TAKE SCENES AT CIRCUS FOR "BOY OF MINE" PICTURE

A genuine circus, one of the biggest and most famous, was used as a background for some of the scenes of "Boy of Mine," which J. K. McDonald produced for First National, and which will be shown at the Kewaskum movie house on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The scenes were "shot" during the visit to Los Angeles of "the greatest show on earth."
Ben Alexander, the First National boy star, who was "Penrod" in "Penrod and Sam," was the hero of them all. "Boy of Mine" which, like "Penrod and Sam," is a picturization of a Booth Tarkington story, centers around the life of a typical American boy, a part played by Ben. Humorous incidents in the picture have to do with his visits to the circus. That the circus episode would reflect the true atmosphere of a circus, J. K. McDonald sought permission to "shoot" his scenes during a Saturday afternoon matinee. The privilege was granted and the unit was moved bag and baggage to the circus lot. In all, fifteen different scenes were taken in and about the "greatest show."
"Boy of Mine" was directed by William Beaudine. Its all-star cast includes Henry B. Walthall, Ben Alexander, Irene Rich, Rockliffe Feltons, Dot Farley and Lawrence Licalzi.

CELEBRATE THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

At their home in this village, Mr. and Mrs. John Schoofs, highly respected citizens of this community, had the enjoyable occasion of celebrating their golden wedding anniversary in the presence of children and families. Mr. Schoofs was born January 27, 1849, at Kappel, Rhine Province, Germany, and came to America in 1852 with his parents, and was reared on a farm one mile and a half west of this village. Mrs. Schoofs (née Barbara Reimer) was born Sept. 7, 1847, at Schemerschuetz, near Vienna, Austria, and came to America in 1867. After residing at Milwaukee for six years she came to Washington county, being bound in holy matrimony on May 19, 1874 in the Holy Trinity church here. In 1871 Mr. Schoofs purchased forty acres of land near his home, and later bought forty acres more. Upon this the couple worked hard until they had some developed into rich producing soil, and which is a credit not only to themselves but to the community as well. In 1907, Mr. and Mrs. Schoofs retired from farm life and moved to this village, where they have since resided. The farm was turned over to their son Joseph. The venerable couple are the parents of eight children, all of whom are living except one daughter Mary, who passed away in death. The names of those living are: Theresa (Mrs. William Schill) of Milwaukee, Joseph the youngest, William of Milwaukee, Jennie (Mrs. John Pierce) of Los Angeles, California, Margaret Mrs. L. P. Arkenberg of Milwaukee, Matilda (Mrs. Gas. A. Hausmann) of Waupun, and Kathryn (Mrs. J. J. Huber) of West Bend; and eighteen grandchildren and one great grand child.

The day was pleasantly spent in a social manner. The esteem and love in which Mr. and Mrs. Schoofs are held can easily be determined by the many valuable and useful gifts received and the numerous congratulations showered upon them by their many friends. They have the best wishes of all for continued health and happiness in the hope that they may have the rare opportunity of celebrating their diamond wedding anniversary.

BEWARE OF FAKER

A man giving his name as Taylor, and claiming himself to be an injured ex-serviceman, residing at 416 West Johnson street, Fond du Lac, in which city and a portion of Fond du Lac county, he is reported to have been playing the sympathy game, in an effort to get a lift from the citizens, reports he is a faker. Taylor, it is said tries to make citizens believe that he is suffering from shell shock and a shattered hip, and is selling clasps for covers of an ironing board. He travels in an automobile accompanied by another man. It is reported that he has received several liberal donations at various country homes he has so far visited. An investigation made by the Fond du Lac Red Cross officials showed that there is no such number as 416 West Johnson street in Fond du Lac, and that he is not known by either the Red Cross or American Legion the latter of which would know of his case should he be in distressed circumstances. He is heavy set and about six feet tall with a small round face, light hair and gray eyes, and wears a gray cap. He claims to have a wife and four small children, and that he was released from a hospital at Maywood last fall.

KETTER-STAHL WEDDING

At 8 a. m. Saturday, May 17, the parsonage of the St. Matthew congregation, Campbellsport, occurred the marriage of Miss Olive Ketter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Ketter of Beechwood to Arno Stahl, Rev. Bertram officiated. The bride was attended by Miss Catherine Ketter, sister, as maid of honor. The groom by Peter Ketter, brother of the bride. The bride was dressed in a sand or silk crepe dress, and carried a bouquet of white sweet peas. Her attendant wore a cocoa brown silk crepe dress, and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. The groom wore a dark blue suit. After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents, to immediate relatives of the contracting party. The young couple left the same day for a wedding trip to Oshkosh and Marshfield. The newly weds, who are popular young people have the best wishes of their many friends.

CEDAR LAKE YACHT CLUB PLANS BIG REGATTA

At a meeting held recently, the Cedar Lake Yacht Club decided to hold an invitation regatta at Cedar Lake, August 7, 8, and 9 for class "C" boats only. ### BOY HAS VERY NARROW ESCAPE

Jacob Schlosser, thirteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schlosser, of this village, had a narrow escape on Monday evening from serious injury and possible death, when he was run over by a Ford touring car driven by Fred Zimmermann of the town of Kewaskum. The accident occurred about eight o'clock, at the intersection of Main street and Fond du Lac avenue. Mr. Zimmermann was driving north on Fond du Lac avenue, and when he approached the corner, young Schlosser, came riding up Main street on a bicycle, not seeing the approaching car, he rode directly in front of it. He was knocked down and together with the bicycle pinned beneath the car. Fortunately Mr. Zimmermann was driving at a very slow rate of speed and was able to bring his machine to a stand still within a few feet after striking Schlosser. The unfortunate boy was taken from beneath the car and removed to his home, where he is recovering from scratches and bumps received in his experience. The bicycle was completely demolished.

NEW FANE TEAM BLANKS KOHLER

Last Sunday the rejuvenated New Fane baseball team journeyed to Kohler and defeated that team by a score of 15 to 0. The New Fane team was greatly strengthened by the addition of Art, Moritz, at first base, Schramm, as pitcher displayed good control having eleven strike-outs to his credit. He was assisted by good fielding. Three double plays were completed, demonstrating that the boys were all in the pink of condition. Next Sunday the opening game will be played at New Fane, when Eden Witt will cross bats with the local team. Witt will be the pitcher for the visitors, while Schramm will be at the delivering end for the New Fane nine. A good game can be expected. The diamond at New Fane has been put in excellent condition. Everybody is cordially invited to attend the opening game, and root for their home team.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS

Next week Friday, May 30, being Memorial Day, we will go to press on Thursday. It will be necessary to send items to this office one day earlier.

FINISHING WORK OF REHEARSING

The cast, who will present the Senior Class Play "The Arrival of Kitty," on Tuesday evening, June 3, have been hard at work the past few weeks rehearsing same. They are now putting on the finishing touches, preparatory for presentation of the play. Lovers of home talent can look forward to June 3rd, as an evening which will be a most enjoyable one for all, as the cast is getting along splendidly in their work, and will do their best to give the best there is in them to make it an evening's entertainment long to be remembered. "The Arrival of Kitty," is a three-act farce comedy full of pep and snappy lines, plenty of electrifying surprises, and clean comedy situations. It is extremely funny, and it is indeed a dull audience which is not in a roar of laughter from beginning to end of the play, in fact, there are so many complicated situations, which requires so much acting, that should all of them be brought out it would require weeks of continued rehearsing to accomplish same. With all this array of action, makes the play a difficult one to present. Due to the length of same, it will be absolutely necessary for the performance to begin promptly at eight o'clock. Though this play has heretofore not been followed out. All, however, can rest assured that such will not be the case June 3rd. So make arrangements accordingly, come early and get a seat, as inquiries received give promise that the play will not only be greeted by a capacity house, but those who come late, unless they have their seats reserved will probably have to be turned away. A synopsis of the play and cast of characters will be published in next week's issue of the Statesman. Reserved seats will be on sale at the Bank of Kewaskum on and after Saturday, May 24th. Admission: Adults 40 cents; children, 25 cents, and reserved seats 50 cents.

