"How did you like the Hon. Thomas Rott's speech last night, 'Riley'?" Inquired Squire Ramsbottom of Petunia. "He went from one subject to another pretty lively, didn't he?" "Yes, sree!" replied old Riley Rezdew. "I'll tell you why they wouldn't insure you—"

"You allowed constipation to become chronic—until finally it resulted in organic disease."
"People don't realize how insidious constipation is. Its first effects are hardly more than annoyances—headaches, loss of appetite, sleeplessness and the like. But in time, as the body is subjected to continued intestinal poisoning, it may lead to high blood pressure, rheumatism, diabetes or even Bright's disease."
"Stop constipation if you wish to live long. Take a little Nujol every day—that will keep you regular."

Nujol relieves constipation in Nature's way
Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is safe, gentle and natural in its action. Nujol makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimination without overtaxing the intestinal muscles. Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time. Ask your druggist for Nujol today and begin to enjoy the perfect health that is possible only when elimination is normal and regular.

This Year, Win With Power McCormick-Deering Tractor

From the standpoint of effort the tractor owner has an easy time compared with the other fellow. He does not have to crack the whip over tired and weary horses. He has no chores to do. He has full power and full efficiency at his command at all times, regardless of heat and dust and flies. His tractor and tools may be made to work through twenty-four hours a day, if the season demands such extra speed, with utmost efficiency.

McCormick-Deering Engines

With the sturdy, rugged McCormick-Deering Engine pumping the water, running the washing machine, etc., you know the work will be done. And without the engine overheating or running up the operating expense. Every part of the McCormick-Deering is built for steady, important work. Dirt, sand and trash mean little to the McCormick-Deering, as the crankcase is enclosed. The cylinder is removable; in case of wear a new one can be inserted at low cost. The large water hopper permits a generous supply--no overheating.

MIDDLE WEST WILL GET NO RATE CUT

Commerce Commission Denies Appeal of Manufacturers and Railroads.

Washington.—Manufacturing interests and the Middle West and the transcontinental railroads lost their appeal to the interstate commerce commission for establishment of freight rates to the Pacific coast that would enable the Middle West producers to compete with Atlantic seaboard producers who ship via the Panama canal.

By a vote of 7 to 3, the commission denied the transcontinental lines' application for authority to establish reduced rates on a selected list of commodities from Chicago and points as far west as Denver to Pacific coast terminals. The rates asked would have been lower than for intermediate points as Spokane, Wash., and Salt Lake City, Utah.

The application was figured prominently in the debate in the senate on the Gooding long and short haul bill which, if enacted into law, would have the same effect permanently that the decision of the commission will have as long as it stands unmodified.

Opponents of the Gooding bill have repeatedly asserted that discretion should be left to the commission to pass on such applications as the one rejected. The principal commodities on which the railroads asked authority to reduce the rates to Pacific coast cities were iron and steel articles, paper and paper articles, ammunition, cotton goods, lard substitutes, paint, roofing, rosin, soap and soda.

The commission declared that the relief sought was based primarily on market competition. It said that because Pittsburgh enjoyed certain rail and water rates on iron and steel to the Pacific coast the western carriers were proposing all rail rates, not from Pittsburgh but from Chicago, approximately the same as the rail and water rates from Pittsburgh, and would blanket those rates as to original territory as far as Colorado points.

SUES TO DISSOLVE SIXTEEN PATENTS

U. S. Seeks to Revoke Texas Company's Claim.

New York.—Cancellation of the so-called Adams patents, basic patents of the "cracking process" by which hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of gasoline is refined from crude oil every year, has been asked by Attorney General Sargent.

Charging that the 16 patents, now valued at from $40,000,000 to $70,000,000 and owned by the Texas company, one of the largest oil concerns in the country, were obtained by fraud, the Department of Justice filed suit in federal court in Brooklyn.

The suit will have far-reaching effect on the oil industry and its success, if attained, will result in cheaper gasoline for the public, it is declared.

The Texas company, which owns the patents and in turn leases them to more than 40 oil companies in this country.

Joseph H. Adams of Flatbush, Brooklyn, who originally filed claims for the patents which are the subject of the suit.

The patents were obtained "by fraud, collusion, false suggestion and concealment on the part of Adams and the Texas company," the government charged.

