Reparations Commission Approves U. S. Delegates.

Paris.—Gen. Charles G. Dawes of Chicago will be offered the presidency of the expert commission, which will examine German finances, with a view to balancing the German budget and stabilizing German currency, the reparations commission decided unanimously.

The German application to give priority over reparations to pledges of resources for a food loan was referred by the commission to the delegates for consideration by their governments. It is thought unlikely that the proposal will receive the approval of the governments concerned.

It was decided at the same time that the commission's committee on guarantees should make a thorough survey of the German situation.

Before the application was presented to the commission the Germans amended it. They invoked article 248 of the Versailles treaty as well as article 251. Article 248 provides that the first charge on all German assets and resources shall be the cost of reparations, and all other costs arising under treaty or supplementary arrangements or agreements, "subject to such exceptions as the reparations commission may approve."

Article 251 provides that priority shall be allowed to permit Germany to pay for "foods, raw materials, etc., judged to be essential to the conduct of her reparations settlements."

The report of the commission's guarantee committee will be available either to the reparations commission or to the allied governments, whichever shall finally have jurisdiction over the application.

Leaders of Both Parties at Work on Plans for Caucuses

Washington.—A virtual agreement for a caucus immediately after the holidays to agree upon a program for tax reduction legislation has been reached by leaders of both the Republican and Democratic parties.

Democratic senators and representatives will hold a joint meeting just before congress reconvenes. It developed that Republican leaders in the house have a plan that is rapidly taking definite form for a caucus immediately after the holidays.

Democratic leaders are disturbed over the defections in their ranks in favor of the Mellon plan and they hope to block any further commitments by Democratic members of congress.

The prime movers for the Democratic gathering are those who fear that the Democratic senators and representatives can no longer be held in line for a partisan measure. They propose to make one grand effort to whip the rank and file of the party in congress into line for a purely domestic tax cut to differ in some uncertain way from the Mellon plan.

By putting forward their program for tax revision the Democrats hope to offset to some extent the tremendous demand by their constituents for approval of the Mellon suggestion.

question is happily answered when it comes to afternoon occasions and informal after-dinner affairs by the chiffon frock portrayed herewith. As if the handsomely designed Persian printed chiffons were not self-sufficiently exquisite, genius has gone a step further and added multi-colored beads and regal fur until the ensemble becomes almost a surfeit of alluring loveliness.

tabs made of very handsome multi-colored beads. Many of the newest printed chiffon dresses are richly trimmed in beads. The effect is exquisite, for the colors in the Persian design and those in the beads seem to reflect each other's beauty.

Fancy Hatband. One of the smartest white felt sports hats of the season has a band of white buckskin embroidered in red and blue, and a white envelope purse embroidered to match.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

THE CHRISTMAS TREAT

"Twelve little children from the hospital had been taken for a Christmas treat," said Daddy, "and I am going to tell you just what they saw. They were taken to the city shops.

"Of course they saw any number of dolls and trains and toys and books and they went into all the big shops and also looked in all the windows.

"In one store there was a great big make-believe lion and by him was an enormous make-believe lioness and they had long manes and heads that moved up and down and from side to side.

"The children put their hands in the lion's mouth and in the mouth of the lioness, and of course nothing happened because the lion and lioness were not real though they looked so life-like.

"In one window there was a great scene. There were double tracks and along one went a local train and along the other an express train.

"There were tunnels and bridges and most gorgeous signals which lighted up. And there were houses and poles with make-believe telegraph wires. And there was a junction where the train stopped.

"It was just exactly like a make-believe town—in fact it looked like a real town.

"Every once in a while a toy airplane came down over the town and a make-believe monkey landed on the ground.

"Every one crowded around this window, men and women, boys and girls.

"Then the children saw toy ponds in which were goldfish, and even in a little pond of water which had been put in the toy village to look like a lake were goldfish swimming about.

"They went to look at themselves in a mirror where as they looked one way it appeared as though they were short and fat and when they looked another way it made them appear to have great enormously long faces and little bodies.

"Such laughter as there was about these mirrors!

"Then they went into one store where Santa Claus took them and showed them all the toys and gave them each a letter from his pack and a little cardboard toy for each one and a gay picture of himself.

