SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

LACK OF COURTESY

THE BRIDE OF THE SEA

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

FROM the embracing land you leap To meet the sea— The land has given you to the deep, Its bride to be— Glistening spray your bridal veil, Your gem the sun— Now in the calm of life, the gate, You two are one.

Far shall your husband bear you, far From harbor home, By southern cross, or eastward star, Or icy foam, But you will go with him content, Content to be All that the hands that shaped you meant— Bride of the sea!

Even as ships to seas, is given Woman to man— Go with him seeking heaven As best you can: Glistening down your bridal veil, Or hid the sun— Now in the calm of life, the gate, You two are one.

leaded, only to be sent later to the Tower for the publication of a book— "No Cross, No Crown."

This work was destined to show the necessity for suffering in the world and to show the benefit that came from it spiritually.

In 1681 Penn received a grant of land in North America in lieu of some arrears that were due his father from the king, and September 5, 1682, with a party of emigrants, Penn sailed from Deal.

Penn and his party landed in what is now Delaware and later at what is now Chester, Pa. They began a colony where religious freedom prevailed and which is now the Keystone state— Wayne D. McMurry.

Mashed Potatoes, Peanut Butter. Boil, mash and beat until light six medium-sized potatoes; add salt, one tablespoonful of butter and one-half cupful of hot milk.

Smooth paste. Add two cupfuls of brown stock, stirring constantly. Cut the meat from a dozen ripe olives, cover with boiling water and cook seven minutes.

Put into a saucepan two tablespoonfuls of butter, one of olive oil, a few dashes of salt, one onion, a clove of garlic, half a green pepper or red pepper all finely chopped.

Take one banana for each person, cut in half lengthwise, after removing all the threads; melt a little butter roll the bananas in it, lay in a baking dish and bake until soft.

Wash a bunch of mint, shake off the water, strip the leaves from the stems, chop the leaves fine. Pour over one-fourth of a cupful of boiling water, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, cover closely and let stand half an hour; then add four tablespoonfuls of vinegar or the juice of a large lemon.

Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, add one sliced onion and cook until slightly brown. Remove the onion, stir the butter, add five and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper. Stir to a

FILMY FROCKS FOR SCHOOL; PRINTED FABRICS POPULAR

MANY pretty processions of frocks for girls from six to fifteen or sixteen are daily passing in review before inquiring mothers. While they are looking for graduation dresses or frocks for the little festivities of closing school days they will get full information as to present styles for the dress-up frocks of juveniles and are sure to note that colors, in beautiful shades, have usurped the place of white to a great extent.

These printed materials, made up in the simplest manner, dominate the styles for midsummer in dresses that colors and are chosen for both the younger girls and those in their teens. For the younger girls the majority of these filmy frocks are sleeveless or have very short sleeves, as shown in the model pictured.

Very little trimming is required on them and they are shown in both short and long-sleeved models, nearly all of them provided with a narrow grille that ties loosely at one side below the waistline.

They are informal in style—even in the silk fabrics—and they are very becoming to their wearers. A pretty example of the printed silk frock is pictured here with front and back panels edged with narrow lace and an application of flat folds of crepe de chine in a plain color at each side.

When the modern woman saunters forth these days she takes no chances that there is a loose button on her costume. For she cannot afford to lose one since it has become the mode to wear buttons decorated with real jewels.

The KITCHEN CABINET

The roses of our days become The fragrance of the past; Our hearts are like the songs so sweet, Their music cannot last.

But every petal drifting down The garden of the years Shall be, dear heart, a memory Untouched by doubt or fears.

SALADS, SUMMER DISHES

The refreshing tomato is a most acceptable basis for many salads. Its color is not of the least of its attractions; being rich in vitamins, the tomato should be used freely.

Peel and slice rather thick slices from very ripe but firm tomatoes. Arrange on head lettuce and cover each slice with chopped pineapple and celery, which has been unmarinated with a good French dressing.

Sliced Tomato and Cucumber.—For a simple salad, the following is most attractive: Arrange on an oblong platter overlapping slices of ripe, red tomato, then a row of sliced cucumber overlapping. Serve with a bowl of mayonnaise, passed with the salad.

The divided dishes which hold several food accessories may be used for salads. Serve either lettuce, cucumber or tomato plain; pass the divided dish which contains half a cupful or less of three or four salad materials.

