

No other make of car ever built, by anyone, at any price, represents so great a dollar-for-dollar value as the Light-Six Touring Car. The savings resulting from large volume, complete manufacture and the fact that Studebaker's overhead is shared by three distinct models make possible its low price and high value.

The Light-Six upholds Studebaker's 71-year reputation for honest value.

Gas From Food

Presses on Heart

If food does not digest it turns into poisons which form gas. This often presses on heart and other organs causing a nervous, restless feeling. Simple buckhorn bark, ginger, etc., as mixed in Adlerika, removes food-decaying food-matter you never thought was in your system which caused gas and pressure on heart. Adlerika expels poisons and gas from BOTH upper and lower bowel. EXCELLENT to guard against appendicitis.—Edw. C. Miller, Kewaskum, Wis.—Advertisement.

Driver Loses Wheel And Did Not Know It

One of the truck drivers for the Hager Trucking company who are hauling the gravel from the Monroe pit in the town of Erin to Highway 29, west of the city, had a peculiar accident last Saturday in which no damage resulted. He was returning to the pit with the empty truck and when he reached the Radke corner, 2 miles south of the city, one of the rear wheels of the truck came off and rolled through a fence into the field. He did not notice that he had lost a wheel as the truck went along on the one rear wheel the momentum of the truck keeping it up for about 100 feet, but as he slowed up the truck fell to the road. He stopped at once and without any damage but when he came to look for his wheel he could not find a trace of it. Finally another truck man came along and happened to see the wheel over in the field. The wheel was replaced and the truck was soon back on its trip.—Hartford Press.

Snow Banks in Month of July

The oldest resident of Clintonville does not remember when one could enjoy snow falling on July 2 and 3, but this is what took place this year. At ten o'clock Tuesday morning, about twenty hours after the storm, there were ice banks still standing in the streets and alleys of this city where the hail had accumulated. Some of our citizens, especially the younger class, enjoyed the rare luxury of being able to throw snow balls just before the Fourth.—Clintonville Gazette.

THAT REMINDS US

A merchant told us the other day that when he was a young man he ran an advertisement in which he was trying to dispose of an oversupply of underwear, and that he didn't sell a dozen suits from the ad. "I just ran the ad once but I paid $2 for the space," said the merchant. We replied that it reminded us of the Florida man who moved to North Dakota and when winter came on he went down in the basement, filled the furnace full of coal, and then wandered for several days why he was almost freezing to death. The furnace kept the man warm for a few hours and the ad kept the merchant selling underwear for a few days. But like the man who keeps on hoeing his potatoes, onions, corn or cotton to get a good crop, advertising, to be a howling success, must be kept going all the time, and must be the kind that will interest the readers. We would be glad to help any merchant who feels backward about writing ads. We are equipped with a cut service which is yours for the asking. There is nothing like good, snappy illustrations to enhance the value of your advertising.
