THE SAD ENDING OF A YOUNG LIFE

In the bloom of life, at a time when much happiness was in store for her. The angel of death came to Miss Roscella Jane Coulter and took her away to her heavenly reward, thus ending a young life, that was the sunshine of the family circle, and from which lots could be expected and many good deeds could be looked forward to, casting deep sorrow over the community. Roscella was attending business college at Marshfield, Wis., where two weeks and three days prior to her death, she was taken ill with spinal meningitis. Though her illness was at first not thought serious, until three days before her death when her condition was such that she had to be removed to the hospital, where the best of medical attention was given her to save her life, but to no avail, for on Sunday morning, Jan. 3, 1926, she passed away into eternal sleep. Deceased was born April 24, 1905 in the town of Wayne, Washington county, Wis., where she attended public school from which she received her diploma on June 5, 1919. On Sept. 1, 1922, she entered the West Bend high school, and the following three years continued her high school career in the Kewaskum high school, from which she graduated on June 3, 1925. On Oct. 19, 1925, she entered business college at Marshfield, from which institution she was soon to graduate, had not the divine creature, over which man power has no control, saw fit to call her away from the land of health. Roscella was a young lady of a kind and jovial disposition. During the time she attended high school here, she won a wide acquaintance among whom she was very popular and held in high esteem. In school she was well liked, and one of the leaders in her class. All were shocked to learn of her untimely and sad demise. Besides her heart-broken mother, Mrs. Lena Coulter, of the town of Wayne, she leaves to mourn, six sisters and one brother, namely: Mrs. Walter Welles of Brownsville, Wis., Elizabeth, Sarah and John at home, Margaret and Esther of Los Angeles, Calif., and Mrs. Clarence Rossow of Milwaukee. Her father preceded her in death Nov. 28, 1918. The remains were shipped from Marshfield to her home in the town of Wayne, from where the funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock, with services in the Salem Evangelical church, Lomira. Rev. Zeller officiated. Interment was made in Salem's cemetery at Lomira. The many friends of the deceased join in extending heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved relatives in this their hour of deep affliction.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere and heartfelt thanks to all our relatives, neighbors and friends for their sympathy shown us in our late bereavement, the sad loss of our beloved daughter and sister Roscella Coulter. For the many beautiful floral offerings, the Rev. W. Zeller for his comforting words, the pall bearers and the undertaker, Fred Beck.

Mrs. Lena Coulter and family.

TO ESTABLISH GAME PRESERVE NEAR HERE

Preliminary arrangements were completed this week whereby the Izaak Walton League of Milwaukee purchased a large tract of land consisting of 729 acres surrounding Moon Lake, located about eight miles northwest of Kewaskum. The land purchased is as follows: 80 acres from Aug. C. Bartel, 304 acres from Hubert Rinzel, 10 acres from Julius Reysen, 150 acres from Mrs. Anna Romaine, 8 acres from George Post, 15 acres from Ernst Becker and 160 acres constituting the area covered by the lake. The transactions were taken care of by Jas. B. Day, real estate dealer of Hartford, whom the League had engaged to handle the proposition. The purpose of buying this tract of land is to start a game refuge. All of the land around Moon lake is thickly wooded and abounds in various forms of wild animal life. It is estimated that the cost of buying this land will be approximately $40,000.

The reservation is to be open to the public under careful restrictions. Hunting will be prohibited and fishing restricted in so far as possible under state law. It is planned to build trails and observation areas in the swamps, hillside forests and water fronts, so scientists, biology classes, school children generally and others may observe the habits of the wilderness creatures. Upland birds, migratory water fowl, small furred creatures and deer are to receive special protection.

Parts of the land will be used as caretaker's quarters and headquarters for the wild life propagation work and plans for reforestation. Surveys and parts for intensive planting and development of the tract will be made in the near future.

It is intended that this wild life refuge shall benefit the people of Milwaukee, Kewaskum, West Bend and all other nearby cities and villages, as announced by Mr. Quarles, president of the Milwaukee chapter. He further stated: "It is created in recognition of the serious inroads that are being made on Wisconsin's natural resources and beauty. Unless park, forest and wild life refuges are set aside by somebody, Wisconsin's out-of-doors is threatened with wide desolation. Swift development plus much unnecessary destruction, is bringing outdoors ruin upon the state. While Waltonians believe that it is the function of the state to preserve its beauty, forests and wild life, the league is anxious to be practically helpful and in this spirit it makes the present purchase. The refuge will in no sense be a private preserve. It is not to serve as a private hunting or fishing ground for anybody. Rather it is to be a real sanctuary for the wild life of the region, including especially upland birds, migratory water fowl, and small furred creatures. However, deer probably will be introduced later and of course tree and floral life are to have every consideration. Then, under careful restriction, the area will be made useful to the public. School children especially will be admitted to study the habits of birds, animals, trees and other vegetation; scientists will be freely admitted; others will be given access to trails and observation places from which they may study and enjoy the wilderness without disturbing it."

"We especially feel that this reservation is needed in southeastern Wisconsin where a large part of the state's population lives. We want to make it an Izaak Walton contribution to that population."

It is thought that new Walton chapters will be started in Kewaskum and in the entire district near this restricted region, in order to help this good cause along.

Through the purchase of this tract of land, which is a part known as the "kettle" range, there is no doubt that the first step has been taken towards the foundation of a great state park, which will be of easy access to those who plan a day's outing from various cities and villages of the state. Rumors are now current that in future time to come, the league will purchase additional land, a total of about 2,000 acres, which will include Long Lake, Round Lake, Lake Seven, Lake Fifteen, Crooked Lake and a number of smaller bodies of water in the immediate vicinity, which will be purchased with the intent of giving the people of Wisconsin something in the way of natural scenic advantages and without journeying any great distance from home. With this great movement now in progress much of the waste land, unfit for farming purposes will be utilized as a new state park. A high fence which will cost several thousand dollars will be built around the acquired land to prevent the wild game to escape.

CLEANING MOON LAKE OF ROUGH FISH

Moon Lake, which has been purchased by the Izaak Walton League of Milwaukee, has been the center of attraction in this section of the state where hundreds of sportsmen and others congregated, to witness the seining of rough fish. The work which was in charge of a Minneapolis firm, was started on New Year's day, when it is estimated that a crowd of 500 people were present. A large net was set around the entire lake. The first haul was not very successful as only a small amount of fish were caught, due to the fact that the fish were able to get out of the net when same became caught on stumps and sticks. On Monday of this week a big catch was made, when it is reported that over five ton of carp were netted, the largest weighing about 34 pounds. The next large variety caught were pike, averaging from a pound to eight pounds in weight. There were also a very large number of strawberry bass in the catch. A very few suckers, and not very many pickerel. The entire weight of fish caught that day, as reported was 20,000 pounds. The game fish were all thrown back into the lake, while the carp and suckers were sold at ten cents a pound. The carp and suckers that were not disposed of here were shipped away. The netters are now seining Lake Fifteen.

J. BURT JOHNSON SHOWS HERE NEXT WEEK

The Johnson show is coming again, this time J. Burt Johnson carries a much bigger and better show than ever before. Miss Virginia Hayden, the German Nightingale, in new songs, funny sayings, Glover, the great musician is mystifying, you see him and then you doubt. Mr. George Bink, the worlds greatest slack wire artist and juggler. Mr. Cornell, at the piano. This company carries all its own special scenery. Johnson shows played 13 weeks in Green Bay, to the largest crowds of any show that was ever in Green Bay. In Plymouth, Wis., in December Johnson show played to packed houses every night for three weeks, and is booked to play a return date in February. When a company like the Johnson show can play the same to packed houses every year there must be something to the show and the manager J. Burt Johnson is known through out the state of Wisconsin, as a real show man and has lots of friends. This company will be at Kewaskum Opera House Monday, Jan. 11th, for one week. The first night will be free to all.

MADDENED HERD OF WILD HORSES GREAT SCENE IN "WHITE OUTLAW"

The Opera House is presenting to the people of Kewaskum one of the finest Western pictures that has ever been shown here, in "The White Outlaw", a Universal Blue Streak Western starring mount Scout.

This is not the usual Western where the action is built around the affection of the master for his horse, but it is a thrilling dynamic out-of-doors story. The horse is the leader of a band of wild horses that roam the Death Valley. He loves the out-doors and is loath to be a saddle horse. After being captured, the horse runs away, augmenting his herd by recruits from surrounding ranches. The producers of the picture assert that the large band shown consists of real wild horses. This claim can readily be believed for the entire herd of nearly a thousand steeds consists of fiery spirited animals, beautiful and sleek.

The scenes showing them stampeding down the valley between the snow-capped mountains, raising a cloud of dust to the heavens, is one of the most spectacular sights ever filmed. The close escape of Jack Hoxie and his leading lady, Marceline Day, from the hoofs of the flying herd adds a big thrill that was really enacted during the taking of the picture.

The story concerns Hoxie's being accused of stealing the horses that joined the band. His task is to find the band and cut out the branded horses. A band of rustlers tried to run the border and the resulting conflict makes this an exciting story set in a locale of extreme beauty.

