FARMINGTON YOUNG MAN REWARDED

Herbert Hagner, of Farmington, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Hagner, had the pleasure of seeing the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago, recently as a reward for good work. He gives the following account of his trip.

"I considered myself very fortunate to be chosen representative of Washington county club workers, and to be awarded the free trip to the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago, Illinois. I take great pleasure in giving the readers and fellow club members an idea of what we did to spend the time by writing the following: On November 30, about 2:30 p. m. I left Kewaskum by rail. At Milwaukee I met 22 other club members. At 8 p. m. we left for Chicago. Upon arrival we were taken to the Y. M. C. A. headquarters, where we were given our rooms. Monday morning about 8:30 we were taken to the exposition. We remained there for the rest of the day. Tuesday morning we went to the stockyards and through the Armour packing house. In the evening we attended a banquet at the Drake hotel. Wednesday morning we went to the Field and Art museum. About 11 a. m. we landed at Marshall Field and Co., the largest retail store in the world. We then took a bus to Lincoln Park. In the evening we attended another banquet at the Morrison hotel. Thursday we were taken to the International Hay-vestor Co. In the evening we attended a banquet at the Sherman hotel. After that we went to the exposition where all the club members, numbering about 1,200 marched in the showing. Friday morning we all said good-bye and at 11 a. m. left Chicago. The packing house interested me the most as I never could have imagined that there was any as large as that without seeing it. The Field Museum also meant a great deal to me. I enjoyed talking to boys and girls from many other states, also from Canada. I enjoyed the entire trip very much and besides learned many things I could not have learned as well from books.

Your club member,
HERBERT HAGNER

WILL BE FIRST ECLIPSE OF SUN IN 100 YEARS

Barring clouds, Washington county people soon will view the first virtual total eclipse of the sun to occur in the United States during the last 100 years. It will be the last barring one in New England, for 275 years, and will be seen here at 8:03 a. m., Jan. 24. The eclipse will be 99 and one-half per cent total and will last two minutes. But don't chance looking at the approach of the eclipse with the naked eye. Galileo and several others did, and as a result of their mistake they were blinded. Smoked glass or an over-exposed negative are the best instruments known to science for viewing an eclipse. The sun and moon are apparently the same size in the sky. The moon being a solid body casts a shadow, which is cone-shaped and sometimes long enough to reach the earth. As the earth is turning on its axis, this shadow, about 50 miles broad, drags over the surface of the earth. People living in the path of the shadow will see sight of the sun.—West Bend Pilot.

MAYVILLE FARMER SUFFERS HEAVY LOSS

Property valued at about $10,000 was destroyed shortly after noon on Sunday on the Gustave Germer farm at Brown's Corner, south of Mayville, when fire raged the barn, destroying all the farm machinery, grain and hay, and killed ten Holstein cows. Three more cows were burned so badly that it will probably be necessary to kill them. The machinery destroyed consisted of a binder, a grinding mill, hay loader, saw shiner, and a square spreader. About 25 tons of hay, and about 800 bushels of oats, were also lost. The building is insured for about $7,000. Early in the day Mr. Hauer the owner of the farm, had been working in the barn with a blower, throwing out iron pipes, and it is thought that this may have started the fire.

SHAY RECEIVES SENTENCE OF 14 YEARS

Richard Shay, who gave himself up as the man who accidentally killed his partner, Joe Smith, while in the act of robbing a store at Theresa on the night of September 11, 1920, was arraigned before Circuit Judge C. M. Davison at Jensen last Saturday and sentenced to fourteen years in the state prison, on a third degree murder charge.

EXAMINATION RECALLED

The civil service examination which was to have been held on Jan. 17, for appointments at Kewaskum, for clerks, was recalled.

LOCALS KEEP UP WINNING STEAK

Outclassed, outplayed and outpointed, the Mayville Legion basket ball team hopelessly went down to defeat before the fast and snappy Spatz's Gang of all home talent basket ball five, by a score of 18 to 23, at the Opera House last Sunday afternoon. Though the score only shows a difference of 15 points, it might as well have been twice or three times that difference had the locals so desired to have it. As we previously stated that the Kewaskum five is this year putting up the best brand of ball since their organization seven years ago, last Sunday, however, their condition, style and method of playing, capped the climax of their basket ball career, everyone was in the pink of condition, and primed for the game to get a sweet revenge for the defeats suffered at the hands of the Mayville five last year. So completely did they have the visitors buffaloed at times that they found it a difficult proposition to know just where the ball was. It must not be taken for granted, however, that the Mayville five did not put up a good game, the visitors are a fast and snappy aggregation, and pulled off some very clever work. Mayville has this year lost very few games, and came here confident of victory. They were the first to score, and for a time it seemed as though they would carry the bacon home again this year. Experience, short pass work and generalship upon the floor on the part of the locals, was too much for the visitors to overcome. The first half ended 6 to 12.

The attendance at the game last Sunday was not up to expectations, as a result the gate receipts did not cover the expenses. At an interview with the members of the team by one of the Statesman staff, it was made clear that unless the games are given better support, the contests scheduled with Oshkosh, Waukegan, Sheboygan, Plymouth and the Denver Tigers will be cancelled, and all games in the future will be played out of town.

In the preliminary game, the Alumnae defeated the Kewaskum Juniors by a score of 15 to 16. This game was a hard fought battle and created a great deal of excitement.

Tomorrow, Sunday afternoon, a hotly contested game can be looked forward to, when Spatz's Gang will clash with their old rivals the Regner Drugs of West Bend. Both teams are out to win, and will make use of every trick of the game known to them in order to make good their intentions. West Bend has this year a very strong lineup, and will give the locals quite a tough argument. Let's all turn out and boost the home team. The preliminary game will start at 2:15 o'clock.

NO TRACE OF MISSING TREASURER YET

Since leaving his home on Dec. 1, no trace has been discovered of Herbert Hankwitz, missing treasurer of this village. An examination of his books showed that there is a short, age of $4322.62. He was last seen on Twenty-first and Fond du Lac avenue, Milwaukee on the morning of December 1. A check for $94.00 given to him by one of the local justices was mailed back to Lomira from Milwaukee. This fact has led local officials to believe that he committed suicide. The theory that he invested in western loans is given very little support by close friends and relatives. No letters or information could be found among his personal effects.

Hankwitz's honesty was never questioned during his long tenure of office. He was repeatedly and unanimously elected to office and gave the best of satisfaction. District Attorney Geo. Hartman has issued a warrant charging embezzlement of public funds. The warrant has been placed in Sheriff Lange's hands, Posters containing Hankwitz's picture and description have been sent out from the sheriff's office. The village board will hold a special meeting this week. District Attorney Hartman plans to attend this meeting to further direct the board. A new treasurer will be appointed at this meeting and perhaps a reward posted for the missing treasurer will be acted upon.—Lomira Review.

MADE DIRECTOR OF LIME CO.

W. J. Nest, president of the Eden State Bank, has returned from Milwaukee where he attended the annual meeting of the Western Lime and Cement company. He was elected a member of the board of directors. Mr. Nest says that the company experienced one of the best years in its history during 1924, and prospects for 1925 are equally promising.

A NEW FIELD FOR THE STOVE-LEAGUERS

BONDING COMPANY TO BUILD BRIDGE

At a meeting held at the Fond du Lac and Washington county Highway committees, it was agreed that Albert Pergande, Milwaukee contractor, who was awarded the contract, early last fall to rebuild the concrete bridge at the county line on Highway 53, which was washed out by the flood last August, would be unable to fulfill the contract, in finishing the structure by next spring, and consequently declared the contract in default and notified the bonding company, the Northwestern Casualty Co., Milwaukee to take over the contract and rush same to completion. As there is grave danger that the light tower bridge will not be able to withstand the high tide of water in spring, and as a result a blockade of traffic on this important highway will be the outcome.

According to the contract entered upon between Mr. Pergande and the Fond du Lac and Washington county road committees, the bridge was to have been completed December 1. The contract called for removing the floor and center pier of the bridge, and placing a single span steel girder bridge on the abutment. After the bridge floor had been removed, it was found that the south abutment had also been partially undermined, and found necessary to remove it. Pergande then entered into a supplementary contract with the highway committees for construction of the new pier. Nothing up to the present time has been done on this work as yet except the driving of spiles.

The steel structure to support the floor has been completed for several weeks and is being held in the yards of a Milwaukee steel company. Pergande has been paid $2,440 on his contract, which, with the supplementary contract totals about $12,000. These payments have been made on the engineer's estimates of work done, less the 15 per cent always held back.

Representatives of the bonding company were in the village Monday, to look over the situation, and make preliminary arrangements for the construction of the bridge. A new contractor will be put on the job and work of rushing the bridge to completion will be started as soon as possible.

C. R. Weymouth, Milwaukee, division engineer of the state highway commission, and Thomas Cleary, an engineer and inspector for the Milwaukee office attended the meeting. Newton Rosenbeimer of this village and J. Bastian of West Bend, members of the Washington county commission and Charles Johnson, highway commissioner for Washington county, were present and concurred in the action of the Fond du Lac committee.

