Mississippi, which resulted in the injury of four men by its recoil, it was established at the naval inquiry aboard the U. S. S. Tennessee. The man's body was being removed from the turret after the explosion which killed 46 men, when the hand fell across the selective switch, firing the gun, testimony showed.

San Pedro, Cal.—The lives of three officers and thirty-five enlisted men have been snuffed out aboard the dreadnaught Mississippi in the navy's greatest peacetime disaster which brought to a tragic climax a week of sham battles and target practice.

Aboard the hospital ship Relief lay the dead, killed by a premature explosion in the Mississippi's No. 2 turret, and the injured were aboard the New Mexico, flagship of division No. 4 of the battle fleet, while members of a naval board of inquiry prepared to open investigation.

The explosion also ignited four bags of high explosive powder in the turret, adding to the catastrophe. A number of men in the handling room above the turret were terribly burned by the escaping flaming gases. Admiral Pratt, who in the absence of Admiral S. A. Robinson, is in command of the battle fleet, said that the disaster was the worst in the history of the navy. Other tragedies in which great loss of life occurred, he said, were to the U. S. S. Missouri in 1903, to the Kearsarge in 1905, and in the Honda (Cal) destroyer wrecks last September.

AMERICAN REPLY GOES TO JAPAN

Answer to Protest Against Exclusion Is Not Made Public.

Washington.—The reply of the Washington government to the protest made by Japan against the Japanese exclusion section of the new immigration law was sent on its way to Tokyo by Ambassador Hanihara, who received it from Secretary Hughes.

The text was withheld from publication until simultaneous announcement could be made in Tokyo and Washington.

American newspapers were asked to refrain from a patriotic duty of attempting any forecast or description of the note in advance of its being officially made public.

Officials of the Japanese embassy were set at work translating the document into diplomatic code as soon as Ambassador Hanihara returned to the embassy from his visit to the State department, and the note was started over the cables in sections.

While no announcement was made at the embassy or State department, it was learned from responsible sources that Ambassador Hanihara would depart from Washington "on leave" about July 12 or 13.

His departure ostensibly will be to make an official report to his government. It was reiterated he has neither resigned nor been recalled.

BANDIT HAUL PUT AT THREE MILLION

Bandits Hold Up Train and Make Rich Haul.

Chicago.—Four automobiles of bandits hold up Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul mail train No. 57 about one mile south of Rondout, Ill., rifled the register mail sacks carried in the six-car train, and escaped.

According to reports there were 20 highwaymen. They flagged the train at a crossing. As the engineer slowed down his locomotive the crowd of highwaymen surrounded the coaches and forced the mail clerks to open them.

It is estimated that the robbers got between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 in cash. Federal officials said the holdup promised to take rank as the biggest and most daring in the history of railroad robbery.

The robbers worked for 55 minutes in the collection of the loot, which amounts to between 42 and 45 pouches of registered mail. Currency consigned by the Federal Reserve bank in Chicago to banks in Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Seattle, Spokane and other cities of the Northwest was contained in practically all of the bags taken by the bandits.

The chief of police admitted for the first time that an accurate check upon the contents of the stolen bags revealed a loss in excess of $3,000,000. In this connection it became known that the St. Paul mail train had left Chicago 15 minutes behind its schedule Thursday night. It had been held in the Union station to take over an important money shipment arriving from the East on a Pennsylvania train.

The county's prospective shipment of berries is placed at 100 carloads. More than 60 carloads were shipped from the county last year. Due to difficulty in obtaining pickers, the acreage in the county has been cut down, but labor is said to be more plentiful this year.

Tomah.—Louis Rochester, Warrens, was fined $200, and Chris Baltzer, town of Sheldon, was sent to jail when he was unable to pay a $100 fine, as the result of a series of liquor raids in eastern Monroe county. The moonshiners failed to secure evidence of moonshiners at several places visited, and voiced suspicion that their coming had been "tipped off" to suspected violators of the liquor laws.

Appleton.—The Rev. Basil Gummerman, pastor of St. Joseph's church, and Louis Koltisch, also of Appleton, narrowly escaped death when they jumped from the closed automobile in which they were riding a moment before it was struck by a passenger train at a main crossing in Neshanic, Koltisch, who was driving, stalled the engine of his machine directly in the path of the train.

Peshigo.—Charles W. Holcomb, employed as brakeman on the Laona branch of the North Western road, got an unusual thrill. The caboose was stationed near a spot where several traps were camping for the night. The traps arousing disturbed the train crew. Holcomb went out to remonstrate when one of the hoboos drew a gun and shot him through the ear.

Platteville.—A crew of workmen are preparing concrete bases for the big new boulevard lights at Platteville. A total of 53 lamps will be installed on Main-st., intersecting streets provided with one or two lamps just off the main driveway. The total cost of installation will be close to $10,000. The present contract is one of three planned to be carried out over three years.

Darien.—Three men were injured, two seriously, at the August Heming farm near Darien, when a scaffold collapsed. Three Brigham of Darien suffered four broken ribs and Roy Krantz, Sharon, suffered a compound fracture of his left arm. Charles Walters, Sharon, was bruised. A fourth carpenter, Lee Jacobs, also of Darien, escaped by clinging to the roof until rescued.

Marshallfield.—George Zebelt, Detroit, and Miss Anna Zebelt of Stanley, Wis., are at St. Joseph's hospital in Marshallfield, suffering from injuries received when the sedan in which they were riding was struck and partly demolished by a North Western road freight train at a crossing in Marshallfield. Their injuries are reported not to be serious.

Fond du Lac.—Police of Fond du Lac have declared early war on storekeepers who violate the state regulations concerning fire crackers and other Fourth of July noise makers. Officers have been instructed to visit all stores where the articles are handled and seize all illegal varieties. Stores are also being taken to prevent premature celebrations by the younger generation.

Crivitz.—Because of a technical legal error in holding the election to vote on bonding the village of Crivitz and school district No. 1 of the town of Stephenson for the purpose of building a joint high school graded school, it will be necessary to hold another election. The contract for the building has been let.

