MANY PRETTY JUNE WEDDINGS

The St. John's church at New Fane was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday, June 7, 1924, when Miss Erna Moldenhauer, daughter of Henry Moldenhauer, was united in marriage to Erwin Kempf, son of Fred Kempf, both of New Fane. Rev. C. J. Gutekunst performed the ceremony. The couple were attended by Miss Meta Backhaus, as maid of honor and Adela Moldenhauer, cousin of the bride, and Avela Klug, cousin of the groom, as bridesmaids. Elmer Moldenhauer brother of the bride, was best man, and Rudolf Kempf, brother of the groom, and Roman Moldenhauer, brother of the bride, were ring bearers. The ceremony was held at 10 o'clock in the morning. Miss Irene Kempf, sister of the groom acted as flower girl, and carried a basket of white lilies and ferns. She was dressed in a pink silk dress. The bride was dressed in a white satin and Georgette crepe dress, trimmed with beads and tassels. She wore a veil in fan and cap effect with orange blossoms. The maid of honor wore a light green satin and Georgette crepe dress, trimmed with lace. She carried a bouquet of roses and ferns. The bridesmaids wore yellow crepe de chine dresses and carried bouquets of lilies and ferns. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, with about 100 guests in attendance. THE CITY OF MILWAUKEE PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE TO RETIRING JUDGE BACKUS

(Special to the Statesman) Milwaukee on Thursday paid its wholehearted tribute to a jurist who in his four-year career on the Municipal bench not only established for himself an enviable reputation, but succeeded in bringing commendation to Milwaukee from distant points. His courtroom crowded by the bench and bar of Milwaukee, by representatives of the various state and county departments, by representatives of civic, fraternal and commercial organizations, by hosts of friends and admirers, Judge Backus was bidden farewell as he left the bench that he occupied so long with such conspicuous distinction. Eminent jurists spoke his praise and prominent citizens expressed the pride of Milwaukee in claiming him as one of its foremost citizens. It was an unusual sight, a city honoring a judge who had been a faithful servant. The probations system inaugurated and developed by Judge Backus will stand a monument to him as a humane and wise judge. He comprehended the needs of society. He realized that society as a whole must be protected and that society owed a duty to the individual. Justice Backus always bore in mind that human beings are not equally strong to resist crime. He realized that the treatment received by a man charged and convicted for a first offense had a far-reaching effect upon his life. He knew in mind that one of the dangers of punishment is that it may breed the spirit of a man. Judge Backus tried to save man where he could, and given the choice to break or make a man, he sought to make the man where he felt that by giving him a chance he could make him. Many a man and woman who stood before him accused and found guilty of crime have become better men and women because of the wise and sympathetic manner in which he dealt with their cases. Judge Backus has been an inspiration and force for great in the lives of many. Judge Backus as judge gave a full measure of energy and devotion to civic, charitable and educational movements. No drive of any consequence has been held in Milwaukee in recent years in which he has not played a leading part. He has shown himself to be a public spirited citizen of the first order. While Milwaukee regrets losing a judge of his ability, it rejoices in knowing that he has selected for himself a field of activity that will enable him to play a part in public affairs even greater than that in which he has thus far been engaged. As publisher of the Evening Sentinel-Wisconsin News Judge Backus will continue to do big things for Milwaukee and will certainly reflect great credit upon the city that he has served so well as Municipal Judge. Elmer H. Groth.

IN REGARD TO ADJUSTED COMPENSATION

Congressman Voigt advises us that thousands of letters are being received in Washington by various government offices and congressmen in regard to the settlement of adjusted compensation. The government offices are answering such letters by sending a form letter, which does not always give the desired information. Blanks on which to make application for the insurance which will be issued by way of adjusted compensation will be ready about July 1, 1925. With each blank there will be a circular giving full information. These blanks will be obtainable at any post office, American Legion posts and other veteran organizations and at Red Cross offices. If you wish a blank mailed to you when ready, send your name and address and state what organization you belonged to, to Congressman Edward Voigt, Washington. If the adjusted compensation amounts to $50 or less, payment will be made in cash, but such payment will be made after March 1, 1925. The insurance certificates will be dated January 1, 1925 or thereafter, but no loan can be obtained on the certificate until two years after its date. The compensation is allowed for any period after April 1, 1917, but before July 1, 1919 but a deduction of 60 days is made on account of bonus of $60 already paid. $1 a day is allowed for home service and $1.25 a day for overseas service. Congressman Voigt wishes to call particular attention to the fact that where an ex-service man has died, relatives in the following order, if a truly dependent on the ex-service man at the time of his death are entitled to the adjusted compensation: Widow or widower, if unmarried child, father, mother. In the following order dependency is presumed: Child under 18 at death of service man, and widow if living with him at death. Payments due to dependents will be made in 16 quarterly installments, but if amount is less than $50, payment will be made in one sum. Congressman Voigt will give further information to anyone writing him at Washington.

CHICKEN THIEVES AT ELMORE

The citizens at Elmore are very much on edge these days, and are keeping close watch on parties who have been romping around during the dark hours of the night, for the past two weeks, visiting chicken coops, and stealing chickens. Reports received here from farmers of that locality, are to the effect that the thieves travel in gangs, and of late have become so bold, that if chased will again re-appear the same night. Faces of the thieves have become familiar and farmers are urged to keep a close watch, if visited by the robbers, not to be afraid to do everything in their power to capture them, when they are pre-secured according to law to the full extent.

HAS NARROW ESCAPE

He suffered a fracture of both arms, his knee cap fractured and ugly gashes cut in his head. He was immediately rushed to a hospital at Erie, where he underwent an operation on Tuesday morning. His condition is not considered dangerous.

TIME FOR CALYX SPRAY OF FRUIT TREES.

This spray is primarily for the control of the first larvae of the codling moth which make their entrance to the apple thru the blossoms at calyx end of the apple. To make this spray application efficient, the application must occur during the time when the calyx cups of the apples are still open so that they can be filled up with the spray solution. The proper time to apply this spray is AS SOON AS THE PETALS HAVE FALLEN. Failure to spray at this time usually accounts for a large percentage of wormy apples in otherwise well sprayed orchards. In this spray we are also controlling other insects such as curculio, canker worm, tent caterpillar, and apple scab.

The materials to be used for this spray are the same as for the pink spray, namely 1 gallon liquid lime sulphur and 1 lb. lead arsenate to 20 gallons of water. To obtain best results, a fine mist spray must be used and every square inch of leaf and fruit surface completely coated with a thin spray solution. In addition it is very important that the stream of spray be directed into the calyx cups so as to fill them with the solution. If this work is thoroughly done at the right time with the right materials, the fruit will be well protected until the time of the 2nd foliar spray which is applied approximately 20 days after the calyx spray. It is advisable when applying the calyx spray to use a nozzle disc with a slightly larger opening than was used for the pink spray to aid in more complete filling of the calyx cups. Spray apples, plums, cherries, pears and currants at this time.