Cliff Smith, famous Western director, had charge of the production. Isadore Bernstein wrote the story. In the cast are William Welsh, Duke Lee, Floyd Shackelford and Charles Brinley. Will be shown at the Opera House on Sunday, Jan. 10th.

VILLAGE BUYS NEW FIRE WHISTLE

At the regular monthly meeting of the Village Board held at the City Hall Monday evening, the board purchased a Type "B" double head siren, which will take the place of the antiquated bell which heretofore gave the alarm of fire, and which proved to be very inadequate. The siren was purchased from the Federal Electric Company of Chicago. This new type of fire alarm gives a peculiar penetrating tone, a fire call that is instantly recognized. Its very sound is a warning, because it is so different from all ordinary factory whistles, fire bells or other alarms. It is the loudest and most powerful electrical siren manufactured. It has two revolving fans, or cylinders in the sounding mechanism. The effect is to double the volume of the sound. It has a remote control, and can be operated from any number of distant points. Two push button switches are furnished with each control, one of which is placed in the central telephone office. In case of fire, central can be called who will set the siren in motion, the other will be placed in the fire house from where it can be operated. Besides this it is equipped with a general alarm effect, by graduating the tone up and down the scale, preventing it from operating at just one steady tone. The siren is composed of the following units: 5 H. P. motor—3000 to 3500 R. P. M., Rotors—15 inches in diameter, horns screened to protect mechanism, size 38 inches long by 21 inches high by 19 inches wide, weight approximately 325 pounds.

It is expected that the siren will be shipped here in about a week or two. As soon as it arrives it will be put in place, on a tower on top of the City Hall.

JUDGE BUCKLIN TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

On Monday, Jan. 4, County Judge Frank W. Bucklin, took the oath of office as County Judge of Washington County. He took the oath before Clerk of Circuit Court John Klessig of Kewaskum. Immediately after having taken the oath, the Judge appointed his assistants, namely: Miss Irene Wittmann, as Register in Probate and County Court Reporter, and Miss Elizabeth Feider as County Court Reporter, who were sworn in the same day. We wish the Judge success.

LET'S MAKE THIS AN ACCREDITED COUNTY

Under the area test, the objective of our county, all of the cattle in the county, would be tested and the infected herds would be restored every six months until each herd makes a clean test. Within three years all of the cattle of the county would be given a retest. After this test the county would be an accredited county.

The testing is done at the expense of the state and Federal Governments, by appointed local veterinarians and other competent veterinarians employed by the state for the work. The (intradermic) skin or tail test is used. It is officially recognized and used in all states on practically all testing work. A few drops of tuberculin are injected into the loose skin on the under side of the tail. No temperatures are taken but after three days the point of injection is examined. If an animal is infected with tuberculosis there will be a swelling at the place of injection otherwise there is nothing evident. Tuberculin, the substance used in injecting the animals is absolutely harmless. It does not in animals properly handled, affect the milk flow, the appetite of the animal; nor does it have ill effect on pregnant animals. It does not in any way interfere with the normal functioning of the healthy body. Tuberculin cannot give tuberculosis to an animal and it does not contain tuberculous germs. It is a sterile substance that has been boiled and heated to a temperature higher than bacteria can withstand.

That testing is not injurious and does not cause the disease is made further evident by some herds that have been tested twenty or more years and have shown no effects.

WILLIAM WEDDE PASSES AWAY

William Wedde, a pioneer and well known resident of Campbellsport died at his home there last Thursday at 2:30 p. m., after a short illness brought about by the infirmities of old age. Mr. Wedde was born Aug. 26, 1851, in Colberg, Germany. When six years of age he immigrated with his parents to America and settled at Mayville, where he spent his childhood days. After he had finished his school career he went to Chicago to learn the tinsmith trade, which occupation he followed for 46 years. In 1875 he was married to Miss Bertha Marquardt. The couple resided at Chicago for four years when they moved to Campbellsport, where the deceased successfully conducted a hardware and tinsmithing business. Mr. Wedde, besides taking an active part in his business was deeply interested in the political and fraternal life of the village. He was an organizer of the Mayville Turnverein. He was a member of the Campbellsport lodge of Odd Fellows, town assessor of the town of Ashford, before the village was incorporated, and president of the village a few years after its incorporation. He was appointed the first chief of the Mayville fire department, and for the past 30 years he was treasurer and a trustee of the Campbellsport Mutual Fire Insurance company of which he was one of the organizers. He was also vice-president and a director of the Theresa Union Telephone company.

Up to a short time prior to his death Mr. Wedde was still very active in spite of his advanced age, and last year Mr. and Mrs. Wedde had the happy occasion of celebrating their golden wedding anniversary. Deceased leaves to mourn, his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Olga Schwandt of Campbellsport; two sisters, Miss Elizabeth Wedde and Mrs. Mathilda Hammermeister, both of Mayville; one brother Robert Wedde of Argonne, Wis., and three grand children. The funeral was held at 2 p. m. Sunday with services in the German Reformed church. Rev. Wm. Zenk officiated. Burial was made in the Union cemetery.

FORD NATIONAL SHOW WEEK

JANUARY 9-16

Windshield wipers, gypsy curtains, top boot and windshield wiper are being added to the items of special equipment supplied by the Ford Motor Company. The first public display of this equipment will be during the Ford National Show Week, Jan. 9-16. These specialties are not "extras" but have been so designed by Ford engineers as to become actually part of the car. They are held to the same standard of quality as the car itself, and behind them lies extensive experiment to determine the type and construction best adapted to Ford cars; experiment which was unhampered by any compromise necessary to permit adaptation to some other kind of car.

The introduction of these specialties conflicts in no way with the company's policy of refraining from dictating to a purchaser the amount of equipment he must buy with his car. Those to whom economy is the principal consideration will in the future, as in the past, be able to purchase Ford cars in which the standard equipment will include only those features essential to satisfactory operation. On the other hand, to those who are interested in the completely appointed car will be available specialties produced according to the same standards of quality which are incorporated in the car itself.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

PLAYING THE GAME

WE could see ourselves as others see us, look upon our rude manners, our derelictions and aspirations with the same cold, fault-finding eye employed by our critics in measuring our frailties, what a sorry picture would confront us each morning as we gaze in the mirror!

The graceful curves about our mouth and the various excellences we habitually glimpse in our heart would be surely distorted into monstrous disfigurements which would cause us to gasp in amazement at our reflection.

Perhaps it is better for our peace of mind and our temporal happiness that this cannot be done.

For if we could observe our distorted selves clearly, we might lose hope in playing the game of life and become even more displeasing to others than we are now, and perchance, add to our already formidable list of delinquencies still another more appalling than the original.

In spite of our long schooling in the doctrines of spiritual life and morality, there cling to us many traits of our barbarian ancestors, which crop out quite unexpectedly and make us in our reflective moments, thoroughly ashamed of ourselves.

UNDER THE COLD

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

UNDER the cold the roses, Under the snow the grass— More than a man supposes Who carelessly may pass. Under the winter's chill are things Of green and yellow that are things of spring.

So, let us go on smiling, We who can smile through tears, Sorrows of men beguiling, Through through the weary years Under the snow men's hearts may hide, Showing us only their wintry side. For I am sure forever, Though they may scoff at song, Even the very drier Under the ice may long For tear-wet daisies, for heart-blown flowers, For some of the spring that is always ours.

ADD CHIC TO FORMAL DRESS; TUCKS AND PLAITS REMAIN

WHICH shall it be, high-neck or décolleté for the sumptuous formal frock? The mode answers—both. Impossible, say you, and inconsistent as well, to consider high-neck for evening wear? Look at the picture for the solution to the problem. Observe how, through simple manipulation of a matching scarf, the style-creator "serves two masters."

Scarves, arranged as pictured, are the last word from authoritative fashion sources. One sees them in great numbers, these scarf-collars, at every smart evening function. They are not an accessory, rather a very part of the dress, in that they are made of the same material. They must be wrapped about the throat, else they fall of smartness.

In the instance of the model illustrated, the medium selected for this lovely scarfed frock is exquisite, supple chiffon velvet. The same costume would be eloquently representative of the mode, were it made of gold or silver cloth, for evening gowns of metallic fabric are very smart.

The very low flare attained by the set-on flounce is another smart item, this silhouette being fashions latest.

Exploits Decorative All-Over Effect.

In accord with the style plan, the elaborate enunciation of beads, embroidery and interworkings of metal threads which distinguish this flounce, does not appear on the upper portion of the dress. "Beauty unadorned" around the neckline and arms is the edict.

For that enriching embellishment and the uneven neckline also bespeak latest vogue. Very important in the rose bouquet at the shoulder. Scarcely ever is it omitted from evening attire—not roses always, but flowers tuned to the general scheme. Simple flower effects are preferred, the sort which give to evening dress a naive charm.

WHO SAID

"In buying a house, and taking a wife, shut your eyes and commend yourself to God."

There is nothing recorded in the life of Charles Pinot Duclos, the author of these words, to indicate that there was in his life the elements of marital unhappiness which would justify the cynicism he voices.

Duclos had a varied life and he has left his name on the roll of fame in many capacities.