Stanley.—Trout fingerlings and trout fry have been received by the Stanley Rod and Gun club from the state hatchery at St. Croix Falls and the federal hatchery at Dubuque. The shipment was received in a special car from the Wisconsin conservation commission. The club also plans to plant bass and pike.

Stevens Point.—Walter Shelburn, 52, prominent Buena Vista farmer and a native of Portage county, hanged himself with a hayfork rope in his barn. The family included his wife, a week-old baby and five other children. Despondency over poor health is believed to have prompted the suicide.

Marshallfield.—Three horses were killed by a single bolt of lightning during a storm that passed over Marshallfield. The animals were owned by A. L. Fehrenbach and were pastured on the farm east of the city. One horse was badly out-right and the other two so badly wounded that they had to be killed.

New Lisbon.—August Hoefs, superintendent of the Shawano county asylum, has been confined to the hospital with an infection which set in after August Weber, a patient from Tigerton, objected to being put in his room at the asylum and sank his teeth in the superintendent's arm.

Stoughton.—Stoughton has a fine new tourist camp with a roof cool house, running water, tables, electricity, an electric hot plate with three burners, conveniences; everything brand new, and all free, furnished by the city. There is a store on the ground, all in the city park.

Stevens Point.—Frances Buza, 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Buza of Plover village, who was burned when her clothing caught fire from a bonfire, died at the hospital in Stevens Point.

Hillsboro.—After 216 persons, Hillsboro, had agreed to subscribe $100 each to a fund to be used for establishing a hospital, backers of the project voted, 44 to 28, to abandon the campaign.

Spooner.—Paul Hannerman of the state conservation department, states that the Spooner fish hatchery, of which he is in charge, has just completed the best season in its history. About 26,000 fish fry were shipped from the hatchery during the season.

Tomahawk.—Arthur Oelhafer, Harvey Floyd and R. B. Little, Tomahawk, caught the bag limit of muskies on the Wisconsin river, the largest weighing 21 pounds, and the next largest 15 pounds.

Madison.—By July 1 the 6,000 miles of state trunk roads affected by the laying out of 2,500 additional miles of state trunk highways will have been marked with the new metal markers which eventually take their place on all the roads of the state.

Doing Away With Tedium of Travel

The phrase "the tedium of travel" will speedily become meaningless as far as long-distance railway journeys are concerned, if other companies will lead the London & North-eastern and run "cinema coaches," says London Tit-Bits.

Experiments recently carried out on long-distance trains proved conclusively that even on trains traveling at express speed first class can be shown with results as good as in a first-class picture theater. True, a few difficulties from oscillation and so on had to be overcome, but these have now been dealt with successfully.

The coach used as railway film-theater by the London & North-eastern was not specially constructed for that purpose. A coach in storage was taken out, dismantled, refitted, shuttered and equipped with operators' rooms and screens. Power was supplied by the train's electric-lighting system and the auditorium was seated for 30 people.

All cinema-theater regulations have been strictly observed in the construction of this railway picture house. Philosophical

RADIO

By H. DE A. DONISTHORPE

A well known electrical balancing system is that known as the Wheatstone bridge. This well known principle can be applied beneficially to a radio amplifying circuit with excellent results.

In order to appreciate this particular form of circuit it will first be necessary to describe the Wheatstone bridge so that those who are not familiar with that piece of electrical apparatus may understand the action of this novel form of tube amplifier.

Fig. 1 illustrates the circuit of such a bridge, and consists of four resistances, A, B, C and D, connected across a single dry cell after the fashion shown. A sensitive current detecting device is joined in the circuit at the position indicated. Now if the product of the two resistances A and D are equal to that of B and C then no current will flow through the galvanometer and the resistance circuits may be said to be balanced. Such an instrument is used for determining an unknown resistance. Suppose this resistance to be that inserted in the limb A, then this element is balanced with a known resistance, B, by varying the resistances, C and D, until there is no deflection shown by the galvanometer.

The resistances C and D, when associated in a bridge for measuring purposes, generally consist of a single length of resistance wire of a known value with a sliding contact from the galvanometer, dividing it into the two separate units. The method of procedure is then to vary the position of the slider along the wire until the "balance" is indicated by a zero deflection.

Now when this simple principle is applied to a thermionic triode circuit it is the aim to produce a state of balance after the fashion described, one of the resistances being that of the internal resistance of a tube. A circuit showing such an arrangement is given in Fig. 2. This circuit will function admirably as an amplifier and at the same time does not possess that objectionable tendency to self-oscillate as is associated with some forms of audio frequency amplifiers.

It will be plainly seen by comparing this arrangement with the Wheatstone bridge that the tubes are connected in the several stages, taking the place of one of the limbs of the two bridges 1 and 2. It is important, therefore, that the resistances in the other limbs should correspond to that of the internal resistance of the tubes employed, and this will be found to be of a value somewhere of the order of 30,000 ohms.

It will be noted that the filament circuit of each tube is provided with a variable resistance, and these are for the purpose of permitting a rough adjustment of the internal resistance of each tube to that of the other members of the respective bridges.

Action of the Circuit.

The action of the circuit is then quite simple if it be studied in connection with the balanced bridge principle, in that the variations of grid potential of the first tube bring about alterations in the filament anode current, reducing the internal resistance of the tube. This will result in a flow of current from the "B" battery No. 1, bringing about an alteration of grid potential between the grid and filament of the second tube, establishing the usual thermionic amplifying effect in the anode circuit of that tube.

The circuit is highly ingenious and proper weight is found the aerial will be safe in any storm.

In the case of the aerial that is strung between two immovable supports there is a method that will eliminate fussing with the aerial continually to keep it taut.

In each end of the aerial insert a large turnbuckle. Get the kind that has a five-inch take-up. Installing the turnbuckles in an aerial is an easy job and is well worth the money and time spent on it. Insert the buckles between the insulator and the support. Be sure that they are extended full length before fastening. Then fasten the aerial as tight as possible to the turnbuckle. By turning the center part of the turnbuckle the aerial can be made extremely tight. Therefore, when the wire starts to slack up a turn or two in the buckle will keep it at the proper tension.