A rich dessert which is well-liked and may be prepared the day before is the following: Take one-half pound of fresh sweet butter, soften it to a cream with a wooden spoon.

Good Things. A hurry-up dessert which is tasty, good to look at, and enjoyed, is: Marshmallow Dessert.—Toast a few marshmallows that have been cut into quarters.

Jellied Prunes.—Wash and soak one-half pound of prunes in two cupfuls of cold water, then cook in the same water until soft.

Figs With Lemon Sauce.—Soak figs several hours in cold water, then put them into an agate pan and water enough to just cover them and cook until plump; add one-fourth of a cupful of lemon juice to the water, when nearly tender.

Sponge Cake.—Beat the yolk of an egg until thick, add two and two-thirds tablespoonfuls of sugar gradually, beating well.

Imitation Pates de Foie Gras.—Boil in separate kettles a calf's tongue and a calf's liver and let stand for a day in the refrigerator.

WHO SAID Be rather bountiful than expensive.

THESE words are characteristic of the religion of the man who uttered them. William Penn, for whom Pennsylvania—Penn's Woods—is named, was a Quaker.

Like many of these sterling pioneers of that sect who came to the New world, Penn was bountiful and generous to the extreme. No one in want ever suffered when Penn could alleviate their suffering, but at the same time William Penn was a man of thrift—a man who was not "expensive" in his habits.

William Penn was born in London, October 13, 1644. He became a Quaker—the name of this sect originated in derision of their statement that man should "fear and quake before the Lord"—and was sent to prison for his preaching. Through the intercession of his father the young man was re-

PE-RU-NA
"Fine for COLDS, GRIP and FLU"
The opinion of Mr. J. O. Sexton, R. F. D. No. 2, Grassy Creek, North Carolina. He says: "I have used Pe-ru-na for the last two years and received great benefit. It is fine for colds, grip and flu. I can recommend Pe-ru-na most highly."
Just a few doses of Pe-ru-na soon after exposure or first manifestation of trouble will usually break a cold or dissipate a persistent cough. Two generations have known Pe-ru-na in its astonishing manifestation to catarrhal diseases.

"Good Equipment Makes a Good Farmer Better"

Are You Ready for The Corn Harvest?

Deering Corn Binders are solving the corn harvesting problems of many farmers who know that there is much in a name; who know that for more years than most of us can remember, the name "Deering" has stood for honest value and real service. Come in and see us in regard to a corn binder that picks up the down corn and cuts and binds both short and tall corn with equal certainty; a binder that ties good bundles with even butts, and that deposits bundles on the ground without breaking ears from stalks. Such a binder bears the name Deering, the make we sell and recommend. A leading attachment for use in cutting silage corn can be furnished; ask about it.

Money That Works

A Man visited our bank a few days ago who had just sold some property.

He was not ready to invest the money again for a few months but he did not want the money to loaf and earn nothing for him during that time.

So he wanted to know what he could do with the money to make it earn some profit and be quickly available in case he needed it.

Of course we suggested a Certificate of Deposit. You can have a "C. of D." for any amount and continue it as long as you wish. It pays a nice profit, too.

There is no better plan for your money that is not otherwise employed. Let us tell you more about this plan.

MEXICO DEFIANT IN REPLY TO U. S.

Calles Calls Kellogg Note "Threat to Sovereignty of His Nation."

Washington.—Mexico is determined to comply with its obligations under international law, but declines to "accept any foreign interference contrary to the right of sovereignty."

The Calles declaration was a direct answer to the statement issued on Friday by Secretary of State Kellogg, who emphasized the assertion that protection must be given American rights in Mexico.

The Mexican executive's reply was made while President Coolidge was cruising aboard his yacht, the Mayflower, accompanied by Mr. Kellogg, General Pershing and Major General Le Jeune, commandant of the marine corps.

President Calles declared bluntly that it is the duty of his government to rectify Mr. Kellogg's statement as required by truth and justice.

The Mexican leader expressed regret at "the contradiction found in Mr. Kellogg's statements when he declared that the United States has the greatest interest in the maintenance of order in Mexico and in the stability of her government and at the same time stating he had seen news of revolutionary movements."

President Calles characterized as "a threat to the sovereignty of Mexico" Mr. Kellogg's remarks that the United States will continue to support the Mexican government only so long as it protects American interests and lives and complies with its international obligations.