As a historian he is entitled to be remembered as the author of the ingenious "History of Louis XI" and the "Secret Memoirs on the Reign of Louis XIV."

As a philologist he published some exceedingly interesting studies in the French and Celtic languages which have proved of great value in the world of letters.

As a novelist and wit he has left some excellent examples of his work. In this connection his autobiography cannot be overlooked, for it is both an interesting example of an excellent style and a human document enlivened by much of the author's native humor.

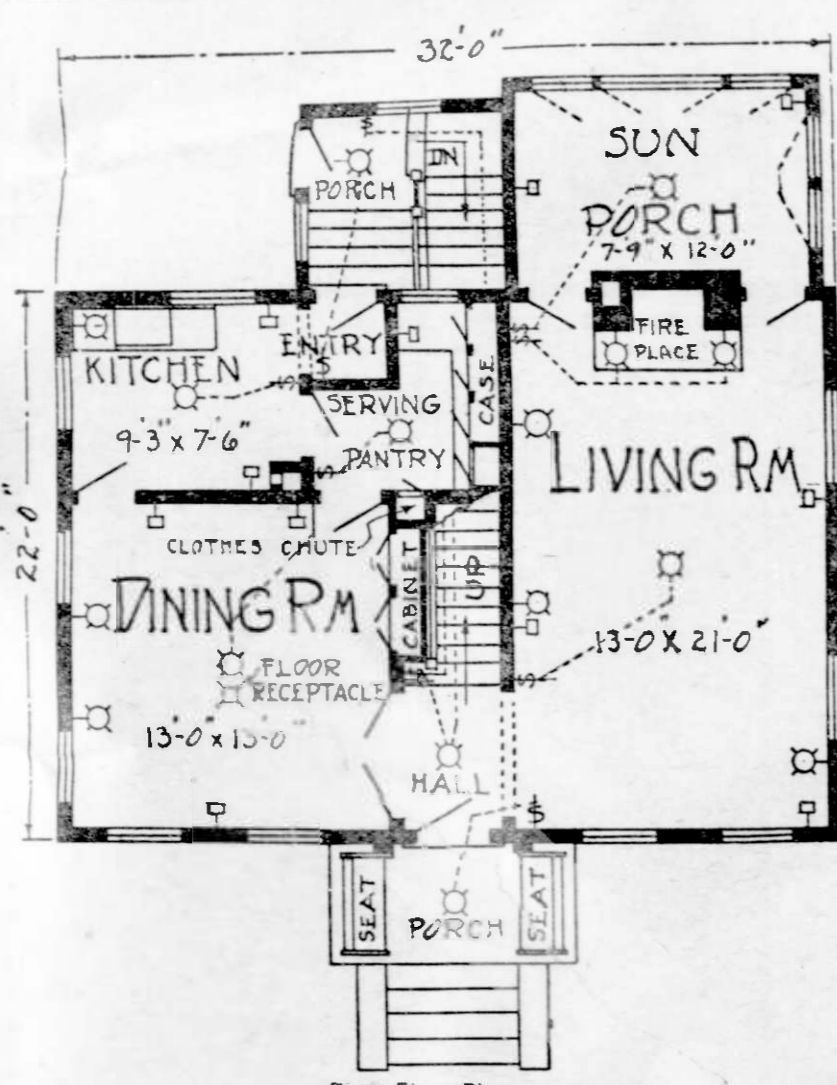

During his life Duclos won the approval of the French Academy and was rewarded by being made perpetual secretary of that body. His aid in revising the Dictionnaire of the Academy was one of the contributing causes to his being thus honored.

Duclos' death occurred in France in the year 1772 when he was sixty-eight.—Wayne D. McMurray.

Advertising Pays
Advertising pays a startling degree. The wages of the merchant who falls to advertise lie on his shelves collecting dust, consuming his capital to ultimate bankruptcy.—Likewise the man who falls to draw attention to himself by using his brain power is allowing his intellectual wares to become cobwebbed with uselessness, and is headed for mental bankruptcy.—Cleveland Trust Monthly.

Maine's Election Day
The election day of the state of Maine was fixed by the legislature at a time when transportation facilities were much poorer than at present. By November in the state of Maine many roads were closed to travel and it was exceedingly difficult for people to reach the polling centers.

Colonial House Has Permanent and Will Fit Almost Any Sun

First Floor Plan.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give ADVICE FREE OF CHARGE on all problems pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as editor, author and manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 147 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The simple colonial house has many advantages to offer the prospective home builder. By reason of its very simplicity and the fact that its lines are of an accepted and lasting type, it will never be out of style like many of the more faddish designs and, therefore, has a high resale value at all times. In addition to this it is always in good taste and fits easily into its surroundings, harmonizing well with almost any neighboring houses. The plain rectangular floor plan, either square or nearly so, gives a maximum amount of floor space and hence moderate building cost.

An excellent example of the colonial influence is shown in the illustration here. It is well adapted to a wide, particularly well treated, consisting of a simple paneled door covered by a hoodlike roof and flanked at either side by a settee.

This entrance opens into a stair hall from which an open doorway leads to the living room at the right and French doors shut off the dining room at the left. The living room is large with a broad fireplace at the far end and on either side of this fireplace doors opening onto the sun porch.

The dining room of ample size is provided with a built-in china cabinet at one side and at the rear two doors open into the kitchen and a serving pantry. This makes it possible to keep the door to the kitchen closed while serving the meal and hence keeps the cooking department well separated.

The kitchen, while small, is conveniently arranged and well lighted. From it, one passes through an entry to the back porch which is enclosed and houses the stairs that lead to the basement.

The second floor is arranged about a central hallway into which the stairway emerges, and in which a clothes chute is provided. At one side there are two bedrooms of moderate size, both having good cross ventilation. At the rear of the hall the bathroom is located, convenient to all the rooms. One large bedroom occupies the entire other side of the second floor, directly over the living room.

This bedroom measures 13 feet by 17 1/2 feet and at the far end has an extra large closet. At this end also one passes through a sort of entry into a large sleeping porch which occupies the space over the sun porch on the first floor. Both the bedroom and sleeping porch have ample cross ventilation and are well lighted by numerous windows.

Use of Insulation

Each season sees more home builders and remodelers lining walls and roofs with insulation materials against cold in winter and heat in summer. The cost is small considering the comfort received and the amount of coal saved through more efficient heating.

Low Ceilings

If the ceiling be rather low, as in third-story rooms, or in second-floor rooms of the story and a half house, the strong vertical effect of the striped wall paper helps to lift the ceiling. This gives an appearance of more height and breathing space.

Brick Now Available in Variety of Colors

The American manufacturer of face brick has far outstripped the rest of the world in the wide range of color tones and textures he offers.

The prospective builder today has before him the possibility of giving to the exterior wall surface an enduring color scheme of monochrome uniformity or polychrome blending, as his taste may dictate. The whole sweep of color, in smooth and rough textures, is at his command—from the pure, severe tone of pearl grays or crennas, through buff, golden and bronze tints, to a descending scale of reds, down to purples, maroons and even gunmetal blacks. Face bricks may be had in various sizes as well as textures and colors.

Every American is familiar, in some degree, with lumber, and in a general way recognizes the wonderful progress of lumber manufacturing in this country. However, he has but little understanding of the comprehensive study of the tree and its structure, the physical properties of woods, the preparation of lumber for use in buildings, and of market conditions that has been necessary in the development of the lumber industry.

Good Interiors

The interior of the home is the most important of the many influences by which the acquaintance, casual visitor or possible purchaser will judge you and your property. Good interiors are assets; poorly furnished, poorly decorated interiors are liabilities. Well-papered walls with coloring, design and texture of a quality that means taste, and shows harmonious treatment, give satisfaction and rest to all.

Contrasting Colors

When a great difference in colors is desired, contrasting colors are employed; for instance, red with blue-green, orange with blue, yellow with blue-violet, yellow-green with violet or green with red-violet. Still greater contrast can be secured by making one of the colors darker in tone than the other.

First, that in because lower never bor gl; the actu meat, but the necessit, cutting off the an that the salability is seriously reduced. As parasite always attacks hams in, lies, it is seen that some of the m, valuable parts of the meat may be spoiled by undesirable incisions.

Not Hard to Prevent. Yet, in reality, the disease is not considered difficult to control, or rather to prevent. The Illinois College of Agriculture, which has made a study of the pest, states that it is due to small parasites which first invade the softer part of the skin around the eyes and ears and gradually extend to various parts of the body. As the trouble progresses the skin contracts into wrinkles and soon becomes thick and scurvy-like, with, very often, deep crevices. It is this condition which causes the loss. The meat itself is not generally affected in quality, but these crevices and wrinkles cause such an irregularity and undesirable appearance in the outer form that large parts may have to be cut off, thus spoiling the conformation of cuts for the retail trade and resulting in quite a drop in price. In extreme cases the disease may render the whole animal unsuitable for food purposes.

But it must be understood that mange is a skin disease; hence it can easily be cured or prevented by outside means.

Close Watch Important for Vegetables Stored

Vegetables in storage for the winter must be carefully guarded against sudden changes in temperature, warns C. H. Nissley, vegetable specialist of the New Jersey extension service.

