The varicalls being constructed so that the structures of the same maximum ca-pacity be used, but they should be undensers made by the same manufacturer. This necessity arises from the divergence of actual maximum capacty as among condensers of different manufacture. Every condenser rated at 6005 mfd, has not just that maximum actually. Sometimes the villation is as much as 20 per cent. Hosever, the best makes of conclosers are so close to their rated capacity that no regard need be paid to the difference, if the same make is read so far as coll-winding is coneerned.

Construction of Coils.

In constructing the coils use fiber or land rubber tubing 312 inches diameter, 4 inches high, the wire be-Ing No. 24 double silk covered throughout. The colls are wound with the primary at one end, one-half inch seconstion being left after the primary is completed and the secondary being two of .001 mfd. each, across the secwound next. Tiny parallel holes are drilled in the tubing for threading the wire terminals and thus making them secure. Enough excess wire is left et the beginning and end of each winding to utilize it for actual connection Inside the set, instead of using bus bar or other such connecting wire for the purpose. About six inches of excess will suffice. What is not needed may be cut off later when the connections are soldered

Thus the top, which is 15 turns A. from the beginning of the secondary, is nearer the terminal thereof (3) which connects to grid. The method just described is one wherein the primary connections are reversed, that is, the polarities oppose at the adjoining points (2 and 3). In neutrodyne construction this is correct.