The action constitutes the largest single patent suit ever instituted. Loss of the Adams patents and the processes developed from them will cost the Texas company annually $10,000,000 in loss of income yearly, the government believes.

Mob Kills Three in Mexican Church Riot

Nayarit, Mexico.—Three representatives of the State of Nayarit were killed and a number of persons injured, one girl probably fatally, in a riot resulting from orders to close a Catholic church at Jalisco, a neighboring town. The officials met armed opposition from church followers.

A Catholic priest at Jalisco had failed to comply with the closing law and was standing his ground against Presidential orders, with the backing of his flock.

Representatives of the government at Jalisco were met by an infuriated mob, which demanded their withdrawal.

Undaunted by the mob confronting them, which was armed with all sorts of weapons, the three men faced the gathering and read the authorization of the government's closing of the church. Soldiers in sufficient numbers to protect the dignitaries were not available.

ILLINOIS POISONER MAKES CONFESSION

Sentenced to Life Imprisonment, Woman Tells of Two Other Murders.

Flora, Ill.—Mrs. Elsie Bible Mallinsky, forty-four, under life sentence for the murder by poison of the former wife of her third husband, has substantially admitted having committed two other poison murders and attempted a fourth, State's Attorney Harold S. Williams announced.

Her other victims, the state's attorney related, were a husband and the former wife of a former husband.

The woman's confession came on the eve of her departure for Joliet prison.

Authorities said she broke down under the weight of strong circumstantial evidence, but did not make a complete confession to the crimes.

The information made public by Williams, which, he said, is practically the substance of the confession, is that about 15 years ago she killed with poison the wife of Harry Bible in order that she might marry him, and that about three years ago she fatally poisoned Bible when she became dissatisfied with him as a husband.

Her first husband, Wilbur Coppe, divorced her about 18 years ago after it was alleged, she had made an unsuccessful attempt to poison him, the state's attorney said. Later she was convicted of living in adultery with Bible.

According to Williams and her alleged confession, she poisoned Bible's first wife and then married him. His death occurred in December, 1923, but was not investigated at the time.

The woman became housekeeper for Ernest L. Mallinsky, her present husband, and gave poison to his wife, causing her death last September 28. She then married Mallinsky and her arrest recently followed exhuming of the body of the first Mrs. Mallinsky and a chemical examination of the viscera.

Mallinsky is held in the murder of his first wife, but the poison murderer has absolved him of blame. No new charges are to be filed against her.

Forest Week April 18-24 Designated by Coolidge

Washington.—The week of April 18-24 is designated American Forest Week in a proclamation by President Coolidge.

The Canadian government has set apart the same week for the same purpose, and this, President Coolidge declared in the proclamation, is an added reason why our citizens should give careful thought to a matter so important to both countries.

Although warning that "too long have we as a nation consumed our forest wealth without adequate provision for its wise utilization and renewal," the president noted that a "gratifying change is taking place in the attitude of our industries, our landowners, and the American people toward our forests."

Would Impeach Judge of U. S. District Court

Washington.—By a vote of 15 to 6, the house committee on judiciary approved a resolution recommending the impeachment of United States Judge George W. English of the Eastern district of Illinois. The resolution was as follows:

"Resolved, That George W. English, Judge of the District Court of the Eastern district of Illinois, should be impeached for high misdemeanors in office."

If the house approves impeachment it will mean the trial of Judge English before the senate. The votes of two-thirds of the members of the senate will be necessary to convict.

New York.—Invention of the ether knife by Dr. George A. Wyeth of the Vanderbilt clinic is expected to prove a valuable advance in the treatment and cure of cancer.

The Kitchen Cabinet

No king or nobility or other person can give a government which is best for the people, simply because nobody can give you what is best for you, for that which is best for you is what you work out for yourself. A benevolent monarch can give his subjects everything except this one thing: need—this responsibility.—Dr. Frank Crane.

MISCELLANEOUS DISHES

It is possible to have wholesome food and attractive desserts made with but little time and expense. The amount of time required on the account of 95 per cent of the American housewives' plans, it is not easy to have things good, inexpensive, easy to prepare, together with variety; but hard things are what the average housewife knows how to conquer, so she just puts a little more thought and effort into her meal planning.