"Keep the ventilators open whenever the outside temperature is lower than the inside temperature, unless there is danger of freezing. Keep the temperature as near 34 degrees to 38 degrees as possible, except for squashes, pumpkins, and sweet potatoes, which need a warm room—55 degrees to 65 degrees. For apples 30 degrees to 32 degrees is desirable.

"The atmosphere in the storage should be damp to prevent shriveling. An earthen floor is best. Sprinkle concrete floors every day or so, or cover with a layer of earth or sawdust which may be dampened occasionally. Keep the storage room as dark as possible by shading the windows from the outside in such a way that light will not be admitted when they are opened.

"As the weather continues to grow colder, the root crops buried in the outdoor pit should receive more protection by putting on another layer of straw or hay, and a layer of earth thrown on top."

Soy Beans Add Minerals to the Poultry Ration

Now that it has been proved that the addition of minerals to the poultry ration makes vegetable protein as most as effective in the ration as animal protein, poultry keepers are using more and more of such feeds as cottonseed meal, soy beans, etc. In some sections, these are truly economical additions to the ration as substitutes for meat scrap. Experiments recently made at the poultry department of the Missouri State university at Columbia indicate that soy bean meal can be successfully used up to 30 per cent of the mash mixture when 5 per cent of a good mineral mixture is included. The mineral mixture recommended by Professor Kempster is one pound of bone meal. In addition the fowls, of course, have access regularly to oyster shell and grit in hoppers.

Essential Ingredients for a Balanced Ration

With plenty of hay it is not necessary to purchase oil meal or cottonseed meal to make a ration for a dairy cow containing the proper proportion of essential ingredients.

30 lbs. corn silage..... 42 lbs. protein
14 lbs. alfalfa..... 1.63 lbs. protein
5 lbs. cornmeal..... .07 lbs. protein
Total roughage..... 212 lbs. protein
Five pounds of corn and oats containing .46 pounds of protein gives the required amount of protein, or 2.58 pounds. If cows cannot eat that amount of roughage cutting out some of the silage will not materially affect the ration. If it is desired to feed some oil meal or cottonseed meal cut out five pounds of alfalfa and substitute two pounds of oil meal or one and one-half pounds of cottonseed meal.

Result of Winter Plowing

One of the most important results of fall and winter plowing is the exposing of the turned soil to the disinfecting effect of winter freezing and thawing thus breaking up the soil and pulverizing the soil more thoroughly than man could possibly do with the harrow.

The average animal in the herd will consume 12 gallons or 150 pounds of water each day. One cow on test at the Missouri station giving 110 pounds of milk daily consumed 550 pounds or 65 gallons of water in a day.

Water is more often the limiting factor in production during cold snaps. The two things which affect the quantity of the water and the number of times she drinks. No digestive system, even a cow's, can take 100 pounds of ice water at one time and not be disturbed, says Linn.

Succulent Poultry Feed Will Vary in Vitamines

Ensilage may be used as a succulent feed for poultry if there is nothing better available. Wheat pasture, alfalfa leaves, or sprouted oats are superior to ensilage as they supply vitamine A, which is an important part of green feed and which is not believed to exist in ensilage.

Cabbage is an excellent succulent if it can be stored to prevent rotting. It is also lacking in vitamine A, therefore the poultryman should use yellow corn freely with it.

Beets make an excellent succulent feed for hens. It is not thought that they possess the vitamine A found in green feed. The combination of yellow corn and beets, supplemented with tankage in the mash, and other essentials of a good ration would be adequate for all practical purposes, recommends L. F. Payne, head poultryman, Kansas State Agricultural college.

Dairy Ration When Corn Fodder Is Only Roughage

The following ration is very desirable for dairy cows when corn fodder is the only roughage to be had: Ground corn, 300 pounds; ground oats, 200 pounds; wheat bran, 300 pounds. This mixture should be fed at the rate of one pound per day for each two to four pounds of milk produced. If clover is available it would not be necessary to purchase the bran and oil meal for a mixture of 600 pounds ground corn and 400 pounds ground oats fed at the rate of one pound for each two or three pounds of milk produced makes a very good ration with clover hay.

FARM FACTS

Legume seed are cheap in comparison with nitrogen.

No one has the right to plant an ear of seed corn without knowing it will grow.

A good shed is a far better place than a fence corner for storing farm machinery during the winter.

To see if the germination is injured test a few ears of corn which you intend to save for seed.

Right now is the time to prevent pocket gophers from harming next year's alfalfa and potato crop.

Cleaning up the garden spot, burning or plowing under the refuse, will help to control insect and disease troubles next spring.

The chief purpose of the strawberry mulch is to retard the early growth in the spring, thus preventing injury from late freezes.

Yields of wheat can be maintained without deep plowing every year. Once in three years is sufficient for maximum yields.

Muslin frames or glass windows on the south side of the poultry house should not be closed except during the most severe weather.

Cost of Defective Vision

The strain of modern life is not without its effect on the younger generation, for approximately 2,000,000 school children in the United States are retarded in their studies through defective vision. The members of this great army of youthful students are from one to two years behind in their school work, making a cost to the taxpayers of $130,000,000 additional each year. The total retardation from all sources is estimated at $300,000,000 a year.—From Thrift Magazine.

6,822 DEATHS FROM WHOOPING COUGH

Whooping cough is the most neglected of children's diseases, and one of the most dangerous. There are 6,822 deaths reported in a single year in the United States from this disease. There is no cure for whooping cough, but relief can be given and its duration shortened. A few drops of Dr. Drake's Giessco will relieve the most violent paroxysms of coughing, and given regularly it will lessen the severity of the attacks and bring quicker recovery. The Last Word

"Yesterday I encountered what I believe is the last word in hand-catchers," said a downtown business man. "This lad is a guard for one of the armored car companies. He stands about six feet in height, is of the rawboned Western type, wears a Western sombrero and a very deep belt in which he sports a pistol at least a foot in length. All of that was very interesting, but when I noticed that he wore mittens it gave me a laugh."—Detroit News.

Poison Bait Objected To

Indians on the Navajo reservation in Arizona use prairie dogs for food, and consequently object to the usual methods of killing these pests by the distribution of poison baits. They are willing, however, to co-operate with government and state officials in eradication campaigns carried on by running water down the prairie dog burrows after a heavy rain, forcing the rodents into the open, where they can be caught or killed.

Not of Criminal Bent

Strange as it may seem, some of the "Yep, got a good ocer." Australians are proud to claim descent from the convicts who were the first settlers in that land. In explanation, it is to be borne in mind that a large proportion of the convicts transported to Australia in the early days were not what we should now call criminals. Many were convicted of quite petty offenses, and some were mere children.

East Indian Found Angling Fine Sport

"Every day I have been catching four fishes and if otherwise the rules I might have caught more than a dozen. Thirty-four too small ones I have returned. My friend Colonel —, of the —, once told me that the age of the trout depends upon the weight in pounds as the years of her age. Taking this into consideration I might thrust my opinion that if the stream is closed for a period of three or four years, one might be able to catch here plenty of three and four-pound fishes when it would be re-opened.

"The game is not interesting on the whole if simply small ones are caught simply for belly's sake, but it is really very amusing to catch big ones and to enjoy their silly frisks.

ORIOLE

Model 7-5 Tube Radio

The reason for the startling performance of the Oriole Receivers may now be told. The new "Trium" Circuit has been patented by the W. K. Electric Co. This circuit gives the important results noted below:

- TUBE OSCILLATION--No "lossers" are used to keep the tubes from oscillating. Tubes naturally do not oscillate in this circuit. This fact makes the Oriole highly selective.
- SELECTIVITY--Because of the new, unusual and patented features of this circuit, strong signals cannot be transferred from tube to tube, as in ordinary circuits. This makes the Oriole the sharpest tuning receiver yet invented.
- NO TUBE NOISES--Complete elimination of tube noises effected by using a zero voltage in the primaries of the radio frequency transformers. Oriole has exceptional volume and sweetness of tone. Its selectivity is unparalleled.

Important News of the Badger State Arranged in Condensed Form

Fond du Lac—A petition for a Carnegie medal for Henry Gillig, 15 son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Gillig, of Fond du Lac, is being circulated as the result of his rescue of his brother Carl, 12, from drowning in the Fond du Lac river. Officials of the Moose lodge were instrumental in circulating the petition. When the younger boy broke through the ice while walking across the river, his brother Henry planned to after him, breaking the ice with his fist until he could reach the drowning boy. He held Carl up until men on shore pulled them out with a rope.

Neenah—Two suits for $10,000 each against Winnebago county, brought as the result of an automobile accident which in July, 1924, claimed the lives of two young women, have been settled out of court, it was announced at Neenah. The complainants in each case have been awarded $750. It was claimed by the estates of the two girls, who brought the suits, that the accident was due to the bad condition of the highway.

Green Bay—The First Methodist church of Green Bay was destroyed by fire believed to have originated in an overloaded furnace. The brick edifice, erected in 1903, is a total loss. Flames razed the auditorium and consumed the pipe organ, pews and all fixtures. The loss is estimated at $50,000. The First Methodist congregation is one of the oldest parishes in the city and less than a year ago burned its last mortgage.