An aerial survey of the interior of the southern part of the Republic of Panama, a wild jungle region never crossed by white people, was recently successfully made by army aviators.

Neutrodyne Connections and Careful Soldering

When connecting up the neutrodyne the soldering should be done very carefully and under no consideration should acid be used as a soldering flux. The most desirable flux to use is a mixture of alcohol and resin. Some of the no-corrode soldering pastes on the market are permissible, if the joints are carefully cleaned immediately after soldering with alcohol or gasoline. Another very important point in soldering is to use a soldering copper that is hot enough. Cold soldering means high frequency resistance and poor mechanical strength in connections.

Loose Aerial Is Sure to Give Poor Reception

In constructing an aerial where one end of it is fastened to a pole or a tree that will move in the wind, certain precautions must be taken, otherwise poor reception or a broken wire will result. Poor signals from an aerial strung from a tree are usually due to absorption by the branches and leaves. Keep the aerial at least three feet from the nearest branches, walls or other structures.

A broken aerial is caused by the swinging of a pole or tree. There is one method of eliminating this trouble. Fasten the aerial to an insulator and fasten the insulator to a wire that is fairly long. Then on the movable support string a pulley with a bit of heavy wire. Through the wheel portion of the pulley run the wire running from the aerial insulator. To the end of this insulator fasten a window weight.

If this weight is not sufficient to keep the aerial taut, then add a stone or another window weight. When the

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

A TREE KANGAROO

Far away in Australia lived this Tree Kangaroo and life to him was very pleasant.

He was very handsome. His coat was of thick, long fur and the color of it was brownish-yellow. His waistcoat was of white though he wore a front belt of a pale yellow shade.

His face was black though across his forehead he had a grayish band and his ears were black on the outside and yellow inside.

His legs were of a yellow shade—yellow stockings he would have said he wore—and his paws were black.

His tail was as long as his body and his body was of good size.

The children of the family dressed like the ladies of the family in grayish suits, which were stumpy and pretty.

"The daytime," said the Tree Kangaroo, "is for sleeping and eating."

"Sometimes a fly or many flies will disturb my sleep and I have to kill them to have peace and rest."

"I give them good hard blows, too."

"But I like to sleep during the day and my place for sleeping is in a tree."

"That is why I am called a Tree Kangaroo. I am devoted to trees."

"My home is in a tree. I would not be happy in any other kind of a home."

Like to Sleep.

home. I like a nice mountain home but a tree is the place in which to be cozy and comfortable.

"At night, when it is dark, I go out to travel and do my marketing."

"I can jump from most enormous heights so a tree home does not bother me."

"People who live in houses always have to go out of them from the ground floor."

"But I can jump from my tree home right to the ground without any bother at all."

"If I lived in a house I would not bother to go downstairs to get out-of-doors."

"I would simply jump down from a window. But people can't jump as I can."

"They wouldn't make good Tree Kangaroos."

"I don't mean to hurt their feelings when I say this. I hope they do not feel badly that they can't do more than they can."

"I hope they do not spend their time saying:

"Oh, dear, if only we were Tree Kangaroos, how nice it would be."

"I hope they don't say things such as this for as long as they are people I suppose they must make the best of it."

"But how thankful I am that I am really and truly a Tree Kangaroo."

"Of course they may say that as long as I am a Tree Kangaroo it is a good thing that I make the best of it."

"But I'm not making the best of it for I love being what I am."

"And it is so splendid to have a tail as long as one's body."

"That is such a help in balancing when one is jumping. Now maybe people could jump from their upstairs windows if they could balance with tails."

"But they haven't tails, poor dears!"

"Oh, well, I will not feel sorry for them as probably they are happy enough. They don't know the joy of being a Tree Kangaroo and so they don't know what they miss."

"As long as they are happy in their own way I shall not try to upset them."

"But I must make ready to go out for a little exercise, and a good run, for it is night time now and I've had a good supper of leaves and a splendid daytime sleep."

Real Sailors?

Small Boy (at dock)—Papa, those are not real sailors, are they?

Papa—Why, yes, my son. They have just sailed that big ship across the ocean, and in about a week they will sail back.

"Well, I suppose they must know something about sailing, but they are not really and truly sailors, are they?"

"Indeed, they are. Why do you think they are not?"

"Why, I've been watching them almost an hour, and I haven't seen one of them hitch his trousers down on one leg, and say 'Yo-ho, my hearties! once.'"

Perfectly Scareless

"David," called the mother of a five-year-old, "I wish you'd stay away from that yard. The dog might bite you."

"Why, mother, does that dog scare you?" he asked. "Just watch—I walk by him perfectly scareless."

He Hopes to Be

Elephants Increasing

Persons fond of pets will be delighted to know that the size of the world's elephant tribe is increasing. There was a danger at one time that these animals would be entirely wiped out by the gunners from all over the world who went to Africa for the purpose of getting a shot at some real big game, and incidentally the ivory which they might gather up at the same time.

A few years ago it is said that as many as 70,000 were killed annually, says the Providence Journal. In some localities the slaughter was checked by laws protecting the elephant, but what is said to have been the greatest boon to the big animal was the war, which had the effect of keeping the so-called sportsmen away from their haunts.

The world's supply of real ivory at present is said to be 250 tons annually.

Whale Meat as Food

Whaling has now been established on a scientific basis by the Norwegian industry. After years of extravagant killing when nothing but the blubber was utilized, whales are now being utilized completely, boneless whale meat being an important product.

It was considered necessary last year to grant whaling permits under concessions covering all Norwegian waters, in order to prevent undue competition and to insure the best utilization of the whale. Fresh whale meat compares favorably with other meats, according to scientific tests conducted by Christiania university.

The Rub

"My client," declared the first lawyer, "is willing to do the right thing."

"So is mine," said the second lawyer.

"In that case, the matter ought to be easy."

"I don't know. The next question is, What is the right thing?"

"Well?"

"And I fear it will take a long lawsuit to settle that."