"And what fun it was, as you can imagine, to have such a treat as this.

"They saw toy villages where there were little street lights and houses with most superior hedges and garden plots and in the houses the rooms could be seen, and the stairways.

"Then they took a ride with Santa Claus in a beautiful kind of merry-go-round which he had.

"It played tunes and the seats in it were made to look like different kinds of animals, and in the center was a great pole which looked as though it were covered with ice and snow and which was supposed to be the North Pole!

"Then Santa Claus told them all to wave a good-by as they went for their ride and the other children who waited in line for the next ride when it would be their turn jumped up and down with glee at the thought of their turn coming next.

The BROWN MOUSE

by Herbert Quick

JENNIE IN POLITICS

STENOGRAPHER—Jennie Woodruff was to marry Jim Irwin, young farm hand, because of his good condition and poor prospects. He is intrinsically above the common, and has advanced her in the possibilities of a career teaching and farming, which he is, ridiculed by her. In short, Jim is an office worker by himself and reads books, and has a philosophy of life. But there are latent powers in him unappreciated even by himself and Opportunity knocking at his door. Jim continued for school teacher, and he was now a candidate for election. He visits his mother.

It was true to his belief in honest, tough work, like a general preparation for battle, he examined his field of operations. His manner of doing this seemed to prove to Colonel Woodruff that he watched it with keen interest as something new in the world, that Jim was possibly a Brown Mouse, the counsel knew only a part of his performance. He saw Jim in the council, walking through the rooms to the houses in the Woodruff district, as greedily for every vote as a hawk for a hawk for a hawk. He knew that Jim made a great evening call.

But he did not know that Jim was doing what our sociologists call a "game." For that matter, neither did he know that Jim was doing more than 25 cents a volume, and Jim had never seen one. However, it was a game, to be sure, he had long known everybody in the district, save the Simmses—and he was now a friend of all that exotic race; but there is nothing and knowing.

Mr. Irwin, who came to see the young man, who he condemned the school as disorderly. To be sure, there were more pupils enrolled than had ever entered on a first day in the history of the school, and it was not to accommodate them all. But the director's criticism was leveled upon the free-and-easy air of the children. Most of them had brought with them a good-sized corn shuck, and there was much argument as to the merits of the various shucks. Instead of a language lesson, the exercise based on an examination of the ears of corn.

"It would be correlated with rural life. It would get education out of the things the farmers and farmers' wives are interested in as a part of their lives."

Jennie looked serious, after smothering a laugh. "Jim," said she, "you're going to have a hard enough time to succeed in the Woodruff school, if you confine yourself to methods that have been tested, and found good."

"But the old methods," urged Jim, "have been tested and found bad. Shall I keep to them?"

"They have made the American people what they are," said Jennie. "Don't be ungrateful, Jim."

"They have educated our farm children for the cities," said Jim. "This county is losing population—and it's the best county in the world."

"Persistence never wins," said Jennie. "Neither does bluntness," answered Jim. "It is losing the farms that dwellers, and swelling the cities with a proletariat."

For some time, now, Jim had ceased to hold Jennie's hand; and their sweet-heart days had never seemed farther away.

"Jim," said Jennie, "I may be elected to a position in which I shall be obliged to pass on your acts as teacher—in an official way, I mean. I hope they will be justifiable."

Jim smiled his slowest and saddest smile. "If they're not, I'll not ask you to condone them," said he. "But first they must be justifiable to me, Jennie."

"Good night," said Jennie curtly, and left him.

Jennie, I am obliged to admit, gave scant attention to the new career upon which her old sweetheart seemed to be entering. She was in politics, and was playing the game as became the daughter of a local politician. Col. Albert Woodruff went south with the army as a corporal in 1871, and came back a lieutenant. His title of colonel was conferred by appointment as a member of the staff of the governor, long years ago, when he was county auditor. He was not a rich man, as I may have suggested, but a well-to-do farmer, whose wife did her own work much of the time, not because the colonel could not afford to hire "help," but for the reason that "hired girls" were hard to get.