Sturgeon Bay—If figures mean what they say, Door county, in the western Sturgeon Bay toll bridge, has one of the best barometers for measuring tourist traffic and local prosperity found in any section of the state, according to Capt. James E. Johnson, manager of the Sturgeon Bay public utilities. An increase of 100,000 cars in 1925 to almost 900,000 cars in 1925 is shown in a comprehensive report compiled by Mr. Johnson.

Stevens Point—Shot in the face by his son, Hugh W. Leonard, 28, Joseph E. Leonard, 78, is in serious condition at the Stevens Point hospital. The son is held in jail without charge. The shooting occurred at the Leonard farm home in the town of Stockton, Portage county. The act is attributed by the authorities to the young man's mental condition.

Madison—Medical science scored a new triumph in Madison. It was revealed when it became known that at the Methodist hospital the life of Mildred F. Baum, 22, son of Franklin E. Baum, assistant attorney general, was saved by administering dioxide gas to counteract the effects of monoxide gas by which the young man had been asphyxiated in the family garage.

Monroe—Miss Vera M. Divan, 21, three years champion pig club girl of Wisconsin and recognized in the nation, has become Mrs. Merrill A. Smith, marrying a former Fresno high school athlete, who for six years has been employed on her father's farm near Monroe. As club leader for the last two years, Miss Divan brought the work of Green county farm children to first rank in the state.

Ladyville—According to the records of Elmer Hill, clerk of Kusk county, 9,529 woodchucks were killed in the county during 1925, on which bounties totaling $1,730 were paid. During the previous year woodchuck bounties amounted to $8,000. One hundred thirteen wolves, 30 wildcats and four foxes were presented for bounties in the county last year.

Fond du Lac—The Isaac Wilton league, Chicago, has purchased a tract of 1,085 acres of beautiful wooded land surrounding Mosau lake and Lake 15 in the southern part of Fond du Lac county and will use the territory for a fish and game refuge. The purchase price was not made public.

Wausau—John E. Ross, well known lumberman of Wausau, is making possible the completion of the Wausau Memorial hospital, built and partially equipped several years ago, by defraying the expense of finishing off and equipping the upper story of the building.

New London—Harry Wohl, Fremont, had a narrow escape from death when a large piece of rock became loosened from the ledge high near Redfield, seven miles south of New London, and fell upon and killed one of the horses hitched to the wagon.

Monroe—That he robbed an Albany store the night before his wedding in order to have enough money for the trip to Rockford for the ceremony was revealed at Monroe during the getting of Warren Price, 29, of Albany by Dist. Atty. Bruce M. Blum.

Stoughton—Nels W. Assen, inventor of the hand grenade used extensively in the World war, died at his home in Stoughton after a few months' illness with tuberculosis. He was 48.

Marquette—While his brother was carrying him two miles in search of medical aid, William Stenzel, 14, of Beaver, Marquette county, bled to death of wounds inflicted by Edward Stenzel, his brother, in a hunting accident.

Eagle River—Maurice Holzman was fined $200 or sixty days in jail and William White was fined $100 or thirty days in jail when they were found guilty in Municipal court at Eagle River of illegal possession of furs.

Madison—The beginning of 1926 finds the office of Secretary of State Fred R. Zimmerman engaged in the huge task of issuing 1926 license plates and certificates of title to 600,000 automobile owners. Two hundred clerks, with the aid of the latest types of labor saving machinery, are employed. The fees to be collected from owners of motor vehicles in 1926 will amount to $1,000,000, Secretary Zimmerman says.

Neenah—A sewage disposal plant to be built when the time comes that state authorities forbid the dumping of city sewage into the rivers and lakes of the state is included in plans for a new general sewer system for Neenah, prepared by City Engineer A. E. McMahon and approved by the state health board. The plans will now be presented to the city council and it is expected a part of them will be carried out next summer.

Eau Claire—Henry Kessler, Chicago liquor runner, arrested in Eau Claire with 124 gallons of alcohol in his automobile while on the way from Chicago to St. Paul, was released on payment of two fines aggregating $800. The car, which was seized by the state, has been released on proof that Kessler was not the owner.

Sturgeon Bay—One of the first lighthouses in Door county, with three and one-half acres of land, a visiting place for thousands of tourists for many years, has been sold by the government for $500 to W. Mubler, Laporte, Ind. The old lighthouse, now in ruins, is on the north point of Bailey's harbor, twenty miles north of Sturgeon Bay.

Birchwood—Because of the high cost of lumber production and the over-supplied lumber market, the Sawyer county timber regions are now inactive than in many years. A number of companies which have operated in the woods in past seasons are not logging this season, while others are operating on a smaller scale.

Racine—Tuskegee Industrial Institute, a college for negroes in Alabama, will receive about $18,000 under the will of Peter D. Thomas, Racine negro who died recently. Thomas was a Civil war veteran and at one time was coroner of Racine county. Mrs. Thomas is to receive the income from the $24,000 estate during her life.

Green Bay—Announcements have been sent out to all Knights of Columbus councils and assemblies in the state by John A. Kuyper, of De Pere, master of the fourth degree in Wisconsin, that an exemplification of the fourth degree of the order will be held at the new $500,000 Columbus Community club in Green Bay on Feb. 28.

Tomahawk—The Union tannery, which for many years has been numbered among Tomahawk's important industries, has ceased operations. The last shipment of leather was made several days ago. Whether the plant ever will run again is not known at this time. Many men are thrown out of employment.

Green Bay—Msr. Peter Van Meyer has been appointed by Bishop Paul P. Rhode, Green Bay, to succeed the late W. F. Van Rossum as dean of the De Pere academy, which has been announced. The Rev. Rossum was stricken with heart trouble and died at his home Dec. 24.

Rhineland—As a result of the recent Merchants' State Bank building fire, which ruined the Rhineland telephone exchange, that city will not have local telephone service until Feb. 1. A temporary exchange is being installed.

Beloit—James E. Ross, 59, who entered the Civil war as a private in the 22d Wisconsin Infantry and emerged a first lieutenant, after being wounded in action and suffering incarceration in Libby prison, died at Beloit.

Menasha—Fire occurred for the third time in two weeks in the dry kiln of the Paper Roll Plug company at Menasha. A short time ago two fires within twenty-four hours broke out.

Birchwood—The Rev. William Bell, 96, died at his home in Chetek, according to messages received in Birchwood. Mr. Bell came to Barron county in 1879.

Madison—Arthur Penbody, state architect and state engineer, has resigned his latter position in the state service and will remain as state architect only, it was learned in the capitol.

Madison—Prices of Wisconsin farm products have been higher during 1925 than during any other period since the war, Edward Nordman state commissioner of markets, stated.

Beloit—For the first time in Beloit history, building operations have gone over the million mark in 1925, a checkup on the year's progress shows. Construction to the value of $1,850,000 has been completed in Beloit and South Beloit.

Rhineland—The Wisconsin Valley Power company has been incorporated in Wausau to take over the property and assets of the Rhineland Light & Power company and the Antigo Electric company.

Milwaukee—Senator Irvine L. Lenroot, on a recent visit in Milwaukee, made informal announcement of his candidacy for re-election. Mr. Lenroot will make a formal statement in the near future of what he considers the issue in the approaching contest.

Antigo—Seven persons, including two children who were sick abed, were driven from their home in sub-zero weather when the partially destroyed home of D. A. Castagny on the outskirts of Antigo.

BILLS INTRODUCED FOR FARMER RELIEF

Dickinson Presents Measure in House—McKinley Gives One to Senate.

Washington.—Two measures providing for farm relief were introduced in congress, one in the house by Representative L. J. Dickinson, Republican of Iowa, and the other in the senate by Senator William M. McKinley, Republican of Illinois.

The purpose of the Dickinson measure is to control the surplus of agricultural commodities by the creation of a federal farm advisory council. The bill carries an appropriation of $200,000 for the expenses of the measure. The McKinley plan is along slightly different lines.

Under the Dickinson bill when the advisory council determined that there is, or will be, a surplus, it will determine on an "optional period" under which the various farm co-operative associations will buy at the domestic price and sell at the world price, being reimbursed for any losses so sustained. These losses will be met by the collection of an "equalization fee" from the producers of the commodity in question.

Senator McKinley's bill provides for a system of co-operatively owned warehouses throughout the grain districts and stipulates that the farmers may deposit their surplus grains there and receive in return warehouse certificates upon which they can borrow from banks, members of the federal reserve system and agricultural financial institutions.

Senator McKinley contends that his plan would put into the hands of the farmers the ability to handle their crops so as to prevent dumping on the market at the time of harvest and would control prices by distributing the sale over the year.

Scott's Brother Found in California Prison

Merced, Cal.—Wanted in Chicago in connection with the murder of Joseph Maurer, Robert Scott, alias Joseph Redding, was brought down from a convict road camp in the high Sierras by two guards. Calls to Robert Scott by his father, "Son, come home and save your brother's life," went unheeded last summer and Russell T. Scott was doomed to die for a murder he said his brother committed. Russell eventually avoided the gallows and was sent to Chester prison. Now Robert Scott has been discovered to be an inmate of the San Quentin (Cal.) penitentiary.