Life gives you just 13 years of real health—and happiness

Average Health Span extends only from age 18 to age 31, according to United States Life Tables, 1920

Assuming that you are the average person, you will enjoy health—physical freedom and full vigor—only from age 18 to 31. This astounding fact is shown by the United States Life Tables, 1920.

Your earning power will decrease rapidly after 40. That period commonly called "the prime of life" will actually be an age of decay.

This sounds sensational. It is sensational. But it is true—and it is something to which the wise man or woman will give serious thought.

Of course, it is not natural, or right. It is the direct result of an artificial mode of life—of careless eating, sleeplessness, and stimulated nerves. Nature provides a danger signal—fatigue—to warn when the body needs rest. The person who regularly ignores the fatigue signal by the use of a drug is overriding the warning of nature.

That is what coffee does. The average cup of coffee contains 1 1/2 to 3 grains of the drug caffeine—classified as a poison. This is a dose of caffeine of the size often administered by physicians in cases of heart failure. It is a powerful stimulant. It appears to give new strength by deadening the fatigue signal. Actually, this new strength is robbed from the body's own reserve.

Coffee contains no nourishment. Its only virtue, as a beverage, are its warmth and flavor. A good, hot, drugless drink is a benefit with every meal.

Millions enjoy such a drink in Postum. A drink made of whole wheat and bran, skillfully roasted, with a little sweetening—nothing more. A drink with the rich, mellow, full-bodied flavor of this wholesome grain. Every member of the family can drink it every meal of the day, enjoy its deliciousness, crave it, knowing there isn't a sleepless hour, a headache, or a taut nerve in it.

For the sake of your years following age 31, we want you to try Postum for thirty days. You can expect to overcome the effects of a habit of years in two or three days, or even a week. To make this a sporting proposition, we will give you a week's supply of Postum free. Enough for a cup with every meal for a week. But we want you to carry on for the full thirty days.

No Need to Bother With the Middleman

A farmer of German descent entered the drug store of a small Ohio town, as the story was told at the Salesmanship luncheon recently by Martin L. Pierce of Canton, Ohio, expert in industrial relations.

"I want an undertaker," he announced to the druggist, who, as it happened, was president of the local Salesmanship club.

"Why, who's dead?" the druggist inquired sympathetically.

"Nobody's dead, but my wife's sick, so I want an undertaker," the farmer repeated.

"You don't mean an undertaker, you want a doctor; I'll get you one," the druggist replied reaching for the phone.

"Oh, no, I don't; I want an undertaker," the man insisted. "Ain't you been hearing at every meeting of the Salesmanship club how we should eliminate the middleman?"—Houston Post.

"How did it happen that Ork Onken gave you such a heck of a whipping tuther day?" asked an acquaintance.

"Well, I'll just—tell you," replied Tobe Sarge of Sandy Muskegon.

"I was driving along and met him in the big road. He says, 'Howdy' and I says, 'Howdy.' He says, 'Got any lieker on you?' 'No,' says I. 'All right,' says he. 'Get down out'n that there waggin, and I'll whip you on less ground than a two-dollar bill will cover!' 'I hain't got no two-dollar bill,' says I, beginning to climb down. 'I have!' says he.

"Also he done it!"—Kansas City Star.

No Short Cut to Success

There is no easy road or short cut to success. It means constant hard work and saving, and many sacrifices. However, the ultimate satisfaction of having accomplished something or having succeeded is greater than all the so-called pleasures indulged in by the lazy man or the spendthrift.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

COOLIDGE AND DAWES NAMED

Standard Bearers Chosen by the National Republican Convention at Cleveland.

IT IS ALL COOLIDGE

President's Wishes Are Followed to the Letter—Wisconsin Alone Is Dis-senting Voice.

THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

For President, CALVIN COOLIDGE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

For Vice President, CHARLES G. DAWES OF ILLINOIS.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Cleveland, Ohio.—Calvin Coolidge's national convention has been held, and up to the final session it was the quietest, smoothest, most peaceful affair ever held in this country, unless one excepts Woodrow Wilson's convention in St. Louis eight years ago.

Mr. Coolidge wished to be nominated and succeeded himself in the Presidential office. He was nominated. For his running mate he naturally wished a man who could hold the support of certain elements in the party that were wavering in their allegiance.

For the second time a man had declined a vice presidential nomination after it was given him and a national convention had twice made selection of a candidate for second place on its ticket.

Coolidge's Convention

Mr. Coolidge selected for temporary chairman of the convention Congressman Theodore E. Burton of Ohio and told that gentleman what his views were on all the mooted public questions of the day.

Mr. Coolidge had positive opinions concerning the platform on which he would have to stand during the campaign, so out of all the planks fashioned by the numerous interests that sought to have a hand in the building of that platform, were carefully picked the ones that conformed strictly with these opinions.

No reflection on President Coolidge nor on the Republican party is intended in recording this seeming dictation by the Chief Executive. The conditions set out of all the planks made inevitable. The rank and file of the party had, in the selection of instructed delegates, made known their firm intention to nominate Mr. Coolidge, and the political and legislative events of recent months made it evi-

Coolidge Did Not Let Convention Bother Him

Any one who has a mental picture of President Coolidge with his ear glued to a telephone transmitter, shouting orders and receiving "Yes, sirs," from the Republican leaders who ran the convention at Cleveland, has been misinformed.

It is not recorded that any occupant of the White House ever worked himself into a highly nervous state on the eve of his nomination for the president that his preferences and opinions must be put above all else.

Significant Changes

Outside the convention hall, in the rooms where the various state delegations met to organize and name their representatives on the committees, another mandate of the mass of the party was carried out. The old line leaders were relegated to the rear and the management put into new hands.

There was but one discordant element in the convention—the LaFollette delegation from Wisconsin. All but one of its members were selected to vote for the Hadger senator and to present to the platform committee the planks representing his views.

Housecleaning pledged.

Monopoly—crush, not foster.

Recover oil preserves.

Vigorous prosecution of grafters.

Revisive public domain legislation.

Public ownership of water power.

Super water power systems.

Public control and conservation of natural resources.

Repeal Esch-Cummins law.

Make rates on prudent investment and cost of service.

Railroads—public ownership, final solution.