STELLAR CAST ENACTS "BAVU" MYSTERY FILM

There are many film fans who would rather have thrills in their screen entertainment than any other quality. And it certainly is true that thrills take the monotony out of life. Personal thrills are not so good, either, because they involve a risk in one's nine out of a hundred cases. There have not been so many motion picture pictures that were really thrilling. There must be a great deal of mystery and suspense to create a genuine thrill. "Bavu", a Universal-Jewel picture which will be shown at the Opera House on Sunday, June 15, is said to be the most thrillingly mysterious picture of recent years. Its atmosphere is foreign and its people strange. The famous players in the cast include Wallace Beery, Estelle Taylor, Sylvia Brainer, Forrest Stanley, Marta Mattox, Nikolai de Ruiz, Josef Swickard, Jack Rollins and Harry Carter. Stuart Paton directed the filming.

LOCAL POST HOLDS MEETING

The local post of the American Legion met at the M. W. A. Hall on Monday evening in regular monthly meeting. The meeting was well attended, and a great deal of important business was transacted. The members of the post received their Legion caps, which were purchased by the post some time ago. The caps are of blue color, with a bronze stripe around it. On one side of the cap in large bronze letters is printed the word "Wisconsin" while on the other side is the Legion moosegram, and post number. The caps are nearly made up and ought to make quite an impression. The various committees who will have charge of the Legion Day picnic, to be held on Sunday, August 17th, were named by General Chairman Geo. H. Schmidt. Invitations to various posts in the state have been sent out, to take part in the parade. Letters are now being received daily by Mr. Schmidt by posts who have accepted the invitation and will be here in full force, all men in uniform and accompanied by their band or Pipe and Drum Corps. Communications are also being received from various companies desiring to operate concession stands and shows for the entertainment of the public. The post, at present cannot state just what concession stands, or shows there will be in the park. But one thing they do know and that is, that what ever they will be, will be clean-cut and of a high grade and the public can rest assured that they will not get "stung" if they go into any of them. From all indications at this time, things look very favorable, and August 17th can be looked forward to, by all as one of the biggest days in the history of Kewaskum.

Big Traffic in Cocaine

Cocaine is derived from coca, and is produced chiefly in the Andean sections of Peru, Chile, Bolivia and the Argentine Republic. The province of Yungas, Bolivia, is the chief producing territory, the output aggregating more than $200,000,000 annually. The production is constantly increasing, and it is believed that the total crop of the South American countries for the past year exceeds $375,000,000. Among its addicts it is better known as "snow," and some authorities hold it to be the cause of the Occident.

To Clean a Watch

To keep the works of a watch clean cut a piece of white paper the size of the cover and, after soaking the paper in petrol, place it within the inner case. The paper should be periodically removed and a fresh piece, also soaked in petrol, substituted. The same plan may be adopted for small and medium-sized clocks.

Belgium Didn't Think Much of Bonapartes

A descendant of the illustrious family of Bonaparte, Miss Blanche Sterlight, is selling motorcars to "prospects" in New York. Miss Sterlight is a daughter of Mrs. Jerome Bonaparte. The latter's husband was a grandson of Joseph, brother of the great Corsican himself. Joseph was Napoleon's right hand in the critical days of the consulate. He it was who rushed the grenadiers to the chamber of deputies during the revolution when his brother was answering charges of extravagance in his campaign in Egypt and Italy. Later Joseph was awarded the throne of Spain. An old French rhyme has it that Napoleon was "a butcher of men." Louis (king of Holland) "always broke his promises." Jerome (king of Westphalia) "dealt in hum" and Joseph was the "tyrant of Spain."

Unexplored Land

One of the largest unexplored areas in the United States lies in a triangular space between the Colorado and the San Juan rivers in southeastern Utah. An expedition of the National Geographic society has begun a survey of the region, primarily to determine whether it was once generally inhabited by the ancient cliff dwellers. The country consists mostly of canyons and sandstone cliffs and is of fantastic beauty. An area as large as some of the smaller eastern states still remains quite unknown to white men.

Schools for Ski-Runners

So popular has skiing become in the last few years, especially in the Scandinavian countries, that training schools are now being established where the elements of the sport will be taught. Inclines are built in the instruction halls so that beginners may practice balancing and acquire the confidence necessary to negotiate the steep slopes.

Stylish of Hairline Cloth; New Blouses of Printed Silk

LET us pay compliment to fashion this season, for being so eminent, if consistent. If a costume is tailored, and this is the outstanding smart note in styledom at the moment, it is strictly what it professes to be, even to the slightest detail. One dare not even omit the prim white garb-aria from the conventional label of one's coat, nor is the ensemble complete without the swagger stick carried just so. Even one's cufflinks assumes a tailored aspect. At least it is bobbed and unrolled so precisely, it would seem as if with intention to fit into the scheme of modes tailored.

A TRIG STREET SUIT

Its tailored best, one selects for her trig street suit black hairlined with white. What joy these hairlined stripes are to designers! They take a genuine delight in playing the horizontal against the vertical, yet in no instance transgressing the law of "strictly tailored." Note how the horizontal plus the vertical achieves chic in the clever pockets inset at each side. Also a unique belt is wrought under each arm in such a way as to slightly conform the line of the coat to the curve of the body, an idea costume suit, which features a full-length coat severely plain and of straight contour. Black satin is a favorite medium for these three-piece suits. Frequently the coat partakes of the redingote lines, open in front to reveal the underdress. The linings of these costume coats are very gay. Tailored suits being in fashion, likewise separate plaited skirts, means, reading between the lines, that the fancy blouse is down on the program as sharing the honors. This year interest centers in the blouse of printed silk, in its gayest, most attractive modes tailored.

When it comes to the blouse of georgette print, conservation is cast to the winds. Just as colorful as can be, is the edict or else starting black and white.

Since considerable responsibility rests in the blouse, for true it is that it either makes or mars the costume, it is well worth one's while to make careful selection. A model, which is 100 per cent attractive, is illustrated herewith. Scarlet printed on an ecru background, with lace dyed a mellow tea tint, is its color description. The manner in which the underarm portion forms a girde brought to the front with long ties of the material, is most unusual. Very fine tucked net combines with real Irish crochet lace in the lingerie bib and collar effect, also cuffs.

Many front fastenings to the blouse are elaborated with plaited jabots of lace. Another style point is the frill of plain white crepe de chine piped with the gay silk of the blouse.

As to the blouse of pure white crepe de chine, it is more apt than not to be finished with pipings of black and frequently there is a monogram trim done in black.

Insets of tucked bands are used in most intriguing ways. Indeed, the blouse self-trimmed with tucks and plaits expresses the last word in the season's modes.

Buttons are very important as a mode of introducing bright color into which is being accentuated by the French women in their tailored suits.