Fifteen Minute Pudding.—This pudding meets all the qualifications, it is pretentious, wholesome, easy to prepare and not too expensive. Sift one cupful of flour with one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of baking powder, then add one-half cupful of milk, mixing well. Into buttered cups drop a tablespoonful of canned over it add a tablespoonful of canned cherries—juice and all—cover with another spoonful of batter and when three or four cups are partly filled, put to cook in a pan of boiling water, having the water deep enough not to boil out, but not deep enough to good-sized puddings or five or six smaller ones. Steam well covered 15 minutes and serve with cream and sugar.

With the variety of prepared gelatins on the market a dessert which may be quickly prepared and then set into the ice box is ready for the night dinner, or for the next day's luncheon. It must stand long enough to become well chilled to be satisfactory. To this jelly any kind of fresh or canned fruit may be added or served with it. With different flavors combined and molded into various forms, it will seem each time like a new dessert.

A small amount of preserves stirred into cake crumbs flavored with two or three drops of rose extract, garnished with whipped cream, makes a quick, economical and at the same time tasty dessert.

Chocolate Sauce.—Cook the following ingredients in a double boiler: One cupful of milk, two egg yolks, one-fourth cupful of sugar, a pinch of salt, one teaspoonful of butter, two ounces of chocolate or one-quarter cupful of cocoa. Cook until the mixture coats the spoon. Serve hot on ice cream.

Calf's Brains Escalloped.—Parboil the brains, sprinkle with salt and pepper and add a little lemon juice. Cut into inch pieces. Arrange in layers in a buttered baking dish, alternating with tomato sauce. Cover with buttered crumbs and serve with chopped pickle.

Seasonable Foods.—This is the time of year when we enjoy all kinds of hot griddle cakes for breakfast. Here is one worth a adding to one's cook book: Rich Waffles.—Sift one and one-half cups of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Add slowly one cupful of sour milk and one-fourth cupful of melted butter, one teaspoonful of sugar and the yolks of three eggs beaten light. Add the stiffly beaten whites and fold in lightly. Cook on a hot waffle iron and serve with butter and maple syrup.

Carrot Pie.—For a pie that is different you will like this: Cook five carrots until tender, wash and measure, using a cupful of the mashed carrot to a cupful of milk, one egg and a little salt, sugar to taste and spices to flavor. Bake in an open crust as pumpkin pie.

Scrappe.—Take corn meal mush after being well cooked and hot, stir in chopped cold meat of your choice, if liked and plenty of seasoning. Pour into a small bread loaf pan. Mold when cold cut into slices and fry.

Pickled Fish.—Clean fresh fish and lay in salt overnight. In the morning drop them into a pickle made with one cupful of vinegar, one-fourth cupful of water, one tablespoonful of sugar, sliced onion and spices. Let come to the boiling point, add a few fish at a time—until well scalded—can and seal in mason jars. These will be good eating any time of year.

Fluffy Meringue.—Break egg whites into a bowl and set on ice, adding a few grains of salt. When well chilled beat the eggs, adding two tablespoonfuls of sugar for each egg. Return to the ice to chill again, then place on the warm pipe or pudding and brown in a quick oven.

A combination of two desserts may be served which is both pleasing to the eye and taste. Prepare a small amount of chocolate blancmange, just ordinary cornstarch pudding with a spoonful of cocoa or grated chocolate added. Serve a spoonful of the pudding with a small mold of lemon jelly. The combination is especially tasty.

HOMESICK BAREE

Synopsis.—Part wolf, part dog—when two months old Baree has his first meeting with an enemy. Fighting hard, the antagonist is suddenly plunged into a swollen creek. Badly hurt and half drowned, Baree is nearly flung on the bank, but the water has destroyed his sense of direction and he is lost, lonely and hungry.

Chapter II—Continued

Baree was fully three quarters of a mile from the windfall when he came to a point where the creek split itself into two channels. He had but one choice to follow—the stream that flowed a little south and east. This stream did not run swiftly. It was not filled with shimmering ripples and rocks about which the water sang and foamed. It grew black, like the forest. It was still and deep. Without knowing it, Baree was burying himself deeper and deeper into Tusoo's old trapping grounds. Since Tusoo had died, they had lain undisturbed except for the wolves, for Gray Wolf and Kazan had not hunted on this side of the waterway—and the wolves themselves preferred the more open country for the chase.

