EXPECT COUNSEL TO PLEAD INSANITY

With the probable completion of the jury on Monday to hear the case against John Kammerer, eccentric waiter, charged with the "ax murder" of Otto Eder, his wife and three children in Chicago, Lemira and Milwaukee relatives left to take part in the legal proceedings in Chicago.

Arnold Brodzeller of Cedar Lake and Frank Brodzeller of Lemira, brothers-in-law of the slain woman, left Lemira Monday night and at Milwaukee they joined Mr. and Mrs. Michael Rosenstein and went to Chicago. Four jurors had been accepted to hear the case up to noon Monday. It was expected that the remainder of the panel would be completed by Monday night. It is probable that the taking of testimony was begun Tuesday. This followed the opening of arguments by counsel, in which the defense is expected to outline an insanity plea.

CO. HOLSTEIN SALES BRINGS FAIR RESULTS

A very fair sale of grade and pure bred Holsteins was held by the Washington County Holstein association last Wednesday, Nov. 25.

The following is the average price paid: Registered cows with cow testing association records, $135.00. Registered cows without cow testing association records, $86.00. Registered heifers over year of age, $76.00. Registered heifers under year, $51.00. Bulls over six months of age, $80.00. Grades sold as follows: Cows with cow testing association records, $111. Cows without cow testing association records, $70.00.

The outstanding interesting point of the sale was the difference in price between cattle with testing association records and those without. With the marked difference in price it surely seems that Washington County has need for 12 C. T. A. instead of six.

GUERNEY BREEDERS WINTER MEETING, TUESDAY, DEC. 11

LOCALS WIN TWO GAMES

In what proved to be a very clean, fast and interesting game, Spatz Gang of basket ball artists, defeated the strong Sheboygan Falls City team at the latter place last Friday evening by the close score of 17 to 19. The Sheboygan Falls team was the first to score, and during the first few minutes of play led the locals by four points. Realizing what they were up against, Spatz's Gang braced up and went right after their opponents with a determination of winning. At the end of the first half the score was 7 to 12, with the locals at the long end of the scoring. In the second half, the Sheboygan team came back strong, and were soon able to tie the score, from which time on it was a nip and tuck proposition until the final whistle blew.

On Sunday afternoon, Nov. 30th., the locals added another victory to their credit, when they defeated the Legion team of Lemira at the Opera House by a score of 16 to 27. The game was not as fast and snappy as was expected that it would be, due to the slippery condition of the floor. However, the game was very interesting and enjoyed by all. Lemira is this year represented by a strong team which will hold its own against any of the amateur teams of the state.

By defeating Lemira last Sunday, the locals won their fourth consecutive game played this year, out of five starts.

On Sunday afternoon, Dec. 14, the locals will play a return game with the Sheboygan Falls five at the Opera House. This game promises to be a fast and snappy one, as the visitors will be one of the fastest teams to play on the local court so far this season.

The Sheboygan Falls News has the following to say about the game, played there last Friday.

"In a thrilling and exciting game of basket ball played at the Woodman Opera House at Sheboygan Falls on Friday evening, the Falls City team lost their first game of the season to the strong Kewaskum quintet by the score of 19 to 17.

"The game was one of thrills from start to finish. It was nobody's game until the final whistle blew. The score was continually tied throughout the game. Great credit must be given the Kewaskum team for their splendid improvement in playing since their last game in this vicinity.

"The Falls team showed up in a very well fashioned manner and with a little more experience will be in shape to play the best of teams. The game was played in a sportsmanlike manner, and respect and mention is due Referee Froehlich of Sheboygan for averting adverse conduct.

"The crowd showed sportsmanlike enthusiasm throughout the game, giving both teams an equal footing."

FARMINGTON COW TESTING ASSOCIATION REPORT

During the month of November 20 herds of Farmington C. T. A. were tested for tuberculosis. Fifteen of these came through without a reactor for tuberculosis. A total of eleven cows were taken from the five herds which showed a reaction of tuberculosis. The association now has a majority of its members herds Federally accredited, and the remainder under Federal supervision. Dr. Rynn (State Veterinarian) reports a very low percentage of tuberculosis in Washington county less than one-half of one per cent of the herds that he has tested showed a reaction. The county should make an effort to put the Area Test across by getting a majority of cattle owners to sign petitions for the test and thereby protect these people from the disease whose herds are found to be clean.

The time is here where outside buyers are asking for cattle from T. B. tested herds, and in view of the fact that this work is done by the state and government, why is it that a man who makes his living from his cows hesitates to have his herd tuberculosis tested? The Farmington association is doing all it can to put the area test across in Sheboygan and Washington counties, and would like to cooperate with all the farmers in this good work.

CONGRESS OPENS SHORT SESSION

Three Bills for Repeal of Tax Publicity Introduced in House.

Washington.—The Sixty-eighth congress met and notified President Coolidge that it was in session. The bills have been referred to the ways and means committee, where demands are expected for early consideration.

Despite obstacles thrown in the way of action at the present session, it is believed that proposed repeal of the tax publicity provision of the income tax bill will become an issue at this session of congress.

The authors of the bills were Representatives Clifton of Illinois and Watson of Pennsylvania, both members of the ways and means committee, and Ladd of New York.

Senator LaFollette, chairman of the ways and means committee, announced he would seek a conference with the President and Secretary Mellon to ascertain their wishes in the matter.

Eighty-five senators were present when the senate was called to order at noon. In the list of those present were the four insurgents, Senators LaFollette, Brookhart, Frazier and Ladd, who were read out of the recent Republican conference.

Senator LaFollette, apparently in vigorous health, entered the chamber two minutes before noon. Senator Wheeler, his recent running mate, walked over to Senator LaFollette's seat soon after the session opened and the two shook hands cordially.

Senator Cummins, president pro tempore, called the senate to order promptly at noon.

The roll was then ordered called, following which Senator Curtis, new Republican leader, announced that three new senators, Butler, Means and Metcalf, were present with their credentials.

The three new senators were then escorted to the desk of the president pro tempore and the oath was administered to them.

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, following brief remarks in tribute to Senator Lodge, presented a resolution in his memory and this was adopted by unanimous vote.

Speaker Gillett, now senator-elect, was given an ovation when he stepped up to the chair in the house.

Four new members were sworn in by Speaker Gillett. Those given the oath by him were Representatives U. S. Gayer of Kansas, successor to the late Representative Edward C. Little; Representative Thomas Hall of North Dakota, successor to Representative George Young, who resigned; Representative Stephen W. Gammill of Maryland, successor to the late Representative Sydney E. Hill, and Representative Robert Lach of Massachusetts, successor to the late Representative William Greene.

Two Egyptians Attempt to Assassinate Allenby

London.—Two Egyptian Nationalists attempted to assassinate Viscount Allenby, the British high commissioner, at his residence in Cairo, but were foiled by a guard who fired on them, according to dispatches. The sentry discovered the natives in the garden, but they escaped by jumping into the Nile after he had shot at them.

Great precautions are being taken to guard the commissioner, as it is known that the Egyptian fanatics desire to slay him as they did Maj Gen. Sir Lee Stack, the stirler, whose death caused the present Anglo-Egyptian crisis. For this reason wholesale arrests of some of the more rabid Nationalists have been made during the last few days.

First Colored Judge Takes Office in Chicago

Chicago.—Albert B. George, Chicago's first colored judge and the first negro of his race ever elected to a court of record by American voters, took his seat as an associate judge of the municipal court. Fellow judges, ten high in the councils of the Republican party, leaders of city and county offices and many colored men and women came to take part in the ceremony.

Giacomo Puccini, Famous Composer of Opera, Dies

Brussels.—Giacomo Puccini, famous operatic composer, died from a throat infection following an operation. The death of the composer was due directly to a heart attack.

Butler's Leave Up to Coolidge

Washington.—Extension of three years to the leave granted to General Butler of the Marine corps to administer the police and fire departments of Philadelphia was requested of President Coolidge by Mayor Kendrick.

Has New Election Plan

Washington.—Conduct of future national political campaigns at the expense and under the control of the federal government was proposed by Senator Caraway.