MANY AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS

A number of automobile accidents were recorded on Highway 55, the past week, fortunately, however, none of them resulting in very serious mishaps. The first one reported to us was on Monday morning its about 5:15 o'clock when a small truck driven by Gustave Hoff aged 17, and his sister Viola, children of Albert Hoff of Knowles, who were on their way to West Bend, to which place they were transporting household furniture. When they left the pavement just north of the city limits of Kewaskum, at a point where the new overhead bridge was built over the North Western tracks, and where a short detour leads around the bridge which is completely except for the paving work which is under construction, their truck struck a hole and turned a somersault in the middle of the road, throwing the driver out and pinning Viola under the car. Walter Schaefer, local telephone manager, who was repairing the telephone near by saw the accident, and at once ran to the scene of the accident. He helped young Hoff remove his sister from underneath the car and brought her to this village where medical attention was given her. She suffered a broken collar-bone and a fractured rib. The driver escaped injury. The parents of the young people were notified, who arrived here later and took them home.

An Overland touring car driven by William Kleinke smashed head on into an Oakland touring car driven by A. J. Schulla on Highway 55 Sunday near Calvary cemetery and then hit a ditch and turned over on its side. A number of young men were riding with Kleinke but an injury to one arm sustained by Arthur Kolb was the only casualty. None of the occupants of the Schulla car were injured. According to Kleinke, his brakes were not working when he was unable to stop before another car just ahead of him, he attempted to drive between this car and the Schulla car which was passing from the opposite direction. His wheel was nearly taken off the Overland, the radiator was damaged and the front axle badly sprung. The two cars were towed to a North Fond du Lac garage for repairs—Fond du Lac Commonwealth.

After turning into a stone fence to avoid a collision, one mile north of Eden, Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Christ Moorland of Eden was rendered unconscious for three hours. The car was driven by James Parres of Fond du Lac, who with his wife and a girl Ethel Thornton of Eden, age 14, sustained slight cuts from flying glass and other minor bruises and scratches. Mrs. Moorland was immediately rushed to the St. Agnes hospital, Fond du Lac where Mr. Parres had intended to take her for a visit with her baby, who is ill there. The accident occurred about 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, and the unfortunate lady did not recover consciousness until 7 o'clock Sunday evening. She was removed to her home at Eden on Monday morning, where she will recover. It is reported that Mr. Parres started to pass another car. Seeing another rapidly approaching from the opposite direction, and discovering that he did not have time to get around his machine into the ditch in order to prevent a head-on collision. The car was badly damaged.

WITH OUR DEAR DEPARTED ONES

DEATH OF MRS. MARIE KLUMB

Mrs. Marie K. Klumb, nee Gamm, mother of the late Dr. Wm. N. Klumb, died at her home at West Bend last week Friday, May 19, 1924, after a two month illness brought about by the infirmities of old age. Deceased was born June 30, 1849, at Laubach, Rheinisch Prussia, coming to America in 1857, and settling at Cedar Creek, in this county. In 1862, she was married to Jacob Klumb, and they settled at Jackson. After residing there for a number of years they moved to West Bend, where she has since resided. Nine children were born of this union. Six of whom remain her dearest, namely: Lena (Mrs. Frank Gottsleben) of Oconomowoc, Peter, Minnie (Mrs. J. Eckstadt) and Rose of West Bend, Marie (Mrs. C. P. Wilson) of Boise, Idaho, and Anna (Mrs. C. Reislund) of Cleveland, Ohio. Besides these 18 grand children and one sister, Mrs. P. Hottenbacher survive her. The funeral was held Monday afternoon with services in the Reformed church at West Bend. Rev. C. Rupf officiated. Burial was made in Union cemetery.

Deceased leaves his parents, and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. John Miller, Mrs. John Schmidt, Mrs. Thomas Dieringer, Jr., Paul, Benno, Roseloid, Leo and Vederia, all of the town of Auburn, and Mrs. Francis Flood of Eden.

ANOTHER OLD SETTLER CALLED

A wave of sadness prevailed in this community yesterday (Friday), when it was learned that August Ebert, aged 78, a prominent and highly respected citizen, living two miles east of New Fane, had passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Henry Schultz, between 6 and 7 o'clock Friday morning May 23, 1924. Death being due to drowning. Mr. Ebert had been in ill health for the past forty years. When he was a young man, he suffered from sun stroke from which he apparently never fully recovered. Ten years ago, he fell from a scaffold in his barn, at which time he suffered a painful fracture of the spine. He was taken ill with bladder trouble, all of which it is believed were causes of his melancholy spells at various times. It was during one of these spells that his lifeless body was discovered in the cistern the next morning. The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon at 1:30 from the residence, with services in the St. John's Luth. church, New Fane. Rev. Gutschalk will officiate. Burial will be made in the adjoining cemetery. He leaves to mourn eight sons. Due to lack of time and space, we will publish a complete obituary in our next week's issue of the Statesman.

BADGER STATE HAPPENINGS

Madison.—If an autoist can continue dodging the cops until June 1 he can buy license plates at a 25 per cent discount. The law provides that after that date the lesser fee be charged with further provisions that a license purchased after Sept. 1 is sold for 50 per cent of the original charge.

Rhineland.—A number of costly summer homes will be built on the shores of Flambeau lake, on the Lac du Flambeau reservation this year. Most of them will be erected by wealthy Milwaukee and Chicago residents who purchased frontage there last year.

Madison.—Final assessments on railroads and telephone companies announced by the state tax commission show a decided increase in assessment and taxation. Valuation of railroads has increased by $8,345,000 over last year.

Portage.—Three autos laden with cyclists invaded Portage last week, but when they reached the downtown district they were assembled by Under Sheriff E. L. Alderman and loaded back into their cars and sent on their way before they could ply their fortune telling craft.

Marquette.—Three dams to raise the level of lakes and streams in Marquette county for fish propagation will be built by the conservation club and Isaak Walton league. The dams will be built at the outlets to the Goodman and Miscoamul ponds and next year additional dams will be built in lakes and streams throughout northern Marquette county.

Janesville.—Six hundred forty thousand pike fry were planted in Rock County streams last week by the Janesville Isaak Walton league chapter. A. R. Hoard, editor of Hoard's Dairyman, and J. F. Schreiner, Fort Atkinson, planted 75,000 in Lake Koshong, in addition to those planted by the Janesville chapter.

Monroe.—Voegel brothers, Monticello, are the proud owners of Mabel Weiss, the new world's champion 2-year-old Brown Swiss. Her record of 265 days is 18,344 pounds of milk containing 723.27 pounds of butterfat.

Madison.—Banking Commissioner Dwight Parker has announced that he had taken charge of the People's bank of Clear Lake, Wis. Frozen assets, depleted cash reserve and impaired capital were given as reasons for the closure.

Madison.—Thomas Powers, 45 years old, of La Crosse, a patient at the Mendota hospital for insane, was drowned in Lake Mendota, Madison. Powers was walking along the lake shore, according to officials, and waded into the water and lay down. Before help could be summoned he was dead.

Prairie du Sac.—Children playing by the roadside near the Springfield hill, eight miles east of Prairie du Sac, found a bundle in a culvert which proved to be deeds, bank certificates, stocks and valuable records taken from the Concor-Schoepfer Co.'s store which was burglarized Dec. 24.

Baraboo.—A difficult task was accomplished in the moving of a pleasure boat owned by Mrs. Al Ringling, of Baraboo, from Crystal Lake, Ill., to Mirror Lake, Sauk county, a distance of 160 miles. The boat is forty feet long and weighs five tons. It was loaded on a truck and trailer.

Monroe.—August Milbrandt, 90, of Monroe, was fatally injured when his left foot was ground off beneath a Milwaukee road freight train. He died at a local hospital. Mr. Milbrandt, who lived near the tracks, has poor eyesight and failed to see the approaching train.