Suddenly Baree found himself at the edge of a deep, dark pool in which the water lay still as oil, and his heart nearly jumped out of his body when a great, sleek, shining creature sprang up from almost under his nose and landed with a tremendous splash in the center of it. It was Nekik, the otter.

The otter had not heard Baree, and in another moment Napanekik, his wife, came sailing out of a patch of glaucous, and behind her came three little otters, leaving behind them four shimmering wakes in the oily-looking water. What happened after that made Baree forget for a few minutes that he was lost. Nekik had disappeared under the surface, and now he came up directly under his unsuspecting mate with a force that lifted her half out of the water. Instantly he was gone again, and Napanekik took after him fiercely. To Baree it did not look like play. Two of the baby otters had pitched on the third, which seemed to be fighting desperately. The third and ache went out of Baree's body. His blood ran excitedly; he forgot himself, and let out a bark. In a flash the otters disappeared. For several minutes the water in the pool continued to rock and heave—and that was all. After a little, Baree drew himself back into the bushes and went on.

It was about three o'clock in the afternoon, and the sun should still have been well up in the sky. But it was growing darker steadily, and the strangeness and fear of it all lent greater speed to Baree's legs. He stopped every little while to listen, and at one of these intervals he heard a sound that drew from him a responsive and joyous whine. It was a distant howl—a wolf's howl—straight ahead of him. Baree was not thinking then of wolves but of Kazan, and he ran through the gloom of the forest until he was winded. Then he stopped and listened a long time. The wolf-howl did not come again. Instead of it there rolled up from the west a deep and thunderous rumble. Through the treetops there flashed a vivid streak of lightning. A moaning whisper of wind rode in advance of the storm; the thunder seemed searching Baree out where he stood shivering under a canopy of great spruce. This was his second storm. The first had frightened him terribly, and he had crawled far back into the shelter of the windfall. The best he could find now was a hollow under a big rock, and into this he slunk, crying softly. It was a babyish cry, cry for his mother, for home, for warmth, for something soft and protecting to nestle up to; and as he cried, the storm burst over the forest.

Baree had never before heard so much noise, and he had never seen the lightning play in such sheets of fire as when this June deluge fell. It seemed at times as though the whole world were aflame and the earth seemed to shake and roll under the crashes of the thunder. He ceased his crying and made himself as small as he could under the rock, which protected him partly from the terrific beat of the rain which came down through the treetops in a flood. It was now so black that except when the lightning ripped great holes in the gloom he could not see the spruce-trunks twenty feet away. Twice that distance from Baree there was a huge dead stub that stood out like a ghost each time the first sheet of the sky, as if defying the flaming hands up there to strike—and strike, at last, one of them did! A bluish tongue of snapping flame ran down the old stub; and as it touched the earth, there came a tremendous explosion above the treetops. The massive stub shivered, and then it broke asunder as if cloven by a gigantic ax. It crashed down so close to Baree that earth and sticks flew about him, and he let out a wild yelp of terror as he tried to crowd himself deeper into the shallow hole under the rock.

With the destruction of the old stub the thunder and lightning seemed to have vented their malevolence. The thunder passed on into the south and east like the rolling of ten thousand heavy cartwheels over the roofs of the forest, and the lightning went with it. The rain fell steadily. The hole in which he had taken shelter was sopping. He was drenched; his teeth chattered as he waited for the next thing to happen.

lornly for his mother. When he ventured out from under the roof it was morning, and the sun was shining. At first Baree could hardly stand. His legs were cramped; every bone in his body seemed out of joint; his ear was stiff where the blood had oozed out of it and hardened, and when he tried to wrinkle his wounded nose, he gave a sharp yelp of pain. If such a thing were possible, he looked even worse than he felt. His hair had dried in muddy patches; he was dirt-stained from end to end; and where yesterday he had been plump and shiny, he was now as thin and wretched as misfortune could possibly make him. And he was hungry. He had never before known what it meant to be really hungry.