Zaghoul Going to Europe

Cairo.—Zaghoul Pasha, the former Egyptian premier, is reported to have obtained a passport for Europe and is likely to go to an Italian health resort. The Fourth battalion of Egyptian infantry arrived here.

MRS. M. OLMSTEAD

Mrs. Marlin Edgar Olmstead of Harrisburg, Pa., is national first vice president of the girl scouts.

FOUR READ OUT OF REPUBLICAN PARTY

LaFollette, Brookhart, Frazier and Ladd Disciplined.

Washington.—Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin, Edwin E. Ladd of North Dakota, Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa and Lynn J. Frazier were read out of the Republican party at the caucus of Republican senators because of their independent proclivities.

The principal developments of the day were: 1. Selection of Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas as floor leader to succeed the late Senator Lodge of Massachusetts.

2. Senator James E. Watson of Indiana was named vice chairman of the steering committee to act as assistant to Curtis. Watson also was named chairman of the committee on committees.

Senators Edge of New Jersey, Reed of Pennsylvania, Ernst of Kentucky and Spencer of Missouri led the fight to oust the "insurgents" from the Republican party.

After considerable debate the following resolution, offered by Senator Reed, was adopted by a viva voce vote: "Resolved, That it is the sense of the conference that Senators LaFollette, Ladd, Brookhart and Frazier be not invited to future Republican conferences and be not named to fill any Republican vacancies on senate committees."

British Turn Machine Guns on Sudan Mutineers

London.—The mutiny of the Sudanese troops at Khartoum was due to the withdrawal of their Egyptian officers, according to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Cairo.

"This particular battalion—the Eleventh Sudanese—had been for some time infected by anti-British propaganda by their officers," this dispatch adds. "The officers freely spent money, supplied from secret funds of Zaki's party."

The mutiny, consisting of two platoons, after attacking the hospital and killing a British doctor and two Syrian orderlies, barricaded themselves within the hospital, where they were attacked by British infantry.

"Severe machine gun fighting occurred around the building. Many Sudanese soldiers were killed. The British casualties are not known."

The correspondent adds that the most serious aspect of the situation is that the revolt is among the Sudanese troops and not the Egyptians.

Foreign Radio Stations Heard by Many in U. S.

Chicago.—Interest in radio broadcasting soared to a new high point recently when, between the hours of ten and eleven, hundreds of listeners in the Chicago district felt the tingle of discovery upon hearing the voices of English and French announcers.

As a result of the hour of silence in America, set aside for international broadcasting tests, it has been definitely established that transatlantic radio broadcast is at the point of success. A great number of listeners in the Chicago district reported the success they had encountered with their receiving sets. Reports from other parts of the country were equally gleeful.

Aberdeen, Scotland, seemed among the stations most easily heard.

Reval Reds Executed

Stockholm, Sweden.—The entire personnel of one company of the Communists who revolted in Reval and who surrendered were executed immediately, according to dispatches from Reval.

Borah Returns Contributions

Washington.—Senator Borah, in his final statement as to campaign expenditures, reported the return to the donors of all contributions made to his campaign, amounting to $2,500.

WISCONSIN HAPPENINGS

Important News of the Badger State Arranged in Condensed Form

Baraboo.—After withstanding the elements for the last 20,000 years or more, the report is now current that the Devil's Doorway on the east bluff in Devils Lake state park is falling.

The natural formation of rocks which has been a source of interest to visitors for years may be a thing of the past in a few years if those rumors are true. Rocks which have added in the formation of the doorway, which is about 30 feet high and 10 feet wide, are said to have become loose and fallen down the side of the bluff.

J. T. Thieman, proprietor of the Kirkland resort on the east side of the lake, climbed up to see if the doorway is still intact and found it much the same as it has always been.

Port Washington.—Erwin Reuter, 19, was seriously injured near Port Washington, when accidentally shot by a gun in the hands of a companion while the two were out hunting rabbits. Elmer H. Haury was holding the shotgun when it accidentally discharged, the shot lodging in Reuter's groin. The youth was taken to a hospital in Milwaukee, where an operation was immediately performed. Reuter's home is in Port Washington.

Sparta.—Albert Beltz, Shamrock, Wis., walked into the office of the Standard Oil filling station, Sparta, and after he had walked out $21.49 was found to have disappeared from the cash drawer. At the police station exactly that sum was found, together with a note that was held by the stationer when it was found.

Monroe.—Their ire aroused by prevalent talk of $50,000 a mile concrete highways in Green county, local highway officials prepared a detailed table, which was distributed to each of the 27 county board members before their adjournment, showing that 46.2 miles of concrete laid in the county since the voting of the $3,000,000 bond issue in 1919 has cost taxpayers a total of $181,853.90, or $37,404.63 a mile.

La Crosse.—Ground has been broken at the north end of Riverside park. La Crosse, for the construction of a government fish hatchery and the only aquarium maintained by the government outside of the city of Washington. In this aquarium will be exhibited all varieties of river, lake and brook fish. The hatchery will cost $35,000. Contract for the building was let to a La Crosse contractor.

Baraboo.—W. E. Bartholomew of Lodi estimates that during his 30 years of service as a railway postal clerk he has traveled about 1,500,000 miles, eaten at least 3,000 lunch counter doughnuts and a half acre of peas. He has just been retired from the service with a letter of praise for his work from Postmaster General New. He has been in two weeks during his service but was never injured.

Rhineland.—Mrs. John C. Curran said to be the first white woman to settle in the Rhineland district, is dead in Everett, Wash. Her husband conducted an Indian trading post at the junction of the Wisconsin and Pelican rivers at Rhineland more than 60 years ago.

Superior.—Diphtheria has made its appearance in Superior. A girl in Central high school is ill with the disease. County health officials only recently succeeded in checking an epidemic of the malady in Boreas and Dairyland, about 20 miles from Superior, where two deaths resulted.

Monroe.—John Hauser, 68, president of the Green County German lodge for the last 13 years, died at his home in Monroe, after a period of poor health, during which he underwent an operation. He was a native of Switzerland. He was engaged in farming and the cheese business.

Tomah.—Albert Ball, town treasurer of Catawac, Monroe county, was wounded in Wood county while hunting deer. The bullet entered at the point of his breast and came out under the shoulder. He was rushed to Black River Falls and then to the hospital at Sparta.

Tomah.—Since the engine and two bridges on the Cazenovia and Southwestern road were condemned as unsafe, motor trucks have been used to carry freight from La Valle to Cazenovia. A car, fitted to run on the rails, is being used to carry mails and express.

Sturgeon Bay.—Northern Door county will have two additional fruit canning plants to care for the 1925 cherry crop if plans now under way are completed. The projects will be built at Sister Bay and Egg Harbor.

Sturgeon Bay.—The Door county board of supervisors have placed a ban on married women teachers. After Sept. 1, 1925, no married teachers will be allowed to teach in the rural schools of the county, unless individual conditions make it necessary.

Wisconsin Rapids.—Eli Taylor, 80, prominent Civil War veteran and resident of Wood county since 1851, died at his home in Wisconsin Rapids after a long illness.

Port Washington.—Nic Ketten, Saukville, escaped serious injury when he quickly applied the brakes on his automobile to prevent colliding with a train at the crossing at the Port Washington depot. The car whirled about in the snow and backed into the train. It was badly damaged.

Wausau.—An increase in the air service is the most vital need of the army. Gen. John J. Pershing declares in his final report as chief of staff.

Kenosha.—Constable John Scholey, whose one-man raid several years ago started the agitation that resulted in a grand jury cleanup of Kenosha county, has gone on the warpath against run again. With the aid of the police he raided the saloon of Albert Christensen, getting a quantity of liquor, and followed with a successful raid of the Green Front, a tavern on the Sheridan road south of Kenosha, where a jug of wine was found and also two punchboards.

Elkhorn.—Grant Harrington, for the last 24 years clerk of Walworth county, will leave public service soon for what he calls his first vacation since he took office in 1900. He will leave shortly after the first of the year for Florida. During the last 15 years, Harrington has been a Republican leader in Walworth county. He has been honored by the County Clerk's association of the state on several occasions and was recently made a life member.