"YOU AND I"

SYNOPSIS.—Transley's hay-cutting outfit, after stacking 2,000 tons, is on its way to the big Y. D. ranch headquarters. Transley is a master of men and circumstances. Linder, foreman, is substantial, but not self-assertive. George Drak, one of the men, is an irresponsible chap who proposes to every woman he meets. Transley and Linder dine with Y. D. and his wife and daughter Zen. Transley resolves to marry Zen. Y. D. instructs Transley to cut the South Y. D. "spite o' h—i an' high water" and a fellow named Landson. Drak proposes to Zen and is neatly rebuffed. Transley pitches camp on the South Y. D. and finds Landson's outfit cutting hay. Denison Grant, Landson's manager, notifies Transley that he is working under a lease from the legal owners and warns Transley off. All of which means that Y. D. and Zen ride to the South Y. D. Zen is a natural vamp, not yet hater-broke and ripe for mating. Y. D. has taken a liking to Transley. Zen holds Transley off and encourages Linder. Zen enjoys the prospect of a race between Transley and Linder for her favor, but secretly laughs at both. She has another and more serious encounter with Drak. Y. D. throws machines as ruined by iron stakes set in the grass. Zen prevents open war with Landson. Transley half-way proposes and is turned off. Drak sets a fire that attacks the Landson stacks. The Y. D. outfit hastens to aid the enemy. Zen rides off alone to help. The wind changes and the Y. D. people now have to fight the prairie fire. Zen rides into the river to escape flames. Drak tries to abduct her. She drowns him—or thinks she has. Grant overtakes her. In trying to ride through fire Zen is thrown and knocked senseless. Zen comes to after several hours of unconsciousness to find herself in the dark with Grant. She has a sprained ankle and both horses have run away. So she and Grant sit on a rock and tell their past lives. Grant, it appears, is a rich man's son who scorns wealth in order to live his own life.

CHAPTER VI—Continued.

"Well, there was more talk, and the upshot was that I got out, accompanied by an assurance from my father that I never would be burdened with any of the family duets. Roy succeeded to the worries of wealth and I came to the ranges, where I have been able to make a living, and have, incidentally, been profoundly happy. I'll take a wager that today I look ten years younger than Roy, that I can lick him with one hand, that I have more real friends than he has, and that I'm getting more out of life than he is. I'm a man of whims. When they beckon I follow."

Grant paused, feeling that his enthusiasm had carried him into rather fuller confidences than he had intended.

"I'm sorry I bored you with that harangue," he said contritely. "You couldn't possibly be interested in it." "On the contrary, I am very much interested in it," she protested. "It seems so much finer for a man to make his own way, rather than be lifted up by some one else. I am sure you are already doing well in the West. Some day you will go back to your father with more money than he has."

Grant uttered an amused little laugh. "There's no sign of it yet," he said. "A ranch hand, even a foreman, doesn't need any adding machine to count his wages. Besides, I am getting other things that are more worth having."

"What other things?"

"Why, this life—its freedom, its confidence, and health! When one's soul is at-tingle what does all the rest matter?"

"But you need money, too," she added, thoughtfully. "Money is power; it is a mark of success. It would open up a wider life for you. It would bring you into new circles. Some day you will want to marry and settle down, and money would enable you to meet the kind of women—"

"She stopped, confused. She had plunged farther than she had intended.

"You're all wrong," he said amusedly. "It did not even occur to Zen that he was contradicting her. She had not been accustomed to being contradicted, but then, neither had she been accustomed to men like Denison Grant, nor to conversations such as had developed. She was too interested to be annoyed.

"You're all wrong, Miss?"

"I don't wonder that you can't fill in my name," she said. "Nobody knows Dad except as Y. D. But I heard you call me Zen—"

"That was when you were coming out of your unconsciousness. I apologize for the liberty taken. I thought it might recall you—"

"Well, I'm still coming out," she interrupted. "I am beginning to feel that I have been unconscious for a very long time indeed."

Grant was aware of a pleasant glow excited by her frank interest. She was altogether a desirable girl.

"I have observed," he said, "that poor people worry over what they haven't got, and rich people worry over what they have. It is my disposition not to worry over anything. As for opening up a wider life, what wider life could there be than this which I—which you and I—are living?"

Presently one of the segments of light grew and grew. It was as though it were rushing up the valley. They watched it, fascinated; then burst into laughter as the orb of the moon became recognizable. . . . There was something very companionable about watching the moon rise, as they did.

Zen had a feeling of being very happy. True, a certain haunting spectre at times would break into the consciousness, but in the companionship of such a man as Grant she could easily beat it off. She studied the face in the moon, and invited her soul. She was living through a new experience—an experience she could not understand. In spite of the discomfort of her injuries, in spite of the events of the day, she was very, very happy.

If only that horrid memory of Drak would not keep tormenting her! She began to have some glimpse of what renouance must mean. She did not blame herself; she could not have done otherwise; and yet—it was horrible to think about, and it would not stay away. She felt a tremendous desire to tell Grant all about it. . . . She wondered how much he knew. He must have discovered that her clothing had been wet.

She shivered slightly.

"You're cold," he said, as he placed his arm about her.

"I'm a little chilly," she admitted. "I had to swim my horse across the river today—he got into a deep spot—and I got wet." She congratulated herself that she had made a very clever explanation.

He put his coat about her shoulders and drew it tight. Then he sat beside her in silence. There were many things he could have said, but this seemed to be neither the time nor the place. Grant was not Transley. He had for this girl a delicate consideration which Transley's nature could never know. Grant was a thinker—Transley a doer. Grant knew that the charm which enveloped him in this girl's presence was the perfectly natural product of a set of conditions. He was worldly-wise enough to suspect that Zen also felt that charm. It was as natural as the bursting of a seed in moist soil; as natural as the unfolding of a rose in warm air. . . .

Presently he felt her head rest against his shoulder. He looked down upon her in awed delight. Her eyes had closed; her lips were smiling faintly; her figure had relaxed. He could feel her warm breath upon his face. He could have touched her lips with his.

Slowly the moon traced its long arc in the heavens.

CHAPTER VII

Just as the first flush of dawn mellowed the east Grant heard the pounding of horses' feet and the sound of voices borne across the valley. They rapidly approached; he could tell by the hard pounding of the hoofs that they were on a trail which he took to be the one he had followed before he met Zen. It passed possibly a hundred yards to the left. He must in some way make his presence known.

The girl had slept soundly, almost without stirring. Now he must wake her. He shook her gently, and called her name; her eyes opened; he could see them, strange and wondering, in the thin gray light. Then, with a sudden start, she was quite awake.

"I have been sleeping!" she exclaimed, reproachfully. "You let me sleep!"

"No use of two watching the moon," he returned, lightly.

"But you shouldn't have let me sleep," she reprimanded. "Besides, you had to stay awake. You have had no sleep at all!"

There was a sympathy in her voice very pleasant to the ear. But Grant could not continue so delightful an indulgence.

"I had to wake you," he exclaimed. "There are several people riding up the valley; undoubtedly a search party. I must attract their attention."

They listened, and could now hear the hoofbeats close at hand. Grant called; not a loud shout; it seemed little more than his speaking voice, but instantly there was silence, save for the echo of the sound rolling down the valley. There a voice answered, and Grant gave a word or two of directions. In a minute or two several horsemen loomed up through the vague light.

"Here we are," said Zen, as she distinguished her father. "Gone lame on the off foot and held up for repairs." Y. D. swung down from his saddle.

"Are you all right, Zen?" he cried, as he advanced with outstretched arms. There was an eagerness and a relief in his voice which would have surprised many who knew Y. D. only as a shrewd cattleman.

Zen accepted and returned his embrace, with a word of assurance that she was really nothing the worse. Then she introduced her companion.

"This is Mr. Denison Grant, foreman of the Landson ranch, Dad." Grant extended his hand, but Y. D. hesitated. The truce occasioned by the fire did not by any means imply permanent peace. Far from it, with the valley in ruins—

Y. D. was stiffening, but his daughter averted what would in another moment have been an embarrassing situation with a quick remark.

hoofs, but I suppose we have some heart, too. If you can find it."

They shook hands with as much cordiality as the situation permitted, and then Zen introduced Transley and Linder, who were in the party. There were two or three others whom she did not know, but they all shook hands.

"What happened, Zen?" said Transley, with his usual directness. "Give us the whole story."

Then she told them what she knew, from the point where she had met Grant on the fire-riddled hill.

"Two lucky people—two lucky people," was all Transley's comment. Words could not have expressed the jealousy he felt. But Linder was not too shy to place his hand with a friendly pressure upon Grant's shoulder.

"Good work," he said, and with two words sealed a friendship.

Grant, he said, "if I want that hay next year I'll cut it, spite o' h—i an' high water."