The story of this and similar tailored ensemble is not complete without referring to the manner in which milady of this picture swatches a silken scarf about her throat. Everybody's doing it these days—wearing scarfs in just this way with their street suits. Of course the scarf must be gay. Roman striped, plaided or in a solid high shade. In the latter instance, scarf, chapeau and swagger stick are often color-matched.

Tailored suits are of a varied silhouette, in that short boyish coats compete with those of more formal length. The very latest idea is the decorative scheme. For instance, a white blouse piped with yellow, sports yellow bone buttons down its tailored front, repeating them on the pockets and cuffs.

There is every promise for the tunic blouse. As yet this long effect is found among exclusive models only. A charming version of the long tunic blouse uses white crepe for its making with a wide band of embroidery at the bottom done in gypsy coloring. There is also disposition to wear a knee-length blouse of black crepe de chine with revers and collar lined with white, with a long necktie of the white.

Fascinating new lingerie is made of sheer white voile with tiny triangles of grass green voile set in at intervals. Between the triangles there are rows of double hemstitching.

Wooden Beads

Coats embroidered with wooden beads bear no resemblance to the embroidered models of which we have grown a little tired. The beads may be dull or bright as you desire.

New Shade of Yellow

Tulip yellow is a sport shade which looks especially well in the flannel costumes so much in vogue today. It is a strong, deep yellow which makes the paler tints of the earlier season look a bit insipid.

Fan of Midnight Blue

To rival the summer's night is an extremely large and graceful fan of midnight blue. The ends of the feathers are tipped in brilliant.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

PUSSY'S PLEASURE

They all made a great fuss over Pussy. There were two boys and one girl and a mother and a father and all of them liked Pussy.

Pussy considered herself a very lucky cat. She was petted and she was given such good things to eat.

Pussy had not been very happy when she was a little kitten.

She had been very young when she had had to look out for herself.

And looking out for herself was not easy.

Many a time Pussy had been hungry. Then when she found a home soon she was left alone in a big house without a soul to bother about her.

She thought surely the family had not gone away for good.

She didn't believe they could be so cruel as to leave her.

She was certain they must have gone off on a very short trip and must have left food for her.

But no, there was no food and no family, and then she realized the horrible truth.

They had gone away for a long time—a summer at least and had just left Pussy to shift for herself, which meant all sorts of horrible things.

They even had not let her out, Well, it was something hard for Pussy to believe and it almost made her lose her faith in human nature, for she had believed the family had really cared for her.

But she found a way out and once more she had to look after herself.

One day when she was wandering about looking very sad and wretched and when some children had been teasing her a little girl named Ada saw her and said:

"Oh, Daddy, may I take that little homeless pussy with me?"

It was perfectly plain to see that Pussy was a little homeless waif of a cat. Her fur looked bad and the lack of food and proper care had made Pussy look pretty shabby.

She was really ashamed of her appearance and yet there was nothing she could do.

She gave a little bit of a wail which was her way of saying:

"Oh, please take me home!"

Ada's daddy said she could take her home, and take her home she did.

She was given such nice warm milk and such a warm and comfortable bed.

Soon her fur became nice again and she took care of herself, too.

The good food she had made her feel well and made her look well.

Yes, they all made a great fuss over Pussy. The two boys and the mother and the father all petted Pussy and made her feel so at home.

But Ada loved her more than anyone else did.

The great pleasure of Pussy's life was to curl up in Ada's lap after a nice dinner and purr and think of the difference between this life and the life she had lived before Ada had taken pity on her and loved her and petted her.

Yes, that was Pussy's greatest pleasure—to think of the difference between those days and the ones she now lived!

Dangerous Handicap

Tommy had sprained his wrist and did not want to go to school.

"But your wrist is nicely bandaged," urged his mother. "It won't prevent you from attending classes."

Still the boy held back. Dad took a hand at this point.

"Now speak up, son," commanded his father. "Let's have the real reason. Why don't you want to go to school with a sprained wrist?"

"Too many boys owe me a licking."

Foolish Question

Father (sternly)—How many times have I told you to keep quiet? Do you want me to shut you up in a dark closet?

Bobby (aged five)—What makes you ask such foolish questions, papa?

Board of Education

Willie—Say, Pop, did they have a board of education when you went to school?

Father—Well, yes, my father had one of his own that he kept in the woodshed.—Boys' Life.

Gum Chewing Aids the Teeth

You have the authority of doctors and dentists for this statement. Your own experience will prove it, if you will use WRIGLEY'S after every meal.

The following quotations from a recent work on teeth and health are worth remembering:

"Dentists have found that the exercise of gum chewing brings about a better nutrition of the teeth . . ."

"The cleansing action of the gum between the teeth helps to keep them free from the particles which lodge in the crevices and cause decay."

The busy man—or woman either—rarely has time to clean the teeth after eating. Yet they should be cleaned, and will do it. Also it will aid digestion and furnish welcome refreshment to mouth and throat.

The Flavor Lasts

Brought Back to Memory

The wrestling match was a whirlwind and hotly contested affair. Every fan near the ropes was on his feet wild with excitement and yelling with every ounce of lung capacity—all but one frail little man, who was sitting totally oblivious to both the bout and the bellum in the attitude of a man who is vainly trying to recall something.

Finally, with a hopeless sigh, he looked up and glanced casually at the wrestlers. Then he sprang up and bowed his way through the crowds.

"The osteopath!" he shouted wildly. "That was it! I have an appointment with the osteopath!"—Legion Weekly.

Appropriate

Mrs. Pester—Can you suggest an appropriate sentiment to embroider on my new guest towel?

Her Husband—Yes; "Hands Off" in big red letters.

Frans Hals, the famous Dutch painter, died at the age of eighty-six, a public charge for the last two years of his life.

May Harness Shannon

The Free State government of Ireland has entered into an agreement with an engineering concern for a comprehensive survey of the hydro-electric possibilities of the River Shannon. A detailed scheme is to be worked out for harnessing the Shannon and for the distribution of power over the twenty-six counties of the Free State. If the findings are favorable, the government may develop the project as a state enterprise.

Counted, That's All

An old Cornish granter was asked what he did when he bowed his head in church so reverently just before the service began.

"Well," replied the old man, "that's a fair question an' I'll gie 'ee a fair answer—I daren't know what other folk dus, but I du always count vorty myself!"—Glasgow Herald.

Appalling Problem Confronts Americans, Life Tables Show

Average health span extends only from age 18 to age 31—Earning power dwindles rapidly after 40

Health—physical freedom and full vigor—ends at age 31 for the average person. Maximum usefulness ends at 40. These facts, shown by the United States Life Tables, 1920, form the most appalling problem every human being has to face!

What are the years after 40 going to mean to you? Will they be worth living? Can you earn your way during those years?