HOG BITS OFF FARMERS THUMB

Leonard Hall, a farmer residing in the town of Ashford, met with a painful accident while engaged in butchering at his home on Thursday. As he started to stab a hog the animal lunged at him and bit off his right thumb. Mr. Hall was brought to a physician's office at Campbell sport and his injury was dressed.

MISSING GIRL AT KEWASKUM

Zora E. Schroeder, 17, an old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Schroeder, Milwaukee, who disappeared from her home the first of November, and who was finally located at Fond du Lac last week Saturday, after authorities and her parents had searched the country in efforts to gain knowledge of her whereabouts. The young girl walked from Milwaukee to Kewaskum, where she stayed overnight at the Republican House. The next morning she was fortunate in getting a ride when a motorist gave her a "lift" to Fond du Lac, where she had since been employed as a domestic. The girl was well dressed, and apparently seemed unconcerned about her affairs. No one was able to detect or judge her to be a girl who had run away from her home. The Wisconsin News of Saturday, December 20th, issue gives the following account of the girl's disappearance and capture:

"Declaring that she had disappeared because she resented her father's interference in her love affairs, Evelyn Schroeder, 17, missing for more than a month, was back at her home 510 Eighteenth st., today.

The girl was found at Fond du Lac by Detective Hogarth Philip and was brought back last night.

"She is back and that's all that matters now," Mrs. William Schroeder, the girl's mother said. "It's the grandest Christmas gift my father and I could have wished for and far better than any we dared hope we might receive."

"According to Evelyn's story, after leaving home she walked to Kewaskum, where a motorist gave her a 'lift' to Fond du Lac. She since has been employed there as a domestic.

Following her disappearance a month ago she was erroneously identified as the "lost memory" girl in the Chicago county hospital.

BEE KEEPERS WILL HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

The Washington County Bee-Keepers Association will hold their annual meeting at the Court House on Tuesday, December 30, at 1:30 P. M. In spite of the fact that 1924 has been a poor honey year for Washington County bee-keepers the association has had a successful year. The membership has been increased, the year clean-up campaign against American Foul Brood continued, and assistance given to bee-keepers in various ways. All bee-keepers whether members of the association or not are invited to attend the meeting.

GREETINGS FROM SOUTH DAKOTA

Our weather in October and November was just splendid. On November 6th, we got one-half inch of snow that thawed away in two days. Up to December 1st without heavy frost. From the 6th to 8th we had snow which blocked roads for a few days. I am inclosing my dues for your worthy paper, the welcome weekly visitor. Wishing you all God's blessing abundantly, your loving friend, Christ Tischehauser.

The train, which is the one passing through this city at 2:20 p. m. beat Hetzel to the crossing, wrecked his Ford and injured him, so that he had to be taken on board to the Milwaukee hospital. The collision happened beyond Richfield, between that station and Germantown according to reports.—Hartford Press.

PIONEER RESIDENT PASSES AWAY

After an illness of only two days brought about by old age, death called to his final reward, one of the oldest and highly respected pioneer settlers of the town of Auburn, Ferdinand Schurr, who passed away in death at a Fond du Lac hospital for which place he left about a year ago, on Tuesday evening, December 23, 1924. Deceased was born September 27, 1841, in Germany, having attained the age of 83 years, 2 months and 26 days. In the year 1868 he immigrated to America and settled in the town of Auburn. On January 7, 1874 he was married to Louise Weitenhagen, who preceded him in death on October 17, 1915. Six children were born of this union, all of whom survive, and who are: Lena (Mrs. Gust. Magritz), Millie (Mrs. C. A. Christensen) of Milwaukee; August of Oconto Falls, Wis.; Robert of Milwaukee and Albert and Herman on the homestead. Besides he leaves, one brother, John of Portland, Ore., and 4 grand children to mourn his demise. Mr. Schurr, who had resided in the town of Auburn for fifty years, was well liked by his many friends and neighbors. He was always ready to extend a helping hand to those in distress. He was a good husband and father, and looked after the welfare and comforts of his family. As a true Christian he was a firm believer in the upbuilding of the church to which he belonged. The funeral was held on Friday afternoon, at 1 o'clock from the residence with services in the Ev. Peace church this village. Rev. H. L. Barth officiated. Burial was made in the congregation's cemetery.

WISCONSIN GAINS $22,000,000 IN GRAIN VALUES

Wisconsin farmers realized $22,000,000 more on their corn, wheat and oats this year than in 1923, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation which reports that the national increase in grain values amount to $55,000,000. Oats alone were responsible for a gain of 15 millions, while wheat brought farmers of this state about half a million and corn an extra 7 million over last year, the report states.

BROKEN RAIL CAUSES WRECK

The extreme cold weather caused a great deal of delay in train service, due to the fact that the firemen found it difficult in raising steam. Last Sunday evening passenger train No. 220, southbound was delayed here for several hours when the engine was derailed just opposite the depot. A large number of passengers suffered from cold when the locomotive was disconnected from the train. After four hours of delay another engine was sent here from Fond du Lac, which is to be train to Milwaukee. The passenger coaches remained on the main track when the engine was backed into a switch to take on a milk car from the Kewaskum cannery. The engine was just ready to go back on the regular night of way when the switch knuckle snapped and the trucks crumpled under the weight of the heavy engine. Cows from Milwaukee with one of the large wreckers were sent here and worked all night before the locomotive was pulled back on the tracks and the damaged switch repaired. The train was in charge of Conductor John Evans and Engineer William Kinney of Milwaukee.

RAILROAD OFFICIALS STARTED AN INVESTIGATION OF THE ACCIDENT AND DETERMINED THAT THE SWITCH KNIFE WAS MADE BRITTLE BY THE INTENSE COLD.

"HERITAGE OF THE DESERT"

The widest variety of artisans ever included among the members of a motion picture company made up the party which went into Southern Utah to film Zane Grey's "The Heritage of the Desert". It is directed by Irvin Willat, the producer.

Besides those actually engaged in making the picture, there were representatives of the following vocations: Horse wranglers, cowboys, teamsters, blacksmiths, cooks and helpers, packers, road engineers and road builders, carpenters, plasterers, well-diggers, lumber jacks, axemen, bridge builders and scores of other specialized callings.

These men were necessary owing to the difficulties of the trip. Road which had been washed out by recent storms, had to be rebuilt, bridges constructed and in some cases built ways built over the barren desert. The entire company suffered the hardships of pioneer life, moving camp practically everyday just as the early settlers did in crossing the desert in covered wagons.

"The Heritage of the Desert," which will be played at the Opera House on Sunday evening, is the story of a war for water rights of the upper Colorado River fought by pioneers 15 years ago. During this intense conflict a whole village was wiped out. This gigantic spectacle is shown in the picture, the entire town being built by carpenters and lumberjacks through almost superhuman efforts.

"THE TRUANT SOUL"

"The Truant Soul," one of the best mystery-love stories ever published in the Statesman, is offered to readers beginning with this issue. Victor Rousseau, the author of this remarkable novel, who has written many splendid stories in his past, eclipses his earlier efforts in the latest offering.

"The Truant Soul" will grip the reader from the beginning and carry him through to the end fascinated and mystified. It is most unusual in that it deals with the love story of a great physician and a woman whose identity had best remain unrevealed until the reader uncovers it for himself.

From start to finish it is a story with plenty of thrills, and the Statesman believes that readers will enjoy every chapter of it. Turn to another page and begin reading it now.

Iron River, Wis.—When he fell 30 feet from the roof of a barn, John Schuetz, a town of Tripp farmer, was slightly hurt. His escape from serious injury is considered remarkable.

CHAPTER XVII—Continued

Trevors was upon him again, but Lee slipped aside, even rolled over, managed to get to his feet. Again Trevors bore down upon him, a new heaving fire in his eyes. Again, though barely in time, Bud Lee slipped away from him. He drew Trevors' harsh laugh after him and Trevors' questioning, eager lists. Lee put up his arm, his right arm, guarding his face, and drew a way, back and back, Carson was almost whimpering, calling whiningly:

"Stand up to him, Bud! Oh, go get him, Buddie!"

Still up and down the room they went, Trevors rushing at Lee, Lee trying what bows he must, striking out but little seeking now only to pull himself together, to get his head clear of daze and dizziness.

"Run away, will you?" panted Trevors. "I've got you, d—n—ou, Got you right!"

Lee didn't answer. He was thinking dully that Bayne Trevors was near telling the truth, that Bud Lee was almost beaten—almost. That was as far as a gentleman ever went—just to that desperate "almost beaten." Not quite. No! not quite. Never that.

Both men were nearly spent; Carson saw that while he cursed softly in his corner; Melvin saw it and watched for the end, wondering just how it would come. Trevors should swing for the head of the axe, but all that was in him into a final, smashing blow, bent through an insufficient guard, do it now, quickly. For both Carson and Melvin saw another thing, a thing which both had sensed at the outset: Bud Lee was harder than Bayne Trevors. Lee, slipping away at every step was getting something back which had nearly gone from him. Trevors was breathing that way jerks; save for the vital fact that he now had two hands to Bud Lee's one, Trevors was showing more signs of weariness than Lee.