Reduce federal taxes.

Curtail the 500 millions now spent annually for the army and navy.

Collect foreign loan interest.

Oppose Mellon tax plan.

Amend Constitution to permit a referendum to supersede a judicial veto.

Reduce tariff.

Promote co-operation between producers and consumers.

Reduce freight rates for farmers.

Abolish injunctions in labor disputes.

Grant cash bonus to ex-soldiers.

Provide Great Lakes waterway.

Amend Constitution to provide for direct nomination and election of President, federal initiative and referendum and referendum on war.

Revisive Versailles treaty to comply with terms of armistice, promote treaties to outlaw war, abolish conscription, reduce armaments and guarantee referendums on peace and war.

There were some other planks, but these are enough to indicate the kind of a platform Senator LaFollette demanded. He and everyone else knew they would be turned down by the committee and rejected by the convention, so no one was surprised or shocked when that was done.

Upon such a platform, it was assumed, LaFollette would stand as an independent candidate for the Presidency. What would be the effect of his candidacy was naturally a fruitful topic of discussion among the delegates and other visitors.

Many Women Delegates

Women were prepared to play a conspicuous part in the convention. There were more than 600 delegates and alternates of the gentler sex, nearly every state giving their place in its delegation. Even far away Hawaii sent one—Princess David Kawananakoa—and she was made an associate member of the national committee. In social usage she retains her title, but she is said to be thoroughly one of the people and a power among the Republican voters of the islands.

Temporary Chairman Burton overlooked the women when he wrote his address and had the advance copies printed, but he noticed the omission and interpolated a graceful paragraph warmly welcoming them to the party's councils.

That Congressman Burton in his keynote speech accomplished with great skill a difficult task was admitted by all. He could not entirely overlook the breach that has existed between the administration and congress, nor could he be too emphatic in placing the blame for it. But he recognized the change that was coming over the party management and gave the President full measure of praise.

Nominating Coolidge

An easier task and no less admirably performed was that which fell to the lot of the other Burton—Marion Leroy, president of the University of Michigan. As his friend of many years' standing he was chosen by Mr. Coolidge to make the nominating speech on Thursday, and no more eloquent and sincere speech has been heard in a national convention.

Another thing this committee did, which also was approved by the convention, was to reduce the delegate representation of the southern states which always go Democratic. The convention of 1920 directed the national committee to work this reform, but it had refused to obey. In this convention there was no outspoken opposition to the change. To make it more binding, an additional member of the national committee was given to each state that exceeds a given Republican vote in the last preceding national election.

Genuine Enthusiasm

To tell in detail the story of the convention would be superfluous; to read it would be tedious. But it had its high lights and interesting phases. Regular attendants on such gatherings always are on the lookout for "ovals" and outbursts of enthusiasm frequently are such demonstrations. The first session, however, witnessed several that were undoubtedly genuine.

Continuing, Doctor Burton said, in part: "At times he must oppose what appears to some as an unqualified good, because he recognizes its temporary benefits and sees in the distant future that it must work an evil to society. Through all such experiences he walks with the spirit of human understanding. He knows that time will heal the hurt. His sense of time explains the thoroughness of his work and his intolerance for superficiality. He must have the facts as first hand and will not base decisions on a partial knowledge of the situation. He will not be hurried. He avoids extremes and loves proportion. Life does not consist of detached unrelated events. It is a unity welded together by the alchemy of time. He knows how to wait and not be tired by waiting. When he acts you know he will not be impetuous, because he takes time to think to the soul of things. Democracy, in her careless blundering confidence, is in dire need of such leadership.

Here, then, is the man. He follows right and truth to their logical conclusions." He gathered it all up in an address he delivered a year ago at a college commencement. He said, "We do not need more national development, we need more spiritual development. We do not need more intellectual power, we need more moral power. We do not need more knowledge, we need more character. We do not need more government, we need more culture. We do not need more law, we need more religion. We do not need more of the things that are seen, we need more of the things that are unseen."

Rated as "Conservative"

In America we have the curious practice of classifying men. We attempt to put labels on them and imagine that thereby we have settled something. We have unusual facility in this method because we rarely pause to agree on any definition of the terms. "As a matter of fact it is not the meaning of the term that gives us concern. It is the implication it carries, its flavor or its color. We say a man is a conservative, a liberal or a radical and for us the term carries praise or approbrium, depending entirely upon our own point of view. Now, this man's Americanism comes to lofty expression in what some have praised and others have criticized as his 'conservatism.' Let us examine the actual facts.

He uses the past for the future. He is no mere worshiper of the past as the past. It has meaning chiefly as a guide for the future. He recognizes clearly the evils of dead, congealed, conservatism. His emphasis is on the days to come. He is concerned chiefly about our tendencies. Therefore, he says, 'We review the past, not in order that we may return to it, but that we may find in what direction, straight and clear, it points in the future. His is a sane forward-looking conservatism.

He does not concede that the present national principles are false or that our governmental organization is weak. Changes must come. Every sane person recognizes that. The real question concerns the causes of our discontent and the sources of our evil. Immediately to destroy existing institutions, because human frailties continue to exist and human nature is not speedily reformed, is scarcely to be called wise leadership. To destroy is easy, but to achieve freedom is hard.

In fact, he holds that there are genuine grounds for optimism. It is easy to complain and to overlook the great blessings of life. After all is said and done, America, more than any other country in the world today, offers real privileges and opportunities.

"He knows that progress will require hard unrelenting toil. To him a better future means continuous struggle and presents a constant challenge. He is no day dreamer, for he knows the stern realities of a work-a-day world. We cannot legislate mankind into a state of perfection."

Here is Dr. Burton's closing paragraph, which was the signal for a mighty outburst of cheering that lasted for many minutes:

"As self-respecting individuals, we can trust this man. As lovers of America we can follow one who is supremely American. As citizens with interests as broad as humanity we can accept his guidance into a new and larger world leadership because he is at heart a human being. To the national convention of the greatest party in American history, I have the disinction to present as candidate to succeed himself as President of the United States of America, the virile man—the staunch American—the real human being—Calvin Coolidge."