Stevens Point.—The construction of a six-mile power line by the Wisconsin Valley Electric Co., extending service from Friesland to the eastern part of Portage county, is under way. It will contact with another new line being built from Amherst to Roshol village by the Amherst Electric Co. The valley concern will sell power to the Amherst utility company. Both new units will be completed by Christmas.

Antigo.—The first serious case of carbon monoxide gas poisoning in Antigo this year occurred when Robert Schneider of the Schneider hotel was made unconscious for four hours by the fumes of a motor exhaust. He had started the engine of the hotel bus early in the morning, and on going back to the garage later to take the machine out, was overcome by the fumes.

Oshkosh.—Declining to break a service record of 25 years, during which he has never missed a day on account of sickness or accident, Fred Hoyer, veteran mail carrier of Oshkosh, reported for duty recently with his head swathed in bandages. He had been knocked down by an automobile driven by Ray Brennan and suffered a severe scalp wound.

Madison.—Sixty-four farmers' institute and 15 women's institutes will be held in 32 Wisconsin counties during January, according to announcement by E. L. Luther, superintendent of institutes at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. The women's institutes will be added features of the regular institutes this season.

Madison.—Two conscience-stricken burglars have returned $250 in cash and jewelry which they stole recently from the Acacia fraternity house. The two came to the house and turned over the loot to Miles Hildreth, a law student. Hildreth declined to give police a description of the men, saying he did not remember distinctly their appearances.

Madison.—"Pardon day" has been postponed from Dec. 3 to Dec. 10, the governor's office announced. About 30 applications for pardon or commutation of sentence already are on file. Postponement of the date is expected to increase the number of cases which Gov. Blaine will hear.

Rhineland.—Mrs. John C. Curran said to be the first white woman to settle in the Rhineland district, is dead in Everett, Wash. Her husband conducted an Indian trading post at the junction of the Wisconsin and Pelican rivers at Rhineland more than 60 years ago.

Superior.—Diphtheria has made its appearance in Superior. A girl in Central high school is ill with the disease. County health officials only recently succeeded in checking an epidemic of the malady in Boreas and Dairyland, about 20 miles from Superior, where two deaths resulted.

"Judith, Judith," the girl whispered after the first outbreak, when she found that she was shaking pitifully. "You've got to do better than this; I'm ashamed of you."

She went back to her couch where she sat down seeking to hold her quivering nerves in check. But despite her intention, she sat shaking, listening, listening—praying for even the faintest of her father.

When Ruth was with her she attempted in a hundred ways to gauge the woman's warped brain, to seek some way to get the better of her, to gain her trust and so to slip away. But she found that there was the usual warning word of madness, and that Ruth's one aim was to keep the girl who had escaped her once but who must never escape again. There were times when suspicion awakened in Ruth's mind, and she broke into violent rage, so that her big body shook and her eyes in the lantern-light were cruel and murderous, when Judith shrank back, and tried to change the woman's thoughts. For more than once had Mad Ruth cried out:

"Oh, kill you! Kill you with my own hands to keep you here. To keep you mine, mine, mine!"

The woman carried no weapon, but after her two hands had once gripped the girl's shoulders, shaking her, Judith knew that Ruth needed no weapon. Her hands were a strength greater than Trevo's, greater than two men's. If Mad Ruth saw fit to kill Judith with her two hands, she could do it.

Sunday passed and Sunday night, Monday and Monday night, Judith knew that she had accomplished nothing, except perhaps to make Ruth believe that she was very much of a coward. In Ruth's mad brain that was little enough, since this did not ally her enacting watchfulness. Then Judith began to do something else, something active. Just to be occupied, was something. Her fingers selected the largest, thickest branch from her bed of boughs. It was perhaps a couple of inches in diameter and heavy, because it was green, so she cut it with a sharp knife, and began with her fingers to strip the branch, rough and pliable. These the limb must be cut into a length which would make it a club to be used in a cramped space. She found a bit of stone, hard granite, which had wedged from the walls and which had a rough edge. With this, working many a quiet hour, she cut out in two the branch. She fitted it in her hands, to feel the weight of it, before she thrust it under her bed to the hidden there against possible need. Poor thing as it was, she felt no longer utterly defenseless.

Once Mad Ruth, lighting the lantern, had dropped a good match. When she had gone, Judith secured it hastily, hiding it as if it were gold. She knew that now and then Mad Ruth went down the cliffs and to the cabin across the chasm. Always at night and at the darkest hour. When she heard her go, Judith rose swiftly and went to the heavy door. Always she found it locked; her shaking at it hardly budged the heavy timbers.

Mad Ruth, Lighting the Lantern, Had Dropped a Good Match.

But though she could not see it, she studied it with her fingers until she had a picture of it in her mind. A picture that only increased her hopelessness. Baredhand she could never hope to break it down or push it aside. And above it and below, and on each side, were the solid walls of stone.

She no longer knew what day it was. She scarcely knew if it were day or night. But, setting herself something to do so that she would not go mad, mad as Mad Ruth, she secured for herself another weapon. Another bit of stone which her groping fingers had found and hidden with her club; a jagged, ugly rock half the size of a man's head. Some little scraps of wood and meat, hoarded from her scanty meals, she hid in her blouse.

"If I could stun her, just stun her," she got into the way of whispering to herself. "Not kill her outright—just stun her."

At last, seeing that she must work her own salvation with the crude weapons given her, Judith told herself that she could wait no longer. Another day and another and she would be weak from the confinement and poor food and nervous, wakeful hours. She must act while the strength was in her. And, if Trevo had spoken the truth, if there were a man to deal with outside—well, she must shut her mind to that until she came to it.

Mad Ruth was gone again, and Judith stood by the thick door, her heart beating furiously while she waited. It seemed to her eager impatience that Ruth would never come back. Then after a long, long time she heard a little scraping sound upon the rock ledge outside. The sound of a quick step. And then, before she heard the snarling, ugly voice which she had heard once and had never forgotten, she knew that this time she had waited too long, that it was not Ruth coming.

One man—and there might be others. She stepped back to her bed, had the two weapons and waited. She must make no mistakes now.

The door was flung open. Outside it was dark, pitch-dark. But evidently the man entering had no fear of being seen. He threw down a bundle of dry faggots, and set fire to them. The blaze, leaping up, casting wavering gleams to where Judith stood, showed her plainly the twisted, ugly face of Quininn, his red-rimmed eyes peering at her, filled with evil light.

"The better to see you by, my dear!" was Quininn's word of greeting. Judith made no answer. She drew a little farther back into the shadows, a little closer to the things she had hidden among the branches.

"Ho!" sneered Quininn, his mood from the first plain enough to read in the glances of his face and in the sudden harshness of his voice. "Thine little fawn, ha?" By G—d, a man would say from the stuff you put up that it was all a dream about finding you an' the handsome Les in the cabin together! Stare off all you a n' please! I've come to taste you, you see! You know who I am, do you? Well, much good 't'll do you."

"I know who you are and what you are," she told him defiantly, suddenly sick of her long hours of playing baby, knowing at the moment less fear than hatred and loathing. "Listen to me: Bayne Trevo's has come out in the open at last; he has made his big play and is going to lose out on it. Your one chance now is to let me go and let yourself go fast and far, Chris Quininn. For when the law knows the sort Bayne Trevo is and how you have worked hand and glove with him, it will know just how much his word was worth when he swore you were with him when father was killed! 'Coward and cur and murderer!'"

Quininn laughed at her. "Little puss-cat!" he jeered. "You've got claws, have you? And you spit and growl, do you? Want me to let you go back to that swaggering lover of yours, do you? Back to Lee—"

"That's enough, Quininn," she said sharply.

"Is it?" He laughed at her again, and again came on toward her, the red-rimmed evil of his eyes driving quick fear at last into her. "Enough? Why, curse you and curse him, I haven't begun yet! When I'm through with you I'll go fast enough. And he can have you then an' d—n welcome to him!"

"Stop!" cried Judith.

His laughter did not reach her ears now, but as he kicked the fire at his foot and the flames leaped and showed his face, she read the laughter in his soul; read it through the gleaming eyes, the twisted mouth, which showed the teeth at one side in a horrible leer. His long arms thrust out before him, he came on.