"Bud'll get him—somehow," whispered Carson. "Good old Bud, somehow."

What Carson and Melvin sensed Trevors knew. He saw that Lee was having less trouble in eluding him now, that Lee's feet were quicker, lighter than his, that Lee was beginning to strike back viciously at him, and when the blow landed, Trevors' big body rocked, shook through with pain. There came to him the thought which was Melvin's, but it came in Trevors' way: Now, quickly, before Lee was ready for it, must come the end. So, for the third time that day Bayne Trevors, with much at stake, resorted to "what weapons God gave him, what weapons he could lay his hand to, his eyes, his hands, his feet." Resorting to the old trick which came up from South American ports in disreputable wind-jammers which is known to the San Francisco waterfront, he raised a heavy foot, striking for Lee's stomach, seeking with one low, horrible blow to smother up his already handicapped antagonist in writhing pain on the floor.

"An' I gave my word!" beloveted Carson, the sweat on his own forehead. "Oh, my Gawd!"

But just that one brief instant too late did Bayne Trevors lift his foot. For Bud Lee had expected this, never had forgotten it, had prayed within his soul that the man he fought would use it. Just by that fraction of time which his name was quicker than Trevors, and he knew it. Now, as he read the sinister purpose in Trevors' glaring eyes, as he glimpsed the raised foot as it left the floor, he lowered his own head, averting it over his side, stooped—and his hand closed like locked iron about the calf of Trevors' leg. A stifled cry from the hulking man, a little grunt of effort from Lee. Lee straining, heaving mightily, and Trevors went back, toppled, fought for his slipping balance, and fell. As he went down Lee was upon him, Lee's arm about his neck, Lee's weight slung upon him, Lee holding his body between a powerful pair of knees which rode him as they rode daily some struggling Blue Lake fish.

Now Bud's left arm, defying the agony of a broken hand, was around him. Lee's legs were about the frantically fighting body, and at last Lee's right hand went its sure way to the thick, bare, pulsing throat. Trevors' right arm was caught at his side, held there by the body upon him. His left hand beat at Lee's face, struck and battered again only to come back like a steam-driven piston to hammer again. But Bud Lee's pain-racked body clung on, his thumb and fingers sank and sank deeper into the corded muscles of the heaving throat, crooked like talons, white and hard and relentless.

Trevors' eyes were terrible, filled with hatred, red-drenched with rage. He sought, with a great sudden heave, to roll over. But he could not shake off the legs which were like stubborn tentacles about him, could not free his throat of the tensing clutch. He tore at the wrist, smote again at Lee's head, set his own hand to Lee's throat. In an instant his hand was back at the hand worrying him, but he was unable to drag it away.

His face went white, flamed red, drew purple. His chest contracted spasmodically. Lee, summoning all of the force within him, drove thumb and fingers deeper.

"Got enough?" he panted.

For the last time Trevors strained with him and they rolled like death-racked mountain-falls. But still Lee's left arm was about Trevors' neck, his legs about the tossing body, his hand at Trevors' throat, Trevors' breath caught, failed him. . . . Then and then only did a new look come into the bulging eyes. A look of more than fear, or utter, desperate terror. Trevors threw up his hand weakly, then let it fall so that it struck the floor heavily, a dead weight.

Lee's grip at the strangling throat relaxed. But he did not move his hand.

"Got enough?" he panted again.

The answer came brokenly, weakly, almost inarticulate. But it did come and the men drawn close heard it:

"Yes."

"You'll get out of the country?"

"Yes."

Bud Lee drew back and rose, going to the door swiftly. He stooped for his hat and passed out. And as Bayne Trevors got unsteadily to his feet and sank slumping into the chair offered him, two big tears formed in his eyes and rolled down his cheeks. The first tears in many a year, the tears of a strong man broken for the first time in his life.

"Sand did it!" grunted Melvin. "Just sand, Carson."

"I'll stick around" an' see he moves on, Bud," Carson followed Lee to say. "Oh, he'll go. But I'll just tell him how the boys is headed this way by now an' it's tar an' feathers for him if he don't moser right along. That's something he couldn't stand right now, An', Bud."

He put out his hands and locked Lee's in a grip that made the sore fingers wince. Then, swinging upon the heel of his boot, he went back to collect a hundred dollars from Melvin and help Bayne Trevors shape his plans.

But Bud Lee did not wait. He was on his horse, swaying a little, an arm side him. He had allowed the escape of her captive; she had accused him after the two of them had gone back to the cavern, had thrown herself upon him, tearing at his face, and the two had fallen. Mother and son! Lee shuddered, hoping within his heart that Judith had been mistaken. It was too terrible.

But, such is youth, such is love. Bud Lee promptly forgot both Chris Quinton and Mad Ruth as he went through the hills to the house. He remembered how Marcia had flown once to Pollock Hampton when he had made a hero of himself, how again just today she had gone swiftly to him because he had made a fool of himself and because it seemed she loved him. In due time there was going to be a wedding at Blue Lake ranch. A wedding! Just one? Lee hurried on.

Yes, Judith was waiting for him. She was there in the living-room, curled up on a great couch, lifting her eyes expectantly as his step sounded on the veranda. A wonderfully gowned, transcendently lovely Judith; a Judith of bare white arms, round and warm and rich in their tender curves; a Judith softly, alluringly feminine even in the eyes of Bud Lee, no longer theorist; a Judith whose filmy gown slung laceratingly to her like a sun-shot mist, a Judith whose tender mouth was a red flower, whose eyes were Aphrodite's own, glorious, dawn-gray, soft with the light shining in them, the unhidden light of love for the man who came toward her swiftly; the Judith he had first held in his arms and kissed.

He came in quickly, his heart singing. The color suddenly ran up hot and vivid in the girl's cheeks. Standing over her he put out his hand. But she slipped her own hands behind her.

"Good evening, Mr. Lee," said Judith brightly. "Really, you have taken your time in making your first call. Won't you sit down?"

"No," said Bud Lee gravely. "I'll take mine standing, please."

"Like a man to be shot at dawn?" cried Judith. "Dear me, Mr. Lee, that sounds so tragic. What, pray, are you talking?"

"A new job," said Lee. "I've come to tell you that just being horse foreman doesn't suit me any longer. What you need and need right away is a general manager. That's what I want to be, your general manager, Judith. For life!"

Judith laughed softly, happily. Her hands flew out to him like two little homing birds, and she followed them home.

"You'll find your work cut out for you, Mr. Lee," she told him.

"It's the kind of work I want," answered Bud Lee.

Then suddenly her arms went about his neck and tears sprang into her eyes and she set her lips to the ear he had sought to cover with his hair, and took his sore, swathed hand tenderly into her own two hands, laying it against her cheek.

"Carson telephoned me," she whispered, her lips trembling all of a sudden. "He told me that you and Trevors fought. And how you fought! And he was half crying over the telephone, he was so proud of you. And I am proud of you! And—oh, Bud Lee, Bud Lee, I love you so!"

From without came the sound of the Blue Lake boys returning, Carson at their head. Riding close together they were singing, their voices floating through the night in an old cowboy song. Mrs. Simpson heard and ran out into the courtyard to listen. Marcia and Pollock Hampton, lost to all save each other in the shadows far down the veranda, listened, and Marcia clapped her hands. The voices were to be heard from afar, the strong voices of a score of men. The strange thing is that neither Judith nor Bud Lee heard; that neither had the vaguest consciousness just then that there were in all the world any other mortals than—Judith and Bud Lee.

(THE END.)

CHAPTER XVIII

Yes, Judith Was Waiting

At the old cabin above the lake Bud Lee dismounted. His hand in its rude sling was painful him terribly, demanding some sort of first-aid treatment. Tomorrow he could take it to a doctor; perhaps in an hour or so he could get Trapp to look to it; just now he must do what he could for himself with hot water and strips torn from an old shirt.

Night had descended, serene with stars. He wondered if the boys were back yet from the lumber-camp. He had met them, as Carson had predicted he would, riding in a close-packed, silent, ominous body. He felt assured that they would find no work for them to do at the company's office, that Carson was right and Trevors would "be on his way." But he stopped at the bunk-house.

No, the boys hadn't come in yet. But there was a message for Lee, just received by the cook. It was from Greene; the forester, brief and to the point:

Greene had lost no time in finding the sheriff of the adjoining county at White Rock and in going with him to the cave. They had found Quinton. He was dead, the manner of his death clearly indicated. For he lay at the foot of the cliffs straight below the cave's mouth, his face terribly torn and scratched by a mad woman's nails, the mad woman herself lying huddled and still close beside him.

Cutlers Realize That Twain Had Right Idea

Many years ago Mark Twain wrote one of his characteristic little sketches about a boy buying a jackknife. His observation was that in the presence of the infinite variety of shiny knives which the hardware man had in his show-case any knife that the boy selected from the rest looked like a clumsy, inferior affair, but that as soon as the boy had made his choice and got away from the influence of all of the other knives his particular knife became a precious and radiant thing of beauty.