There was, of course, but one ballot for the Presidential nomination. Mr. Coolidge received 1,065 votes. LaFollette got 28 Wisconsin votes and 6 from North Dakota. Hiram Johnson was given 10 votes by South Dakota. The chairman of the South Dakota delegation moved that the nomination be made unanimous, and everyone voted for this except the 28 LaFollette men from Wisconsin.

Second-Place Fight

Before the convention started on the job of naming the vice presidential candidate the rumors of "instructions" from Washington were flying about the hall and the hotel lobbies, one of them being that the chief had gone forth that no senator was to be nominated. Secretary Hoover was believed by many to be the administration's first choice. Others said Mr. Coolidge wanted Mr. Lowden. Probably the President did not seek to dictate, but Mr. Butler, his manager, probably did, a little later, and was frustrated. Hoover was not even mentioned on the two first ballots. There was a definite plan concocted by certain leaders to nominate Congressman Burton of Ohio on the second ballot, but the Lowdenites broke that up. The Burton effort was in reality made by those who were afraid the choice of the convention would be Judge Kenyon of Iowa, who had received a large enough vote to worry the conservatives.

Mr. Lowden had repeatedly said he would not accept the nomination, but his admirers kept on voting for him and, as it is told above, they won out on the second ballot. Being informed by wire that the convention had insisted on thrusting the honor upon him, he promptly replied to Chairman Mondell as follows: "Telegram just received. I am deeply grateful for the action of the convention. However, I have said a thousand times, I think, that I would decline if nominated, and I must keep my word. To yield now would mean the loss of my self-respect. I shall do what I can for Republican success as a private citizen, but I cannot accept a place on the ticket."

Then came the recess, the urgent consultations, the attempt to put over Hoover and the final victory of Gen. Charles M. Dawes, as related in the early part of this narrative.

President Coolidge, following the events in Cleveland by radio, was pleased when Lowden was nominated, and disappointed when he declined, and satisfied when Dawes was chosen. He telegraphed at once to the general: "It will be a pleasure to be associated with you in the public service. Best wishes to you and Mrs. Dawes in which Mrs. Coolidge joins."

Then he turned off the radio and retired.

The Convention City

Too much cannot be said in praise of the way in which the city of Cleveland did its part in making the convention pleasant and successful. First and most important, it provided Public Hall, the finest place in which a national convention has ever been privileged to meet excepting that in which the Democrats gathered in San Francisco in 1910. Public hall cost the people of Cleveland $6,300,000 and is located in the heart of the downtown district, convenient to the hotels. Its architecture is beautiful and it seats 16,000 persons. Within its walls are all the conveniences that the builders could think of, and its stage is the largest in the country.

Then there are the hotels, ample in number and well conducted. Their managers looked after the comfort of the city's guests in every possible way and, what is more to the point, rates were kept well within reason.

Cleveland seems to have more automobiles than any other city in the world in comparison with the population, but the able and well-trained traffic police protected the life and limb of the convention visitor in a way that elicited the admiration of all. No one was permitted to get himself run over, whether or not he wished to do so.

Local committees, social organizations and individuals arranged programs of entertainment to fill up the hours when the convention was not in session, and many of the men and women visitors were accommodated by the various golf clubs. There were theater parties, boat rides, hand concerts, fireworks and other things galore. Special teas and receptions were given for the women, and a program for colored visitors was provided.

Safety matches were invented by a Swede, G. E. Pasch, in 1844. The industries he founded have proposed so that Swedish manufacturers now produce one-third of all the matches used in the world.

Gambirinus, supposed to have been a Flemish king, is the reputed inventor of beer. The name Gambirinus is perhaps a corruption of Jan Primus or John the First, duke of Brabant in the Thirteenth century.

After Marco Polo's time, Japan was known to Europeans as Chipangu or Cingapo. Polo's account declared that the Japanese ruler's palace was entirely roofed with fine gold and paved with gold plates two fingers thick.

Aloha may be translated in many ways—as welcome, greeting, friendship, love, brotherhood, natural understanding and good-by until we meet again.

Give me the man who can hold on when others let go; who pushes ahead when others turn back; who stiffens up when others weaken; who advances when others retreat; who knows no such word as "can't" or "give up"; and I will show you a man who will win in the end, no matter who opposes him, no matter what obstacles confront him.

A French doctor claims to have discovered a cure for snoring. He may thus be the means of eliminating one deplorable feature from parliamentary debate.—London Punch.

A tablet recording the birth of a girl, Herrenia Genella, March 11, 128 A. D., is preserved in the vaults of the University of Michigan. It was found in Egypt in 1922 and was translated at the British museum. The wooden leaves open like a folding plate. Though the seals have disappeared the names of the witnesses are read with ease.

Since retiring from the congress, the former speaker and veteran of all campaigns since Lincoln, has spent a quiet life in his little Illinois town. He is in his eighty-ninth year.

Charles B. Warren, ambassador to Mexico, who was chairman of the resolutions committee, was the only member of the former "old guard" who was selected for a position of honor and trust in the proceedings. Lodge, Watson, Pepper, Curtis, all the members save Warren of the old "inside" group—were privates in the ranks for the first time in many years. Warren is skillful, which was regarded as an admirable quality for a platform builder.

Firefly Catcher

Many are the ways in which college students earn money. Alonson R. Tyler, of the class of 1926 of Rutgers college found a method that hadn't been used before. He has signed a contract to catch 200 fireflies for use by the biology department of the institution in connection with experiments.

gone. He raised his great palm and took that slowly aging hand, once more...

Y.D. tucked the package surreptitiously in his room and awaited the day of Zen's marriage with mingled emotions.

Zen, yielding to Transley's importunities, had at last said that it should be Christmas day. The wedding would be in the house, with the leading ranchers and farmers of the district as invited guests...

Christmas day dawned with a seasonable nip to the air, but the sun rose warm and bright. As the hour approached Zen found herself posing as a business which she deemed worthy of being unattended as she had no very special girl friend...