This threat, the President said, Mexico "cannot overlook and rejects with all energy because she does not accept any foreign country the right to intervene in any form in her domestic affairs, nor is she disposed to subordinate her international relations to the exigencies of another country."

"Any imposition that the government of Mexico is on trial as a defendant before the world is rejected 'with energy' as in essence only 'an insult,'" President Calles said.

Washington.—Official warning that Mexico must protect the lives and property of Americans and meet her international obligations or forfeit the support of the United States was given by Secretary of State Kellogg.

The secretary's action, taken shortly after the meeting of the cabinet, followed a two-day conference with Ambassador Sheffield, who is in Washington on a short vacation from his duties in Mexico City.

It is understood that Secretary Kellogg was not satisfied with conditions in Mexico as reported by Ambassador Sheffield.

President refuses to Reduce Tariff on Sugar

Washington.—Because the present price of raw sugar is below the pre-war level, because a reduction in duty would mean putting the price below the cost of production on from 20 to 40 per cent of American farms now growing beets; because it is considered good policy to keep farmers raising beets, so otherwise they would go back to wheat, thereby in overproduction; and finally because the treasury needs the $125,000,000 of revenue, President Coolidge refused to reduce the sugar duty.

In opposing the majority view of the tariff commission, President Coolidge decides a controversy which has been before him for consideration since August of last year.

Moors Wipe Out French Garrison; Retake Bibane

The Moors returned to the fray each time with increasing fury, and finally took the post with the loss of all its gallant defenders.

The post was burned after its capture, according to the advices received here.

EX-GOV. PHILIPP DIES SUDDENLY

Executive of Wisconsin for Six Years Expires at Age of 63.

Madison.—Emanuel L. Philipp, 64, three times governor of Wisconsin and an outstanding figure in the business and political life of the city and the state, died suddenly on June 15 at Milwaukee hospital. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

The former executive went to the hospital the previous day upon the advice of his physician, but his condition was not considered serious at that time.

The death of the former governor came as a profound shock to the city and the state, to the business men with whom he was so closely associated.

During his life in Milwaukee, he played an important role in every activity in the city and in Wisconsin and at the time of his death was president of the Milwaukee Association of Commerce.

Though regarded as one of the wealthy men of the state, he belonged to the class of self-made men—a man who worked for his education and then successfully applied himself when, at an early age, he obtained his first position after leaving his log cabin home in Sauk county.

Gov. Philipp's parents came to the United States in 1849 from Switzerland and settled in Sauk county, where the former chief executive of the state was born in 1861. After graduating from high school at the age of 16, he taught school for four years and then became a telegraph operator.

He was a telegraph operator at Wauwago, then operator and local agent at various places on the Madison division until 1882, when he became a train dispatcher, serving four years, with a short interval as the Northwestern road agent at Norwalk.

In 1887 he came to Milwaukee and was employed by the railroad as a freight solicitor. In 1889 he became general agent for the American Refrigerator Transit company and the Union Pacific railroad.

Former Gov. Philipp was elected chief executive of the state in 1914, after one of the most unusual and surprising campaigns in the history of Wisconsin, and twice re-elected, served throughout the period of the war.

During the trying and difficult days of the war, Gov. Philipp endeavored himself to the men who served in the National guard and those who went into service and were quartered in state encampments. He called a special session of the legislature and demanded from them the best that could be given the state's soldiers—the best food, the most sanitary camps, the best equipment and sufficient clothing and bedding to keep them comfortable.

At the same time, he led the work of organizing the state for war days and war time restrictions and when Wisconsin's troops were brought into action, the federal government commended the state for sending the best equipped forces into the American forces.

Mr. Philipp was married in 1887 to Bertha Schwenske of Reedsburg, Wis. He is survived by the widow, one son, Cyrus L., and a daughter, Josephine. Another daughter, Mrs. Florence Philipp Dieterle, died a few months ago.

Former Gov. Philipp, a thirty-second degree Mason, was well known in fraternal and club circles and held membership in a number of organizations.

Sailors Visit Volcano

Honolulu.—A detachment of 18 destroyers, headed by the flagship Omaha, left here for Hilo to permit approximately 2,500 men to visit Kilauea volcano.

Non-Smokers Get Pay Increase

Sherburne, N. Y.—F. Paddelford, contractor, announced that he would pay non-smokers 5 cents an hour more than others. He said smokers were worth less because of the time consumed in lighting pipes and cigarettes.