It was generations ago that the great humorist discussed this topic, but the cutlers have taken the lesson to heart at last and decided that they

Points to Consider in Treatment of Acid Soil

There are several factors to be considered when choosing the form of lime to use for soil. The cost of the lime is the first point to be considered and then the character of the soil, the kind of crop, the rapidity of action desired, the fineness of the lime and the convenience of handling are of next importance in the order named. Ordinary ground limestone or calcium carbonate contains approximately 800 pounds of calcium per ton, slaked lime or hydrated lime contains about 1,081 pounds of calcium per ton, and quicklime or unslaked lime contains about 1,428 pounds. The cost of a pound of calcium in each form should be compared when determining the relative cost of each substance. Generally speaking, for most conditions, ordinary ground limestone is to be recommended above the other forms. Unslaked lime will slowly become slaked when exposed to the air and dampness.

Different Rations That Have Got Good Results

Farmers who have good alfalfa hay find that a ration made from 500 pounds of alfalfa, 200 pounds of ground oats, 200 pounds of bran and 100 pounds of linseed oilmeal, cottonseed meal or soy bean meal gives excellent results.

When clover hay is used in place of alfalfa, the linseed is increased to 200 pounds. If mixed hay is the only kind a man has, he cuts the corn to 400 pounds and increases the oats to 200 pounds and the oilmeal to 200 pounds. The same amount of bran, 200 pounds, is used.

In a very few cases where it is out of the question to secure anything but timothy hay, the above ration is mixed in equal parts by weight. C. B. Finley, dairy extension man at the Iowa State college, found in his experience with over 5,000 farmers last year, that good results were always obtained from the above combinations.

Green Feed Essential for Poultry in Winter

Successful poultrymen have learned that green feed of some kind is absolutely essential for winter egg production. Most any green stuff is good, providing the right kind of storage is used to keep the vegetables crisp and sound. Cabbage, beets or mangel are all good; and besides they are easy to keep all winter in pit or cellar. I really like cabbage the best, because it is crisp, quite nutritious and the hens like it, says a writer in the Indiana Farmers' Guide. The beets or mangels should be pulled before any freezing frosts occur; and only a few should be placed before the hens at one time. Alfalfa and clover leaves are used to some extent, but feed of a more succulent nature is best for winter use.

Work of Busy Bee

"How doth the busy little bee," has been spoken thousands of times by school children and others without a single thought as to the important part that the busy little bee plays in the development of many of our plants. Bees serve a double purpose. They gather the sweets from the flowers and store them and at the same time they perform a greater service in carrying the pollen from one flower to another, thus insuring a full set of fruit upon our trees and certain of our vegetable plants.

"Stage-glare" caused by the artificial lighting of a theater affects the eyes of actors and actresses. The walls of the waiting room used by them during the intervals of a play were colored green because this is a good antidote for the affection of the eyes. Hence the name.

Discover Means to Control Bean Weevil

Infected Seeds Must Not Be Put in Storage.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A nation long prevalent among growers of beans was the cause of a weevily crop, but investigations by the bureau of entomology, United States Department of Agriculture, in California, have shown that this has no effect on the infestation of the succeeding crop. The real cause of the spread of weevils in the new crop has been shown to be the development of large numbers of the insects in seeds held over from the preceding year and held in storage in buildings near the fields of growing beans. A few beans may be the breeding ground for enormous numbers of the pests. In one case it was found that 350,000 of a certain variety of cowpea weevil developed from a bag containing 60 pounds of cowpeas.

From this it is evident that the increase of the weevils may be largely controlled by the simple expedient of destroying those in the stored beans or by disposing of the surplus beans.

This weevil work of the department has been received by growers with much approval. In one of the most important bean-growing sections they have formed a weevil committee, the purpose of which is to spread the new information and to enforce recommendations which it is thought will reduce the losses which in recent years have been increasing with the continued cultivation of these leguminous crops.

Roup May Be Controlled by Proper Management

Contagious roup is very easily spread from one bird to another by contact through the feed, water and litter. Roup is easily controlled by proper management and housing. Dump, insanitary, poorly ventilated, overcrowded drafty quarters are conducive to its spread. Only valuable birds should receive individual treatment. Place the bird in a dry, well-ventilated place and give it plenty of fresh air and feed. Every morning and evening remove all the cheesy matter from the eyes and nostrils of the bird and dip its head into a solution of bichloride of mercury (1-1,000). This is made by placing one 7.3-grain bichloride of mercury tablet in a pint of water. Hold the bird firmly and immerse the head until the eyes are covered, keeping it there a few seconds, or until it struggles.

In treating an infected flock, dispose of all bad cases by killing and burning them. Isolate all birds having colds, keep quarters dry, provide plenty of ventilation without drafts, sunlight, and avoid overcrowding. Place one 7.3-grain bichloride of mercury tablet in a gallon of water in a nonmetal container. Never use more than ten days in succession.

Long Fall Fails to Kill

Young children are always tumbling about, and young birds have similar accidents. Mr. Oliver Pike, well-known bird observer, writes that he has seen young guillemots tumble off the lofty ledges where they are hatched and fall perhaps a hundred feet or more to the beach below. Yet in spite of the height they are rarely killed.

When lovers elope it's also a get-away from common sense.

Care for no man's conscience, unless conscience countersigns it.

Must Wait for Second Feathers to Show Color

It is quite impossible to determine the color of the Rhode Island Reds until they develop their second feathers. Ofttimes in young chicks, the wing feathers will be tipped with white and perhaps some of them with more or less black markings. After they molt in the fall, however, feathers are likely to turn out to be fairly good standard color specimen.

This same statement will apply to most any of the standard breeds of poultry. Therefore, it is suggested that the poultryman do not be too hasty in forming an opinion as to the quality of Rhode Island Reds until the round stock reaches an age of three or four months, and at a time when they are getting their second feathers, when it is possible to know pretty well what to expect as to their standard qualifications in color markings.

Best Use of Potatoes in Live Stock Feeding

Potatoes may be fed in limited amounts to cattle, sheep and horses in partial substitution for grain, but they can be fed more liberally to hogs, especially if they are bolted or steamed and mixed with meal. Heavy feeding of raw potatoes will induce scouring. At the Wisconsin experiment station it was found that for hog feeding 42 pounds of cooked potatoes equalled 100 pounds of corn. A number of other stations have tested potatoes as a feed and as an average of all these tests it can be stated that about 520 pounds of potatoes, after cooking, are equal in feeding value to 100 pounds of corn or barley. For best results, when fed to hogs, potatoes should be given at the rate of about four pounds to each pound of concentrates.

FARM NOTES

Pullets kept separate from hens will bring better results.

A broody coop where feverish hens can be confined and fed is much to be preferred to ducking them or to starvation.

Early seeding is essential for a good oat crop. Ground prepared in the fall permits early seeding next spring.

Ever try a scythe as an insect and plant disease exterminator? Some insects and fungus diseases live through the winter on weeds.

Swine should not be fed dead foxes. To do so may spread tuberculosis. Neither should hogs be fed in lots where cattle are infected with tuberculosis.

As a food product there is no substitute for that which comes from the dairy. More milk, cream, butter, cheese and ice cream are being consumed every year as the people become educated to the essential importance of these foods in the human diet.

Webster in Ignorance of Cross-Word Puzzle

It has fallen to the Hartford Courant to point out the fact that all the encyclopedias and dictionaries have been "scouted" by the cross-word puzzle craze. Now, the cross-word puzzle is not a new thing, though the craze is. For years people who like that sort of thing have been fond of cross-word puzzles, but that fact has not made a dent in the reference books.

The late Mr. Webster knew about encyclopedias, which the Greek poets played with when in a fraternal mood, observes the Springfield (Mass.) Republican. He knew about another ancient library joke, the anagram, which spells both ways like the name of our fellow citizen, Otto Baab. And he knew about rebuses, in which pictures represent words. But if he knew about cross-word puzzles, either under that or any other name, he did not put it into his big unbridled.

WHO gets closer to life than a doctor? What other person comes more directly into daily contact with its romance, its hopes and defeats, its sordidness and its uplifting qualities? Who else has the drama of it all so constantly before his eyes?

This strange tale, eerie and mystifying in part, but filled with passionate interest and charm is the romance of a surgeon. Its heroine is a nurse. Its strongest scenes are in a sanitarium. One of its most effective climaxes takes place at an operating table. Eddifying and thrilling; a story that engages the mind and the heart and does not permit interest to lapse for an instant. One of the most unusual and satisfactory of Victor Rousseau's many remarkable stories.

Money and Valor.
Things are in a bad way when money is used to effect what should be achieved by valor.

"HEARIN' THINGS"

Chest examinations hold no terrors for Sammy, who is learning the value of a regular annual physical examination at one of the free chest clinics conducted by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association, which is supported by the sale of Christmas seals.