"Dang this dressin'," Y.D. remonstrated when a message demanding instant action reached him. "Lands, hear me now! I wouldn't take a million dollars for that girl, y' understand—and I wouldn't trade a many cause for another!"

So, grumbling, he found his way to his room and began a wrestle with his "store" clothes. Before the fight was over he was being reminded through the door that he wasn't roping a steer, and everybody was waiting. At the last moment he discovered that he had neglected to buy shoes. There was nothing for it but his long ranch boots, so on they went.

He sought Zen in her room. "Will I do in this?" he asked, feeling very sheepish. Zen could have laughed, or she could have cried, but she did neither. She sensed in some way the fact that to her father this experience was a positive ordeal.

Suddenly there was a rush from outside, and Zen found herself being carried bodily away. The young people had decided that the dancing could wait no longer, so a half dozen hustlers had been deputed to kidnap the bride and carry her to the barn, where the fiddles were already strumming. Zen insisted that the first dance must belong to Transley, but after that she danced with the young ranchers and cowboys with strict impartiality. And even as she danced she found herself wondering if, among all this representation of the countryside, that one upon whom her thoughts had turned so much should be missing.

When at last the night had worn thin and it was time for the bridal couple to leave if they were to catch the morning train in town, and they had ridden down the foothill trails to the thunder of many accompanying hoof-beats, the old ranch became suddenly a place very quiet and still and alone. Y.D. sat down in the corner of the big room by the fire, and saw strange pictures in his dying embers. Zen... Transley was a good fellow, but how much a man will take with scarce a thank-you! Presently Y.D. became aware of a hand resting upon his shoulder, and tingling from his fingertips came something akin to the almost forgotten rapture of a day long game from riding the ranges or roping steers, but it would be a game, nevertheless; a game in which he would have to stand on his own resources even more than in those brave days in the foothills. He relished the notion of the game even while he was indifferent to the prize. He had no clear idea what he eventually should do with his wealth; that was something to think about very carefully in the days and years to come. In the meantime his job was to handle a big business in the way it should be handled.

CHAPTER X

Grant occupied himself with the work of the ranch that winter, spring and summer. Occasional news of Mrs. Transley filtered through; she was too prominent a character in that countryside to be lost track of in a season. But anything which reached Grant came through accidental channels; he sought no information of her, and turned a deaf ear, almost, to what he heard. Then in the fall came an incident which immediately changed the course of his career.

It came in the form of an Eastern-looking letter with an Eastern postmark. It had been delivered with other mail at the house, and Lands himself brought it down. Grant read it and at first stared at it somewhat blankly, as one not taking in its full portent.

"Not bad news, I hope?" said his employer, cloaking his curiosity in consideration. "Father," Grant admitted, and handed him the letter. Lands read: "It is our duty to place before you information which must be of a very distressing nature, and which at the same time will have the effect of greatly increasing your responsibilities and opportunities. Unless you have happened to see the brief dispatches which have appeared in the press this letter will doubtless be the first intimation to you that your father and younger brother Roy were the victims of a most regrettable accident while motoring on a brief holiday in the South. The automobile in which they were traveling was struck by a fast train, and both of them received injuries from which they succumbed almost immediately."

"Your father, by his will, left all his property, aside from certain bequests to charity, to his son Roy, but Roy had no will, and as he was unmarried, and as there are no other surviving members of the family except yourself, the entire estate, less the bequests already referred to, descends to you. We have not yet attempted an appraisal, but you will know that the amount is very considerable indeed. In recent years your father's business undertakings were remarkably successful, and we think we may conservatively suggest that the amount of the estate will be very much greater than even you may anticipate."

"The brokerage firm which your father founded is, temporarily, without a head. You have had some experience in your father's office, and as his solicitors for many years, we take the liberty of suggesting that you should immediately assume control of the business. A faithful staff are at present continuing it to the best of their ability, but you will understand that a permanent organization must be effected at as early a date as may be possible."

"Inability to locate you until after somewhat exhaustive inquiries had been made explains the failure to notify you by wire in time to permit of your attending the funeral of your father and brother, which took place in this city on the eighth instant, and was marked by many evidences of respect."

"We beg to tender our very sincere sympathy, and to urge upon you that you so arrange your affairs as to enable you to assume the responsibilities which have, in a sense, been forced upon you, at a very early date. In the meantime we assure you of our earnest attention to your interests."

"Yours sincerely, 'BARRETT, JONES, BARRETT, DEACON & BARRETT.'" "Well, I guess it means you've struck oil, and I've lost a good foreman," said Lands, as he returned the letter. "I'm sorry about your loss, Grant, and glad to hear of your good luck, if I may put it that way. What do you reckon she's worth?" he asked, after waiting as long as his patience would permit. "Oh, I don't know. Possibly six or eight millions by this time." "Six or eight millions! Jehoshaphat! What will you do with it?" "Look after it, Mr. Lands, you know that I have never worried about money; if I had I wouldn't be here. I don't care for the money, but any one-of-a-kind who takes it from me is a better man than I am, and I'll sit up nights at both ends of the day to beat him at his own game. Now, just as soon as you can line up some one to take charge I'll have to beat it."

Grant occupied himself with the work of the ranch that winter, spring and summer. Occasional news of Mrs. Transley filtered through; she was too prominent a character in that countryside to be lost track of in a season. But anything which reached Grant came through accidental channels; he sought no information of her, and turned a deaf ear, almost, to what he heard. Then in the fall came an incident which immediately changed the course of his career.