When he went on, continuing in the direction he had been following yesterday, he slunk along in a disheartened sort of way. His head and ears were no longer alert, and his curiosity was gone. He was not only stomach-hungry; mother-hunger rose above his physical yearning for something to eat. He wanted his mother as he had never wanted her before in his life. He wanted to snuggle his shivering little body close up to her and feel the warm caressing of her tongue and listen to the mothering whine of her voice. And he wanted Kazan, and the old windfall, and that big blue spot that was in the sky right over it. While he followed again along the edge of the creek, he whimpered for them as a child might grieve.

The forest grew more open after a time, and this cheered him up a little. Also the warmth of the sun was taking the ache out of his body. He grew hungrier and hungrier. He had depended entirely on Kazan and Gray Wolf for food. His parents had, in some ways, made a great baby of him. Gray Wolf's blindness accounted for this, for since his birth she had not taken up her hunting with Kazan, and it was quite natural that Baree should stick close to her, though more than once he had been filled with a great yearning to follow his father. Nature was hard at work trying to overcome its handicap now. It was struggling to impress on Baree that the time had now come when he must seek his own food. The fact impressed itself upon him slowly but steadily, and he began to think of the three or four shellfish he had caught and devoured on the stony creek-bank near the windfall. He also remembered the open clam shell he had found, and the consciousness of the tender morsel inside it. A new excitement began to possess him. He became, all at once, a hunter.

With the thinning out of the forest the creek grew more shallow. It ran over bars of sand and stones, and Baree began to nose along the edge of these. For a long time he had no success. The few crayfish that he saw were exceedingly lively and elusive, and all the clam-shells were shut so tight that even Kazan's powerful jaws would have had difficulty in smashing them. It was almost noon when he caught his first crayfish, about as big as a man's forefinger. He devoured it ravenously. The taste of food gave him fresh courage. He caught two more crayfish during the afternoon. It was almost dusk when he stirred a young rabbit out from under a cover of grass. If he had been a month older, he could have caught it. He was still very hungry, for three crayfish—scattered through the day—had not done much to fill the emptiness that was growing steadily in him.

With the approach of night Baree's fears and great loneliness returned. Before the day had quite gone he found himself a shelter under a big rock, where there was a warm, soft bed of sand. Since his fight with Papyuchisaw, he had traveled a long distance, and the rock under which he made his bed this night was at least eight or nine miles from the windfall. It was a big place. It was filled with many things, of which Kazan and Gray Wolf were, not the most important. The monsters he had seen on the moonlit plot of sand had roused in him a new kind of caution, and the one greatest instinct of beasts—the primal understanding that it is the strong that prey upon the weak—was awakening swiftly in him. As yet he quite naturally measured brute force and the menace of things by size alone. Thus the bear was more terrible than Kazan, and the moose was more terrible than the bear.

Writer's Tribute to Chivalry of Women

I am convinced that, in their relations to men, women are the chivalrous sex. In fact, I cannot understand how the reverse idea ever came to be accepted. It must have been a superpowerful Crusader who first enforced it with his mace.

Royal Stubbornness

George III disliked Franklin's political opinions and was anxious to discredit his scientific discoveries as well, says John O'London's Weekly. He, therefore, ordered the lightning conductors on New Palace to have blunt instead of pointed ends. When he asked Sir John Pringle, then president of the Royal Society, what he thought of the change, Sir John Pringle told him plainly that "the laws of nature are not changeable at the royal pleasure." This annoyed his majesty so much that he suggested Sir John should better resign his presidency of the royal society. He did so, and the breach between them was never healed. Sides were taken over the quarrel, the court naturally supporting the king, while the wits sympathized with Sir John.

Baree has now discovered that it's a big world with many adventures. And he's learning fast.