The colonel, having seen the glory of the coming of the Lord in the triumph of his side in the great war, was inclined to think that all reform had ceased, and was a political straggler—a very honest and sincere one. Moreover, he was influential enough so that when Mr. Cummins or Mr. Dilliver came into the county on political errands, Colonel Woodruff had always been called into conference. He was of the old New England type, believed very much in heredity, very much in the theory that whatever is right, in so far as it has secured money or power.

A very respectable, honest, American Tory was the colonel, fond of his political sway, and rather soured by the fact that it was passing from him. He had now broken with Cummins and Dilliver as he had done years ago with Weaver and later with Larrabee—and this breach was very important to him, whether they were greatly concerned about it or not.

Such being her family history, Jennie was something of a politician herself. She was in no way surprised when approached by party managers on the subject of accepting the nomination for county superintendent of schools. Colonel Woodruff could deliver some delegates to his daughter, though he rather siled at the proposal at first, but on thinking it over, warmed somewhat to the notion of having a Woodruff on the county payroll once more.

"I want a new kind of rural school, but I don't see any prospect."

HOW HE ENTERED THE MINISTRY

Unfortunate Bird Cut Off in His Prime, But One Good Thing Might Be Observed.

A rate play on words was perpetrated upon the members of the Kiwanis club by Rev. A. H. Lord, rector of St. James Episcopal church, in a recent address.

An industrious hen, Mr. Lord said, sat upon a nest of eggs so efficiently that she was rewarded with 12 chicks that she eleven were little girls and one was a little boy.

Her "New Leaf" by Ethel Augusta Cook

Copyright, 1923, Western Newspaper Union

"I LIVE minutes to next year," laughed Bob, looking at his watch. "And Mother is the only one not to have made a New Year's resolution."

The family, consisting of Mother, her son, Bob, the provider of the family; Daisy, the successful secretary; and Pink and Dot, high school girls, were sitting up to watch the old year out. And the girls and Bob were wishing away the time by teasing Mother, who was such a darling to tease; her cheeks always got so pink and her blue eyes so bright. And now was no exception. She was treacherous with self-consciousness and awe of her growing children who were, she thought, so much cleverer than she had ever dreamed of being.

"Well, I have made a resolution just the same," she said, hesitatingly now. "Only it's not so important and far-reaching as all yours. It'll be just as hard to keep, however, even though it does seem so small."

"Tell us, Mother. When a saint turns over a leaf it must be a backward leaf, mustn't it? Don't begin to turn backward from perfection, Mother-ours."

Bob put his strong, clever hand on Mother's arm as he spoke. He was not teasing now, in spite of his smiling eyes. It was all affectionate earnestness. "You with it, Mother."

"Well, it's only this: I'm not going to hate getting up early to get breakfast anymore. I'm going to do it gladly, willingly. It's always been something like a sin on my conscience that I've grudged; yes, for years and years, grudging early rising and poking down into the kitchen to start the fire and the breakfast. Why, I almost make faces at the pantry shelves, and I haven't even a kind word for the cat. But I've been reading in a book that all that is wasted emotion. I've only to say over and over to myself as I drop to sleep at night—'I'll like getting breakfast tomorrow, I'll like getting breakfast tomorrow'—and it will come true. Getting up will come lots easier, and after a few mornings more I will actually like it."

Bob laughed, for the most adoring of sons may have his blind spot. But Daisy and Pink and Dot were girls, and they did not laugh. They blushed while their startled eyes sought one another's. But not until the grandfather's clock in the hall had rung twelve silver bells and Mother had gone to bed did speech follow that first confusion of their glances.

"Just to think! Poor Mumsie! And I never gave it a thought before in my life. Simply took for granted she'd get the breakfast. 'Cause she always did when we were kiddies, I suppose. That was Daisy."

Pink cried, "That's no reason why she should now. Three great husks like us!"

Dot echoed, "Yes, please tell me why she should get up at six-thirty every morning and go poking down into that cold kitchen to start the fire while we three great girls snuggle deeper into our warm beds and doze again!"

So the three big girls cried out against themselves and added a P. S. to their former resolutions. And while they talked excitedly with lowered voices, Mother just over their heads in her bedroom was lying back on her pillows, her eyes shut, whispering to herself over and over—"I shall like getting breakfast tomorrow. I shall like getting breakfast tomorrow."