SWEATERS FOR LITTLE FOLKS; SMALL HATS FOR THE VACATION

A WAY with fear of a drop in temperature or of an unexpected breeze on a fair summer's day when one's "comfy" sweater is at hand. For this reason, if no other, the sweater has become an indispensable any-day-in-the-year garment to man, woman or child, especially the latter. Ask mother, she knows, that because of the sweater, her doubts and misgivings are dispelled as to whether the day be too cool to dress little daughter in her lingerie frock, for of course there is no risk when a soft woolly knit coat like the one shown in the picture is at hand. Utility is not the only recommendation of this handsome garment, for it makes very definite style appeal as well. Observe, if you please, that the mandarin touch makes its bow in this cunning sweater which the little girl of our portrait is wearing. This is an innovation as far as children's sweaters are concerned, for heretofore only the grownups could proudly boast of the picturesque mandarin effect in their knitted coats. With the advent of this clever model in the realm of juvenile knitted outerwear, the children share the honors of having their sweaters reflect this Chinese influence. "Private stenographer," she corrected. "A little extra side on a title is neither here nor there. Well, I will admit that I rather took your father's breath at times; he discharged me so often it became a habit, but we grew to have a sort of tacit understanding that that was just his way of showing off to you. You see, I did his work, and I did it right. I never lost my head when he got into a temper; I could always read my notes even after he had spent most of the day in death grips with some business rival. You see, I wasn't afraid of him, not the least bit. And I'm not afraid of you."

lovely apple green. Its other points of satisfaction are: knit of brushed wool as lightweight and soft as down; plain knit binding which makes for fine fineness; side-fastening uses two rows of buttons. While stripes, checks and plaids are greatly favored for children's sweaters, there is also an outstanding vogue for exquisite solid colors such as peach, powder blue, apple green, daffodil and other fascinating shades. When from style headquarters the message was broadcast that the Four-Foot Fans Fans have grown enormously. They may be in any sort of material, from ribbon to marabou, but they must be about four feet wide. Until you have wielded a fan four feet wide you have no idea how wide that is. A Bit of Glove Lore When it was first discovered that leather could be made into gloves that were much more flexible and comfortable than the armored all-steel fast, some genius evolved the idea of fastening three strips of flexible steel along the back of the glove as a protection against the staves of the giants and the tails of the dragons that were supposed to infest Europe in those days. The strips of metal have been abandoned long ago, but the three strips of stitching that held them in place still remain. The KITCHEN CABINET

Search thy own heart; what paineth thee in others in thyself may be.—J. G. Whittier.

GOOD HOT WEATHER DRINKS

A variety of cooling drinks are always a welcome addition to any meal or menu. The following is a great favorite on the farm:

Oatmeal Drink.—Take one-quarter of a pound of oatmeal, one cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of water in a double boiler, grate the chocolate and mix with one-third measure of sugar; add this to the cocoa after cooking ten minutes, stir constantly, adding the remainder of the sugar and cook ten minutes. Remove from the fire, strain and cool and add the vanilla. Add a tablespoonful of the strap to cold milk or ice water; top with a spoonful of whipped cream or a marshmallow.

Tea Punch.—Prepare four cupfuls of strong tea, let it cool, then add one pineapple cut in bits, one pound of cooked cherries, the juice of six lemons, one cupful of sugar. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, add one quart of carbonated water, a pint at a time. Serve with a sprig of mint and chopped ice.

Chocolate Sirup.—This will keep until used if kept in the ice chest. Take three squares of chocolate, one ounce of cocoa, one and one-half pounds of sugar, a pint of water and one and one-half teaspoonfuls of vanilla. Boil the cocoa in one-half cupful of water in a double boiler, grate the chocolate and mix with one-third measure of sugar; add this to the cocoa after cooking ten minutes, stir constantly, adding the remainder of the sugar and cook ten minutes. Remove from the fire, strain and cool and add the vanilla. Add a tablespoonful of the strap to cold milk or ice water; top with a spoonful of whipped cream or a marshmallow.

Fruit Punch.—Boil together for ten minutes three cupfuls of sugar, two cupfuls of water, with the rind of one lemon and one orange. Strain and white hot, add one glass of currant jelly. Set on ice and when ready to serve add the juice of nine lemons, five oranges, one cupful each of cherries and shredded pineapple. Pour into a punch bowl, add ice and water, adding a pint of charged water at a time to give it sparkle.

Boston Cream.—Take three quarts of water and one and one-half pounds of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of lemon extract, two ounces of tartaric acid, and the whites of two eggs. Boil the water and allow it to get cold, then stir in the other ingredients, beating the whites stiff. Mix well and pour into bottles and keep in the ice chest. When serving put in a pinch of soda in a glass, half-fill the glass with ice and fill with the cream. Drink at once.

Help one another, the dewdrop cried. Seeing another drop close by its side, This warm south breeze would drive me away And I should be gone ere noon today. But I'll help you and you help me And we'll make a brook and run to the sea!

ABOUT UNCOOKED FOODS

The raw faddist didn't know why raw food seemed to be so healthful; but he knew he could cure anything that flesh was heir to with raw foods. Today we know that many raw foods, such as green beans, carrots and turnips, contain life-giving substances called vitamins, which are (if eaten uncooked, not lost in the water of cooking or destroyed by heat) most valuable in keeping the body in good health.

One doesn't object to raw cabbage, carrots, lettuce, water cress and an occasional turnip, but one hesitates to eat uncooked beets or potatoes; in fact, they will need to be well-masked in good rich salad dressing to be very popular with the masses.

Another point which the raw food supporters will tell us is we all eat too much, which, we know, and that, when eating raw foods, one feels satisfied with a much smaller amount of food. Thus we may save food and money by being a raw food eater.

We are told also that every bit of such food is assimilated; you find yourself feeling good after the meal, brain clear, wits nimble, and when retiring time comes, sleep like the proverbial log. There is really something worth while in this; it is at least worth a trial.

Cabbage Salad.—Take a hard, crisp head of cabbage, chop fine—or better, shred very fine; add salt and a few spoonfuls of sugar, a generous amount of oil, sweet cream to measure, a dash of vinegar, mix well, and enjoy a most appetizing salad.

A dessert of a handful of dates and nuts will be easy to prepare and serve, and to the busy housewife who has everything to do—a great comfort. These foods are no more expensive, when time and material are counted, than many of the so-called simple desserts. Nellie Maxwell The Limousine Age From "The Psychology of Power"; "A mile walk with a bore is more fatiguing than twenty miles with the lady of your choice." However, if you should suggest a twenty-mile walk to the L. O. Y. C. in these moping days you would make her very "tired" indeed.—Boston Transcript. Music and the Blood It has been proved, as the result of experiments, that the circulation of the blood is affected by music.