Not if you are "the average individual." What sort of person is "the average individual" in America? He works hard. He eats unwisely. He loads his body with drug stimulants, which appear to give energy, but actually borrow this energy from his own reserve.

Age 31—and he begins to slip. The reserve strength which his body sought to store up against these later years, has bit by bit been robbed. Age 40—he suffers loss of income. Age 50—what?

Remember the simple laws of health which everyone learned in school. Avoid stimulants. Avoid the sleepless hours, upset digestion, warning headaches, taut nerves and muddled complexions which so often accompany the use of the drug caffeine.

Caffein is classified as a poison. Like strychnin, it is sometimes given by doctors in cases of heart failure. The average cup of coffee contains the usual dose of caffeine administered in such cases. The alarming foolishness of taking this poison regularly into the system is borne out by the frightful limitation of health and usefulness as compared with the length of life.

You need the digestive aid and comfort of a hot drink. You can get such a drink without drugs. You can get it with a flavor which millions of people consider more delicious than any other. You can get it in a form which contributes, rather than robs, reserve strength.

Change to Postum! Whole wheat and bran, skillfully roasted, with a little sweetening. Nothing more. A wholesome drink—an enjoyable drink. Try Postum for thirty days—you can't try yourself of the effects of a habit of years in a few days.

We will start you on your thirty-day test, with a week's supply of Postum—free. Either Postum Cereal (the kind you boil) or Instant Postum, the easiest drink in the world to prepare. Either kind costs less than most other hot drinks. Just indicate the kind you want for your week's free supply—and we will also have Carrie Blanchard, famous for the goodness of her Postum, send you her own directions.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS

Barely Escapes Being Assaulted By Moran.

Last Sunday morning at about one o'clock a girl came into town with a pitiful tale which she told Chief Henry Brackman, head of the local police department who was out on duty at that time. According to her story she was waiting for a street car in Milwaukee, when an elderly man stopped and asked her if he could give her a lift. She unsuspecting, got in the car with him. Instead of going the way he said he was going he came out on highway 15. At Schultz's Corners she was assaulted. She resisted and was thrown bodily from the moving car. Her hat and purse were kept by the man. After thoroughly scouring the surrounding county the Chief assisted by Constable Raymond J. Shunk, returned home, unsuccessful. Here Milo Marks entered the scene as 'the good samaritan, when he took the girl home. The police have a fair description of the man and car and an arrest will be made soon. Name omitted so that the police can work on the case without outside interference.—Menomonee Falls News.

A Narrow Escape.

Motorcycle policeman Earl Carey had a narrow escape from injury last Sunday afternoon. Carey had just made an arrest and his motorcycle was parked along the concrete. Carey was about to get on the cycle when he noticed a car coming towards him, and passing another large car. The car swung around the one and started straight at Carey, he then changed his mind about getting onto the cycle and stepped a few feet from the machine. A few seconds later the big car hit the cycle, demolishing it completely, and putting the car out of commission. The driver of the car, Dr. R. Baylor of Milwaukee, promised to pay for the damage done.—West Bend News.

Hartford Man Was in Sad Collision Friday.

John Behnke of this city, who is employed as truck driver for the Westphal condensery, was so unfortunate last Friday as to have a collision with two small boys on a bicycle which resulted in the death of one of them. The accident occurred about 10 o'clock in the morning near the corner of Twenty-ninth and Locust streets, as Behnke was going into the city. He had approached the corner and was driving along the middle of Twenty-ninth street. As he passed a car parked at the side of the street, the bicycle bearing two small boys, the owner Alfred Robar, aged 7 and little Howard Stiering, aged 2 years, who was seated on the handle-bars, came out from behind the parked car and hit the middle of the truck on the right side. The Stiering child whose head had struck the truck, was knocked from the front of the bicycle and fell headlong to the pavement.—Hartford Press.

Sheriff Recovers $145 in Stolen Money from Gypsies.

Sheriff F. W. Schlaak recovered $145 for two Sheboygan county men Saturday when he halted a band of 60 gypsies on the Winnebago trail, near this city.

Ed. Shingelberg, bookkeeper for a Sheboygan Falls lumber company, lost $125 and Otto Richter of Sheboygan lost $20 while they were having their fortunes read by two women members of the gypsy band.

Sheriff Schlaak was notified and met the band out of the city. When the gypsies refused to admit that they had taken the money, they turned over $145 to the two men. Since the Sheboygan authorities or the two men unable to identify the two women, no arrests were made, but the band was told to get out of the county.

Sheriff Schlaak received another call Sunday that 19 gypsy autos were in the western section of the county. When he arrived at the scene the band had already departed.—Fond du Lac Reporter.

TESTED UNDER TONS OF WATER

EVERY Clark Grave Vault before it leaves the factory withstands the severest possible tests. It is completely submerged in water—subjected to two and one-half tons pressure. Must be absolutely air-tight and not a drop of water seeps through. (Stone, brick and concrete vaults let water in and hold it.) Its proved protection is made permanent through the use of heavy twelve gauge Keystone copper-bearing steel—the most perfect rust resisting steel made. All joints are doubly welded, are thicker and stronger than the plates themselves. We earnestly recommend this "quality" vault.

CROWE TO FIGHT INSANITY PLEA

Law Officer Claims "Hanging Case" Against Franks Slay

Chicago.—With what it terms a "perfect hanging case" against Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, Jr., confessed slayers of little Herbert Franks, virtually ready to submit to a jury, the state went ahead to assemble absolute evidence that the youthful murderers are sane.

The first step came with the revelation by State's Attorney Crowe that he was zealously guarding notes taken by the two boys in their own handwriting directly after the confessions were made.

These notes prove the boys sane beyond any vestige of a doubt, the officials say. By these notes they are proved cognizant of their crime, its motives, implications, results and possible entanglements.

But even this isn't enough for the state's attorneys who are out to make "the trial of a century" a complete job from the prosecutor's angle. As a second "anti-insanity" step, they prepared to collect testimony from scores of persons who saw Leopold and Loeb directly after the murder.

This evidence is likely to be preserved by bringing it before another grand jury hearing immediately. State's Attorney Crowe has left an opening for this procedure, inasmuch as he can still ask for indictment of the young killers on a conspiracy to commit murder charge.

House Bill Favors Prohibition Bureau Washington.—Dry forces, by a vote of 275 to 90, rushed through the house, under a suspension of rules, the Crampton bill creating a prohibition bureau in the Treasury department, separate from the internal revenue bureau.

Supreme Court Holds Strike Not Conspiracy Washington.—In an important decision in the case of United Leather Workers' International union, Local Lodge No. 64 et al appellants, vs. Herkert and Miesel Trunk company et al, appealed from the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit, the United States Supreme court, through Chief Justice Taft, held that a strike against manufacturers intended to prevent continued manufacture, was not a conspiracy to restrain interstate commerce under the anti-trust act.