"All right, Y. D.," said Grant, cheerfully. "We'll see. Now, if you can spare me a horse to ride home, I'll have him sent back immediately."

Y. D. went to find Transley and arrange for a horse, and in a moment Zen appeared from somewhere.

"You've been quarreling with Dad," she said, half reproachfully, and yet in a tone which suggested that she could understand.

"Not exactly that," he parried. "We were just having a frank talk with each other."

"I know something of Dad's frank talks. . . . I'm sorry. . . . I would have liked to ask you to come and see me—to see us—my mother would be glad to see you. I may hardly ask you to come if you are going to be bad friends with Dad."

"No, I suppose not," he admitted. "You were very good to me; very decent," she continued.

she continued. Transley, Linder and Y. D. appeared, with two horses. "Linder will ride over with you and bring back the spare beast," said Y. D.

Grant shook hands, rather formally, with Y. D. and Transley, and then with Zen. She murmured some words of thanks, and just as he would have withdrawn his hand he felt her fingers tighten very firmly about his. He answered the pressure, and turned quickly away.

Transley immediately struck camp, and Y. D. and his daughter drove homeward, somewhat painfully, over the blackened hills.

Transley lost no time in finding other employment. It was late in the season to look for railway contracts, and continued dry weather had made grading, at best, a somewhat difficult business. Influx of ready money and of those who follow it had created considerable activity in a neighboring center which for twenty years had been the principal cow-town of the foothill country. In defiance of all tradition, and, most of all, in defiance of the traditions of the ranchers who had known it so long for a cow-town and nothing more, the place began to grow. No one troubled to inquire exactly why it should grow, or how. As for Transley, it was enough for him that team labor was in demand. He took a contract, and three days after the fire in the foothills he was excavating for business blocks about to be built in the new metropolis.

It was no part of Transley's plan, however, to quit horse-trench with the people on the Y. D. They were, in fact, the center about which he had been doing some very serious thinking. His outspokenness with Zen and her father had had in it a good deal of bravado—the bravado of a man who could afford to lose the stake, and smile over it. In short, he had not cared whether he offended them or not. Transley was a very self-reliant contractor; he gave, even to the millionaire rancher, no more homage than he demanded in return. . . . Still, Zen was a very desirable girl. As he turned the matter over in his mind Transley became convinced that the wanted Zen. With Transley, to want a thing meant to get it. He always found a way. And he was now quite sure that he wanted Zen. He had not known that positively until the morning when he found her in the gray light of dawn with Denison Grant.

Obviously Y. D. was becoming worked up, and it seemed to Grant that the time had come to speak.

"There will be none," he said, quietly. "If you come over the hills to cut the South Y. D. next summer I will personally escort you home again."

Y. D. stood open-mouthed. It was preposterous that this young upstart foreman on a second-rate ranch like Landson's should deliberately defy him.

Glastonbury Thorn Was Staff of St. Joseph

The beautiful story of the Glastonbury thorn begins in the dawn of Christianity with Joseph of Arimathea, one of the devoted band of disciples sent forth to carry the gospel to the ends of the earth.

St. Joseph was accompanied by twelve others, and the little company of zealous pursued their weary way to the west of England, to the ancient isle of Avalon, says the Detroit News. When Joseph and his companions, footsore, hungry and weary, one day at twilight came to a hill southwest of Glastonbury and saw a fairland valley beneath wrapped around by the silver ribbon of the Brent river, they knew their wanderings were over and that there they should raise a citadel of faith to their risen Lord.

Deep into the earth Joseph struck the staff that had given him such good service on the long march, as a token that his work should take root there and flourish. This thorn staff was a cutting from the very Palestinian thorn tree, according to tradition, from which thirty years before had been with provoking calmness, "I've seen the papers. You've run a big bluff in this country. You've occupied rather more territory than was coming to you. In a word, you've been a good bit of a bully, now—let me break it to you gently—those good old days are over. In future you're going to stay on your side of the line. If you crowd over you'll be pushed back. You have no more right to the hay in this valley than you have to the hide on Landson's steers, and you're not going to cut it any more, at all."

Y. D. exploded in somewhat ineffectual profanity. He had a wide vocabulary of invective, but most of it was of the stand-and-fight variety. There is some language which is not to be used, unless you are willing to have it cut on the ground, there and then.

Y. D. had no such desire. Possibly a curious sense of honor entered into the case. It was not fair to call a young man names, and although there was considerable truth in Grant's remark that Y. D. was a bully, his bullying did not take that form. Possibly, also, he recalled that at that moment the obligation under which Zen's accident had placed him. At any rate he would not utter a word.

"Grant," he said, "if I want that hay next year I'll cut it, spite o' h—i an' high water."

"All right, Y. D.," said Grant, cheerfully. "We'll see. Now, if you can spare me a horse to ride home, I'll have him sent back immediately."

His outspokenness with Zen and her father had had in it a good deal of bravado—the bravado of a man who could afford to lose the stake, and smile over it. In short, he had not cared whether he offended them or not. Transley was a very self-reliant contractor; he gave, even to the millionaire rancher, no more homage than he demanded in return. . . . Still, Zen was a very desirable girl. As he turned the matter over in his mind Transley became convinced that the wanted Zen. With Transley, to want a thing meant to get it. He always found a way. And he was now quite sure that he wanted Zen. He had not known that positively until the morning when he found her in the gray light of dawn with Denison Grant.

Obviously Y. D. was becoming worked up, and it seemed to Grant that the time had come to speak.

"There will be none," he said, quietly. "If you come over the hills to cut the South Y. D. next summer I will personally escort you home again."

Y. D. stood open-mouthed. It was preposterous that this young upstart foreman on a second-rate ranch like Landson's should deliberately defy him.

Selectometer Used in Three-Circuit Regenerative Inductance Tuned Plate Set.

By WILLIAM J. SCHNELL
After months of experimental work we have found that what has been recognized as the standard type of variocoupler is lacking in the one element most essential to its success—the transfer of energy from the antenna circuit to the input of the radio receiving set with a minimum of loss. An entirely new design, embodied in a fixed coupler, known as a selectometer, has now been devised which overcomes this serious deficiency in the old variocoupler. Other defects which have a serious bearing on receiver efficiency are also eliminated by the selectometer.

Couplers generally are designed so that the primary unit is of such an electrical constant that together with the antenna constant, with which it is employed, the desired frequency band is covered. The primary unit is usually tapped so variation in the value of the primary circuit can be had to permit of obtaining resonance for any particular incident frequency. Theoretically it was considered that such a coupling resulted in the maximum of received energy in the antenna system. The secondary circuit was likewise tuned for the same purpose.

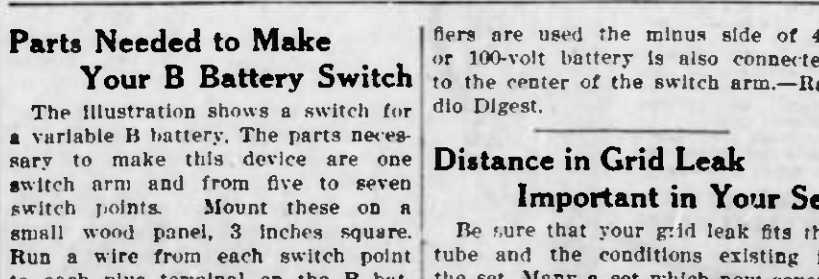

Used as a Wave Trap in Ground Wire.

It was also generally believed that a maximum of energy could be transferred between these two circuits with a minimum of loss under the conditions. Fundamentally, this should be considered as the basis of the laws of transformer action. These conditions do exist at audio frequencies, but it is quite different when this transformer action is observed at radio frequencies. This applies particularly to the coupling of the antenna to the input circuit of radio frequency amplifiers. When used in this manner, it is not desirable that the coupling be close, nor that the antenna be adjusted to resonance. Far better results will be obtained if both these fundamentals are actually reversed. I. e., loose coupling and no attempt to secure resonance in the antenna system. There are good reasons for this somewhat radical departure from generally accepted principles.