Prevention is the slogan of the free chest clinic which goes into every nook and corner of Wisconsin seeking out early and unsuspected cases of tuberculosis and preaching its gospel of health. More than 17,000 Wisconsin people have active tuberculosis and less than 1,300 of them are being cared for in tuberculosis sanatoria. Many of the remaining 15,700 do not even know that they have the disease. To discover such unknown and untreated cases of tuberculosis and to see that they are properly cared for is one of the main functions of the free chest clinic. For every unknown case of tuberculosis is a menace to the entire community.

Nearly 45,000 examinations have over 7,500 people were found to be tuberculosis.

PENNIES WITH POWER

Christmas seals have played a big part in this girl's life. She is Lucille Hannon of Milwaukee, a former student at the Milwaukee Vocational School.

With money raised by the sale of Christmas seals, the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association undertook to give careful examinations to the boys and girls in the Milwaukee Vocational School.

Lucille was one of the first girls to be examined. Her first examination disclosed nothing, but on a later examination, tuberculosis was found. She was urged to go to Muldrake Sanatorium, and her parents wisely decided that, for her own sake and for the protection of the younger children in the family, the sanatorium was the place for her.

Now she's making baskets, which means she's on the way to a cure. She says she's going to stick to curating until the disease is completely arrested.

More than 5,300 young boys and girls were examined at the chest clinic conducted at the Vocational School.

A HEALTH FAN.

Here's Wisconsin's youngest booster for the periodic physical examination. She is wee Lois Knight, aged three, of Eau Claire. Lois' mother died of tuberculosis just a year ago but Lois, thanks to the good sense of an aunt who believes that the periodic physical examination offers an excellent way of preventing illness, is a healthy little youngster. At regular intervals she is brought to the free chest clinic, conducted by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association every month in Eau Claire, for a chest examination.

The free chest clinic work of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association, like all its other work, is financed by funds received from the sale of penny Christmas seals.

The Juggernaut.
"Juggernaut" is one of the principal heathen deities of India. This god was taken out in procession periodically, and many of the faithful prostrated themselves before his car, which was of great weight, and were crushed. This practice was abolished by the British government.

Rather.
It is a doubtful gratification to be invited to go motoring with a friend who is learning to drive his first car.

Two Kinds of Beauty.
There are two kinds of beauty. In the one is loveliness, in the other, dignity. We ought to regard loveliness as the quality of woman, dignity that of man.

The Best Man Ever.
A man who married a widow says he has reasons to believe the best man that ever lived was his wife's first husband.

Rather.
One who gets up early in the morning because he wants to rather than because he ought to, has about the right idea.

Dress Fastenings.
In Prague is a museum devoted solely to a collection of dress-fastening devices of all kinds and of all ages.

Smiles.
Smiling can be a habit. However, those smiles that are not the result of habit are still the most valuable.

SEEKS RETURN OF CAR
Mrs. Lena Polzean of the town of Oseola swore out a warrant of replevin against the Brittingham Lumber company of Campbellsport by which she hopes to obtain possession of an old Ford truck recently sold at sheriff's sale for about $15. The truck was a conversion from a roadster and had been used by her husband, John Polzean, for several years to haul milk. It was recently seized on an attachment by the Brittingham Lumber company which had previously secured a judgement against Polzean. The car was sold by the sheriff to L. J. Fellenz and is still in the sheriff's custody. Mrs. Polzean claims that the car belonged to her and that the judgement was against her husband, making its seizure unlawful. She values the truck at $100.

Murder Rate is High.
Every hour, somewhere in the United States, a man's life is taken. There were more than 9,200 "unlawful" homicides in this country in 1921. One of every 12,000 Americans is murdered every year, whereas the figure in Europe is one out of every 60,000.

THE past year, our 50th, here in Kewaskum, has been a successful one and we wish to thank our Friends and Patrons one and all for their liberal patronage. We hope to be of still greater service to you in the year 1925 and wish you a Prosperous New Year

How Love Found a Way, Following Sinking of Big French Liner.

By ELEANOR E. KING

THE "Superba" disaster had occurred on November 9. It was now well into December. The Allison, American passenger liner, was on the French liner at the time of the sinking of the vessel. When but two days away from the French port a fire broke out in the hold, which proved fatal to the ship. Now the Allison was en route to England. This time, they were to sail on a British liner from London.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allison were passing the time, which hung heavily on their minds during their journey to London, discussing previous events with their daughter, Felice. She, young, perhaps in her twenties, presenting quite a striking spectacle with her black curly hair, and her dark brown eyes, was saying:

"It seems to me if Wilmer were saved, he has surely had ample time to notify us."

"Did you call at the American Express office in Paris before we left?" inquired Mrs. Allison.

"Yes, and the clerk informed me Wilmer Daggett's mail had not been called for in the last month. I have tried in every way to locate him in Paris, hospitals and the like included. I give up. The fact that his mail is not called for ought to be sure enough proof he is not in Paris."

"I will never forget," she began, pondering over previous happenings.

"Wilmer, as I last saw him standing on the deck, his huge frame, calm and serene, silhouetted against the chaos round about him in the huge, brilliant mass of the burning liner, as he helped crazed and fainting women and children into the lifeboats, speeding them to safety. I couldn't bear to look any longer. When I did glance back again, the nose of the flaming ship was buried far into the ocean. It is queer he should have come into my life so abruptly, and then, only to vanish equally suddenly. It is miraculous the way we were all spared," and her voice trailed off into silence.

One more day and the British liner would land in the New York harbor. The voyage had been a very rough one, and the Allison had had but little food they ate served in their rooms. Tonight, however, found a calm after the storm. The Allison made a heroic effort which resulted in the three being present at dinner in the dining room.

It being New Year's eve, some of the passengers had planned a little entertainment for those on board. When the programs were given out that evening, Felice's cheeks first flushed pink then turned white; as she read, clutching her mother's arm, she stammered excitedly: "Mother, do you suppose—surely, there couldn't be two Wilmer Daggetts?"

Then started a frantic search of the crowd which refused to disclose the face of her Wilmer. In vain did her gaze pierce every nook and corner of the salon during the performance. She wished she could have had something to say about the printing of the programs. She would certainly have arranged it differently, so she would not have had to wait so long for this one most important of all the selections. Every one seemed to be dragging out his part terribly. What would this Wilmer Daggett look like? She could not locate the face of the one she sought any place.

Finally, a French door over at one side of the room opened to admit Wilmer Daggett, as his selection was announced from the platform. There he stood, the same old Wilmer Daggett, Felice was so happy she couldn't tell which one was singing the louder, she or Wilmer. In fact, she concluded, it was a well-balanced duet. The program hadn't started it, but that is what it turned out to be.

It had evidently been a huge success with the audience, for they insisted on an encore. Felice never realized what a wonderful voice she had been endowed with until now. What torture! She had not figured on all these encores. Why did he not pick out something shorter? To be sure, he didn't know he was keeping Felice waiting.

Ah! At last, he was leaving the platform. Hardly knowing what she did, she flew into his arms. The concert held no further attraction for Felice and Wilmer. As soon as they were away from the crowd, and Wilmer had recovered from the shock of the surprise, Felice commenced her siege of questions.

"Where have you been? We thought you had gone down with the boat. We could get no trace of you in Paris. Just think; we searched the city and surrounding towns with no avail. How does it happen?"

"You see I was hurt a little that night of the disaster," Wilmer explained; "an English freighter came along the next morning and picked up our boat load. In it was only one other passenger besides myself, and the rest were members of the ship's crew. When we arrived in England, I was put in a London hospital, where I stayed for almost three weeks,

They told me I had some broken bones; I seemed to feel all right."

"That is just like you, Wilmer," broke forth Felice, protestingly.

"I thought you must have sailed about two or three weeks ago," continued Wilmer.

"And there I spent those weeks trying to find out whether you were dead or alive."

"Anyway, Felice," Wilmer added, slipping his arm around her, "by some good fortune we were guided to the same boat, and here we are tonight."

An intermission of several minutes followed.

The next afternoon, New Year's day, found Felice and Wilmer on the deck watching for the New York harbor. As darkness began to close in on them they could discern a few lights in the distance. Then the lights outlined shapes and before long, New York with its many skyscrapers and multitude of people, loomed not far before them. They watched the wonderful skyline as it grew plainer and more complicated each minute. As they came closer, that most magnificent of poetry lifts the veil from the hidden beauty of the world, and makes familiar objects be as if they were not familiar.—Shelley.

WHAT TO EAT

WITH a pot of parsley growing in the kitchen window or in the basement, with celery nearly always to be bought at a reasonable price, with a good salad dressing in small quantity always on tap, there will be no trouble to have a few salads at little expense. Apples with celery and a few nuts make a most tasty and well-liked salad; for variety add a stewed prune or two with a sprinkling of peanuts to the apples, or a few dates or raisins. The willful and thoughtful cook will always evolve something worth while from the ordinary foods.

I wonder how many housewives throw away baked potatoes when there are but two or three left? Do you know that a dish of creamed potatoes, enough to serve four amply, can be prepared from two ordinary-sized baked potatoes. Cut them into cubes after removing the skin and add to a nicely seasoned white sauce. Allow the dish to stand over hot water until the potatoes are thoroughly hot all magnificent sights presented itself, silhouetted against the darkness and lesser lights of the buildings.