RADIO

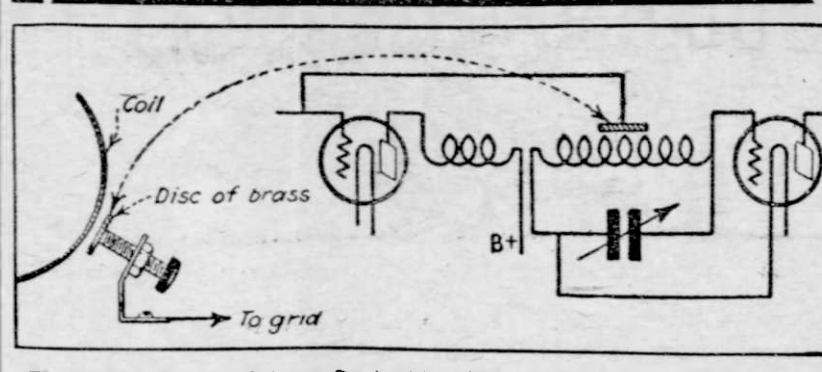

Fig. 3—Showing the Scheme Devised by Glenn Browning for Neutralizing a Radio Frequency Receiver.

The method of obtaining the necessary neutralizing current, as used in the neutrodyne, is well known. It is shown schematically in Fig. 2. What part is that the balancing or neutralizing side of the bridge formed did not need so much to be actually part of the primary inductance L as merely a control circuit allowing the passage of the correct opposing current to the grid of the tube to be neutralized. So, if we arrange such a control circuit from a proper source of opposing current we can effect the same thing. This was done in the commercial neutrodyne by tapping off the inductance L1, which was secondary to L2, for the voltages or cur-

The Neutralizing Arrangement.

This is a feed-back from plate to grid in a radio-frequency tube that results in the oscillation so annoying without some annulling or neutralizing scheme. The feed-back may be reduced by sacrifice of effectiveness, by introduction of losses or by a neutralizing, so-called, arrangement. The neutralizing idea works on what is known as the bridge principle. Notice the diagram in Fig. 1. The path from input to B plus, going backward for the moment, is a double one. The current can either go by the capacity of C and the inductance of L1/2, or by the capacity of GP and the inductance of L1/2 (L1/2, because L is tapped in the middle). Now, if the current divided equally in both of those branches and reversed itself in one branch to result in opposition, the result at B plus would be nothing, assuming that we control the paths CL1/2 and GP L1/2, so that they are equal, and thus plus equal but opposing forces. That being the case it becomes apparent that if L1/2 and L1/2 are equal the condenser C must have the same capacity as between GP and L1/2. That sounds all right, but the capacity from G to P is very small, and it is quite a trick to provide so small a capacity at C without having the wires running from L and G overdo the job.

Now, the exact arrangement of Fig. 1 is being used at present in many sets employing a single stage of radio frequency amplification. The detector condenser primary L1 is a coil of double winding, two wires in parallel, or a single winding tapped in the center, as L indicates. Yet practical set conditions often make it impossible to put the proper capacity at C, so that the process of neutralizing is practically impossible successfully. This trouble is simple to rectify. If we express the relation mentioned in the foregoing paragraph in a mathematical formula, it will be:

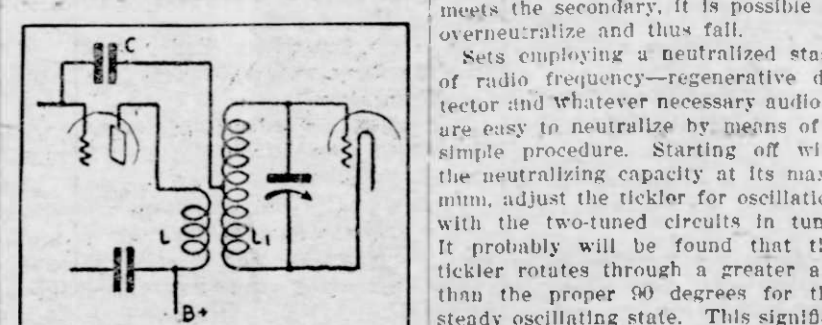

Fig. 1—Showing the Bridge Principle of Neutralizing.

That this is true offers a solution to the neutralizing trouble. It is general practice to use a small midjet variable condenser whose capacity is .00003 mfd. or greater generally. Under the circumstances 1/2, could just as well become 1/4 on the C side of the equation. In this case L to C would be a half of L to P in turns, since the turns ratio make the voltage present at C speaking concretely, where L would ordinarily be a total of 36 turns tapped in the center, it should be instead 27 turns tapped to put 18 turns between P and B plus and 9 turns on the neutralizing side to the condenser C.