Keep Resistance Low.
All resistance should be kept at the lowest possible value in the input circuit. Some of these, such as conductor resistance, resistance due to distributed capacity in winding form, etc., are readily handled so that their reduction is not so difficult. But when this input circuit is coupled to the antenna system we find an additional resistance, namely, one of energy absorption. When two circuits are connected so that one is transferring energy to the other, the primary circuit tends to reabsorb energy from the secondary. This amounts to a reduction of energy received in the second circuit. The net result is an apparent increase in the secondary resistance. Further, we find that more nearly the primary circuit approaches resonance with the secondary circuit the greater the retransfer of energy, hence the greater resistance from this effect. This effect is more pronounced the constant until a certain point, after which it will show a very rapid increase in value. As the coupling is further decreased the indicator will rapidly drop to zero—evidencing that the energy transferred is nil at this point. The point at which the indicator shows the rapid drop should be our most efficient coupling coefficient. This point must mean where our absorbing circuit resistance is low. If used in a receiving circuit this point should give the maximum of signal strength and selectivity.—New York Sun.

Things About Punches
Amateurs Should Know
There are two kinds of punch—one with a long, slender and sharp point, and the other with a blunt point. If any such thing exists. The slender one is useful when you mark the centers for holes on the panel, punching through the drilling template which you got with the box of parts or which you drew up yourself. This makes a needlelike mark on the panel, but it is not enough to start the drill through on the straight and narrow. Take the flat-topped punch next and go over the job, making a wide depression, which the drill will fit into easily. If the blunt one is used first it is likely to slip off center on account of inequalities in the paper or uneven contact with the panel material.—New York Telegram

The decision was based on the following points: Completeness and accuracy of information correct spelling, form and foundation. Points to be covered were: Prairie du Chein and Father Marquette; Prairie du Chein and the fur trade; 3; Prairie du Chein as a military post; 4; Prairie du Chein, as an educational center. The essay was not to exceed 800 words. Miss Lucile Flaech, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Flaech and a pupil of St. Kilian's parochial school received the first prize, Miss Selvia Regner of St. Annis school, Milwaukee, second. Fifty-one papers from twenty-four schools were submitted. Some excellent papers could not be considered because they exceeded the limit of 800 words. Miss Lorraine is a pupil of St. Mary Balthildes S. L. N. D.

MEMORIAL DAY, 1924

THROUGHOUT the land on May 30th, in every city, town and hamlet, the streets resound to the tread of America's veteran warriors.

It is Memorial Day, consecrated to the memory of the thousands of young manhood who answered their country's call and died; men whose blood is mixed in the mortar that cements the foundation of our great country.

Veterans of three great wars march together to the cemeteries to lay a token of remembrance on the green graves.—The faded and depleted ranks of blue and gray lead the way, the men who fought the fight they believed to be right. The slouch hats of the Spanish war veterans, themselves smaller in number as the years roll by, come next. And last, the sturdy manhood of the twentieth century, the millions of veterans who went forth at democracy's call.

To those millions of World war veterans I say. All honor and respect to the elder veterans of past conflicts. Let us co-operate in all manners possible with the men whose deeds are written with sword and musket on the pages of American history. Let us honor them now while they are here to know and understand, for time, the great unconquerable enemy, will soon leave us nothing but the unforgettable memory of their accomplishments.

The Grand Army, whose efforts have made Memorial Day one of the greatest of our national ceremonies is being depleted in ranks. The battalions are smaller, the step feebler, and soon from their shaking hand will fall the torch kept burning for sixty years with undiminished light. It is the duty of the American Legion to take the torch of Liberty and hold it up that its light may dispel the shadows of discontent and restlessness.

And if, at the end of its span in life, the American Legion can point to accomplishments as great as those of the G. A. R., the American Legion will not have to justify its existence, its existence will have justified itself.

And if, at the end of its span in life, the American Legion can point to accomplishments as great as those of the G. A. R., the American Legion will not have to justify its existence, its existence will have justified itself.

Its Mission First Is to Be Beautiful.

A "Hunch"

He stands uncovered in the silent throng
The white, to muffled drums, they march along
Who bear in measured tread the honored form
Of one of those who in the stress and strife
Of Right in conflict for the mastery
With Wrong went down for victory—
In no man's land or bloody trenches died,
To be reported "unidentified"—
And hears a medalled neighbor, gaunt and grim.
Remark: "Neglected buddies envy him.
But I—no difference! We, all the same,
Stood true—did what we could to win
the game.
Unknown: Forgotten! I've a hunch that when
The After Roll is called we'll answer then!"
—Charles Josiah Adams.

Flag as Reminder at Little Mounds

Wind-Whipped Standard Tells Story of Strife for Peace of Today.

THE richest memory of May is our great Memorial Day, writes Samuel S. Drury, in Youth's Companion. Though a holiday not yet three score years old, it has won its way into every state in the Union and carries its message of hope and resolution to the heart of every true American. Hark! Can you not hear the hands clashing through our leafy streets all the way across the continent? Can you not see the veterans in their faded uniforms marching or being reverently drawn to the solemn observance? Can you not picture great bouquets of lilacs and daisies generously provided from nature's greenhouse for every soldier's grave? Now what is this all about? If only we could have a quiet time to consider, if only we might take a day off to think things out! Such a day we have. On the holiday the community takes a day off. One purpose of a holiday is by rest and refreshment to put first things first. What then shall good Americans think and do and resolve on Memorial Day?

The reflective patriot first of all on this day will grow in gratitude. A moment's quiet thought convinces us that we are inheritors of valorous sacrifice. That single wind-whipped flag by a single soldier's grave is ample reminder to a sensitive patriot that our peaceful today springs from stressful and sacrificial yesterdays. In 1861 young men loved life as intensely as we do now. Homes meant quite as much then as they do today. To enlist, to fight, to die—those steps in the patriot's pilgrimage involved the dedication of self to greater than personal

Small Number Will Answer When Roll Is Called.

THE blue line is thinning fast. On Memorial Day, veterans of the conflict of 60 years ago will meet again to pay tributes of respect to those who have died, and those who answer to the roll call will be few indeed. The Memorial Day march of four-score years can be only a brief one causes. War ever means love of a cause. Every boy and girl who knows a soldier of the Civil war (how swiftly these venerable men are passing from us!) may develop this sense of gratitude on Memorial Day by talking with such a veteran. On a national day like this we realize that the good event never just happens, that all our developments, be they personal, domestic or national, cost in human energy and sacrifice. The first emotion on Memorial Day is this pulsating sense of gratitude, which memory, that blessed moral power, can awaken in the heart of every patriot. As we think of what our plenty and prosperity have cost, we love our country more.

Vital patriots, moreover, desire to do as well as to think. Thus our holiday must be in part a holy day. We thoughtful Americans may devote some time to the active commemoration of our valiant dead. Surely for many years the American people have been honoring the Unknown Soldier. They have not limited their praise or their floral offerings to men they knew. No one need scan the name beneath the flag before bestowing a grateful benediction.

Patriotism is a living thing. The waves of history reach to our very shores. In our own time how multitudinous are the causes for this reflective gratitude! Since the Civil war and the Spanish-American war our sons and brothers and very companions have joined that Choir Invisible, that Sacrificial Throng which loved unto the death. The countries where they fell are not alien lands; the soil wherein they lie is not foreign soil. To stand in an American cemetery in France is to feel yourself intensely an American; yes, that hallowed place seems peculiarly a part of America. That spot is home where living thoughts of home or thoughts from home have dominated. Let not loving survivors mourn at the spatial separation from the young veteran's grave. With martial tokens are they surrounded, and with gentle hands are their crosses tended. Over it all the spirit of America, our great home, unfolds them as completely there as here.

Memories, Gratitude

MEMORIAL Day should not only awaken memories of the past, but also gratitude to those whose devotion and sacrifice to ideals and principles made possible the present in all its blessings to citizens individually and collectively.

The tread of those who answer again to the roll call and step out at the voice of command will be feeble and uncertain. But the occasion should be worthy of all the sentimental tribute of which the nation is capable. For many of those who join in the procession, it will be the last parade. There will be many more veterans of recent wars who participate in this year's Memorial Day. The hysteria of emotion which the World war aroused

Memorial Day

Gather the garlands rare today,
Snow-white roses and roses red;
Gather the fairest flowers of May,
Heap them up on the graves of clay,
Gladden the graves of the noble dead.

Pile them high as the soldiers were Filed on the field, where they fought and fell;
They will rejoice in their new place
there
Today, as they walk where the fragrant air
Is sweet with the scent of asphodel.