"In her cloak of ermine, a recent gift from the clouds for the Christmas festivities, with all the dignity, majesty and grandeur a woman can possess, stands this huge figure of Liberty, a symbol to all those who may come into our country, of the standards which our fellow countrymen uphold. Felice," breathed Wilmer, awe-stricken at the sight of this familiar statue.

"Think how this sight must impress the foreigner who is landing here for the first time. I never saw that statue in quite that light before. It is gorgeous, supreme. Isn't it wonderful? Felice, here we are together, arriving safely this time, to start the New Year right, in the good old U. S. A."

onto fifty years. Let's not break the trust—I fear something would happen before another New Year's eve if we did."

"Just so, Mandy; fifty years next March, ain't it? and every year just a little bit better than t'other one. It's a little lonesome, though; the children seem to forget us. Wonder why they didn't come Christmas? Well, they won't have us much longer. We will have a good time tomorrow, anyway, mother."

"Yes, Philip, that's what makes it lonesome like. We've lived for John, Sadie and Mary. I'd like to see them and the children, too."

"Well, Mandy, we'll make a resolution to not expect much of John and the girls. We had each other before we had them, anyway."

"No, pa, I'll always want and expect their love. I couldn't be happy without it. The first holidays we've spent without them, too."

"What's that noise, Mandy? I believe it's John's voice."

"Hello! Here we all are. Happy New Year to you! Having your watch party, eh? We've all come together—the children's mumps kept us away Christmas, but we all said 'No New Year without mother and dad.' How well you both look!"

"Well, now, ain't that funny! Mandy and I expected you all. I lit the fire in all your rooms and the nursery, too. By Jo! mental telepathy, I say. Get on grandpa's knees, you little rascals, while I tell you a story. Well, there goes the bell—midnight! Who'd believe it? Ma and I had about made our resolution. We'll have to change it a little, won't we mother?"

The bells rang out the Old Year—in the New. The home-coming was like unto what we've all experienced—Amanda's and Philip's joy was that of every father and mother—when the children come home.

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

"THAT IS THAT!"

THE fences that had always protected Elizabeth Bennett from untamed life, suddenly, when she reached forty, were torn away. Her father, friends, died—took his own life when he himself ruined, involved in a disgraceful failure. So, with a school girl's knowledge of the world, Elizabeth found herself without family, without money, without name. She was, she realized, quite alone—even Uncle Will seemed to have forgotten her. And, having come to this realization, she summed it all up saying to herself, "That is that!"

A month later she read in a farm journal an advertisement of five acres and a house in Vermont. And within the week she was a land owner possessed of just cash enough to worry through the winter.

The man she had engaged at the railroad station to drive her the ten miles to Hardscrabble road had looked askance at her as she mentioned her destination. His last words as he left her before her tumble-down doorway were, "Watch them—they're a tough lot, these Hardscrabble people." And as, with curiosity written large on their starting faces, they drifted past that evening, she could easily believe it. Inside, there was no furniture—just four cracked walls with broken window panes. But one thing was clear: she couldn't afford to change her mind. Again "that was that!"

Having faced the cold, bare facts, certain of them began to take on significance. She noticed that the roughest of her neighbors went regularly on Sunday to the red school house to church. When they learned that she could read, they asked her to lead their service in the absence of the visiting minister. When she suggested raising the few hundred dollars necessary for a church building, they backed her up trustfully, and lent her a horse and buggy to scour the countryside, and then cut down their trees and seasoned their lumber, and finally dedicated their chapel. Meanwhile Elizabeth had discovered that packing boxes made delightful chairs and tables. She had cut her first crop of hay with the aid of the Hardscrabble children at a few cents an hour. She fished in the trout stream that ran past her back door. She had begun to preserve her berries and fruits. In short, from what others said and from her own observation, she knew that the community had improved and that her own property had appreciated since she had come to Hardscrabble. "And that," she told herself, "is that!"

As her second spring approached, she had an offer for her farm that doubled what she had originally put into it. Then Uncle Will walked in one May day—Uncle Will who for two years had been searching to find where she had hidden herself. She told him her story and then asked up as had become her custom: "So, that is that. And in those characteristic words he had the explanation of her miracle—her habit of facing facts.

BRINGIN' YOU

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

TAINT the flow'r I miss so much, 'Tain't the singin' birds an' such, 'Tain't the skies all red an' gold Plumb as full as they kin hold, 'Tain't the mornin', 'tain't the doo— What I miss the most is You.

'Tain't the winter, now it's here, Makes the poorest time of year, 'Tain't the drift across the trail, Nor the north wind, nor the hail; Here's what makes it look so gray— It's because You went away.

So I'm longin' more an' more, Like I never longed before, For the springtime to return, Violet an' grass an' fern; For you said—remember when?— You'd be back in spring again.

That's the reason that I look Ev'ry mornin' by the brook For some young stemone— Watch the grasses, watch the tree, Watch the skies an' ev'rything For the faintest sign o' spring.

For this spring, of the best, This will be about the best, Bluer blue an' greener green, Just the best I ever seen— Though it's bringin'—dawn an' doo, Most of all it's bringin' You!

SCHOOL DAYS

and you will find a flavor in this dish of creamed potatoes surpassing the ordinary kind.

A cooked beet or two cut into very small cubes, even if it is iced beet, added to a little chopped onion and salad dressing and served on lettuce, makes a very good salad. A few pecan meats will make it delectable.

If you have a small amount of chopped pickles, corn chowder or chili sauce or a few cucumber oil pickles, they all add to a salad. Only a tablespoonful of chopped vegetable changes the flavor of ordinary combinations into something unusual.

Freshly boiled beets chopped fine and a salad dressing of mayonnaise which has been colored pink from the beet juice added with pecan meats is a salad to remember. Serve on heart leaves of lettuce.

Cooked peas, canned string beans, cabbage, as well as cold meats and fish, may be used in salads.

Sweet pickled watermelon rind or ripe cucumber cut into dice, cheese and peas is a combination unusual but very good. All one needs is a little imagination, a few staple salad foods for a basis and the making of a salad is easy.

WHAT TO EAT

WITH a pot of parsley growing in the kitchen window or in the basement, with celery nearly always to be bought at a reasonable price, with a good salad dressing in small quantity always on tap, there will be no trouble to have a few salads at little expense. Apples with celery and a few nuts make a most tasty and well-liked salad; for variety add a stewed prune or two with a sprinkling of peanuts to the apples, or a few dates or raisins. The willful and thoughtful cook will always evolve something worth while from the ordinary foods.

I wonder how many housewives throw away baked potatoes when there are but two or three left? Do you know that a dish of creamed potatoes, enough to serve four amply, can be prepared from two ordinary-sized baked potatoes. Cut them into cubes after removing the skin and add to a nicely seasoned white sauce. Allow the dish to stand over hot water until the potatoes are thoroughly hot

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

SEEKING HIGHER HOPES

THERE are periods in every mortal's existence when he or she is inspired to seek a nobler life, a better manhood or womanhood.

Just what it is that prompts us to reach up into the unknown, to soar to higher hopes, is difficult to determine.

It may be the smile of a loved one, the wit and wisdom of a scholar, the hard sense of the philosopher, the merry laughter of a little child, who is leading us without our suspecting it, or the sudden outburst of a storm, when thunders crash and the earth trembles.

A new sensation sweeps over us which we are at a loss to explain. We feel it in every fiber of our body and brain.

We are warmed by an incessant spray of fine fancies, an intellectual and moral exaltation, such as we have never experienced.

Our exultation over our enemies, our proclamation from the housetops that our transgressions are not as other men's sins, become in a little while our undoing for perhaps the seventh time.

In the privacy of our chamber we may admit seven is a low score, but we are glad to let it go at that.

We have fallen again through our own incomparable folly.

In our boastful flight we have lost none of the pinions of our once powerful wings.

We must fly now closer to the ground, and even kneel in humility if we would continue to seek higher hopes.

In this mood it is often a question with us whether we shall persist in our flight or openly admit our frailty and failure.

What name shall we put upon our actions and doubts?

What penalties shall we impose upon ourselves, knowing we are guilty, and that in spite of every effort we make at reparations we get deeper and deeper in the mire and farther away from those lofty hopes toward which we have been groping for years?

The fine thing to do is to hold to courage.

When doubt beats against this dust habitation of ours and threatens its destruction, summon Faith and march on under her divine protection, sure of the outcome.

RADIO

(Edited by G. Douglas Wardrop, Editor of Radio Merchandising.)