"Oh, say G—d!" cried Judith. "My G—d!"

Then suddenly she was silent. She thought that she had known the uttermost of fear and now for the first time did she fully know what terror was. His strength was many times her strength, his brutality was unbounded, she was alone with him. There was no one to call to, not even Ruth, the mad woman.

She was shaking now, shaking so that she could barely stand. Quininn came on, his long arms out. . . . She felt the strength die out of her body, grew for a moment blind and dizzy and sick. She tried again to call out to him, to plead with him. But her voice stuck in her throat.

He was gleaning over her, a look strangely like Mad Ruth's in his eyes. Good G—d! He was like Mad Ruth; the same eyes, the same long, powerful arms, the same look of cunning! In a flash there came to her a suspicion which was near certainty; this man was blood of Mad Ruth's blood, bone of her bone; her son, and, like her, tainted with madness.

He shot out a long arm, his hand barely brushing her shoulder. She shrank back. He stood, content to pause a moment, to gloat further over her.

"You little beauty," he said, panting. "You little white and pink and brown beauty!"

Judith had shuddered when he touched her. But a strange thing had happened to her. His touch had angered her so that she almost forgot to be afraid, angered her so that the loathing was gone in white hot hatred, giving her back her old strength.

Now, though he had the brutal force of a strong man, Quininn did not have the swiftness of movement of an alert, desperate girl. Before he could grasp her motive she leaped to the door and toward the bed of boughs, found the rascal stone and lifting it high above her head lunged it full into his face. The man staggered back, crying out in throaty harshness, a cry of blind rage. But he did not fall, did not pause more than a brief instant.

A little dazed, with blood in his eyes, he lunged toward her. She found the club now and struck with all her might, again beating into his face and again. He sought to grapple with her and she beat him back. She saw his hand go to his hip and heard him curse her, and she leaped in an aim and, panting with the blow, struck again. He hung up his arm. She struck once more. Tapping the blow full across the face, Quininn reeled back, stumbled at an uneven spot in the rock floor, balanced almost falling. . . .

Only a moment he held thus. But there was a chance to pass him in the narrow way, and she took her chance, her heart beating wildly. And as she shot by she struck again. She heard him after her, shouting curses, stumbling a little, coming on. The door was open, thank God, the door was open! She shot through. If she could but take time to close it! But there was no time for that; it was almost at her heels. And outside was the ledge and the dizzy climb down.

If she slipped, if she fell, well, it would just be a clean death and nothing more. Quininn was but a few steps behind her. He had not fired. Had he perhaps dropped his gun back there in the darkness? Or was he so sure of taking her, alive and struggling, into his arms in another moment?

She was on the ledge. It was dark, pitch-dark. But she found a handhold, thrust herself flat down and thrust her feet out over the ledge, less afraid of what lay below than what came on behind her. She was gripping the ledge now with her hands, already torn and bleeding, her feet swinging, touching sheer rock wall, slipping, seeking a foothold. Quininn was just there, above her. She must move her hands so that he could not reach her. It seemed an eternity that she hung there, seeking a place somewhere to set her feet.

She found it, another lesser ledge which she had almost missed, and knew that this way she had clambered upward with Bayne Trevo's. If she could only find another step and another before Quininn came upon her! She held her club in her teeth; she must not let it fall.

Quininn was over the ledge, following her. She heard his heavy breathing, heard him cursing her again. She was going so slowly, so slowly, and Quininn would know the way better than she. Quininn would make better time in the dark. . . . She moved along this lower ledge. At each instant she wondered if it were to be her last, if she were going to fall, if a swift drop through the darkness would be the end of life.

Suddenly there was scarce room in the girl's breast for hatred of Chris Quininn, so filled was it with the love of life. She wanted to see the sun come up again, she wanted the sweet breath of the dawn in her nostrils, the beauty of a sunlit world in her eyes. She thought of Mad Lee.

"Climb to the rocks, hanging on desperately, taking a score of desperate chances momentarily, she made her way on and down. She found scant handhold and, almost falling, dropped her club, heard it strike, strike again. Black as the night was, its gloom was less than that of the cavern to which Judith had grown accustomed; little by little she began to make out the broken surface of the cliffs. The chasm below was a pool of ink; above were the little stars; in the eastern sky, low down, was a promise of the rising moon.

The surge of quickening hope came into her heart. Had she hurt Quininn more than she had guessed? For slowly as she made her hazardous way down, it seemed to her that Quininn came even more slowly. Could she but once get up into the gorge below, could she slip along the course of the racing stream, she might run and the sound of her steps would be lost even to her own ears in the sound of the water; the sight of her flying body would be lost to Quininn's eyes.

Then she heard him laughing above her. Laughing, with a snarl and a curse in his laugh, and something of malicious triumph. Was he so certain of her then?

"Ruth!" he called Quininn. "Oh, Ruth! The girl's getting away! God! down the rocks. Head her off at the bottom!"

Judith had found, because her fate was good to her, the long slanting crack in the wall of rock up which she had come that day with Bayne Trevo's. There was still danger of a fall, but the danger was less now than it had been ten seconds ago. She could move more swiftly now and confidence had begun to come to her that she could elude Quininn. But now, suddenly, she heard Mad Ruth's voice screaming in a shrill answer to Quininn's shout; knew that Ruth had been in her cabin across the gorge and was running to intercept her at the foot of the cliffs.

Well, still there was a race to be run and the odds not entirely uneven. Ruth must descend the other side of the canyon, get down into the gorge, make the crossing, which, so far as Judith knew, might be further up or further down the stream, come to the cliff below. Judith heard Judith herself made her way down.

Again Judith took what risks the night and the rocks offered her and thanked God in her soul that it was given her to take a chance in the open, to use her own muscles in her own fight, not to be longer, playing the part of a do-nothing. Now and then, across the void, there floated to her a little moaning cry from the mad woman's lips. Now and then she heard a curse from Quininn above; often from above her, from below her own feet, from across the chasm, dropping stones, falling almost sheer, told of haste and death which might come from an unlikely step.

Fast as Judith went, she had a fair sort of cliff trail under her. Mad Ruth went faster. The gorge measured a scant fifty feet between them and the girl's alert senses told her that already Ruth was on a level with her. Ruth was winning in the desperate race. She knew her way so perfectly, her heart was so filled with madness, that danger was nothing to her.

Down and down climbed Judith, caution waded to base, as she told herself that she had a chance yet, that that chance must not be tossed away in a fall, though it were but a few feet. She must have no sprained ankle if she meant to see the sun rise tomorrow.

The flash had brightened in the sky where the moon was so near the ridge. The moon, too, had joined in the race; with one quick glance toward it, Judith again discarded caution. She must get down into the floor of the canyon before the moonlight did, she must be running before the radiance showed her out to Quininn and Ruth.

Her hands were cut and bleeding, her heart was beating wildly, already her body was sore and bruised. But these things she did not know. She only knew that Quininn was still coming on above her, and coming more swiftly now, quite as swiftly as she herself moved, since the fear, so often in the better trail, that Mad Ruth had completed the descent across the chasm and by now must be crossing the stream upon some fallen log or rude bridge; that one instant more, or perhaps two, would decide her fate.

She could see the stream, glinting palely in the starlight. It seemed very near; its thunder filled her ears. Down she went and down, down until at last she was ten feet above its surface, with a strip of gully sloping bank just under her. She stopped, took firm hold upon a knob of boulder, prepared to swing down and drop to the bottom. And, as she stooped, she heard a little whining moan just under her and straightened up, tense and terrified. Mad Ruth was there before her, Mad Ruth was waiting.

Free! She was free. The triumph of it danced in her blood. On she ran and now Quininn's voice and Ruth's were confused with the roar of the river. On she ran and on and on, and but faintly there came to her the sound of breaking brush somewhere behind her. Never had her blood sung within her as it sang now; never had the dim, moonlit solitudes of the mountains opened their sheltering arms to one more grateful to slip into them, like a wounded child into the soothing embrace of its mother.