Many a time, I've heard it said,
They fell so thick where the battles were,
Their hot blood rippled, and, running
red,
Ran out like a rill from the drifted
dead,
Staining the heath and the daisies
there.

This day the friends of the soldiers keep,
And they will keep it through all
the years,
Will come with flowers to watch and weep,
And water the garlands with their tears.
—Cy Warman.

American interprets in personal resolutions. What shall ours be? No flag will mark the commonplace activities of our trivial round, no music may accompany our humdrum routine; but even so Memorial Day should rouse in us the resolution to be patriots of peace. We must believe that peace hath her victories no less renowned than war. To be a good patriot in May, 1924, is harder but no less necessary than in April, 1917. A country that is worth dying for is worth living for. Today and always we are bound to participate in the battles of peace—battles that mean courage and patience and chivalry on our part if we are going to leave this good world better than we found it. Every Christian American must be marching as to war. We do wrong to denature our routine life of this necessary martial element. At many points, without as well as within, no matter how obscure our lot, we have to fight. We must be "good haters," plain-speaking denouncers, not mealy-mouthed agreeers with every second-rate project or person. With charity for all persons, let us be declared foes of all those evils that menace personality.

The world is ever calling for heroes and heroines. Today promises you a battle for some cause or person worthy of your meete. On Memorial Day every eye should be bright with brave resolution. With flags and flowers and yesterday, we honor all the brave youth of ideals more than of life.

It is the duty of the youth of today and tomorrow to serve the country those heroes loved and to make it a land whose mountains speak peace, whose hills proclaim righteousness and whose breezes are clean with equal opportunity and vital with fair play.

was followed by a period during which the public viewed all exhibitions of patriotic fervor with distaste. But normal human viewpoints seem to have returned. Nothing can be more normal, nothing more human, than a wholesome tribute to the gray-haired wearers of the blue who will march again to martial stratos, on the day set apart to honor the fine traditions of those who died.

Sleeves, Collars Unchanged

Sleeves are unchanged—they are wide and usually bell-shaped or raglan. The conventional sleeve with no touch of the bizarre is characteristic of this season. The lines of the collar are on the whole unaltered save for the strong influence of the scarf, which has been introduced particularly in silk wraps.

With Lofty Crowns

A good rule in hats of the moment seems to be that the higher the crown,

NEGLIGEEES AND LINGERIE; MIDSUMMER'S LOVELY HATS

THE rainbow has nothing on present-day lingerie and negligees, when it comes to being colorful—except that it began first. In the intimate garments that women of today choose, all the tints and shades of the sky's beautiful arc are repeated—and others are added. The limit of sheerness and daintiness has been reached in this field where fine ladies need not practice restraint in the quest of beauty.

The story of negligees is a long one and includes many garments which must be substantial, as well as those flimsy affairs whose mission is first to be beautiful. One of the latter is shown here, made of georgette crepe and lace and adorned with narrow ribbons and ribbon flowers. Negligees of this kind impress the lighter colors into their service, and favor pink, orchid, Nile green, French blue, rose, peach and flame color.

After georgette comes crepe de chine as a fabric for these elaborate types of the negligee, in the same colors and made up in much the same way. This season there are fine wool crepes, also in flower-like colors but not so much adorned. They are graceful with flowing sleeves, and edges finished with crochet work in silk. The same silk provides small tassels that punctuate long lines by furnishing a finish for narrow girdles or pointed sleeves.

Just a little heavier than these crepes are crepe satin and taffeta in changeable and plain weaves. Narrow val lace is much in demand for trimming the satin garments and is used in rows. Square pockets almost covered with it, and neck and sleeve decorations are noted on the new models.

Leaving the company of silk negligees and joining that which is made up of cotton we find new and fascinating patterns in ratine. Soft corduroy maintains its popularity and is shown in lovely rose and purple shades, the stronger blues, hienna and some darker tones. Familiar cotton crepes appear in prettier colors than ever. Plain garments have collars and bandings in gay stripes.

Just why June should be, of all months, the favorite for weddings might be accounted for in several ways—but its millinery is reason enough. Along with June come the superlative hats of midsommer—"the fairest thing in mortal eyes," except the maids who wear them. They are the roses in the garden of millinery and nothing else quite equals them.

The bride is privileged to select the most picturesque of hats for her maid—extremes of the romantic types or period headwear if she chooses. But it appears to be fashionable to be conservative this year and wedding processions reveal the lovely midsommer styles of today vindicating their choice, leghorns, fine milena, hair-bratis, bats of georgette or malines or

THINGS THAT HELP

A small "housewife" holding needle, thimble and thread, carried in the apron pocket, will be found helpful in taking a stitch or two which would otherwise go unstitched. When taking disagreeable medicine hold a piece of ice in the mouth a moment; it dulls the sense of taste so the medicine goes down easier.

Patterns in oilcloth make fine models for patchwork, for those who enjoy that kind of work.

Keeping things from year to year because we may need them sometime is a wasteful way to live, while others need the things and could be made comfortable and happy with them.

The stains of water on enamel in the sink and lavatory may be removed with a few drops of muriatic acid rubbed over. Rinse well or it will eat the enamel.

Cool all bread and rolls on a rack. By covering with a cloth or put the bread steams and it destroys the delicious flavor which is the chief charm of well-baked bread.

Onions cooked with tart apples, adding a little sugar, salt and frying in sweet fat, make a delightful change to serve with either chops or beefsteak.

A roll of adhesive tape is indispensable in the household. A piece put on a sore thumb, a corn, or callous will give relief.

Pure glycerin diluted with a little lemon juice or lay rum or rose water is a good softener of the hands.

To remove fresh paint apply turpentine; old dry paint should be soaked in naphtha—away from all fire.

Charcoal is a fine absorber of odors. Keep some in the ice chest, in cupboards where there is any dampness and renew it occasionally. Keep the used charcoal to start the fire, for it is just as good for that as the fresh.

Baked Apples With Dates.—Wash and core four small apples. Fill the centers with sugar and two dates. Bake until tender and serve with one-half cupful of cream whipped and sweetened with a little sugar.

Sugar Cookies.—Cream one cupful of butter with three cupfuls of sugar, add three unbeaten eggs, one cupful of milk in which a teaspoonful of soda is dissolved, one small nutmeg grated and flour to roll. One may vary this recipe by changing the flavoring, using grated peel, seeds of various kinds, raisins and nuts. This recipe makes a large quantity, but they are so good they do not last very long.

Group of Summer Hats.

fancy hairbrad with gorgeous silk tulips, in orchid and other tones, drooping from the brim edge. Long leaves, equally gorgeous, are posed against the crown.

The winsome poke bonnet with crinkly straw crown and georgette brim, cut away at the back, has captured the fancy of many youthful wearers. It is trimmed with clusters of roses in natural colors at each side. A pretty but of georgette crepe faced with braid and worn with a scarf of malines also chooses roses for its adornment and this finishes one chapter in the fascinating story of midsommer millinery that will grace June weddings.

ECONOMICAL MEAT DISHES

The Scotch kettle (a small iron kettle with an iron cover) is being revived. One who is not fortunate enough to possess one may purchase it, as they are now manufactured. There is no utensil which cooks meat to such perfection. Covered tightly and cooked long and at a slow heat, it thus confines all the juices and flavors. The meat will taste so delicious and different, that one will think he is eating some rare, choice morsel.

Lamb Haricot.—Take three pounds of the breast of lamb or mutton; if mutton, remove all skin carefully, cut into squares after wiping, and roll in seasoned flour. In the bottom of the kettle put a pint of lima beans which have been soaked overnight. On top of the beans slice two small onions, then lay the meat on top of all. Bake three hours, well covered.

Oxtail Kettle Roast.—Take two or three oxtails, wash and parboil for five minutes, wipe and roll in seasoned flour. Put one-half of a can of tomatoes in the kettle, lay in the oxtails and cover with finely chopped carrot, turnip and onion. Cover tightly and cook for about four hours in a slow oven. Thicken the rich juice which is left and serve with mashed potatoes.