Drys Urge Drive Against Tobacco

Harrisburg, Pa.—Prohibition of the manufacture and sale of tobacco was advocated in resolutions adopted at a meeting of the state committee of the prohibition party.

LOOKING IN ON THE LEGISLATURE

Madison.—A quill on all counts of the lobbying charges standing against Atty. Gen. Herman L. Ekern was indicated following conclusion of hearings in the sensational insurance quiz which has agitated the closing weeks of the legislature's session.

A poll of members of the senate probe committee showed almost unanimous approval of the attorney general's insurance record.

Defense testimony throughout the course of the investigation has tended to show that Mr. Ekern's connection with the Chicago law firm of which he is the head has been remote and inactive during his tenure of office as attorney general.

The charges laid before the committee by Insurance Commissioner W. Stanley Smith sought to develop the point that Mr. Ekern, as a representative of private interests, was biased in his attitude toward the new insurance code bill.

"I am sure I have proved my case," Mr. Smith said Monday. "Ekern has admitted practically every charge made made before the committee. It is for the people of Wisconsin to decide for themselves."

Severson Probe Waning

Investigation into charges of impropriety and corruption in the conduct of state departments and institutions is near a close, according to Senator William Quick, chairman of the senate probe committee.

Unless Senator Severson, Iowa, has additional data to present before the upper house committee, the probe tribunal will make an effort to wind up its affairs within a few days, Mr. Quick indicated.

The Moran "kidnaping" episode is now a closed incident following the conflicting testimony of agents of the office appearance plot seeking to link Senators Olaf Johnston and A. E. Garey, secretary of the civil service commission, with the party.

Battle Over Conservation Fund

Two of the bitterest fights of the 1925 legislative session are expected to break when the administration appropriation bills for the conservation commission and department of agriculture are considered.

The conservation bill is on the senate calendar on the question of advancing it to engrossment and final passage.

Senator Santhoff, Madison, champion of the conservationists cause, has introduced an amendment to the bill striking out that portion of it which declares that on July 1, 1925, and for 11 years thereafter, there shall be transferred from the conservation fund to the general fund annually $75,000 in partial discharge of interest and principal that has from time to time been expended by the state out of funds other than the conservation fund for the purchase of land, construction of buildings and purchase of permanent property and equipment in connection with fish hatcheries, ranger stations, state parks, game reservations, and forest reserves."

T. B. Test Money Cause of Row

The battle on the appropriation for the department of agriculture centers on the portion relating to allotments for eradicating bovine tuberculosis. The bill appropriates approximately $750,000 annually for this purpose.

Another bill, sponsored by Senator H. J. Severson of Iowa, would spend $1,075,000 annually for this purpose. Efforts of senators to refer both bills to the senate committee on agriculture, labor and industries for compromise have failed. Senator Garey, administration leader, intimated there might be a special session of the legislature if the administration bill was not passed.

Blaine Swings Veto Ax

Gov. Blaine has vetoed the assembly bill providing for an interim visiting committee for the state charitable and penal institutions, which would make the investigations between legislative sessions.

The governor also vetoed the senate bill increasing state aid for county sanatoriums and the assembly bills permitting every county, town or village board to appoint one or more truant officers.

Auto Insurance Bill Killed

By a vote of 17 to 9, the senate killed the Padway compulsory automobile liability insurance bill.

Under the provisions of this bill, the owner of a machine, upon applying to the secretary of state for a license, would be required to obtain a liability insurance policy from the state covering the machine. An injured person would apply to the state for damages which would be paid out of a state fund.

Juneau.—Mr. and Mrs. William Lange of Hustisford, who are among the oldest residents of Dodge county, have celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary.

Tomahawk Lake—Fair weather, an ideal location in the heart of northern Wisconsin and an attendance of over 1,000 from all parts of the state combined to make for a successful dedication of the Camp American Legion at Tomahawk Lake. The program of the day was inspiring and spectacular. Flag day took on a special significance with the raising of Old Glory on the new flag pole for the first time. A spectacular pageant was put on by the Indians of the Flambeau reservation nearby and three legion members were taken into the tribe as adopted sons.

Madison.—Following the questioning of almost 100 students, University of Wisconsin officials began an investigation of what is believed to be the most serious case of theft and sale of examination questions ever uncovered at the state university. It is said that original examination questions stolen from the desks of university instructors were copied and the copies sold at $5 and $10 per set. Officials have not yet been able to determine the extent of the dishonesty, but believe that a large number of students may be involved.