Tempus Fugit

By C. G. HAZARD

YEARS pass, with summer, autumn, winter, spring. In fourfold beauty life is on the wing. Why think of what they take, and making give, the best of all? Fading of gladness over what they leave. Years are the falling petals of Time's rose. But life is left when all its beauty goes; Life that will bloom in everlasting grace. Where change and loss can never have a place.

We had such a jolly time. Every morning we're going to have a jolly time. And you're just to luxuriate here in bed of mornings now, dress and take up the day's work at your leisure after all your selfish, cluttering children are out of the way. Doesn't it make you hungry?"

Mother looked at the tray that was on the bed table now, straddling her knees. There was coffee in the best little silver coffee pot, cream in the silver pitcher, sugar, a peeled orange, and a neat poached egg on toast. They hadn't forgotten the salt, either.

Mother sighed. "But it isn't right, children. And what's to become of my New Year's resolution? It's bad for character not to keep your resolutions."

But Bob, who had stuck his head in at the door, was laughing. "What was it you said over and over last night, Mother-ours?"

"I shall like getting breakfast tomorrow morning."

"There you are! Well, what's the matter? You've got it, haven't you? And you do like it, don't you?"

At that the three girls laughed, and the mother, looking suddenly like a fourth girl, with her rested blue eyes and sleep-tinted cheeks, laughed with them.

WE WANT MORE

We want more than a happy New Year. Happiness is a thing of circumstance and surface; it is the satisfaction of the heart.—C. G. Hazard.

I do not like burdens, those heavy and leaden, So please keep them off me and don't weigh me down. I want to look smiling, while time beguiling, So don't send me worries, which make scowls and frowns.

Give me true homage with respect from all people, No matter how far I shall fall from true grace, And make every paper, though caught in same caper, To be taken unquestioned per value of face. So give me these few things, these few things I've mentioned, I do not want much, as you know and can see. So old Father Time, sir, be gentle and kind, sir, And give these few gifts, if you please, sir to me.—Aura Turnbull, in Kansas City Star.

My Wants for the New Year

MY WANTS for the year are not varied or many. I ask not for blessings full rich of their kind. I only want pleasure with health of good measure, And diversified changes to fill up my mind. I want life to be sunny, with plenty of money. With one round of pleasure from morning till night. I do not like darkness, with no touch of sadness. I do not like darkness, so please give me light.

I do not like weather that's dark and that's gloomy, I like the bright sunshine that glows and that shines, I care not for sorrow, so never shall borrow But pass it by quickly and leave it behind.

PrALINES CANDY

Boil three cupsful granulated sugar with one cupful rich milk. At same time caramelize. Melt slowly until a brown syrup, one cupful granulated sugar in separate pan. Then pour into first mixture, stirring well. Boil until it forms a soft ball when dropped into cold water. Remove from fire, add one cupful walnuts and one teaspoonful vanilla. Beat until creamy. Pour into buttered pans or drop on oiled paper.

ONE AT LEAST

She—I suppose you've some very high ideals to accomplish during this New Year?

He—Well, I hope to marry you.

And Pink was carrying a tray, of all things.

New Year's resolution? It's bad for character not to keep your resolutions.

But Bob, who had stuck his head in at the door, was laughing. "What was it you said over and over last night, Mother-ours?"

"I shall like getting breakfast tomorrow morning."

"There you are! Well, what's the matter? You've got it, haven't you? And you do like it, don't you?"

GOOD THINGS FOR OCCASIONS

A most delightful salad combination is tomato and pineapple. When the fresh fruits are unobtainable the canned may be used, varying the method of serving. For fresh tomatoes use the following:

Tomatoes With Pineapple.—Peel medium-sized ripe tomatoes, removing a slice from the top of each, and take out the seeds and pulp. Sprinkle the inside with salt and sugar. Let stand one-half hour. Fill the tomatoes with fresh pineapple cut into the bits, or shredded, with nuts, using two-thirds of pineapple and one-third of nut meats. Mix with a rich mayonnaise or a cream dressing and serve on a bed of lettuce.