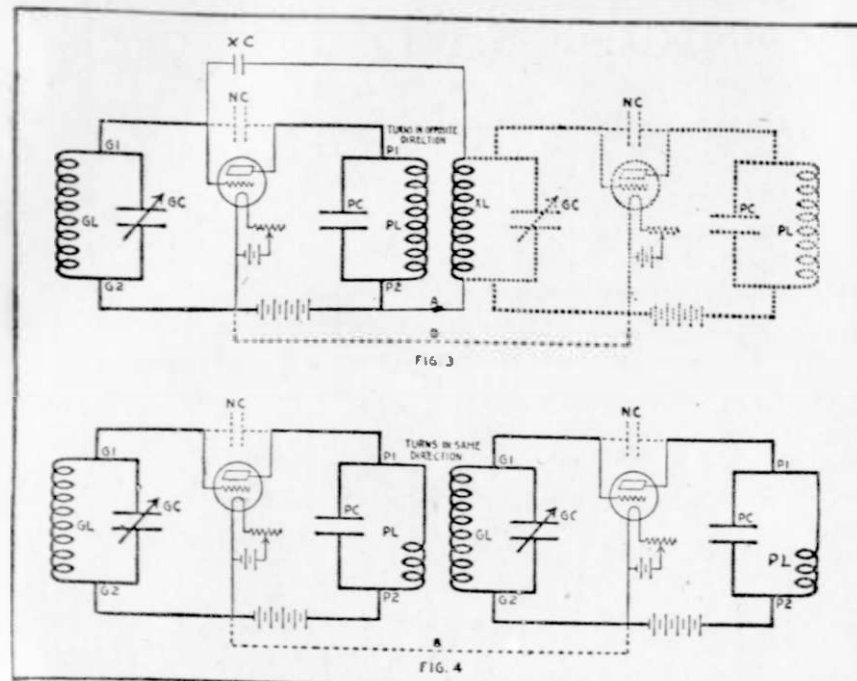

Fig. 3 Shows Circuit of the Commercial Neutrodyne. Fig. 4 Shows the Resonated Plate Circuit, Which is Slightly Different From the Neutrodyne.

There are three common types of tuned radio frequency receivers in use today; the type that uses a resistance in the grid circuit to control oscillation, the neutrodyne method in which the capacity within the tube is balanced out by the use of condensers of small capacity, and the deresonant method.

The use of neutralizing condensers reduces the volume and quality of the signal somewhat and is usually difficult to adjust properly. The use of a resistance in the grid circuit, such as a potentiometer or "losser" as it is sometimes called, also introduces losses that cut down selectivity and distance. If a receiver can be constructed without the use of either of the above methods and still be stable and easy to operate, the improved quality and power of reception is considerable.

The deresonant type of receiver uses neither condensers nor resistances to control self-oscillation. The plate circuit is detuned, or deresonated, so as to prevent the generation of excessive energy.

With present types of apparatus it is only possible to use a certain amount of energy for clear, undisturbed amplification. Any energy in excess of this amount does not increase the signal strength but does ruin the quality, causing whistling and distortion.

Simple Way of Solving Problem. Instead of allowing this excess energy to be generated in the plate circuit and then neutralizing or suppressing it in the grid circuit, the deresonant principle simply prevents it from ever being generated. This is the simplest and most fundamental way of solving the problems by stopping oscillation at its source in the plate circuit. The result is that the receiver has a beautiful quality and freedom from undesirable noise and at the same time the greatest possible amplification.

To a great many the deresonant appears to be very similar to the neutrodyne, but the following will show that it operates on fundamentally different principles. In Fig. 3 the fundamental circuit of the commercial neutrodyne is shown in heavy lines, while the dotted lines represent the next stage. Neutralization is accomplished by means of the coil XL and the condenser NC. In the commercial sets the coil XL constitutes the secondary of the transformer whose primary is the coil PL, and XL is the grid coil of the succeeding tube which is shown in dotted lines. In commercial neutrodyne the connection "A" is absent, this connection being made through the filament lead "B" which connects all stages together.

It will be seen that the neutrodyne circuit would not exist in the commercial receivers unless the stages were connected together by the use of a common A battery to operate all of the tubes.

When the voltage difference between the two ends of the plate coil P1 and P2 becomes great enough to force a transfer of energy back to the grid circuit through the capacity of the tube NC equal to the losses in the grid circuit, oscillation will commence, unless stopped by some special means.

The neutrodyne employs neutralizing condensers for this purpose. The deresonant set employs the deresonated plate circuit shown in Fig. 4. This differs from the neutrodyne in that it limits the voltage difference that can be built up in the plate coil between P1 and P2, thereby removing the basic cause of self-oscillation by preventing during electromagnetic and electrostatic couplings to a minimum.

How Result is Accomplished. This result is accomplished by properly proportioning the coil in the plate circuit with respect to the grid circuit and the incoming signal to which the grid circuit is to be tuned. It is this feature of detuning or deresonating the plate circuit that suggested the name "deresonant." Deresonating is effected by reducing the number of turns in the primary of the coupling transformers in the plate circuit to the smallest number consistent with high amplification and at the same time reducing electromagnetic and electrostatic couplings to a minimum.

The connecting wire B in Fig. 4, which is the common filament lead in the commercial deresonant set, can be removed and separate A and B batteries used for each stage without affecting the operation. If the connecting filament wires were removed in the commercial neutrodyne receiver, its circuit would no longer be free from oscillation because the neutrodyne circuit would no longer be present. In addition to this, the transformers of the deresonant can be connected so that their primaries and secondaries have the opposite polarity with respect to one another if essential to the operation of the neutrodyne as shown in the drawings. In the neutrodyne shown in Fig. 3 the transformer turns may run in the same direction if the primary turns are reversed.

place of the loud speaker unit, in which case a clamp should be made to hold the cone as shown in the cut. A loud speaker unit is recommended, however, and since this is the only costly part a good one should be purchased. This unit should be purchased first and the holes in the disks and lower pot drilled to fit the diameter of tube of this unit.

The screws should be of sufficient length to hold the wood, felt and rubber disks firmly to the lower pot. The rubber may be cut from an old automobile inner tube. To prevent any possibility of rattling thick felt should be glued onto the spots where the speaker touches the table.

All the parts are to be made so that they will fit into each other snugly, leaving no air spaces. Good glue should then be used to make them as one piece.

For beauty the outside of the speaker may then be painted, but the inside should not be touched. See that the inside is clean and sandpaper it to give a smooth surface.

If properly constructed this loud speaker will be very clear and distinct, with natural, mellow tones on both speech and music.

Radio-Receiving Set Is Further Improved Upon

The bureau of standards has devised a method of calculating the amplification produced by the "tickler" method of regeneration. This discovery, in the opinion of experts, marks another milestone along the road to a perfect radio-receiving set.

The importance of the discovery can be estimated only when the necessity of amplification is understood. Amplification is needed to strengthen weak signals, and also to operate a loud speaker. Obviously, if amplification can be calculated in advance, it will result in clearer signals, as too much amplification is just as bad as not enough, since distortion results.

Hitherto, while it was well understood how to amplify radio signals by regeneration in electron tube circuits, there were very few data on the amplification produced by this method of regeneration.

discovery. "One method of regeneration is the feeding back of alternating current power by means of inductively coupled coils in the two circuits, from the plate circuit to the tuned circuit connected to the grid of the electron tube. This method has been used extensively in modern radio-receiving sets and is known as the "tickler" method of regeneration. However, very few quantitative data have been available on the amplification produced by this method.

"By means of a simple alternating current theory an equation has been derived from which the amplification produced by inductive feedback can be calculated. This equation shows that regeneration can be considered as producing a reduction in the resistance of the tuned circuit and so increasing the current. The equation derived was completely verified by experiment."

An unusual feature about the discovery is that a woman participated actively in the experiments. Dr. C. D. Jeffers and Miss J. A. Rodman of the bureau of standards are given credit for the discovery.

NEW BLOUSES ARE STUNNING; SPRING STYLES ARE SIGHTED

THE overblouse is a special designation of good fortune for designer and chic to the practical wardrobe. In a between-seasons period, like the present, it is a resource for spicing up one's belongings with something new.

The last word in blouses may be gathered just now, from the collections prepared for wear at Southern resorts, including sports, tailored and dressy types. In the last class belong many pretty models made of printed fabrics in silk or lightweight wool, finished in new ideas in their adornment and styling. For many of them, camel-hair twill, in plain colors, is used while dressier models are coming in plain and printed crepes.

The straightline is varied often—the tunic leading other methods, followed by plaits introduced at the sides or at the front. An attractive frock with plaited panels at the sides is illustrated here. It has a narrow girdle of the goods and bishop sleeves, with an ornamental band of colored embroidery inserted. The plain narrow wrist bands are prettily finished with ties of ribbon and the odd neck opening is finished in the same way. Since the slender silhouette is scheduled to remain in our midst for some time, new ways of "personalizing" day frocks have been introduced on spring models. These appear in small, quaint embroideries in single motifs as a Japanese fisherman, or a little building, stitched above a small pocket—the watchdog of the treasury—or two or three butterflies near the shoulder. It looks as if our spring frocks might become backgrounds for picture-book illustrations and we may tell the world of our favorite scenery by means of stitching. The little old red school with borders of plain, black satin, or in the color predominating in the blouse. Fuller silk, with colored stripes, is also popular for dressy overblouses, and by managing the stripes ingeniously designers need no other material for decoration. Plain silks with delicate all-over patterns in embroidery are among the prettiest of the new arrivals in materials for blouses. In sports and dressy blouses, favor seems to be about equally divided between the long and short sleeve, but in tailored blouses long-sleeved models are in the majority. There is great diversity of necklines in all blouses and many chic new arrivals, in the tailored class, have high collars. The house down the lane, or an ocean liner, or a blue goose, or anything else from anywhere, may be sketched on frocks otherwise quite plain.