They range from $50 to $60 per head.

Stevens Point.—The frantic efforts of fellow workmen saved the life of Leo Pulchinski, Stevens Point, who was buried alive by a caving in a sewer trench. John Luke, another workman, was also caught in the slide and buried up to his waist.

Sturgeon Bay.—Prof. L. K. Jones, for eight years in charge of pathology and experimental work in Door county orchards, has left for Geneva, N. Y., to take charge of the state agricultural station at that point.

Heavy Rains End Drought; Millions Saved Farmers

Chicago.—Rains that soaked the thirsty fields and gardens over the week-end in practically all of the corn and wheat sections mean thousands, if not millions, of dollars to grain, vegetable and fruit growers.

It rained as far south as Ellingham in the south central part of Illinois, west over Iowa and in southeastern Nebraska. Northeastern Kansas was also aided. Practically all of Wisconsin and the southwestern part of Michigan shared in the rain, which was accompanied by thunderstorms.

Kentucky, Indiana, Missouri, southern Illinois and parts of Ohio have been soaked by recent rains. The northwestern states had plenty of water from the lack of rain, according to Prof. H. J. Cox, the local weather forecaster.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

Parmalee must have uttered an exclamation of triumph; he alone knew that she was wrong. "I want to make my life of greater value than it can be here. I am looking for a richer soil in which to grow. I am willing to help you, too. If you seem a little vague to me now, I can't do this and yet, though I am very young, I can live in you—I can live as that you feel and I can be the best part of you."

He looked at her with that satanic grin and sparkling eyes turned toward her. "I am willing to help you, too. If you seem a little vague to me now, I can't do this and yet, though I am very young, I can live in you—I can live as that you feel and I can be the best part of you."

They were married one evening at eight o'clock in the same room in which he had first seen her. Mrs. Brena was glad to have her "home" called it the center of an unending social event which would last all the long winter. It was in the next morning. This was the first time she could come to the address of a dressmaker and she was going to have the fluff in her life. It would be like who would give to the mistress and explain grandly over the telephone. They—the two—would be on their way to that fairy world of money and travel and air and grace which had opened its arms to this young beauty. The girl would have all her old life and its vanities and cheap shoes behind her and be on her way to that fairy world of money and travel and air and grace which had opened its arms to this young beauty.

When Parmalee, in Berlin, said to her forgivingly, "Thus we work our miracle! In November you were talking your laundry to the Chinaman in Harney street; in March you wear thirty thousand dollars' worth of emeralds to contrast with that crown of red-gold hair at a ball in the Chateau de Pontormo," she said: "The leap is no great one. There is a hair's breadth of difference between the frauds of this world and the pretenses of that. I rather think I am the same Brena."

"But growing!" said he, as a horticulturist would speak. "Yes, growing," said Brena with a sigh. "Other men, sensing subconsciously her ungiven and unused affections, brought all their sophistication to their aid in making love to her. She combined the classic beauty of the Greek goddess with the illusive shimmering charm of her Irish blood; dozens of men in various capitals noting it, as Peter DeWolfe marked it down later, gave amusement to the Dallas broker and annoyance to her. She said that she might have been thrilled by these idolatries were it not for the fact that they always came either from those whose attentions to women were quite general and successive or from those whose imagination could conceive only a very plain driveway from the thoroughfare of formal society to the sequestered dwelling place of a woman's heart."

"You are rather tired," Parmalee said to her once. "At first my breath was taken away, as if I were an aviator up alone for the first time. But now the flight is rather monotonous. It is as if it were done only for spectators. It has no destination. He thrust a glance at her and looked up at the ceiling of the railway carriage, reflecting. As usual, he understood. "You rather want to produce something?" she nodded. "But I do not want to appear ungrateful," she added, speaking as one might speak to an impresario rather than as one speaks to a husband.

"You are my speculation now!" he would claim. "I have bought a future in you!" Brena would stare back at him, her great dark eyes questioning and full of doubt. "You think I have done badly? No, it was my one great inspiration. You have the body and the health of one among thousands. You are so beautiful with the beauty of eternal things that even I who will not touch your cheek can feel the same thrill of pleasure that one may feel gazing upon a Praxiteles."