Stewed Chicken With Onions.—Remove the breasts and second joints from two chickens. Cook in water to cover with a dozen small onions, until tender. Remove the chicken, reduce the stock to one and one-half cupsful, drain the onions from the stock. Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, add four tablespoonfuls of flour and the stock. Bring to the boiling point, add one-half cupful of heavy cream, season with salt, pepper and lemon juice. Add the onions and chicken and bring to the boiling point.

Mock Sweetbread.—Chop one pound of veal, add two ounces of chopped salt pork and mix until well blended; then add two-thirds of a cupful of soft bread crumbs, two eggs, one-third of a cupful of flour, one-half cupful of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper. Form into eight pieces, dot with butter, using one and one-half tablespoonfuls, and pour around three-fourths of a cupful of chicken stock. Cover and bake one hour, basting every ten minutes. Serve with tomato or white sauce.

Russian Salad Dressing.—Take one-half teaspoonful each of mustard and salt, one-eighth teaspoonful each of paprika and white pepper, add to these one tablespoonful each of vinegar and lemon juice, one teaspoonful of grated onion, one tablespoonful of chili sauce, one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and one tablespoonful of minced green pepper. Two teaspoonfuls of minced parsley. Beat all into one-half cupful of salad oil, put into a glass jar and shake well to emulsify. Chill before using. This dressing will also keep for some time if kept cold. Shake well before using.

Somewhat in poetry, as nowhere else, there flows along, side by side with words skillfully used, a current that carries us beyond the intrinsic value of sense.—Contributors' Club.

'ROUND THE FESTIVE BOARD

In using citrus fruits for salads, scald the fruit in boiling water for five minutes, then peel the fruit. The rind may be easily peeled, the white skin coming off with it.

Fruit Salad.—A very attractive and yet simple salad may be prepared from a grape fruit, an orange and a bright red-skinned apple. Peel the orange and grape fruit and separate into sections, removing all the tough stringy fiber of the fruit. Cut the apple without peeling into eighths, removing the section of core. Arrange a section of grape fruit, then pieces of the red apple, a section of orange, another piece of grape fruit and apple, making a small hemisphere. Place this on lettuce and serve with a spoonful of rich mayonnaise at the side of the salad.

Ox Joints en Casserole.—Have the ox tails cut at the joints, cover with boiling water and cook six minutes. Drain, dredge with flour and saute in butter, with one sliced onion. Put into a casserole, sprinkle with one-fourth of a cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper. Pour over two and one-half cupsful of water and cannot tomatoes and cook three hours. Remove ox tails and strain sauce; return both to the dish. Add two-thirds of a cupful of carrot and turnip cut into cubes. These vegetables may be cooked with the meat, making a better flavored sauce.

Chestnut Croquettes.—Take one cupful of mashed French chestnuts, two tablespoonfuls of thick cream, the yolks of two eggs, one teaspoonful of salt. Mix well, shape into balls, dip into egg and crumbs, fry in deep fat and drain. Nice as a garnish for turkeys or any fowl.

If the conserve shelf is getting low try this tasty combination: Molded Salad.—Add gelatin to tomatoes that have been put through a sieve, seasoned and molded in small egg cups. Serve on lettuce with small spoonfuls of pineapple beaped around the tomato. Add mayonnaise, a spoonful at the side, and serve.

Care of the Eyes.

There is a direct relationship between the condition of the eyes and the condition of the body generally, according to the national committee for the prevention of blindness. In consequence, persons recovering from serious illness may subject their eyes to severe strain by reading small type or poorly printed matter. The committee advocates that books selected for invalids should be printed in large, distinct type, and that patients should not try to read too many books while in a weakened stage.

The sympathy of the Christian people of this community is extended to the bereaved family.
I know above the raging storm
The sun is brightly shining;
That on the other side the cloud
Still wears its silver lining.
But while the darkness hems my hearth
In bitterness is calling;
It can but be that I must feel
The rain while I am falling.
I know around me there are hearts
Whence tenderest love is flowing;
And yet I love could be more real
For just a little showing.
In coldness warm than mist or rain,
It so wraps up its being
I know it more by faith than sight,
By feeling than by seeing.
O friends of love in your hearts,
Design now and here to show it,
And let the ones to whom you give
Your soul's affection, know it
Goes not the love upon a stone
For which some heart has panted,
Nor 'till the rose in life denied
Upon a grave be planted.