Now again she turned so that her flying steps brought her close to the water's edge. Louder and louder grew its shouting voice in her ears, little by little drowning out the sounds of Ruth and Quininn behind her. Now, in all the glorious night, there was no sound to reach her but the sound of running water and her own beating feet. She was free.

Reason for Nicknames
During the contest between Charles I and his parliament it was fashionable among the church people to give Scripture names to their children, and sometimes the name would consist of a phrase, or even an entire verse. One child was actually named "Who Comforted Us in All Our Tribulation, That We May Be Able to Comfort Them Which Are in Any Trouble With the Comfort Whereof We Ourselves Are Comforted," Tithebourne. And what do you suppose the kids dubbed him when he started to school? "Trib."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Queer Ceremonies at Nuptials of Indians
Among the Indians of Ecuador the marriage ceremony is a weird and tumultuous rite; this function begins with a feast in which all the neighboring families take part. At dawn they gather around huge bowls of a nauseous concoction known as chicha, which is a fermented and highly intoxicating drink made from the fruit of the chonta plant. While the drinking is going on the bride is being dressed. All her clothing is removed—a short process—and she is provided with a new skirt of blue cloth which reaches almost to her knees, says H. S. Dickey in Current History Magazine. Around her shoulders are two red bandanna handkerchiefs and across her forehead a red ribbon. Thus attired and accompanied by the guests she goes to the house of the bridegroom, who is dressed in white knee trousers with a bandanna handkerchief tied about his neck. Together they proceed to the house of the guaynaro, a sort of tribal chief who officiates at the marriage. Then two lines are formed, one of men and one of women, with the bride in the center. All stand for a minute facing each other; then, the women advance, the men recede. Thousands upon thousands of times this shuffling back and forth is repeated. Occasionally a dance will drop out to refresh himself; at times one will fall to the ground exhausted; but the sturdier manage to last out the whole affair, which continues throughout three days and three nights. The most stalwart Yumbo requires at least three weeks to recover from one of these functions.

Two riders sit side by side on a new bicycle invented in Europe that is said to be as easily balanced as one of the usual form.

NICE THINGS FOR CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Rich Chenille Bag

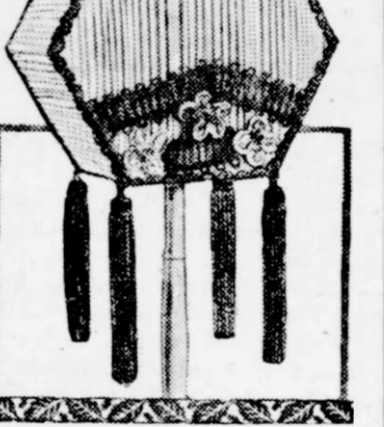

A gift that is sure to be cherished is shown in the rich shopping bag pictured. It is crocheted of brown chenille with gay flowers introduced on one side. The hand and handles at the top are of brown suede leather, and the bag is lined with brown silk. Silk cords slip through slashes in the suede band, to close the bag, and the handle ends are concealed under little triangles of leather.

Dainty Gift Lingerie

This dainty lingerie set is going to make some lucky lady happy at Christmas time—if a hint to the wise is enough. A step-in and chemise are made of fine, light-colored voile and decorated with disks of voile, the size of a silver dollar, in three pretty colors. They are set on with beautiful, colored threads.

Christmas Lampshades

Happy is the home-maker who receives pretty lamp or candle shades at Christmas time—nothing helps more to deck out the house and make it cheerful. Here is a new shade made of thin silk, or fine crepe paper, in two colors, rose and light blue. A wire frame is first covered with the rose color, put in plain, and over this the light blue is plaited. Gold lace, silk or paper roses and four tassels finish off this novelty in shades.

To Brighten the Home

Exquisite crepe paper flowers, so like natural ones that they deceive the eye, are among highly prized decorative gifts for the house that can be made at home. Here is a bouquet of "sweetheart" roses and white daisies, set in artificial rose foliage.

Painted Tally Cards

Among the delightful gifts that even an amateur artist can make are tally and score cards. Every hostess who receives them will be twice pleased, for no gifts are so cherished as those made by the donor. A graceful decorative design is shown in the illustration, simply as a suggestion—for there is no end to the ways in which the characters on playing cards are introduced in decorations.

THIS WOMAN RELIEVED FROM SUFFERING

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A Remarkable Story

Dover, Del.—"I wish every woman would take your wonderful medicine as it nasdoneomuchgood to me. I had cramps and faint spells and very bad pains. One day I was over to my neighbor's house and she told me I ought to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So I went to the store on my way home and got a bottle, and took the first dose before supper. I have been taking it ever since, and you can hardly believe how different I feel. I had just wanted to be in bed all the time, and when I started to brush up I would give out in about ten minutes. So you know how badly I felt. I used to go to bed at eight and get up at seven, still tired. Now I can work all day and stay up until eleven, and feel all right all the time. My housework is all I do in summer, but in winter I work in a factory. I have told a good many of my friends, and I have had three come to me and tell me they wouldn't do without the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. SAMUEL MURPHY, 219 Cecil St., Dover, Delaware.

Tea Averts a Strike
Ten drinking is a deeply rooted custom in England and this habit averted a strike among girls in the horticultural plant at Grimsby when they walked out, demanding an increase of 5 shillings a week. After much argument between the president of the concern and the girls, which was getting nowhere, he suggested that they adjourn for ten. While the girls were indulging themselves, the president hurried into a conference of his associates and came back with the news that an increase would be granted and the strike was averted.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

TUNELESS LIVES

OUR weak human hearts are prone to beat out of tune at the flash of an eye or the snarl of an unexpected angry word.

When our moods and tempers are wrong we lack the divine power to make music for ourselves and others, perhaps those who are very near and dear to us.

We fail to strike the responsive strings that fill life with beauty and love, the reason being that we are deficient of those exalted things ourselves.

We cannot hope to find grapes on hazyberry trees, yet we are often years in learning the basic principles of this little art which has so much to do with our destiny, and even then we do not quite understand it until we have been rudely shaken from our starchy opinions and had the scales torn from our half-blind eyes.

It frequently happens that the more

Through the Glad Eyes of a Woman

By Jane Doe

WOMEN MAKE ME SHIVER

SOMEONE held up a wedding dress in a judge's court, just a fashionable morsel of tissue, beads, and feathers, and that astonished gentleman exclaimed, with what must have been holy horror, "Is there no more of it?"

Bless his heart, but if he were willing I could take him down and show him frocks and—lingerie—skin enough to slip through a wedding ring without getting a crease or losing so much as a bead.

I should think the girls in the work-shops where these things are made would have to be very careful with them.

They could so easily be swept up with the pieces.

But let us hark back to the subject of wedding dresses.

You can see the poor dears of brides any morning of the week trotting down the avenue, like the strains of "The Voice That Breathed 'Er Ede's" in about two square yards of satin beetle and fifteen of veil, and fifty dollars' worth of maiden-hair fernery and filies of the valley.

Even looking, too, as if they liked it, even when it's raining cats and dogs, or fogging like pea soup or pumpkin pie, or freezing like billy-oh.

It's a mystery to me that, instead of homecoming about, as they do thereafter, they don't take an enforced trip along the valley of the shadow of death.

I recommend that all those bodies of least gentlemen who evince an interest in women's welfare should include fashionable wedding-dresses among the dangerous trades for the airy, fairy (I don't think) sex.

And let us also hark back to the lingerie aforementioned.

I'm sorry to keep dragging you about, but then it's so difficult when you're dealing with women's dress and undress to know just where to begin and end.

Of course, the subject of lingerie is one of the world's great mysteries. No, I don't exactly mean what you mean: it's the destination of that is the problem.

No matter how inclement the weather, nor how bitterly the east wind singles out your marrow, the misses and missuses of our extraordinarily hardy generation, bless their wonderful constitutions and fortitude, go

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl

By HELEN ROWLAND

MOST of a man's troubles in life are caused, not by love, but by his mistakes in diagnosing it. Most men are so apt to confuse the symptoms of spring fever with the symptoms of the love fever.