She had said, "Not Phidias, then?" "Yes, Phidias—a work of Phidias! Because there is not only your carved limbs and neck and hands but something sublime as well. Beneath your warm and velvety surface like the texture of flower petals there is a wonderful mind, and a spirit which has come down through eternities with immortal life."

"You are an eloquent man," the young girl had said, with a quick upon her lips suggestive of her mother. "Your tongue is as silvery as those of my Irish ancestors." "Do you think I shall regret that I have played a part in your growth?" he had asked, with one of his short laughs. "I shall not be more to you than I am now. How can I use you, eh? How could I use my money? I deluded myself once. I thought I wanted it for myself. But you? I do not want you for myself. I only want your capacity as a woman to be filled to the brim!"

He lived two lives; not at the same time, but alternately. The one was in her; the other in himself. When he could put his own life into hers he forgot his own. He became that being whose warmth and light she had seen beneath the cold steel of an unrelenting fighter and plunger, whose singleness of purpose and will had found dynamic concentration in his spare body and had expressed themselves in a mask of cruelty and craft upon a face otherwise esthetic and sensitive. At these times his countenances wore that abnormal youth of feature which was his most marked personal characteristic. It was only upon rare occasions that it was twisted up as if in a cramp of anxiety; as if some distant but menacing forecast had pointed a finger at him from afar. For a moment he had been immersed in his self.

For more than half a year, in Budapest, in Petrograd, in London, this one of the two lives of Compton Parmalee was dominant. Something of the youth and the calm of Brena's eyes, looking out upon a world which opened all its doors to her expectant inquiry, was reflected in his own. By manipulation of acquaintance and, when necessary, by lavish expenditure, he procured her entry into rare social circumstances. In that first year Brena, considered by all strangers to be several years older than she, in fact, was, and of whom no one would have believed it if it had been told them that she had been plucked out of that kitchen garden of Wilkie's boarding-house, the Porto Rican shop, the movies, and a sordid sickly-brown provincialism, had dined with foreign ambassadors, seated with Lady Tremayne Nash, been courted over, through and under her disgust, by a cousin of the ex-king of the Portuguese, occupied a villa in the Italian lakes and voyaged in a luxurious yacht around the Baltic in midsummer with the family of Stockholm's largest banker. With the credit of admiration that her natural poise, her beauty, her talent as a linguist, her mother's wit and her father's love of learning had brought her everywhere, she was not dazzled in the slightest degree.

When Parmalee, in Berlin, said to her forgivingly, "Thus we work our miracle! In November you were talking your laundry to the Chinaman in Harney street; in March you wear thirty thousand dollars' worth of emeralds to contrast with that crown of red-gold hair at a ball in the Chateau de Pontormo," she said: "The leap is no great one. There is a hair's breadth of difference between the frauds of this world and the pretenses of that. I rather think I am the same Brena."

"But growing!" said he, as a horticulturist would speak. "Yes, growing," said Brena with a sigh. "Other men, sensing subconsciously her ungiven and unused affections, brought all their sophistication to their aid in making love to her. She combined the classic beauty of the Greek goddess with the illusive shimmering charm of her Irish blood; dozens of men in various capitals noting it, as Peter DeWolfe marked it down later, gave amusement to the Dallas broker and annoyance to her. She said that she might have been thrilled by these idolatries were it not for the fact that they always came either from those whose attentions to women were quite general and successive or from those whose imagination could conceive only a very plain driveway from the thoroughfare of formal society to the sequestered dwelling place of a woman's heart."

"You are rather tired," Parmalee said to her once. "At first my breath was taken away, as if I were an aviator up alone for the first time. But now the flight is rather monotonous. It is as if it were done only for spectators. It has no destination. He thrust a glance at her and looked up at the ceiling of the railway carriage, reflecting. As usual, he understood. "You rather want to produce something?" she nodded. "But I do not want to appear ungrateful," she added, speaking as one might speak to an impresario rather than as one speaks to a husband.

"Not at all," said he, hitting out squarely with his pungent frankness. "That's all right. I've been stupid. You are too big to be satisfied with this low-neck nonsense. It is not enough to be the wearer of a gleaming skin in the magnificence of authorized exposure. You want—"

"He thrust a glance at her. "You speak with some heat," he said. "I suppose so," Brena answered. "It is because I have no patience with unrealities." "You would say more?" he asked, with his uncanny ability to read her thought.