Large Increase in Robberies of Banks New York.—An increase of 40 per cent of the number of bank robberies and crimes against banks was reported in the first six months of this year as compared with the first half of 1923, a total of 677 cases compared with 483, according to the protective department of the American Bankers' association.

No Salary Increase for Postal Employees Washington.—President Coolidge vetoed the bill granting postal employees increases of salary amounting to $28,000,000 a year. BEER IS HELD NOT MEDICINE

Supreme Court Decision Mops Up Wets' Last Hope.

Washington.—The Supreme court blasted the last legal hope of the wets—under present laws—and dealt a death blow to breweries by ruling that doctors cannot prescribe beer as medicine. Thus the last legal excuse for operation of breweries was killed.

The court even went further than that. For, in effect, it certified as to the perpetual airtightness of the eighteenth amendment, pointing out that congress can do just about anything it wants to under that amendment, even to the abuse of the power it grants.

The decision, written by Justice Sanford, was unanimous. It was delivered to cover two cases—that of the James Everards breweries against Ralph A. Day, New York prohibition director, and James Burke, Ltd., against David H. Blair, commissioner of internal revenue.

Technically, it was simply an approval of similar decision in lower courts which upheld the validity of the Willis-Campbell act against beer prescriptions.

Postal Bill Passes; Goes to President Washington.—The conference report on the postal salary increase bill, carrying as a rider the Cable corrut practices bill, was adopted in the house by a vote of 362 to 6.

Opponents of the measure stressed the point that it did not carry increases in postal rates to provide additional revenue to meet the salary advances.

Increases of $300 a year are provided for post office and railway mail clerks, carriers, supervisors, inspectors and assistant postmasters. The night differential carried in the house bill, in accordance with which an hour's pay would have been given for 50 minutes' work, was stricken out in conference after consideration of the Post Office department plea that it would cost $12,000,000.

As the measure stands, Chairman Grist of the house post office committee said it would put an additional cost of $64,000,000 a year to the expense of operating the postal service.

Summer Session of Congress Looked For Washington.—It is considered certain that the failure of passage of major legislation will force President Coolidge to call an extra session this summer. The next regular session begins December 1.

When congress adjourned June 7 there were on the table the urgency deficiency bill which appropriates the $130,000,000 to pay this year's share of the soldiers' bonus. By its side rested the bill for $111,000,000 to start the navy back to the 5-3 basis set in the disarmament conference, and with it was President Coolidge's veto of the $68,000,000 postal salary increase bill and the bill to cut freight rates on farm products. All were dead.

Probe on Prohibition Is to Be Thorough Washington.—Thorough investigation into prohibition enforcement was tentatively agreed on by a majority of the members of the special senate committee which had charge of the inquiry in the operation of the internal revenue bureau. Final decision is to be made at a meeting here June 17.

Measure Goes to President Washington.—The conference report on the legislative appropriation bill, carrying $14,350,000, was accepted by both the house and senate. The measure now goes to the President.

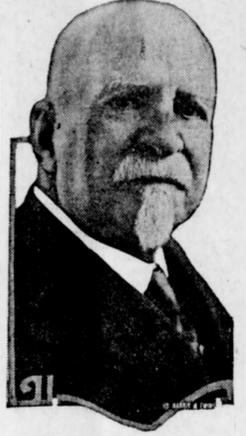

North Dakota Bank Reopens Minneapolis.—The sixth bank re-opened in North Dakota through the assistance of the $10,000,000 Agricultural Credit corporation, the First State bank of Hastings, Barnes county, resumed business.

Walton Loses Appeal Washington.—Impeachment of former Gov. John C. Walton of Oklahoma by the legislature of that state is not subject to review by the courts, it was held by the Supreme court.

Roy O. West of Illinois New Secretary.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Roy O. West of Illinois was selected as secretary of the Republican national committee, succeeding George Lockwood of Indiana.

Fred Upham of Chicago, who for years has been in charge of the finances of the party, decided to withdraw as treasurer of the committee. His successor has not been chosen.

A third big figure in the control of Republican party organization is to retire as soon as the national convention ends. This is John T. Adams, the chairman.

It is expected that Mr. Upham will be made national committeeman from Illinois, succeeding L. Y. Sherman.

Mr. West, who has gained a name for silence, won the favorable notice of Mr. Butler during the Illinois primary race between Senator Medill McCormick and Demenev. West was Demenev's manager.

The selection of Mr. West for the national secretaryship, while only tentative, is said to have the strong approval of the White House. He formerly has been a member of the national committee.

BADGER STATE HAPPENINGS

Sturgeon Bay—Every indication of the bloom period points to Door county harvesting the largest cherry crop in history. Growers have never been more optimistic and weather conditions have been highly favorable. Leading fruit-growers estimate the production of cherries at 500,000 cases, which means a production of 8,000,000 quarts of fruit. If all the crop was shipped as fresh fruit, figuring 500 cases to a carload, this would mean that Door county will produce this season 1,000 carloads of cherries, to say nothing of the many other varieties of fruit.

Stevens Point—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Szymanski of the town of Carson, Portage county, are searching for their 15-year-old son, Joseph, who disappeared from their home at Mill Creek on May 25. D. 3, Box 58a, Stevens Point, Wis.

Madison—A new road, connecting highway 12 at a point three miles west of Madison with the Lake Mendota drive is to be built this summer. The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway company, as its share of the work, constructed a trestle over its line last fall. The road will also provide a direct highway on the new Black Hawk Country club and golf links.

Sturgeon Bay—A total of 1,800 cars passed over the toll bridge at Sturgeon Bay June 1 en route to the cherry orchards. This is almost double the number that passed through this city a year ago within 24 hours, to view the cherry orchards during blossom time. A large number of tourists drove through on Decoration day.

Brillion—Peter Olesen, 72, prominent resident of Brillion, died at his home after a lingering illness. When Brillion was incorporated as a village in 1855, he was elected the first tax collector. He also served on the school board 12 years, and was a member of the county board of supervisors of Calumet county 13 years.

Green Bay—Original gas mains laid in 1887 are still suitable for many years of service, according to Wisconsin Public Service Co. experts who are superintending the relocation of the system in the down town district at Green Bay. They are of insufficient capacity, however, and are being replaced by 12-inch pipes.

Superior—Richard Rubel, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Rubel, Superior, was instantly killed when he was run over by a Northern Pacific transfer train directly in the rear of the Rubel home. Charles Foster, conductor, said the lad evidently had tried to catch a ride on one of the cars.

Rice Lake—The largest sow ever received for a pure bred sow in the vicinity of Rice Lake was paid to Ray Bartlett by J. C. Penney, head of the chain of Penney stores. Mr. Bartlett received $2,900 for a pure bred Guernsey cow, which will go to New York state.