Of course, a man doesn't believe everything flattering that a woman tells him; but that doesn't lessen the effect with which he repeats it to the next woman.

The first deception wounds a woman's heart, the second breaks it, the third mends it—and all the rest simply harden it.

One reason why a bachelor grows so morose in his old age is that he goes all through life with his heart bumping along on skid-chains.

Some husbands act as though they believed that all the compliments in the world were copyrighted, and it would be dangerous to use them.

A man who divorces his conscience, and a woman who divorces the conventions are the highest alimony payers in the world.

A woman often plans how she will "make a man suffer"; but a man can learned we imagine we are, the more difficult do we find it to take up our lute and play ourselves into good humor, and if by chance we play when the days are sultry and we are filled with care, we fall naturally into producing disquieting notes to the annoyance of our intimates.

We cannot make ourselves agreeable. We sally forth with a chip upon our shoulder and dare any one to knock it off.

When we find that no one inclines to accept our challenge, we become so thoroughly abashed that we pack up our lute, if by this time we have one, and seek the solacing solitude of the hills.

So we call up our courage, and with the experience we have had in a very small field we start off again in pursuit of the sweetness in the world we have so long overlooked.

And when we get it we shall pass it out with liberal hand to all we meet.

From the birth of this resolution our horizon widens and brightens, for have we not reached out and become a part of the sphere?

We have put forth our hands to the sky and caught some grand periods of music intended for man's comfort and content, of which he takes too small account for his own good and the good of his friends.

Pa on Winter

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

A WINTER now ain't like the one we used to have when we and mother Got out of school and first began To run around with one another, Who hears of sleighin' parties now? Or lay rides out to country dances? Life ain't the same, no way, no how— And yet they say the world advances.

Not only livin' ain't the same— We haven't even got the weather; A winter now is rather tame, And differently altogether. We used to take the gifts and go A-skatin' on the frozen river, And wash their faces in the snow, And huff and yell to see 'em shiver.

Them winter days was full of joy, Them winter nights was full of love, And every girl and every boy Remembers them forever after, Lord, how a fellow's head was light, With things he didn't dare to utter When on some certain Sunday night He drove her somewhere in a cutter!

Them good old days are dead and gone; Not feet of snow we have, but inches— No more of blizzards at the dawn Or nights of starry frost that pinches, Old age must set beside the fire, Where ruddy red the coal is gleaming, And know old joy and old desire, But know 'em only in our dreamin'.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

SOAPSUD REUNION

Every once in awhile—oh more often than that—the members of the Soapsud family held a family reunion. They had a very good time in their soapuds' fashion. Perhaps you wouldn't enjoy their kind of a good time, but then you're not a soapud, and as many a wise and truthful person has said, it all depends on the way you look at a thing or in your "point of view" as they say.

There were Sng Soapsud and Sammy Soapsud, Solomon Soapsud, Sheffield Soapsud and Sidney Soapsud. Of course Mamma Soapsud was there and Papa Soapsud, too.

Teacher Spots was on hand and Professor Dirty Clothes, for they were such old friends of the family that they always came to the family reunion.

In fact they were almost thought of as belonging to the family. No longer did either the professor or the teacher have to say: "Now, pray don't put yourselves out on my account. Just let me take what you're going to have yourselves and let me feel as one of the family."

They didn't have to say this any more. And when they had a soapuds' banquet and soapuds' food and foamy soapuds' water, which they all loved, everyone was quite at home.

One pleasant thing about the banquet was that no one had to bother about manners.

They didn't eat at a table. They held their banquet right in the wash-tubs.

You see they were all "the family" and didn't have to make any fuss.

"Well," said Professor Dirty Clothes, "I see we've got a good crowd this week."

He always said that when there was a big wash. A good crowd to him meant a big wash.

"Yes," said Teacher Spots, "lots of representative spots."

The Soapuds children had all been taught by Teacher Spots just what that meant.

He had told them that representative men were men who were impor-

The Vengeance of Time

"Jean, aged nine, and Camille, seven, were having a heated discussion. 'I am seven years old,' said Camille. 'And I am nine,' replied Jean. 'But I shall be nine, too.' 'Yes, but then I'll be eleven—he, he, he!' Camille, at once annoyed and outraged, looked for a crushing retort. 'Yes, of course you'll be eleven when I'm nine. Well, you'll be an old woman before I am, that's all!'—L'Echó de Paris.

Don't Be Too Hasty

The trouble with the mentality tests is that they grade intellect according to mental agility and cunning. Outside of geniuses, the highest grade of brain is slow thinking. If you have ever consulted a white-bearded philosopher, you know that the oracle hears your case, ponders it with deliberation, views it from all angles, then in a terse sentence utters the decision of wisdom. The fast thinker arrives at wrong conclusions oftener than the slow thinker.—Topeka Capital.

The Kitchen Cabinet

Underneath the surface of Today Lie Yesterday, and what we call the Past. The only thing which never can decay.

Things bygone are the only things that last. The Present is mere grass, quickly-mown away; The Past is stone, and stands forever fast.

—Eugene Lee-Hamilton.

CHRISTMAS SWEETS

Let us prepare early to collect something different in recipes for our Christmas candy.

A candy thermometer may be bought for a small sum, and if carefully used will last a lifetime. With a thermometer one is sure to have uniform results. A bright clear day is always best for any of the boiled candies.

Peanut Candy.—Who does not enjoy a good peanut candy, not too hard and brittle? Here is one that is the "best ever." Take one pound of peanuts, shell, remove the brown husks and roll with the rolling pin until the nuts are like coarse crumbs. Put into a saucepan two pounds of brown sugar and twelve tablespoonfuls of butter. Put over the heat and count the time from the first bubble, stir constantly and cook just seven minutes, then add the peanuts, stir and pour into a well-greased dripping pan. Mark off in squares.

Caramel Mixture.—Put into a saucepan one cupful of white sugar, one-half cupful of light brown sugar, one-third of a cupful of sirup, one-fourth of a cupful of butter and one-half cupful of heavy cream. Stir until dissolved, then cook without stirring to 246 degrees Fahr. Flavor with almond or vanilla and pour into a buttered pan. When cool shape into balls and cover with fondant, folding it around the ball with the fingers. Press a pecan nut meat closely on the outside.

Cream Candy.—Cook together two cupfuls of sugar and one cupful of cream until it forms a soft ball in water. Flavor to taste and heat well before pouring into a greased dish.

Peppermint Creams.—Boil together one and one-half cupfuls of granulated sugar and one-half cupful of water, until it spins a thread. Add six drops of peppermint extract. Beat until creamy, then drop by teaspoonful on glazed paper.

More Christmas Bon-Bons

For the foundation of many different kinds of candies the fondant is the base.

Fondant.—Take four cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of water and stir until dissolved over heat, cover and cook about five minutes; now add one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar and if the thermometer is used, cook to 238 degrees Fahr. If no thermometer, drop a little into cold water and when a soft waxy ball can be rolled with the fingers, remove at once and pour out on a lightly greased platter to cool. When cool enough to bear the finger, begin to stir with a wooden spoon, then knead into a loaf, pack in a bowl, cover with waxed paper and let stand for a day or two to ripen.

Stuffed Raisins.—Mix equal parts of fondant and almond paste with a little color of green. Wash and wipe the raisins and cut nearly into halves. Remove the seeds and place a small ball of almond fondant in the raisin so that a wide band shows. Let dry overnight, then dip in glue.

Agar Paste.—Soak four tablespoonfuls of granulated agar in one cupful of cold water. Put three-fourths of a cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of white sirup in a saucepan. Dissolve the agar by stirring constantly placed over heat, then strain over the sugar and cook to 222-degrees Fahr. Flavor, color and pour into a pan lined with heavy paper and wet with cold water. Pour in to the depth of half an inch and set away to harden for two days. Cut into squares, dip in fondant, melted, sprinkle with chopped nuts. A teaspoonful of glycerin added to a recipe for fondant will, when melting, give a gloss to the candies.

Grilled Almonds.—Heat in a frying pan four tablespoonfuls of olive oil and when very hot turn in two cupfuls of blanched almonds. Stir until the nuts are brown, then drain in a sieve and spread the nuts on absorbent paper to dry. Sprinkle with salt and serve very soon before the nuts lose their crispness.