"Yes, I think that you have some purpose in creating this atmosphere of strange and unreal things." He started to speak, stopped himself and after a long pause exclaimed sharply, "I agree with you." They rode on toward Cherbourg without speaking, but now and then glancing up as if each weighed the motives and challenged the other.

"You spoke of a piece of paper given to you in a roll of bills," he said at last, with a marked absence of his usual assurance. "It fluttered out. You saved it—"

Brena drew back as if the subject were odious. She said, with unwonted sharpness, "I have cause to remember. You are always speaking—"

"I know," said he, looking at her with brilliant eyes. "It is the tragedy of big women." Not only because of his words, but equally because of the self-effacement, the sympathy that he at moments could cast down from some calm eminence which his spirit had learned to climb, Brena always remembered this moment as that which marked the best in him, as that which justified the bargain she had made to salvage that better part.

The contest between that better part and the other—the well-known Compton Parmalee with his ruthless daring, his instinct for hazards and his almost frantic interest in self-preservation—was a losing fight for Brena. She knew as he knew, that her power lay in words, but only in the threads of understanding, conduct and high aims that she could weave with him into his life. Moments had come when she had even believed that if she had won she might have loved him. The things she would have thrown herself into a new labor—the reclamation of his youth.

It was not to be. Perhaps he himself knew this as he felt slipping from him the power to resist the habits of mind of years of fierce aviance and the passionate love of his own welfare. Parmalee snatched it eagerly and stared; he saw a figure, half snake and half bird. "That?" said he in a voice which sounded muffled. "Well, do you know what it is?" Brena raised the arch of her brows. "It is the Kuk-uk-kan," said Parmalee. "The Kuk-uk-kan," she said, repeating it. "The symbol of the Mayan—the Aztec culture. The supreme object of reverence. The gods who go about the Southwest driving their old wells, and laying their railroad ties and eating their prepared breakfast foods forget that this symbol is to be found among the present-day Zant and other Pueblo tribes, the degenerate fringes of a civilization which flourished before Rome was suckled by a wolf. They forget that a thousand years ago it was carved on rude adobe walls in memory of a lost grandeur and lost practices, dead these six thousand years."

Brena possessed two laughs, both quite natural and sincere. "What of all this?" she said. "I will blush for your ignorance, but what more than that can I do on a sunny Thursday? I am not interested, old fellow, in that which is dead. I—"

She stopped suddenly, sobered by a recollection. "The Kuk-uk-kan," said Parmalee. "You've never seen that scrap of paper again, have you?" "This was the last time he ever spoke of it."

Winter had come again when the Parmalees had settled into a quieter life in New York. Brena had turned the back of her interest upon dining out and the amusement of new acquaintances.

"There are times when you look at me as if I were the bearer of some evil," she said. "It is absurd," he told her, but his face had shown the sudden twist of fear. "You have some knowledge that I have not," she asserted accusingly. "None," he answered. For a long time he looked at her and then said, "Your father was interested in Aztec architecture?"

"Yes," her eyes had opened in amazement. "He went to Mexico more than once," said Parmalee. "He considered that the civilization of the Mayas was far more extraordinary than even experts like Thompson and Nightingale have represented it. He believed that they had developed forces quite unknown to modern life."

"How did you know this?" she asked sharply. Parmalee was quite nonchalant; he said, "I do forget that my library is full of documents and books and monographs which your father asked permission to consult. I am sorry I do not meet your father."

"You would have found him a man quite incapable of believing in the supernatural whether it be a thing of today or attributed to an ancient people." "He thrust a glance at her. "You speak with some heat," he said. "I suppose so," Brena answered. "It is because I have no patience with unrealities." "You would say more?" he asked, with his uncanny ability to read her thought.

"Yes, I think that you have some purpose in creating this atmosphere of strange and unreal things." He started to speak, stopped himself and after a long pause exclaimed sharply, "I agree with you." ### Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

ZOO PRIDE
"There are certain months in the year I like," said Mrs. Bison, otherwise known as Mrs. American Buffalo. "And what, pray tell, are they?" asked Mrs. European Bison. Mrs. European Bison is of the buffalo family and is a near relative of Mrs. American Buffalo. Her legs are longer, her body shorter, the hair on her head and back is not so thick, while that on her tail is thicker. She is a good deal shorter on the whole. Mr. and Mrs. European Bison lived in a yard adjoining that of the American Buffalo family. They were all quite friendly.