The man known as John Redding had held up Charles Frank, proprietor of a store in San Francisco, and was caught after a chase by a policeman. He now proves to be Scott.

Virginia Governor's Wife Hurt When Mansion Burns

Richmond, Va.—Mrs. E. Lee Trinkle, wife of the governor, was so seriously burned in a fire which caused extensive damage in the state executive mansion that surgical treatment will be necessary. The fire swept through the entire lower floor of the mansion, destroying priceless paintings, antiques, and other heirlooms accumulated during the 314 years since the mansion was built under the direction of James Monroe. Mrs. Trinkle was injured when she ran through flames to reach her fourteen-year-old son, E. Lee Trinkle Jr., who was asleep on the third floor. She was burned about the face, neck, and arms, but, with her son leaped from his window to the ground.

Twentieth Century Train Wrecked; 5 Persons Hurt

Chicago.—George Stocker, a locomotive engineer, and four other railroad employees and passengers were injured when the sixth section of the Twentieth Century Limited of the New York Central crashed into an empty passenger train in the yards at Root street. The locomotive and two baggage coaches of the limited were derailed. Among the injured were E. E. Ely of Mishawaka, Ind., a mail clerk; R. L. Lichty of Bryan, Ohio, and Mrs. Elizabeth Dworkin of Hartford, Conn. About 120 passengers were on the train.

Former Helen Gould Bride for Fourth Time

New York.—Princess Helen Viora, divorced wife of Prince Viora of Albania, was married in the chapel of the marriage license bureau in the municipal building to Oscar M. Burke, a manufacturer of this city. City Clerk Cruise performed the ceremony. The bride, formerly Helen Kelly, was once the wife of Frank Gould. This is her fourth marriage. She divorced Prince Viora in Paris in 1922.

PROCLAIM CAROL'S SON CROWN PRINCE

Regents Are Named for Rumanian Heir to Throne.

Berlin.—Four-year-old Prince Michael of Rumania was proclaimed crown prince in place of his father, according to a dispatch from Bucharest. Crowds surrounded the parliament building in a demonstration in favor of the tiny prince's father. The military were held in readiness to quell disorder during the session.

Enclosed, Rumania.—The national assembly by a practically unanimous vote accepted Prince Carol's renunciation of his succession to the throne and took from him all his prerogatives as a member of the royal family. The assembly confirmed the appointment of Carol's four-year-old son, Prince Michael (Michael), as heir apparent.

The assembly also accepted King Ferdinand's recommendation that a regent until Prince Michael attains the age of eighteen, to rule in the event of Ferdinand's death, should be composed of Prince Nicolas, the king's second son; Mrs. Miron Cristea, as patriarch of the Rumanian Orthodox church, and Grifore Buzdugan, as president of the Supreme Court of Justice.

The necessary civil procedure for a divorce between Prince Carol and Princess Helen of Greece has been started. Prince Carol is now at Hotel de la Ville in Milan, Italy, where in a brief statement he denounced most of the stories about his renunciation as "extravagant and damnable lies." At the same hotel is Mme. Mardia Lupescu, a beautiful red-headed daughter of a merchant of Jassy. She recently left her husband. She has been seen often with the prince.

Ellin Mackay, Society Girl, Elopes With Jazz King

New York.—Ivring Berlin married Ellin Mackay, Broadway's king of jazz and the youngest child of the famous financier rode down in the subway to the Municipal building and were united in the little anteroom known as the wedding chapel.

They motored away toward Paul Smith's in the Adirondacks, without waiting to meet Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph and Cable company, the bride's father, who was opposed to the marriage. This was the culmination of a romance that was the subject of society gossip for a year.

Mackay summoned one of the executives of the company and dictated this statement: "The marriage was a complete surprise to me and was done without my knowledge or consent. Beyond this I have nothing to say."

Panama Canal Tolls for 1925 Total $21,380,759

Balboa, Canal Zone.—The Panama canal collected a total of $21,380,759 in tolls from 4,774 commercial vessels during 1925, according to official statistics compiled. It is estimated that the cargo total for the year was approximately 24,000,000 tons.

PANGALOS SETS UP GREEK DICTATORSHIP

Plans Strongest Army in Balkans—Navy to Rule Mediterranean.

Athens.—With an assertion that he would create the strongest army in the Balkans and a navy which will dominate the eastern Mediterranean, Gen. T. H. Pangalos, revolutionary premier of Greece, proclaimed himself dictator of that country. The dictatorship was announced at a military banquet.

Premier Pangalos announced that the "military revolution of 1909 led Greece to the gates of Broussa and the suburbs of Constantinople but the elections of 1920 placed the country in the grip of parliamentarism with catastrophic results."

The military dictatorship, similar in its announced aims to that of Mussolini in Italy, follows the deportation of 400 alleged communists to the Aegean islands on a charge that they were plotting a revolution.

The military aims which are announced by the new dictator call to memory the Bulgarian-Greek imbroglio last fall, in which Greek troops were sent into Bulgaria on an assertion that Bulgarians on the border had fired across at the Greeks. The Greeks were forced to withdraw their troops and an investigation by a commission of the League of Nations assessed a fine against Greece.

The revolution is the seventh in Greece since 1916, when, after the Saloniki revolution, a provisional government was formed by Venizelos.

Two U. S. Army Officers Lost Hunting in Mexico

San Antonio, Texas.—Two of four American army officers, who went into Mexico on a hunting trip, have been lost presumably between Nuevo Laredo and Rodriguez, state of Nuevo Laredo.

The missing men are Lieut. C. S. Thorpe of Brooks field, army air training school near here and Lieut. Marion T. Plurr, Fourth field artillery, Fort McIntosh, near Laredo, Texas. WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

At This Critical Period Let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Help You Safely Through

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I have always wanted to tell you that a good medicine I think the Vegetable Compound is. Over a year ago I became weak and rundown, and my back hurt all the time. I was not able to do my light housework. I went to my family doctor and he treated me for over a month and didn't help me. I saw your name in the paper and the name of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I said to my husband, 'I will try that and see if it will help me.' I have taken six bottles and am feeling much better, but I am still taking it as it is the change of life with me and I will keep on till it is over."—Mrs. ANNE KWISKE, rear 625 1st Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

Would Seem There Is

Honor Among Thieves. Some time ago a small town school teacher in Illinois woke early one morning to find a young man going over the contents of her bureau. "What are you going here?" she managed to gasp. "I'm looking for $5 to pay my fare to a town where I can get a job." "Here's my purse," said the teacher, faintly, drawing it from under the pillow. "There's about $10 in it. You may have it all, if you will only go." The burglar took half the money, saying he would return it when he got work, explaining he was not a professional burglar, only an emergency one, and left. The other day the teacher received a letter addressed to "The Young Lady in the Southwest Room" at such and such a street and number. In it she found two $5 bills and a sheet of paper on which was written, "Loan and interest from the burglar."—Capper's Weekly.

OLIVER OCTOBER

by GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

JEALOUSY

SYNOPSIS—Oliver October Baxter, Jr. was born on a vine October day. His parents were prominent in the commercial, social and spiritual life of the town of Rumley. The night that Oliver October was born a gypsy caravan rode his father's fortune and tells him what a wonderful future his son will have. But adds that his son will never reach the age of thirty, that he will be hanged for a crime of which he is not guilty. Ten years elapse. Mrs. Baxter died when Oliver was nursing seven. Josephine Sage, wife of the minister, caused a sensation when she goes on the stage. Her daughter Jane and young Oliver become greatly attached to each other. After finishing college, young Oliver accepts a position in Chicago with an engineering company. He goes to China. Upon his return he enlists in the Canadian army. The war over, Oliver returns home. He hears Jane is in love with Doctor Lansing. Desires Mr. Baxter's blessing to Oliver to remain in Rumley. Oliver gets a job in Chicago. Mr. Baxter accompanies Oliver through a swamp on the way to the Sage home. On the way they discover Oliver's refusal to stay in Rumley. Mr. Baxter falls on a return home.

No one could be found who saw him after he took leave of his son on the swamp road. Oliver October related all that transpired between them on that moonlit way. He did not spare himself in the recital. No one blamed him, however.

An inspection of Mr. Baxter's closet the following morning led to a puzzling discovery. A comparatively new suit of dark gray material—rather too heavy for summer wear—was missing, while the wrinkled, well-worn garments that he wore daily at the store were found hanging in the closet.

The excitement in Rumley was intense. The Baxter home became a magnet that drew practically the entire population of the town to that section, and there was not an hour of the day that did not see scores of people trudging through the safer portions of the swamp or tramping along the uplands that bordered it.

Detectives from Chicago, brought down by Oliver October, agreed with the young man that his father had "skipped out," to use the expression of Michael O'Rourke. It was Mr. O'Rourke who advanced the theory that the old man had taken this amazing means of forcing his son to remain in Rumley.

"Why," said he, "it's as plain as the nose on your face. He is dead set on having you stick to this town. You say 'nix.' Well, what's the smartest thing he can do? The only way to make you stay in this town is for him to leave it. He sneaks off without letting anybody know where he's going. Why does he do that? If you or anybody else knew where he was you'd have him back here in no time, and all his trouble for nothing. He thought it all out before hand. Now he has his own way, and you've got to stay here until he gets good and ready to come back. Somebody's got to be in charge of his affairs. There is a chance, of course, that he wandered out in the swamp, but I don't believe it. If you want us to go ahead and rake the country for him, we'll do it."