The afternoon wore on, and as the day was warm she dismounted by a ford and sat down upon a flat rock close to the water. The rock reminded her of the one on which she and Grant had sat that night while the thin red lines of fire played far up and down the valley. Her ankle was paining a little so she removed her boot and stocking and soothed it in the cool water.

As she sat watching her reflection in the clear stream and toying with the ripple about her foot a horseman rode quickly down through the cottonwoods on the other side and plunged into the ford. It happened so quickly that neither saw the other until he was well into the river. Although she had had no dream of seeing him here, in some way she felt no surprise. Her heart was behaving boisterously, but she sat outwardly demure, and when he was close enough she saw a frank smile up to him. The look on his sunburned face as he reined his horse and turned her back to the meeting on his part, was no less unexpected and welcome than it was to her.

When his horse was out of the water he dismounted and walked to her with extended hand.

"This is an unexpected pleasure," he said. "How is the ankle progressing?"

"Well enough," she returned, "but it gets tired as the day wears on. I am just resting a bit."

"There was a moment of somewhat embarrassed silence."

"That is a good-sized rock," he suggested, at length.

"Yes, isn't it? And here in the shade, at that."

She did not invite him with words, but she gave her body a slight hitch, as though to make room, although there was enough already. He sat down without comment.

"Not unlike a rock I remember up in the foothills," he remarked, after a silence.

"Oh, you remember that? It was like this, wasn't it?"

"Same two people sitting on it."

"Yes."

"Not like this, though."

"No. . . . You're mean. You know I didn't intend to fall asleep."

"Of course not. Still. . . ."

His voice lingered on as though it were a delightful remembrance.

She found herself holding one of her hands in the other. She could feel the pressure of Transley's ring on her palm, and she held it tighter still.

"Riding anywhere in particular?" he inquired.

"No. Just mooning." She looked up at him again, this time at close quarters. It was a quick, bright flash on his face—a moment only.

"Why mooning?"

She did not answer. Looking down in the water he met her gaze there.

"You're troubled?" he exclaimed.

"Oh, no! My ankle hurts a little."

He looked at her sympathetically.

"But not that much," he said.

She gave a forced little laugh.

"What a mind reader you are! Can you tell my fortune?"

"I should have to read it in your hand."

She would have extended her hand, but for Transley's ring.

"No. . . . No. You'll have to read it in—the stars."

"Then look at me." She did so, innocently.

"I cannot read it there," he said, after his long gaze had begun to whip the color to her cheeks. "There is no answer."

She turned again to the water, and after a long while she heard his voice, very low and earnest.

"Zen, I could read a fortune for you, if you would not be offended. We are only chance acquaintances—not very well acquainted, yet."

She knew what he meant, but she pretended she did not. Even in that moment something came to her of Transley's speech about love being a game of pretense. Very well, she would play the game—this once.

"I don't see how I could be offended at your reading my fortune," she murmured.

"Then this is the fortune I would read for you," he said boldly. "I see a young man, a rather foolish young man, and perhaps, by ordinary standards, and yet one who has found a great deal of happiness in his simple, unconventional life. Until a short time ago he felt that life could give him all the happiness that was worth having. He had health, strength, hours of work and hours of pleasure, the fields, the hills, the mountains, the sky—all God's open places to live in and enjoy. He thought there was nothing more."

"Well, then he found, all of a sudden, that there was something more—everything more. He made that discovery on a calm autumn night, when he had blackened all the foothills and still ran in dancing red ribbons over their distant crests. That night a great thing—two great things—came into his life. First was something he gave. Not very much, indeed, but typical of all it might be. It was service. And next was something he received, something so wonderful he did not understand it there, and does not understand it yet. It was trust. These were things he had been leaving largely out of his life, and suddenly he discovered how empty he was. I think there is one word for both these things, and it may be, for even more. You know?"

"I know," she said, and her voice was scarcely audible.

"But it is your fortune I am to read," he corrected himself. "It has been your fortune to open that new world to me. That can never be undone—those gates can never be closed—no matter where the paths may lead. These two paths go down to the future—as all paths must—even as this road leads away through the valley to the sunset. Zen—if only, like to the sunset—Oh! Zen, if they could?"

"I know," she said, and as she spoke her face he saw that her eyes were wet. "I know—if only they could!"

There was a little sob in her voice, and in her beauty and distress she was altogether irresistible. He reached out his arms and would have taken her in them, but she turned her hands in his and held herself back. She turned the diamond deliberately to his eyes. She could feel his grip relax and apparently grow suddenly cold. He stood speechless, like one dazed—benumbed.

"You see, I should not have let you talk—it is my fault," she said, speaking hurriedly. "I should not have let you talk. Please do not think I am shallow; that I let you suffer to gratify my vanity." Her eyes found his again. "If I had not believed every word you said, I would not have listened. . . . But you see how it is."

He was silent for so long that she thought he was not going to answer her at all. When he spoke it was in a dry, parched voice.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I should not have presumed—"

"I know, I know. If only—"

Then he looked straight at her and talked out.

"You liked me enough to let me speak as I did. I opened my heart to you. I ask no such concession in return."

Transley was evidently in prime humor. Linder had, indeed, noted this good humor for some time, but had attributed it to the very successful operations in which his employer had been engaged. He pulled himself together enough to offer a somewhat confused congratulation.

"And may I ask who is to be the fortunate young lady?" he ventured.

"You may," said Transley, "but if you could see the length of your nose it wouldn't be necessary. Linder, you're the best foreman I ever had, just because you don't ever think of anything else. When you pass on there'll be no heaven for you unless they give you charge of a bunch of men and teams where you can raise a sweat and make money for the boss. If you weren't like that you would have anticipated what I've told you—or perhaps made a play for Zen yourself."

"Zen? You don't mean Y.D.'s daughter?"

"If I don't mean Y.D.'s daughter I don't mean anybody, and you can take that from me. You bet it's Zen. Say, Linder, I didn't think I could go silly over a girl, but I'm plumb locoed. I bought the biggest old sparkler in this town and sent it out with Y.D., if he didn't lose it through the lining of his vest—he handled it like it might have been a box of pills—bad pills, Linder."

"I've got an architect figuring how much expense he can put on a house—he gets a commission on the cost, you see—and one of these nights I'm going to buy you a dinner that'll keep you fed till Christmas. I never knew before that silliness and gladness go together, but they do. I'm glad I've got a sober old foreman—that's all that keeps the business going."

And after Transley had turned away Linder had scratched his head and said, "By thunder. . . . Linder, when you wake up you'll be dead."

"After her practically saying, 'The water's fine.' . . . Well, that's why I'm a foreman, and always will be."

But after a little reflection Linder came to the conclusion that perhaps it was all for the best. He could not have bought Y.D.'s daughter a big sparkler or have built her a fine home—because she was a foreman. It was a round circle. . . . He threw himself into the building of Transley's house with as much fidelity as if it had been his own. He gave his undivided attention to Transley's interests, making dollars for him while earning cents for himself. This attention was more needed than it ever had been, as Transley found it necessary to make weekly trips to the ranch in the foothills to consult with Y.D. upon business matters.