"I will do that gladly," said Mrs. Bison, or Mrs. American Buffalo. She was usually known as Mrs. Bison while her neighbor was always called Mrs. European Bison. "Also please tell me which months they are," Mrs. European Bison further requested. "That I will do gladly, too," said Mrs. Bison. "The months I like are the late spring and early summer months. I believe they call them July, June and May."

"They do," said Mrs. European Bison, "but you are speaking of them backwards. Folks usually speak of them forwards." "Pooh!" grunted Mrs. Bison, "what care I for folks! Nothing! There!" "Do continue with your tale," said Mrs. European Bison. "My tail is quite long enough," said Mrs. Bison. She was a little angry. "I didn't mean your tail—I meant your story. They are the same words."

"Here is My Darling Bennie." when you pronounce them but have different meanings according to the way you spell them. "But you didn't spell them," said Mrs. Bison. "I thought you would understand from the way I used the word. Well, don't let's argue. Go on with your story."

"I like the months I have mentioned," said Mrs. Bison, "because they are the months when the baby buffaloes are born into this big world or this big zoo. "I shed my coat in the spring and am all ready to look my best. See? Here is my darling Bennie Buffalo Boy," she ended proudly, as she pointed to a buffalo calf not far away. She was certainly a very proud mamma.

Not far away from these yards there was a tree in which was the Raccoon house. And in this tree Daddy Raccoon was now talking with pride. "We have ten rooms in this house," said Daddy Raccoon, and Mrs. Raccoon smiled, too. "It's a very good sized house and they wanted to show us the honor of giving us a fine home because they think we're an addition to the zoo and because we're smart. They like our tricks and ways."

"The house is no trouble to take care of," said Mrs. Raccoon, "for the keeper sees that it is kept warm and clean and also sees that the rain can't come in." "He makes your housekeeping very easy, doesn't he?" asked Mr. Raccoon. "He does, indeed," said Mrs. Raccoon. "Underneath our house there is our dining-room of a nice wooden floor which he always keeps clean, too."

CHEAPER AUTO LICENSE AFTER JUNE 30

There will be a discount of 25% on fees for motor vehicle license after June 30, provided the applicant makes an affidavit that the vehicle has not been operated prior to July 1, this year. The affidavit must accompany the application. No discount can be allowed on applications that reach the office of the secretary of state before July 1. Secretary Zimmerman called special attention to the law which reads: "The legal date of application for registration shall in all cases be the date of the receipt of the application."

Mr. Zimmerman said many applicants are already deducting the discount in the mistaken belief that the reduced rate went into effect June 1, while others are withholding their applications until the discount becomes effective.

The Secretary of State is warning purchasers of used cars to obtain the former certificate of registration and the signature of the seller. The transfer fee of one dollar must be paid except where certificate shows the vehicle was last licensed in another state.

NEW CHURCH FOR HOLY HILL

Holy Hill, by far the most noted and picturesque religious shrine of the central west, is to undergo a sweeping change during this season and next when the simple brick chapel is to be replaced by an elaborate Romanesque church, costing $175,000. To complete the new edifice will require two years; this year, however, it is hoped that the foundation will be laid, and will be ready this fall for the superstructure. While the new shrine is being built, a temporary frame church is to be put up part way down the hill to serve as a pilgrim's place of worship.—Hartford Press.

WILL PROVIDE GIRL MARRY IN 24 HOURS

If you were an attractive athletic young woman—
If your suit had left you a fortune on condition that you marry within twenty-four hours—
If the provisions of the will would not allow you marry your present fiancé—
And if you wanted the cash, but were not keen for the matrimonial proviso, how would you go about getting the sponduliks?

Blanche Ingram, the heroine of "Her Temporary Husband," to be shown Sunday at the Opera House, was faced with that problem.

But she got an idea. She married a decrepit old man who had but a few hours to live.

The marriage was performed, but someone else was the happy bridegroom—a plotter had made up to look like the intended husband.

Then complications and more complications before the strange mixup is finally straightened out.

"Her Temporary Husband," a First National picture directed by John Mc Dermott, is a farce comedy with a guaranteed laugh in every foot of film. It has been interpreted to the film with a cast of the screen's best known funsters, including Owen Moore, Sidney Chaplin, Sylvia Breamer, Chuck Reisner, Tully Marshall, Charles Gerard, George Cooper and others.