"I want to find him," said Oliver, firmly. "You may be right in your surmise—I hope you are. But just the same, I don't intend to leave a stone unturned, Mr. O'Rourke."

But the days ran into weeks and the weeks into months, with the mystery no nearer solution than in the beginning—no word, no sign from the old man who had vanished, no clue that led to anything save disappointment. There was something grim, uncanny about the silence of old man Baxter—it was indeed the silence of the dead. "He might as well be dead," was a remark that became common in Rumley whenever the case was discussed. Strangely enough, no one now believed him to be dead. Ever since he agreed with the detective that the cantankerous old man had "skipped out" with the sole idea of frustrating his son's plan to return to Chicago.

Oliver October took charge of the store and, as self-appointed manager, conducted the business to the best of his ability. There was nothing in the young man's manner to indicate that he rebelled against the turn in his affairs. On the contrary, he took hold with an enthusiasm that left nothing to be desired by those who at first shook their heads dubiously over the situation.

"I am to blame for all this," he protested loudly. "If my father is dead, I am accountable for his death. Whatever his present condition may be, I am responsible for it. Don't put all the blame on that zypsy fortune-teller. I should have realized the state of mind he was in, and I should have given up everything else in the world to help him weather the next year or so of doubt and distress."

The winter wore away, spring came and quietly melted into summer; the first anniversary of the unexplained disappearance of Oliver Baxter passed. Three months remained of the last year allotted to Oliver October by the gypsy "queen" on that wild, shrieking night in '90. But by this time practically everybody in Rumley was counting the days and jokingly reminding Oliver that his chances got better every day!

"I see by the paper this evening that you, Uncle Horace, has announced himself as a candidate for state senator," said Mr. Sage one evening as he sat enjoying his customary half hour on Sage's porch with Jane and Oliver. "Well, I know one vote he will not get," said Oliver, "even if he is my uncle."

"I know of another," said the minister drily. "Why, daddy, I am really beginning to take quite a fancy to you," cried Jane delightedly. "Only last week you said he ought to be tarred and feathered for turning those two old Bannister women out of their house over at Pleasant Ridge."

"But he didn't turn them out," said Oliver quickly. "Somebody came along at the last minute and lent them the money to redeem their little house and farm."

"You don't really mean it, Oliver?" cried Mr. Sage. "That is good news—splendid news."

"I hate that old Gooch man," cried Jane.

"Jane, my dear, you really are becoming quite a vixen," remonstrated her father.

An automobile came to a sudden stop in front of the house, and an agile young man leaped out, leaving his engine running. He came up the walk with long strides.

"Say, Oliver, you old skate, I've been looking all over town for you," shouted Sammy Parr. "This isn't your night to call on Jane—don't you know that?"

"Good evening, Jane. Evening, Mr. Sage. Say, the Bannisters told me all about you, you blamed old skate—I mean Ollie, not you, Mr. Sage. Gee whiz, Ollie you certainly did throw the looks into Uncle Horace this time, didn't you?"

"Sit up," growled Oliver, scowling fiercely at the excited Sammy. "What on earth are you talking about, Sammy?"

"Out with it, Sammy, out with it," counseled Mr. Sage, coming down the steps. "Well, what do you think, Mr. Sage—what do you think? Why, this chump here is the guy that lent Mrs. Bannister the money to redeem her house."

"Oh, Oliver," cried Jane. "Did you really do it? I could squeeze you to death for it. And you never told me you never breathed a word?"

"It was only about a thousand dollars," mumbled Oliver.

"Sure it was," agreed Sam cheerfully. "But right there and then the destiny of the great American nation was shaped along new lines. The words were no sooner out of the mouth of old Mrs. Bannister when the boom was born! Yes, sir, at that very moment—"

"Well, for the Lord's sake, Sammy, slow down! What the dickens are you driving at, anyhow? Boom? What boom?"

"Your boom, you idiot! The boom's been started for you as candidate for state senator against old man Gooch."

"Why, you durned chump," roared Oliver. "I'm not going to run for state senator or anything else. You must be crazy. I'll head it off tomorrow. I'll telephone—"

"Wait a minute!" called out Oliver, springing to his feet as Sammy darted down the walk. "Nix!" shouted Sammy over his shoulder.

The three of them watched him in silence as he leaped into his car and began his swift, reckless turn in the narrow street.

"What are you going to do about it?" inquired the minister, the first to speak.

Jane did not give Oliver a chance to reply. "Do about it?" she cried. "Why, he's going to run against old Gooch and beat the life out of him!"

Oliver looked up at her. She stood at the top of the steps, the light from the open door falling athwart her radiant face, half in shadow, half in the warm, soft glow. Suddenly his heart began to pound—heavy, smothering blows against his ribs that had the effect of making him dizzy, as with vertigo. He continued to stare, possessed of a strange wonder, as she turned to the tall, gray-haired parent and laid both hands on his shoulders.

"I wish I could say 'gee whiz' as Sammy says it," she cried. "I feel all over just like one great big 'gee whiz.' Don't you, daddy?"

The man of God took his daughter's firm, round chin between his thumb and forefinger and shook it lovingly. "One 'gee whiz' in the family is enough," said he. "I am glad you feel like one, however. You take me back 25 years, my dear. Your mother used to say 'gee whiz' when she felt like it. It is, after all, a rather harmless way of expressing oneself."

Presently he left them and Jane spoke softly.

"Did you notice, Oliver, that he spoke of mother a little while ago? It was the first time in years. I wonder if I remind him of her in lots of ways?"

Oliver's thoughts leaped backward a score of years and more. "I used to think she was the most wonderful person in all the world," he said. "I was very desperately in love with your mother when I was six or seven, Jane. He hesitated and then went on clumsily, almost furiously: "I am beginning to think that you are like her in a lot of ways."

She gave him a quick, startled look. His face was turned away, and so he did not see the tender, wistful little smile that flickered on her lips, nor was he aware of the long, deep breath she took. From that moment a queer, uneasy restraint fell upon them. There were long silences, dreamy on her part, moody on his. He left shortly after 10; his "good-night" was strangely gruff and unnatural.

He was jealous. He knew it for a fact, he confessed it to himself for the first time openly and unreservedly. He was jealous of young Lansing. There was no use trying to deny it. He did not go so far as to think of himself as being in love with Jane—that would be ridiculous, after all the years they had known each other—but he bitterly resented the thought that she might be in love with some one else. Especially with the superior, supercilious, cocksure Lansing!

CHAPTER V

An Amazing Cablegram

"Why, if Jane were in love with Lansing," reflected Oliver, "good Lord, what a fool he had been to think it would make no difference to him! It would make a difference—an appalling difference. All nonsense to think she wouldn't go out of his life if she married Lansing or anyone else. Of course she would. Strange, though, that he should be so consumed with jealousy when he wasn't the least bit in love with Jane himself. He had been in love half a dozen times. He ought to know what love was—and certainly his feelings toward Jane were nothing like those he had experienced in bygone affairs of the heart. Gee whiz! What had suddenly got into him?"

The next morning he was down at the swamp bright and early, inspecting the work of the ditchers and tile layers. The task of redividing the land had been under way for several months and was slowly nearing completion.

"I wish you'd change your mind about not going out any farther, Oliver," said old John Phillips, who was superintending the work. "We could go out a quarter of a mile farther without a bit of risk, and you'd add about 20 acres of good land to—"

"We'll have enough, John," interrupted the young man. "We'll stick to the original survey. Don't go any farther the stakes I set up out yonder. It may be safe but it isn't worth while."

"Well, you're the boss," grumbled old John, and added somewhat peevishly: "But I can't help saying I think you're making a mistake. There's some mighty good land there, 'spite of them mudholes a little farther out."

"I'm not denying that," said Oliver patiently. "But we'll stop where the stakes are, just the same."

A few minutes later old John confided to one of the ditchers that young Baxter was considerably of a red head. Either that or else he had some thundering good reason of his own for not wanting to go out beyond the stakes.

Aha! Now they'll find Old Oliver's body in the swamp! The gypsy scores again.

Stairs' Death Toll

In the Manhattan section of New York there have been more than 100 deaths in a single year due to falls on stairs. The total number of such fatalities in the United States is estimated to be about 14,800 each year. The majority of these falls are due either to slipping or tripping, the former being far more prevalent. About 85 per cent of accidents on stairs occur during December, January and February. This is due to snow, ice and poor lighting.