Zen found her interest in Transley growing as his attentions continued. He spent money upon her lavishly, to the point at which she protested, for although Y.D. was rated as a millionaire the family life was one of almost stark simplicity. Transley assured her that he was making money faster than he possibly could spend it, and even if not, money had no nobler mission than to bring her happiness. He explained the blue-prints of the house, and discussed with her details of the appointments. As the building progressed he brought her weekly photographs of it.

"I must go," she said.

"I must go," she said.

"I must go," she said.

"I must go," she said.

And Denison Grant continued his way down the valley while Zen rode back to the Y.D., wondering if she could ever forget.

CHAPTER IX

Linder scratched his tousled brown hair reflectively as he gazed after the retreating form of Transley. His hat was off, and the perspiration stood on his sunburned face—a face which, in point of handsomeness, needed make no apology to Transley.

"Well, by thunder!" said Linder; "by thunder, think of that!"

Linder stood for some time, thinking "of that" as deeply as his somewhat disorganized mental state would permit. For Transley had announced, with his usual directness, that he wanted so many men and teams for a house excavation in the most exclusive part of the city. So far they had been building in the cheaper districts a cheap type of house for those who, having little capital, are the easier deprived of what they have. The shift in operations caused Linder to lift his eyebrows.

Transley laughed boisterously and clapped a palm on his shoulder.

"I may as well make you wise, Linder," he said. "We're going to build a house for Mr. and Mrs. Transley."

"Missus?" Linder echoed, incredulously.

"That's the good word," Transley confirmed. "Never expected it to happen to me, but it did, all of a sudden. You want to look out; maybe it's catching."

Transley was evidently in prime humor. Linder had, indeed, noted this good humor for some time, but had attributed it to the very successful operations in which his employer had been engaged. He pulled himself together enough to offer a somewhat confused congratulation.

"And may I ask who is to be the fortunate young lady?" he ventured.

"I must go," she said.

He urged her to set the date about Christmas; during the winter contracting would be at a standstill, so they would spend three months in California and return in time for the spring business.

Day by day the girl turned the situation over in her mind. Her life had been swept into strange and unexpected channels, and the experience puzzled her. She assured herself that she looked forward to her marriage with Transley with the proper delight of a bride-to-be, and indeed it was a prospect that could well be contemplated with pleasure. . . . Transley had won the complete confidence of her father and when doubts assailed her Zen found in that fact a very considerable comfort. Y.D. was a shrewd man; a man who seldom guessed wrong. Zen did not admit that she was allowing her father to choose a husband for her, but the fact that her father concurred in the choice strengthened her in it. Transley had in him qualities which would win not only wealth, but distinction, and she would share in the laurels. She told herself that it was a delightful outlook; that she was a very happy girl indeed—and wondered why she was not happier!

Particularly she laid it upon herself that the must now, finally, dismiss Denison Grant from her mind, and was absurd to suppose that she cared more for Grant than she did for Transley. The two men were so different; it was impossible to make comparisons. They occupied quite different spheres in her regard. To be sure, Grant was a very likeable man, but he was not eligible as a husband, and she could not marry two, in any case. Zen entertained no girlish delusions about there being only one man in the world. On the contrary, she was convinced that there were very many men in the world, and, among the better types, there was perhaps, not so much to choose between them. Grant would undoubtedly be a good husband within his means; so would Transley, and his means were greater. The blue-prints of the new house in town had not been without their effect. It was a different prospect from being a foreman's wife on a ranch. Her father would never hear of it. . . .

So she busied herself with preparations for the great event, and what preparations were they? "Zen," her father had said, "for once the lid is off. Go the limit!" She took him at his word. There were many trips to town, and activities about the old ranch buildings such as they had never known since Jessie Wilson came to finish Y.D.'s up-bringing, nor even then. The good word spread throughout the foothill country and down over the prairies, and many a lazy cloud of dust lay along the November hillsides as the women folk of neighboring ranches came to pay their respects and gratify their curiosity. Zen had treasures to show which sent them home with new standards of extravagance.

Y.D. had not thought he could be so worked up over a simple matter like a wedding. Time had dulled the edge of memory, but even after making allowances he could not recall that his marriage to Jessie Wilson had been such an event in his life as this. It did not at least reflect so much glory upon him personally. He basked in the reflected glow of his daughter's beauty and popularity as happily as the big cat lying on the sunny side of the bunk-house. He found all sorts of excuses for invading where his presence was little wanted while Zen's finery was being displayed for admiration. Y.D. always pretended that such invasions were quite accidental, and affected a fine indifference to all this "women's fuss and feathers," but his affections deceived at least none of the older visitors.

As the great day approached Y.D.'s wife she a bombshell at him. "What do you propose to wear for Zen's wedding?" she demanded.

"What's the matter with the suit I go to town in?"

"Y.D.," said his wife, kindly, "there are certain little touches which you are overlooking. Your town suit is all right for selling steers, although I won't say that it hasn't outlived its prime even for that. To attend Zen's wedding it is—hardly the thing."

"It's been a good suit," he protested.

"It has. It is also a venerable suit. But really, Y.D., it will not do for this occasion. You must get yourself a new suit, and a white shirt—"

"What do I want with a white shirt?"

"It has to be," his wife insisted. "You'll have to deck yourself out in a new suit and a white shirt and collar."

Y.D. stamped around the room, and in a moment slipped out. "All fool nonsense," he confided to himself, on his way to the bunk-house. "It's all right for Zen to have good clothes—didn't I tell her to go the limit?—but married, is it? Stand up before all them cow punches in a white shirt!"

The bitterness of such disgrace cut the old rancher no less keenly than the physical discomfort which he foresaw for himself, yet he put his own desires sufficiently to one side to buy a suit of clothes, and a white shirt and collar, when he was next in town.

It must not be supposed that Y.D. admitted to the salesman that he personally was descending to any such garb.

Immense Waterspout

A Washington scientist has recorded the particulars concerning a great waterspout he observed south of Cape Concora on a day when the weather was fine and the sea smooth. The waterspout formed between a russet-colored cloud and the sea nearly five miles from the ship. At first the distance between the base of the cloud and the surface of the sea was 4600 feet and the width of the column tapered from 500 feet at its juncture with the cloud to 150 feet at the sea.

The vortex appeared to be a tube with tapering sides and a central column. The walls seemed to consist of water moving downward and the central column of water ascending. The phenomenon lasted for thirteen minutes. The walls broke and the central column appeared to ascend into the cloud.