Roast Cannelon of Beef.—Take one and one-half pounds of ground round steak, the grated rind of a lemon, one tablespoonful of grated onion, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of ground mace, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper, the same of paprika, and a sprinkling of cayenne. Mix together thoroughly, make into a roll and place in a greased baking pan and bake for twenty minutes in a moderately hot oven. Now place six strips of bacon across the roll and arrange four large bananas halved lengthwise about the roll. Sprinkle with a little lemon juice and bake a delicate brown for about fifteen minutes longer. Serve the roast with the bananas about it.

HOUSEWORK NOT DRUDGERY For Women In Good Health

Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Changed Conditions For These Housewives

Back Don't Bother Me Now

Lincoln, Nebraska.—"My back bothered me so and when I had to do any heavy lifting it made me sick to my stomach with the pains in my back. I have my housework to do and four babies to take care of so when I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I took it and I feel better. My back don't bother me and I can eat more and work. I do all my housework and washing for six in the family. I will tell other women to take the Vegetable Compound and you may publish my letter."—Mrs. CHARLES F. DOLEZAL, 1201 Garber Ave., Lincoln, Nebraska.

Felt Better At Once

Volga City, Iowa.—"I will tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was all run down and could hardly be on my feet. I was so cold I could not keep warm. I had numb feelings and then heat flashes would pass over my body. I had severe pains in my sides and was very nervous. I saw your advertisement in the newspapers so I thought I would try your medicine. My husband got me a bottle of the Vegetable Compound and I began to feel better as soon as I started taking it. I have taken it off and on for three years now. I keep house and do all my work for my husband and two

Literally True

A figure of speech can sometimes have a liberal application. Just the other day Brown remarked: "I saw a funny thing this morning."

"What was it?" Smith asked.
"Well, I saw two deaf and dumb men standing on the corner talking." Brown replied, "and a third came up and took a hand in the conversation!"

Popularity that is purchased is never a bargain.

"I'll do it" beats "I wish I could" all hollow.

little boys and make my garden. I feel fine and I tell others what the medicine has done for me. I think it is the best medicine in the world for women."—Mrs. THOMAS GRINDLE, Volga City, Iowa.

Can Do Any Kind of Work

Fouke, Arkansas.—"I had the 'Flu' and after that I had a pain in my side and was not able to do my work I was so weak. I found an advertisement in a paper and it told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would do, and I took it. Now I can do any kind of work I want to. I think every family ought to keep it in the house all the time and I intend to do so."—Mrs. DORA PHILLYAW, R.R. No. 2, Fouke, Arkansas.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent of these replies are "Yes." This shows that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Shaping It

"Can't you help me shape this up?" "What is it?" "A form letter."

Treating Cabbage Seed Is Favored

Two Methods for Preventing Prevalent Diseases—Black Leg and Rot.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Two methods for treatment of cabbage seed for the prevention of the very prevalent diseases—black leg and black rot—are recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture as very essential and low-priced insurance. Mercuric chloride seed treatment is by the simpler method and has practically no ill effects on the seed. Its only limitation—and this is often a serious one—is that blackleg fungus, though greatly reduced, is not entirely killed, although black rot is almost completely controlled. When seed is known to be entirely free from blackleg this method is adequate, but when the seed is known to be infected with blackleg, the hot-water treatment must be used. It will completely control the blackleg, but will reduce somewhat the percentage of germination.

Using Mercuric Chloride.

Mercuric chloride (corrosive sublimate) may be procured from any drug store in readily soluble tablet form. Following directions on the package, make up a 1,000 solution, avoiding metal containers. Place the seed on the center of a square piece of coarse cheesecloth of such size that when the edges are drawn together and tied the improvised sack is not more than one-third full. Immerse in the disinfectant, agitating the seed vigorously so as to remove the air, and thoroughly wet the seed coats. Soak for 30 minutes. Remove, rinse in clean water, and allow to drain several minutes. Open the sack on a table-top, spreading the cloth out flat. Spread the seed over the cloth in a shallow layer to facilitate drying.

Hot Water Treatment.

For the hot-water treatment prepare the seed in a cheesecloth sack as described in the above method. Provide a large vessel containing water adjusted to exactly 122 degrees Fahrenheit, a reliable thermometer, and a stirring rod. Immerse the seed bag, agitating the seed thoroughly, and stirring the water slowly. Keep the water temperature approximately constant by adding steam or boiling water whenever the thermometer registers below 122 degrees Fahrenheit. Remove the seed bag for an instant as the water or steam is added. Soak for 30 minutes. Remove to cold water, drain, and spread out to dry before use.

Pasture for Swine Will Lessen Cost of Feeding

Numerous experiments have proven that pasture will greatly lessen the cost per hundred pounds of raising hogs over dry-lot feeding. Not only will grow faster and make cheaper gains, but they will be healthier and will not so easily fall victim to many diseases to which hog flesh is heir.

The hog is a natural grazing animal, as is the cow, and it should be treated as such. Alfalfa, clover and blue grass make the best permanent pastures. About 20 hogs can be allowed per acre though they must be ringed so they will not destroy it by rooting. Temporary forage crops which will give fine results are rape, sudan grass, soy beans, even growing oats, if nothing better can be had. White hogs are sometimes liable to sunburn in rape pasture.

View of Experience

Charlie—Married yet, old man?
Edward—No; but I'm engaged, and that's as good as married.
"It's better, if you only knew it."

White Pine Blister Rust Is Injurious

Disease Is Attacking Trees in All Growing Sections.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

White pine was once our most important timber crop, holding top place in 1895. It is now down to fifth place, and unless owners of this timber take precautions the ravages of the white pine blister rust will drag it down to a position of still less importance. This disease is now attacking white pines in all the important regions where it grows in this country—in New England, the Lake states and the Pacific Northwest. There are eight native white pines in the United States, including the eastern white pine, western white pine, sugar pine, limber pine, whitebark pine, Mexican white pine, fox-tail pine, and the bristle-cone pine. The Himalayan white pine and the stone or cambrian pine have been introduced from Europe and are to be found to some extent in parks and cemeteries. All of these pines, the native and introduced varieties, are susceptible to the blister rust.

Since currant and gooseberry bushes are the intermediate hosts of this disease of the white pine, the way to protect the pines is to destroy all of the bushes in the pine timber or near it. This is the only practical method. The spores of the rust cannot be transferred directly from one pine tree to another and produce the disease. They must first find a live gooseberry or currant leaf to grow on, and the spores formed there will infect the pines. The United States Department of Agriculture is carrying on campaigns for the uprooting of the currant and gooseberry bushes in white pine regions. Last year the cost of this work averaged 18 cents an acre, but the department says that it would pay even if the cost should mount up to $2 an acre.

Abundance of Moisture Required for Incubator

A great deal of attention should be given to the place where an incubator is going to be located. An ideal place is a cellar or basement that is two-thirds underground. Such a cellar normally has sufficient moisture and is less susceptible to changes in temperature than places above the ground. The handicap may be a lack of sufficient ventilation. Any room, such as a kitchen, that is hot in the day time and cold at night is usually undesirable. To operate an incubator under such conditions is asking too much of it. Attics of houses are very often poor locations because of insufficient moisture. A cellar or spare room that can be kept around 65 degrees F., ventilated without direct drafts over the machine, and having an abundance of moisture, is usually satisfactory.

Hot Formaldehyde Good for Treating Potatoes

The hot formaldehyde treatment for seed potatoes, to prevent scab, is as follows: Take two pints of 40 per cent formaldehyde and dilute in 20 gallons of water heated to a temperature of 118 to 122 degrees Fahrenheit. Dip the potatoes for two minutes, cover for one hour, and dry. Wooden crates or wire baskets can be used for dipping. An ordinary tank heater can be used to heat the solution. A floating dairy thermometer is a great help in regulating the temperature of the solution. More than 530 bushels were treated by the hot formaldehyde method in less than six hours on a farm in Iowa, where 15 potato growers worked together.

FARM FACTS

Rape is one of the most valuable forage crops for sheep grazing purposes.

"Do you own a good farm," is less important than "Does your farm own a good farmer?"

Nothing is better for poultry than skim milk, and it takes the place of meat, to a great extent.

A cement walk leading to the poultry house wins a smile of appreciation from the lady-of-the-house.

A couple of large bins in the poultry house to hold a supply of grain and ground feed save many steps.

Do not spurn in sawdust or shavings. They form breeding nests for insects and fungus pests and are of little fertilizing value.