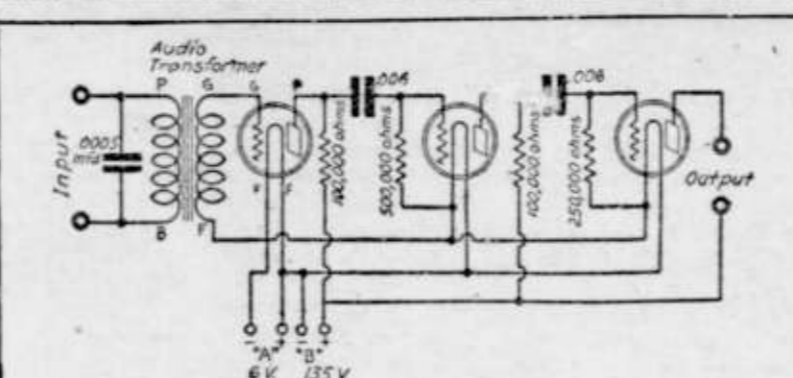

House Wrens Surely Not Good Neighbors

Mr. and Mrs. Robin had selected a nice spot and built them a home. But, alas, no sooner were the eggs laid than the wrens discovered what was afoot. Right before the surprised lullaberry's eyes did those wicked wrens go to that nest and throw out every egg and young of other and much larger birds, says the Flower Grower.

Our member witnessed just such a vicious act performed by her own tenants. To begin with two wren houses had been supplied and both were quickly occupied. Unfortunately that is contrary to wren nature, as each pair wants to be the whole thing in a garden. Trouble soon developed and one pair drove out the other. But the conqueror was not satisfied, with lording it over little fellows of their own kind.

The Wiring Diagram of the Amplifier Herein Described.

By SIDNEY E. FINKELSTEIN, In the New York Herald-Tribune.

The honors in audio-frequency amplification seem to be divided more or less evenly between the transformer and the resistance coupling methods. Each system has its staunch adherents, who are ever ready to fling masses of facts, figures and fancies into each other's faces whenever a discussion of relative merits arises. The transformer supporters are just as firm in their belief of the superiority of their instruments as the resistance henchmen are in their views on the advantages of the latter devices.

The writer has used both transformers and resistances in the construction of a large number of sets, and after studying the general results obtained from them has come to the neutral conclusion that both systems are good, but that they are even better if they are combined, in the journalistic fashion, to the attainment of the best features of each.

The advantage of the greater amplification per stage afforded by the transformer, combined with the flawless reproduction but lower amplification of the resistances, makes the ideal combination in the majority of sets.

A complete amplifier of this advantageous type can be made at home at surprisingly little trouble and expense, and once on hand it finds application to receiving circuits of all kinds. It may be built permanently into a set or it can be left available as a separate unit for connection to experimental tuners. For the last purpose it is especially convenient, as it saves the constructor of a new set the worry of providing suitable amplification to follow the detector tube.

Parts Required.

An amplifier such as the one shown in the illustration will require the following parts, which can be purchased at any radio store: Hard rubber or composition baseboard 12 inches long, 4 1/2 inches wide and 1/4 inch thick; one heavy audio transformer not above 3 1/2 to 1 ratio, three standard tube sockets, two resistance coupling units with two 100,000, one 500,000 and one 250,000 ohm resistors; one .0005 mfd. fixed condenser, eight binding posts and the usual busbar and mounting screws.

A definite assembly procedure should be followed. First the general location of the instruments should be determined and all the necessary screw holes made in the panel before anything is fastened down permanently.

The devices should be pushed closely together (there is no danger from interstage howling, as there is only one transformer), so as to fit snugly in the room on the right and left hand short edges for input and output binding posts.

The wiring will give no trouble. As a start the "P" and "B" posts of the amplifying transformer should be connected directly to the two binding posts on the extreme left, which are designated as the "input" terminals. The .0005 mfd. fixed condenser is also placed across the wires and can be hidden comfortably out of way beneath the bottom of the baseboard. Of course small holes will have to be drilled in the composition to pass the wires wherever necessary.

The Filament Posts.

Next the filament posts of the three sockets, which are all marked "F," are wired as shown in the diagram, and lead finally to the A battery binding posts. These should be the left hand two of the row of four along the long edge of the baseboard. With this much done the secondary of the transformer can now be wired to the grid and filament posts of the first tube socket. Progressing across, the condenser and resistor terminals are wired in the manner indicated in the accompanying hook-up. With the resistors units that were employed in this particular amplifier the protruding soldered tabs of the spring mountings make the placement of the wires a short and simple task.

The two posts on the extreme right are the output. To one is run a wire from the P terminal of the last nearby stations. You can put down the varied results you get to the phenomenon known as fading.

There are a number of causes for fading of signals. It has been found, however, that the signals from stations using the higher wave-lengths do not fade nearly so badly as those using the low waves. On the other hand, it has lately been found that the low-wave stations can reach a much greater distance with less power than can the high-wave stations which generally use high power.

Radio engineers who have been studying the problem believe that during the daytime an electrical shield formed by the sunlight holds the radio waves close to the ground. The trouble with daylight reception is the fact that trees, houses and other obstacles with which the waves come in contact absorb them to a greater extent. After the sun has set this shield vanishes and the waves leaving the sending station have no shield to buck against and have nothing to absorb them, and so can reach greater distances.

Teaching the Deaf

The first school for the deaf in the United States was a small school started in Hartford, Conn., in 1817. It was financed through the generosity of a few men, one of whom, Doctor Cogswell, had a deaf daughter. Thomas Hopkins Gallaudet, with the collaboration of the Frenchman, Clerc, inaugurated the system of teaching.

THINGS TO REMEMBER

All children know how to prepare maple wax if they live where the snow lies. Ice may be scraped and used as snow if the latter is not obtainable. Pour the boiling-hot maple sirup on the ice or snow and when cool, fall to, and eat the crisp deliciousness.

Barbecue of Porterhouse.—Have a cut of porterhouse about three and one-half inches thick and containing a good piece of tenderloin. Trim into shape and skewer well. Mix two tablespoons of dry mustard with one teaspoonful of salt, the same of white pepper and a dash of cayenne, add to these four tablespoons of creamed butter and rub the mixture well into the meat on both sides and edges. Place on a grate over a pan and set under the gas flame. Have two tablespoons of olive oil mixed with one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and brush the steak every five minutes with this mixture, reducing the heat after the steak is well seared over. Cook forty-five minutes. The brush should be dipped into the gravy in the pan after the juice begins to drip. Rub with more dry mustard with the moistened brush just before it goes to the table.

Thousand Island Dressing.—Put into a pint fruit jar one-half cupful of olive oil, the juice of half a lemon and half an orange, a teaspoonful of onion juice, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, one-fourth teaspoonful of mustard and three sprigs of parsley, chopped fine. Put on the rubber on the can and cover tightly. Shake vigorously and let stand an hour before using. A teaspoonful of powdered sugar is liked by many to modify the acid, and green pepper chopped is another addition.

Cherry Pudding.—Take one cupful of flour, one-fourth cupful of lard, one teaspoonful of baking powder, two teaspoonfuls of melted butter, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, and one cupful of drained cherries. Steam or bake. Serve with the juice of the cherries, a bit of almond flavoring and whipped cream with sugar.

In the well-trained family whose members have been taught to eat and enjoy all kinds of good foods, there will be an infinite variety from which to choose. With rare exceptions, where people are peculiarly sensitive to certain foods, there is no reason why a normal person may not sit down at any table where there is well-prepared food and not enjoy it.

The School Lunch.
Let anyone say that putting up school and other lunches every day for weeks is not a problem; a few weeks of experience will change that view. Every mother should realize how important it is that her child should be well nourished.

No child who is undernourished can do good work with brain or hand. It is not always the child from poor homes that is underfed. Today with the school nurse, the weighing machines, and the constant attention given the health of the child, all may have a chance to grow into healthy adults.

To start the day right there should be plenty of time for a good wholesome breakfast which will "stay by" until the noon lunch.

A dish of whole wheat cooked until it has been well softened, or a well-cooked dish of oatmeal with top milk (no sugar) is preferable; add a few dates or raisins if liked, for sweetening. An egg with toast or muffins and a big glass of milk will make a good breakfast for a growing child. Hot milk in cold weather with an occasional cup of hot cocoa will make a change in the drink. The practice of warming the milk with a little coffee is a most pernicious one as it is very apt to cause digestive disturbances and creates an appetite for coffee.

The cereal coffees of various kinds are both agreeable and nourishing, but coffee should never be given to children, even in small quantities.

Ten as well as all highly seasoned foods and condiments should be taboo. Pickles, highly seasoned sauces and rich foods should not be given children; the continued use of such foods in adults is said to cause the craving for stimulants.

Lack of appetite in the morning is often the result of sleeping in an ill-ventilated room. An adult may miss a meal, often to his bitterness, but a growing child needs plenty of food to supply energy to build tissue.

Often a small child will take food or drink from some receptacle which is especially attractive. A small transparent picture placed on the bottom of a glass so that when empty the picture will show from the bottom is delight to a child.

Cheesy Plan
Governor Trinkle of Virginia was criticizing in Washington a plan to relieve the coal situation. "A poor plan of relief," he said. "It reminds me of a cheese story. 'A man in a restaurant said to his waiter, sternly: 'Waiter, I'm not at all satisfied with this portion of cheese here. It looks as if you'd been using it to bait a mouse trap with.' 'The waiter studied the cheese; then he flipped it over on its other side. 'You had the cheese turned upside down, sir,' he said. 'This is the side which is intended to be uppermost. Now, you see, the cheese is all right, sir.'"