Foolish Question

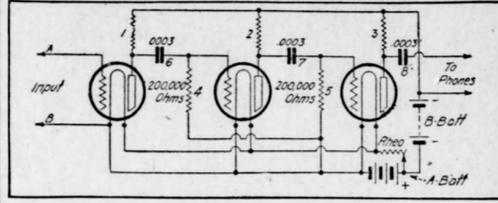

The fussy old gentleman was watching a gang of men engaged in piling up heaps of the snow from a street in a Derbyshire town.

"What do you do with all these heaps?" he asked.

"Burn them," was the reply.

A Simple Audio Frequency Amplifier Circuit.

By CAPT. H. DE A. DONISTHORPE

The following is a description of a simple amplifier for magnifying oscillations of audio frequency, and is simple by virtue of the fact that no inter-tube transformers are employed.

Transformers for tube work, whether for low frequency or high frequency amplifiers, always present a difficulty to those who desire to construct their own receivers, and in spite of the fact that it is now an easy matter to purchase component parts of this nature, there still exist a large number of radio enthusiasts who prefer to manufacture their own apparatus.

The plan of connections of this circuit is shown in the diagram, and the actual arrangement is, of course, used in conjunction with some form of tuner, the low frequency and rectified signals for amplification being fed into the amplifier at the input terminals A or B.

Resistances 1, 2 and 3 are of a high value and should be of the same order as the effective internal resistance of the tubes employed, which ranges usually about 50,000 ohms.

The resistances 4 and 5 should be about 250,000 ohms each, but this value is not so critical as that of resistances 1, 2 and 3.

These resistances can be of any type, such as composition rods, or, then again, they may be made of resistance wire, but if this latter form is to be used it is necessary to wind the same so that there is no inductance effect.

Where a rod resistance is resorted to particular attention must be paid to the method of connecting same to the rest of the circuit to insure good contact, otherwise parasitic noises will result when the instrument is put into operation.

Three small fixed plate condensers are inserted in the circuit in the 6, 7 and 8 positions shown, and should be about .003 mfd. each. It is advisable for the dielectric of these condensers to be of an insulating property of a high order, otherwise the amplifier is likely to be "noisy," and it is recommended in this connection that mica insulation be utilized.

The manner in which the amplifier operates may then be briefly described as follows:

The incoming oscillations produce a difference of potential between the grid and filament of the first tube, which, in turn, produces voltage drops across the resistances 1 and Automobile owners who are waiting to license their cars after June 30 when they expect to get a discount of 25%, will be disappointed, according to a statement issued by Fred R. Zimmerman, Secretary of State. The discount applies to new cars only and the applicant will be required to make an affidavit that the car in question has not been used since the year prior to July 1. Mr. Zimmerman also calls attention to the fact that the provision for discount does not take effect after June 30 and not on June 1. Much confusion and delay has been caused in the Department of State by applicants who have been misinformed about this provision. The reverse side of the application card gives the correct dates for discount.

—A number from here attended the double wedding celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Wiesner and Mr. and Mrs. John Kral in Wm. Kirsch's hall at St. Kilian Monday evening.

KEWASKUM 20 YEARS AGO

The following poem, written by Mrs. Laura Schaefer, of Milwaukee, formerly of here, for the Statesman, twenty years ago, on Kewaskum, gives a vivid description of times then, and now and which will no doubt be of interest to all our readers. We take pleasure in publishing same: You may read all o'er the county

Aye, from the rise to the set of the sun, You may travel through towns on either good product You will find no place like Kewaskum, Kewaskum our dear little city

With its streets and houses so neat, With its kind and soul-whole people Kewaskum you can never be beat. Kewaskum, great center place of business, Hustling, bustling spot, We have tradesmen of every description, Aye, I'd like to know what we have

We have churches and pastors to guide us Who teach us the wrong and the right We have schools that we justly feel proud of With scholars industrious, intelligent and bright. We have a nice little paper the Statesman, Full of news from far and from near

Subscribers too numerous to mention Who are increasing year after year. We have stores, where the buyer can purchase The cheapest and best in the land, No matter whatever you ask for You will surely find it at hand. We have a mill, where the finest of flour

Is turned out by day and by night, Our smiling housewives can tell you Why their bread is so wholesome and light. We have warehouses where the farmers bring in their day after day, No stinting in prices at Kewaskum, Our buyers are willing to pay. If your nights are sleepless with toothache Our dentist extracts without pain, He will fill your teeth to perfection Make them look like new ones again

We have hardware stores, and a machine shop, Ye gods, look in and admire Each article so shining and bright Which surely must please the kind buyer. We have banks where all can deposit Their savings, aye, every red cent, Highest interest, fair honest dealings, Bring your money lads eye it is spent. We have doctors both conscientious and clever Who their duty quickly perform In healing the sick and wounded, And making them healthy and strong.

We have masons, carpenters and carvers, Men of art, without any dispute, We have dressmakers, milliners and tailors Who have gained the highest reputa. We have a snug little jail where the culprit can gnash out his heartaches and pain. Where peace makers can sit and grow tender, Till they submit to order again. We have a marshal, justice of the peace and sheriff, Whose heads are on the right spot, We have meat markets, cattle buyers and timers, Pray tell us what we have not!

Should your sweet heart come on a Sunday, And you are anxious to have something quite rare, We have squabs, young, juicy and tender, The best you can get anywhere. If you feel downhearted, melancholy or sad, Wander out to our parks, we have two, Where our BAND will furnish sweet music, And quickly dispell the dread blues, Did I tell you in 'he very beginning That Kewaskum could never be beat What town has such handsome arc lights, To brighten their houses and street? Our lumber yard yields the best material You ran find in 'the east or the west No old, half rotten plunder, But the newest, the soundest, the best. Stop into our neat lit le bakery, Where good things there meet your eye, Rolls as light as a snowflake And nothing is ever awry. We have a postoffice, drug store and photographer, Base ball teams, and yet more, We have laborers, God bless and protect them Hunger never enters their door. We have a soda water factory and we have a mess berry, Where the thirsty can drink for a song, You'll find an ice house, furniture stores and depot. As you slowly wander along, We have a jewelry store, telephones and gatekeeper, And you rarely ever can find Men like saddlers, shoemakers or blacksmiths, So very obliging and kind, If time hangs heavy on your hands, And you think to live is a crime Get a book, our bookstore is near by You soon will forget to repine On the sunniest spot of our city Stands our malhousse majestic and great, 'Tis the pride of our own dear Kewaskum, The finest you'll find in the state. We have harbors for the weary traveler, Our harbors are classed with the best, We have but ermakers, wagonmakers and weavers, I shall evidently tell you the rest. We have ceadmakers, a brickyard and farmers, Now our bowling alley comes quick in a twinkling line. We have sculptors, paperhangers and painters, Last our livery will finish the rhyme. Oh you who have strayed from Kewaskum, When footsore and burdened with pain, Come back to its arms, you are welcome Old friends will greet you again. —Laura A. Schaefer