75% of disease avoided through internal cleanliness

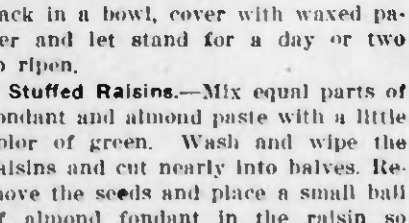

WHEN you are constipated, poisons are formed in the accumulated food waste, and reach all parts of the body. The first results, headaches, biliousness, a feeling of "heaviness," etc., serve as warnings of graver diseases to follow if this intestinal poisoning continues unchecked.

This is why intestinal specialists state that constipation is the primary cause of three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Physicians Advise Lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science has found at last in Lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste, and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Twenty-four chicks were hatched by the intense heat from partially incubated, eggs that had been thrown into the municipal dump east of New Philadelphia. The chicks are being cared for by the city.

Guarded Hell's Gate

Cerberus was the famous dog that guarded the entrance of Hades. According to Hesiod, he was the offspring of Typhon and Echidna; and had 50 heads. Later writers describe him as a monster with only three heads, and with a tail and mane composed of serpents. Orpheus charmed him with the music of his lyre, and Hercules overcame him by sheer strength and dragged him to the upper world.—Kansas City Star.

Are You Nervous?

Portsmouth, Ohio.—"About twenty years ago I was clear down and out physically, my nerves were completely gone and I could not sleep or eat. I was able to sit up and get a better sleep at a time. I doctored for six months but instead of getting better I grew worse. A neighbor persuaded me to take Dr. Pierce's medicine. I took his 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' and in three months I was back to normal health, my nerves were good, I could eat and sleep well and do all my own work."—Mrs. Edward Pollitt, 814 Front Street. Diagram of the Universal Vernier That Locates Holes for Condenser—A Useful Kink for Builders of Radio Sets.

By R. J. ROBBINS... Since the inception of the new tunable transformers for R. F. circuits it has been found desirable to devise some method of locating the various units so that the angle from the vertical may be readily varied without dismantling and redrilling panel several times.

There are probably as many different makes of variable condensers as there are breeds of dogs, so this writer will make no attempt to make this into a catalogue of all the ones which may be used.

We will assume as a starter that an angle of 45 degrees will be the medium angle, and that the direction in which the unit will revolve may be an equal distance either to right or left of this point.

How to Proceed... The procedure will be roughly as follows: 1. Strike lightly the circle on which the various holes are located.

Condenser is Shorted When Rotary Plates Touch Brass Strip.

Two Nails and Block Make Bus-Bar Bender... A handy bus-bar bender may be made from two ten-penny nails and a small piece of wood one-half inch thick.

An Indoor Antenna... Sometimes an indoor antenna can be successfully operated by erecting the wires on ordinary doors in the house.

Importance of Good Aerial... The direct cause of the comparatively poor results obtained by some of the receiving sets is the aerial system.

Location, Intensity of Signals Received... It is well to keep in mind that location has a great deal to do with the intensity of the signals received.

Sealing Wax to Fill Up Holes in Panels... Many times radio fans have wished to use old panels, but have not because the holes in the panels would mar the appearance of the new outfit.

BRUSHED WOOL SWEATERS; FEATHER TRIMS POPULAR

LET'S be optimistic and count our blessings from a fashion standpoint. Why not start our list of winter joys for which we are duly appreciative with the words "brushed wool"? If there is one vogue more than another for which we would render a vote of thanks to stylists responsible therefor, it is that of the lovely "combed" brushed wool knitted things which radiate their colorful charm throughout the season's modes.

Seems as if most everything in the way of knitted outerwear has taken upon itself a downy soft surface, which fashionists are pleased to exploit as "brushed wool."

White plaids are strongly endorsed in brushed wool knitted garments, there is also favor expressed for solid gay colored models.

As shown in the drawing, it consists of a brass strip, pointed at one end, and fastened under the nut belonging to one of the rods which hold ling monotone effects, such as bright green, vivid orange, red or pure white. These often appear in Jacquette silhouettes, frequently sans trimming of any sort, although there are some stunning models with collars and cuffs of clipped "wool fur."

Among brushed wool sweaters, the latest types revel in exquisite feather effects. Often these new feather brushed angora wool sweaters follow mandarin lines, with cuffless full sleeves and a high collar.

Very interesting colors expressed in sweater for this season include brown, carrot, various tan shades, powder blue, lavender green and bright jockey red which is quite the smart note for winter knitted tops.

Every once or twice in a while (and a very short while at that), a poupon and "feather duster" monstrosity, which leaves us to guess as to what sort of plumage it is. It is fine and shiny, with little touches of white near the top.

Now the Filigree Bracelets... The vogue for costume jewelry has brought into the foreground all sorts of fascinating trifles.

Shawl Cape in Favor... The shawl cape is increasing in favor. On the coat-truck it is often of plaid to contrast with the frock itself and frequently it is in kasha, no matter what the frock material.

Are Wisconsin Factories Moving Away?

THAT IS A LIVE QUESTION. It deserves a correct answer. First of all, people should know what "moving away" means. It includes:

1. Changing Wisconsin corporations into outside corporations by re-incorporating in other states.
2. Selling Wisconsin corporations to outside companies and continuing the factories here as branches.
3. Moving main offices to other states.
4. Setting up separate outside corporations to operate Wisconsin factories.
5. Change of residence to other states on the part of officers, office employees and skilled workers.
6. Actually moving the factory out of Wisconsin.

Those Things Are Going On Now

When one or all of them happen, it means:

1. Loss of money and opportunities for every man, woman and child in the state.
2. Loading onto people who stay here, more of the cost of government—taxes.
3. Retarding the future growth of our state.
4. Lessening employment for Wisconsin labor.
5. Reducing the home market for Wisconsin farmers.

Why Be Blind to the Facts?

The processes above outlined are now in motion. They are being forced, by agitation for unfair laws aimed at Wisconsin industry. Agitators and political propagandists cry "bluff" and "lies". Get the FACTS as given in these ads and decide for yourself what and whom to believe. Remember this: "moving away" does not alone mean tearing down or closing factory buildings. But whatever form it takes, it hurts Wisconsin and it hurts you. Read this ad again. Write us for information. We want people to get the facts. When once they have them, Wisconsin will go forward by leaps and bounds.

FARM AND FACTORY MUST PROSPER TOGETHER

Rickets.

Although unimpaired ages of ancient Egypt show evidence of rickets, no definite evidence of this disease has yet been found in the numerous human bodies examined from ancient graves of that land.

Beet Sugar.

When sugar first was made from beets it took about twenty tons of beets to produce one ton of sugar; now it requires but six tons, the change being due to scientific production of the beets.

Forest Insects.

Foresters and entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture say that the losses caused by insect attacks upon living trees and crude, finished and utilized forest products amounts to $130,000,000 annually.

Babies Fed by Force.

In some African tribes when the baby is a few months old it begins to be fed on a preparation of coarse meal. The mother fills her hand with the meal, pushes it into the baby's mouth and holds its nose until all the food is swallowed.

Ambiguous Tribute.

On a gravestone in a Burlington, Vt. cemetery is the following ambiguous tribute to a woman of that city, who died in 1833: "She lived with her husband 50 years, and died in the confident hope of a better life."

Bere Not So Busy.

A homemaker's work consists about half the hours of day in the roughing hours of the week, four being spent in rest according to tests made by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Drains Blood From Brain.

Physicians say that when an airplane is turned sharply at 500 miles an hour centrifugal force throws the blood outward to the lower parts of the body, draining the brain and causing unconsciousness and death.

To Remove Chewing Gum.

If chewing gum sticks to cotton or woolen dresses, or other garments, rub it with a piece of ice, then clean with a cloth dipped in ammonia water. Both gum and stains will disappear.

Must Be Ravenous.

She—"Why do you insist the inside of a chicken coop?" He—"To keep the hens from pulling the grain out of the wood."—ANSWERS.

Goggles Save Tears.