Another tip has been brought home by the adventurers who first discover spring styles. The ensemble costume is here to stay a while—for spring coats, to be worn with frocks bearing an unmistakable family resemblance to them, bear the new arrivals company.

Again in Fashion. The lace-trimmed handkerchief is here once more, and correct for wear even with the most severely tailored costume. The trimming is narrow and often ruffled.

Making Over. Straight line coat dresses are among the favorites. A long, tight-fitting cut will make one of these dresses with very little alteration. Some coats are so much like dresses all that is needed is to have some sort of a fastening device. If its original way of fastening was in the center, buttons placed down the front, a leather belt around the waist and a tie to match the belt will make a very practical dress in the height of fashion.

Softens Severe Lines. When the square-crowned high little felt hat—usually untrimmed—proves too severe in line a silk veil in blue, henna or black may be draped over the high crown.

You were made for enjoyment, and the world is filled with things you will enjoy unless you are too proud to be pleased by them.—John Ruskin.

DAINTIES FOR THE DAINTY

Something nice for a luncheon, to serve as the main dish, is the following:

Chicken Mousse. Scald one-half cupful of milk and add to two well-beaten egg yolks, stirring constantly; add one and one-quarter teaspoonfuls of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of white pepper, the same of chopped onion and celery salt, and cook five minutes. In the top of the double boiler, meanwhile soften one tablespoonful of gelatin in one-half cupful of chicken stock and add to the hot custard, together with two cupfuls of cooked diced chicken. Whip one cupful of thick cream and add carefully to the mixture. Pour into cold, wet individual timbale molds and chill until set. Serve on lettuce, garnished with pimiento strips and mayonnaise or boiled dressing.

Salmon Piquante.—Take one can of salmon. Cut one onion into slices and cook in two tablespoonfuls of butter. Mix together seven tablespoonfuls of flour, one-quarter of a teaspoonful of chili powder; add to the onion, mixing well. When brown add two cupfuls of cold water, one teaspoonful of salt and three tablespoonfuls of ketchup. Cook until hot; add the salmon and reheat. Serve on buttered toast with six green salad.

Chicken Neptune.—Wash and cook two dozen fresh shrimp; cook in boiling water for twenty minutes. Shell and remove the viscera. Wash two dozen large oysters and cook them in their own juice until the edges curl. Cook six fresh mushrooms and one-half of a green pepper, chopped fine. In two tablespoonfuls of butter for three minutes. Prepare a white sauce with two tablespoonfuls of butter and the same of flour with a pint of cream, seasoning to taste; cook until well blended, then add the shrimp, oysters, two cupfuls of cooked white meat of chicken, diced, one small can of crab meat, the mushrooms and green pepper and one-half of a pint of cream, chopped fine. Heat thoroughly and serve on small pieces of buttered toast.

Raisin Sandwiches.—These are good for the children. Put through the meat chopper, mixing in the grinding and using a fine knife, one cupful each of raisins and pecans. Moisten with one and one-half tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and use as filling on whole wheat bread.

The man who shuns the light forfeits his own final peace of heart. He who refuses to face his worst faults forfeits the possibility of making his best.—Percy C. Anshwirth.

SOME GOOD STEWS

A tasty stew may be made from remnants of roasts. Take one and one-half pounds of cold roast cut into small pieces. Heat it in a gravy made by dissolving two bouillon cubes in a pint of boiling water and thickening with four tablespoonfuls of flour. If there are bones from the meat they may be boiled in water for the broth.

Cook the meat in the gravy until heated and tender, then add four small sliced onions, one sweet pepper, sliced, one cupful of steamed tomato and two cupfuls of cooked macaroni. Season to taste with salt, pepper and celery salt.

Fish Chowder.—Place half a pound of fat salt pork and fry to a light brown, remove the pork, add three onions, sliced, to the fat. Cut three pounds of fresh haddock or any firm-fleshed fish, into small pieces, rub with a tablespoonful of salt and dust with pepper. Lay the fish in a sauce pan, add six sliced potatoes, then the onion and pork. Cover with boiling water and cook until the vegetables and fish are tender. Add three cupfuls of rich milk, six milk crackers, bring to a boil and serve.

Haricot of Mutton.—Chop one medium-sized onion and one large pepper fine. Cook in two tablespoonfuls of bacon fat until tender. Then remove the onion and pepper. To the fat add one and one-half pounds of lean mutton, cut into pieces one and one-half inches square, and brown, then add the fried onions and pepper. Season with two and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt and one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper. Add two cupfuls of water, cover closely and stew until tender—about one hour. Add one can of peas before serving.

Ham in Bean Pot.—Freshen if necessary one thick slice of ham and cut into serving-sized pieces. Place in a bean pot together with six scraped carrots, thuly sliced. Add one cupful of condensed tomato soup and one cupful of water. Cover tightly and bake three hours, or until it is perfectly tender. Potatoes may be used in place of the carrots if preferred.

Food and the Stomach. The measure of food ought to be (as much as possible) made exactly proportionate to the quality and condition of the stomach, because the stomach digests it.—Benjamin Franklin.

Boschee's Syrup

Alleviates irritation, soothes and heals throat and lung inflammation. The constant irritation of a cough keeps the delicate mucus membrane of the throat and lungs in a congested condition, which BOSCHEE'S SYRUP gently and quickly heals. For this reason it has been a favorite household remedy for colds, coughs, bronchitis and especially for lung troubles in millions of homes all over the world for the last fifty-eight years, enabling the patient to obtain a good night's rest, free from coughing with easy expectation in the morning. You can buy BOSCHEE'S SYRUP wherever medicines are sold.—Advt.

Reality Necessary

An American bull-fight film gave all the preliminaries of the event, but when it came to the real contest in the arena it was necessary to leave much to the imagination. But when this same film was sent to Mexico, it was a failure and the Mexicans who paid their money did not hesitate to express themselves after the show, which they regarded as a swindle. A section of a film depicting a real bull-fight was inserted and after that the picture was a hot favorite. The whole country went to see it.

Despisers of Mankind

The despisers of mankind—apart from the mere fools and mimics of that creed—are of two sorts. They who believe their merit neglected and unappreciated make up one class; they who receive adulation and flattery, knowing their own worthlessness, compose the other. Be sure that the coldest-hearted misanthropes are ever of this last order.—Charles Dickens.

In every life, a few days off should be taken just to be fizzy.

Crudely was the vice of the ancient, vanity is that of the modern world.

Monkey's Costly Prank

Spectators gathered about the window of a bird and animal store in New York on a recent Sunday afternoon on observing that a monkey had escaped from a cage and had begun opening bird cages and decouring canaries. The monkey had dined on $125 worth of canaries before he could be captured by a small boy lowered through a transom by a policeman.

Pushing baby carriages on the sidewalk is an offense against the law in London, although prosecutions seldom occur.

"Listening In."

"No unknown and no untreated cases of tuberculosis in Wisconsin" is the slogan of the Free Chest Clinic of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association, which seeks into every part of Wisconsin, seeking out early and unrecognized cases through its free examinations. These Clinics are supported by the sale of Christmas Seals.
More than 32,000 examinations have been made at over 640 clinics, and more than 5,000 cases of tuberculosis have been found. Thousands of bodily disorders other than tuberculosis have been brought to light at these clinics.
It is estimated that there are over 10,000 active cases of tuberculosis in Wisconsin, many of which are not even suspected by the victims themselves, and to find as many of these cases as possible in the early and most curable stages and to urge prompt treatment is one aim of the clinic.

Fights for Health.

Found just in the nick of time, this 12-year-old Indian maid can thank the Christmas Seal and the Free Chest Clinic held on the Odanah Indian reservation by the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association that she is today making a winning fight against tuberculosis. Two days after Marion was found to have tuberculosis at the Clinic she was in the government sanatorium in Iowa, starting her cure.

Conducts Essay Contest.

Dr. M. S. Hosmer of Ashland, one of Wisconsin's pioneer Christmas Seal campaign managers, having directed every sale in Ashland since 1910, is a firm believer in the educational value of the Christmas Seal. Each year as a part of the Christmas Seal campaign and as a special incentive to the school children to learn more about tuberculosis, Dr. Hosmer offers prizes for the best essays on tuberculosis written by school pupils.

Seals Save Lives.

Over 1,600 lives saved in 1924! This is what the tuberculosis death rate statistics for Wisconsin show and this is one reason the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association is carrying on with renewed zeal its Christmas Seal campaign to raise funds for the campaign against the White Plague.
For what has been accomplished in the past is evidence of what can be done in the future, leaders state and the extent of the work possible is limited only by lack of funds.