Wise farmers are agreed that profitable, permanent farming requires the use of some legume crop—alfalfa, sweet clover, and soy beans being among the most prominent.

One of the pleasant surprises of the last two years in the United States has been the fact that dairying has been profitable in spite of the unprofitable conditions of agriculture in general.

There is a wide range of forage crops well adapted to nearly all kinds of soils throughout the country that can be grown for supplying a variety of feed and they ought to be sown by more flock owners.

Winter wheat makes one of the best nurse crops for alfalfa. Crossing the wheat with a grain drill in the spring is a common practice in seeding. Barley and rye are also good and commonly used nurse crops.

THE BLIND SNAKE

"Some one wrote a letter the other day," said the little Blind Snake, "and asked if all snakes were blind. 'Some one' had said that snakes could never see, and so this boy who wrote the letter wondered if this were true. 'I was asked to tell my story because of this letter. I don't know that I would have ever been asked to tell it if it hadn't been for that letter. 'And so I am grateful to that boy. I will probably never see him. I mean to say that he will probably never see me. 'I will certainly never see him, because I never see anyone and I never have seen anyone in all my life. 'He will probably never see me, as I live so much of the time in tunnels and burrowing places under the ground. But there is more chance of his seeing me than of my seeing him. 'Still I am grateful for him that the ways of Blind Snakes should become known. 'I don't know about other snakes, but I do know about ourselves. 'And I do know something of other snakes, too. It is natural that I should have heard Snake news and Snake ways. 'I wonder if the boy had heard of us or if he had heard of the way snakes change their skins. 'When they are changing their skins the film over their eyes is so thick that they can scarcely see anything. 'But that only lasts for three weeks or so. For that length of time the old skin is peeling off while the new one is growing underneath. 'I can never see. I have two little black dots and they are the only eyes I have—they are eyes of a kind. 'Then I have little shields over these eyes, and all I can make out is when it is dark and when it is light. I can see nothing else. Absolutely nothing. 'I am really a blind snake. I'm not like the snakes who simply are partly blind for a little while as they change their skins. 'I am always the same way. 'I'm only a little creature. 'I have peculiar looks. My snout comes way over my mouth and I look like a smooth, almost polished worm. I don't grow very large and I like to live where it is warm—in the Tropics as we say. 'And as others say, too, for that matter! 'I like to eat worms and the larvae of insects. Sometimes I make my home in ant hills, but I like tunnels and burrows and the underground world. 'Why should I care for it above ground? I can't see anything. 'And yet I make my way and get along and feel for my food. 'But I am particularly pleased to have been asked to tell my story. 'Others get a chance to tell theirs, but until now no one has asked for the Blind Snake's story, and even if the boy didn't exactly ask for my particular story he asked a question in a way that I was given the chance to give my answer in a story. 'And so I am thankful to him, very thankful, indeed. I hope he will accept the thanks of the Blind Snake.'"

Dangerous Handicap
Tommy had sprained his wrist and didn't want to go to school. "But your wrist is nicely bandaged," urged his mother. "It won't prevent you from attending classes." Still the boy held back. Dad took a hand at this point. "Now speak up, son," commanded his father. "Let's have the real reason. Why don't you want to go to school with a sprained wrist?" "Too many boys owe me a licking."

Love One Another
Little four-year-old Dorothy had learned the Bible text, "Love one another," at Sunday school. She repeated it after returning home and her mother asked her whether she knew what it meant. "Why, of course I do," she replied. "It means that I must love you, and you must love me; I'm one and you're another."

That History Class
The teacher was examining her class in what she considered the rudiments of history. "William," she exclaimed, "tell me where Elizabeth was crowned queen." "On the head, ma'am."

Raise Wanted
Mother—Johnny, why in the world are you feeding the baby yeast?
Johnny—Boo-hoo! She's swallowed my quarter and I'm trying to raise the dough.

Some One Wrote a Letter.
Some one wrote a letter the other day, and asked if all snakes were blind. "Some one" had said that snakes could never see, and so this boy who wrote the letter wondered if this were true. "I was asked to tell my story because of this letter. I don't know that I would have ever been asked to tell it if it hadn't been for that letter. "And so I am grateful to that boy. I will probably never see him. I mean to say that he will probably never see me. "I will certainly never see him, because I never see anyone and I never have seen anyone in all my life. "He will probably never see me, as I live so much of the time in tunnels and burrowing places under the ground. But there is more chance of his seeing me than of my seeing him. "Still I am grateful for him that the ways of Blind Snakes should become known. "I don't know about other snakes, but I do know about ourselves. "And I do know something of other snakes, too. It is natural that I should have heard Snake news and Snake ways. "I wonder if the boy had heard of us or if he had heard of the way snakes change their skins. "When they are changing their skins the film over their eyes is so thick that they can scarcely see anything. "But that only lasts for three weeks or so. For that length of time the old skin is peeling off while the new one is growing underneath. "I can never see. I have two little black dots and they are the only eyes I have—they are eyes of a kind. "Then I have little shields over these eyes, and all I can make out is when it is dark and when it is light. I can see nothing else. Absolutely nothing. "I am really a blind snake. The Money Standard
Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt said in a brilliant after-dinner speech in New York: "Too many women judge men by the money standard. The more he makes, they think, the better man he is. "The money standard is a false one. I can prove it by a reductio-ad-absurdum story. "A middle-aged woman at a race track said to her middle-aged husband bitterly: "Look at that horse, James! In three and a half minutes it has won more than you have done in a business career extending over 27 years."

Done in Color
"A funny thing happened in my town last week," said the chatty man in a train. "What was that?" asked his listener. "Well, Black, a white man, and White, a colored man, thought a fellow named Brown was pretty green, so they tried to sell him a white horse. But Brown was well red and he deceived them both. In fact, he got all the money they had. "And now?" "And now Black and White are blue."

LONG LIFE

In buying a motor car, consider what the cost will be when divided over a period of years.

What is the car's reputation for satisfactory service after the first year? After the second? And after the third--and fourth?

These considerations, in the final analysis, are the true basis of economy in motoring.

And it is this attribute to which Dodge Brothers Motor Car owes its chief claim upon the unalterable loyalty of its owners.

It is universally known for many vital advantages, but best known for its ability to go on giving thousands of miles of dependable service after years of the hardest usage.

This quality of long life represents a distinct saving in the cost of transportation. It obviates the necessity of buying a new car every year or two. And, by enabling the owner to distribute his investment over a long period of years, it reduces his cost to an annual figure that seems absurdly small, compared with the car's refined appearance, comfortable riding qualities and rugged power.

Find out what comfort, power, beauty $1045 will buy in a Studebaker

STUDEBAKER offers a world-famous Six, a car embodying the best men know, at a price that makes it folly to deny yourself a fine car.

Here is the thrill of a powerful six-cylinder L-head motor; the comfort and luxury of a big, roomy body—deep cushioned and restful; beauty that characterizes the most costly cars.

Compare it for beauty, comfort, roominess, upholstery, for obvious refinements.

Compare it, too, for ease of handling, flexibility, power, quietness, lack of vibration. See for yourself what you can buy with little money in a fine car today.

Ride in this car, ride in competitive cars. Comparison is the surest way to judge an automobile. Studebaker will place a Light-Six at your disposal for this purpose any time you name.

Buy no car at $500 or more without making this test. Don't buy blindly.

Now in justice to yourself, look at this car. Compare it with competitive cars at its price—then with cars selling for several hundred dollars more.

The Modern Wall Finish

Smiling, bright, cheerful walls—walls that, should they become spotted or soiled, can be quickly washed scrupulously clean with soap and water—walls that lighten work and make for happier hours—

Cool, clean, attractive walls—walls that are unaffected by steam, or cold or hot water—walls that reflect cleanliness and wholesome beauty—

Such walls can be yours at a very little expense by using Mellotone—the modern wall finish.

A little Mellotone will effect a wonderful transformation in your home, regardless of the present finish of your living room, dining room or bedroom walls. It flows freely, covers and hides well, and dries to a beautiful, soft-tinted finish.

Let us show you the beautiful effects you can get with Mellotone. Let us tell you how by special arrangement with the Decorating Department of the Lowe Brothers Company, we can get a color scheme for the decorating of your entire house without cost.