By wearing a pair of cheap motorist goggles, such as purchased at a 10-cent store, while grating horseradish or peeling onions, you will have no need to shed tears.

Wickedness.

In acts of wickedness there is nothing greater than that of those who, when they decide, so manage that they seem to be virtuous and upright men.

Powdered Sulphur.

New York experimenters have found powdered sulphur effective in controlling blight on horse-chestnut trees.

DECEMBER 1924
ISSUED BY THE WISCONSIN ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS ASSN.
IN COOPERATION WITH WISCONSIN'S LEADING NEWSPAPERS TO COMMEMORATE

The WINNING FIGHT AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS

He confessed to himself that something was wrong, though he didn't know what. His "pep" was gone; he was always tired. A public health nurse found him one day when his strength was spent and persuaded him to be examined.

One of the Traveling Free Chest Clinics conducted by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association was in town, and the nurse took him to the clinic. The doctor discovered tuberculosis, and urged him to go to a sanatorium.

A week later he was in one of Wisconsin's bright, cheerful, well conducted tuberculosis sanatoria, with nothing to think about but getting well. Under careful medical attention and thoughtful care his improvement was steady.

Fighting Back

SHOWING THE STEPS THROUGH WHICH WISCONSIN'S TUBERCULOSIS CITIZENS ARE CARRIED IN THEIR FIGHT FROM SICKNESS BACK TO HEALTH AGAIN.

Until finally he was permitted to work a short time each day in the occupational therapy shops to help build him up physically, and to keep him in contented mind.

The Christmas Seal

I am your messenger to homes of woe,
To homes where suffering and sorrow dwell;
To happy homes, as yet all unaware
That subtle danger, masked in smiling guise,
Has secret entrance gained, or 'cross the street
With watchful eye is lurking stealthily.

I do for you the things you cannot do,
Man's service is my destiny divine,
I am your eyes that seek out suffering,
Your ears to hear its cry, your answering voice,
Your gentle-fingered hands, your swift-shod feet,
I am the very inmost heart of you.

I go for you to places near and far,
I carry healing, comfort, courage, cheer;
Whene'er I come too late to vanquish Death,
To save a precious life from needless waste,
It is my task, my sacred task, to see
That e'en the dying do not die in vain.

I am the friend of children and their guide
In paths that lead to happiness and joy;
To keep them unbreft my mission is,
To throw protecting arms 'round radiant youth
And bring it safe to rich maturity—
I'm Health for all: I am the Christmas Seal.

With flaming torch of Knowledge held on high,
With shield of Truth, the truth that makes men free,
I conquer Ignorance, the great arch foe,
Undo the harm of Superstition's spell,
I put to flight dense Darkness and Despair
And usher in a new triumphant Day.

Swift-winged am I and I can travel far,
I do but wait, impatient, your command,
Without you I am shackled, powerless,
But with you strength of Victory is mine,
Oh, arm me, send me forth a vital power;
I'm yours to serve, I am the Christmas Seal.

Louise L. Brand

Now he's back on the job, fit as a fiddle and ready for any reasonable task. He's just one of hundreds in Wisconsin who owe their lives to the defensive forces that the Christmas Seal has built up.

When his disease was arrested and his strength partially regained he was sent to Tomahawk Lake camp. There by easy stages he was brought up to the point where he could do a full day's work.

HOW THE FIGHT AGAINST TUBERCULOSIS IS WAGED

Health work has become as much a part of school life as reading and arithmetic, and will have an even greater influence on the welfare of coming generations.

Hundreds of audiences every year hear speakers who tell them about the fight against tuberculosis and how they can help.

At Tomahawk Lake where patients who have made partial recoveries in the sanatorium are sent to fit them to go back to their jobs in safety.

"Aren't overdoing, are you?" The county nurse watches the progress of the cured tuberculosis patient to guard against a relapse. Sometimes this happens in spite of her vigilance.

Physicians in the various sanatoria are assisted by the consultants of the medical staff of the W.A.T.A. These men bring to each sanatorium the accumulated experiences of all the sanatoria.

The Christmas Seal

The Christmas Seal was adopted as a means of raising the funds needed to carry on the fight against tuberculosis because it enabled everyone to help a little, without asking much of anyone.

In 1908, the year that the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association was organized, 2,509 people died of tuberculosis in Wisconsin. Had the same death rate continued, with an increased population, 2,934 people would have died in 1923. Instead, there were 1,819 deaths.

It's been a winning fight, because everyone has taken an interest in it. Tuberculosis is universal—if it is to be defeated, it must be fought universally.

It can be defeated if the fight goes on unceasingly and relentlessly.

When you buy Christmas Seals you help to herald the day when tuberculosis will be wiped from off the earth.

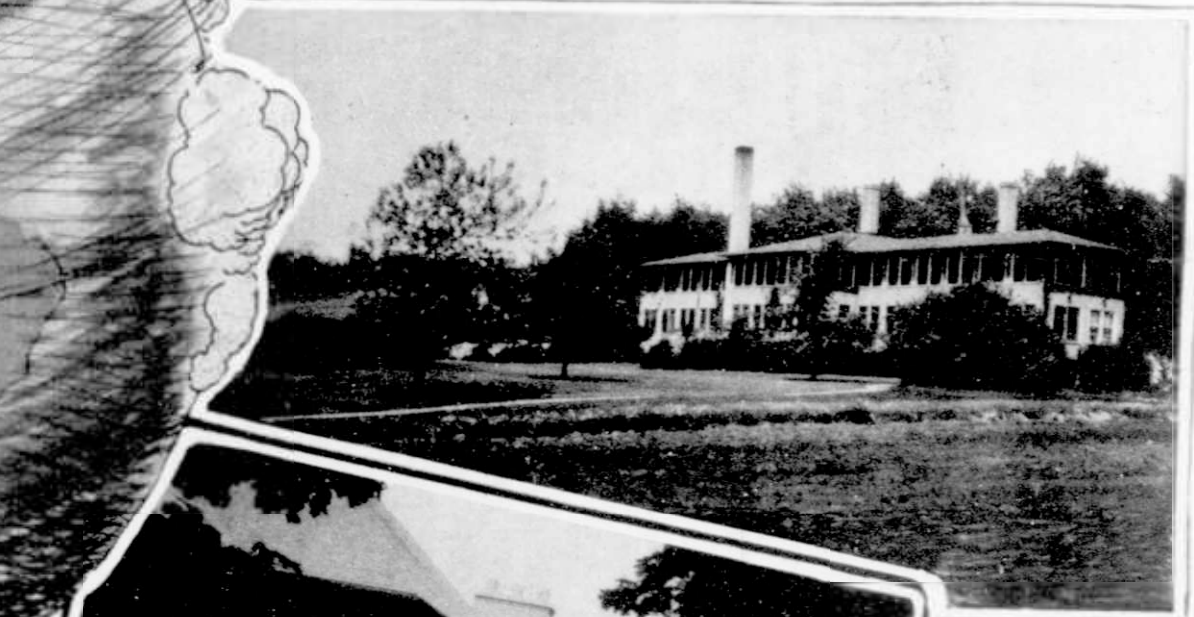

The traveling free chest clinics conducted by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association seek out people who have been exposed to tuberculosis, and find many in early stages of the disease.

The examiner is testing a patient for goiter. The clinics find many things besides tuberculosis and an effort is always made to have them corrected, for a healthy body is the best protection against tuberculosis.

All round the world at Christmas time the Christmas Seal carries the story of a fight that never ceases—the fight against tuberculosis and for health.

Glimpses of two of Wisconsin's 19 sanatoria. Over 1,300 patients are under treatment in Wisconsin sanatoria, where they are not only having their chance to get well, but are protected against giving their disease to others.

The class takes the "Schick test" to test their susceptibility to diphtheria. The Health Service Training School of the W.A.T.A. has graduated or has in training a total of 310 nurses and health workers.

Wisconsin newspapers and magazines have been a powerful influence in carrying education on tuberculosis to the public.

After the clinic has discovered the disease, it is frequently necessary to use much persuasion before the patient is willing to go to the sanatorium. The "follow-up" worker keeps patiently at it until she wins her point.
