JOKE IN AGRICULTURE CLASS
Miss Dixon—"What is the difference between soil water and rain water?"
Robert—"There is no difference. They're both wet."
The seniors have been writing essays in English class.
Here is a specimen of the essays that the senior class produced:
MY PHILOSOPHY OF YOUTH
There is a hidden friction predominant in the make-up of youth which grades upon every one, although it does not at times, seem noticeable. It comes in waves sudden bursts of passion, emotion, or crazes. This general strategy of the human mind is ethics. I call it general strategy because it is the foundation, or the back ground of the character.

Youth is the change from childhood into man and womanhood; therefore, it is the time when the future life manifests itself. Of course we must allow for the awkward age, but after that a tendency to improvement should be shown.

An abstract "stuff" called mush is often administered by young people who seem favorable in each other's eyes. Now mush consists of bread soaked in milk mainly fed to babies. Why, oh why must this infantile diet be fed to those who have passed that stage. These infernal pusses have not been distilled and sung to long enough in babyhood. The rag chewers and moon-bottle maniacs belong in bibs and tuckers entirely. According to the well known saying, "Men are only little boys grown up," there might be an excuse for the men; but good ones are always preferable to bad.

It's not a sin to admire a young man's neat appearance or his natural wave, but it is unnecessary to go into hectic prostrations about them. They don't feel more flattered, by any means. Any young lady may appeal to the opposite sex without appearing in immediate dress, and atrocious behavior. The way to a man's heart is through his stomach. A girl would be far wiser if she developed her culinary arts and improved her talents of home-making. That would probably solve more divorce problems. Being able to know how, makes a pleasant, satisfied feeling go up and down your spine. This feeling causes a fluid to be manufactured which improves your looks. Those little charms will always come.

It's hard to judge by looks nowadays. A flapper is not a flapper because she dresses that way. It is the actions that make the flapper. A sheik is not always a sheik, he may be a well dressed gentleman. There is a general need for more self respect, and for respect for others. It's unsafe to trust even your best friend. There have been many kinds of revolutions; but if there will ever be a Social Revolution some of us are going to have a mighty poor showing.

DEATH OF FORMER KEWASKUM RESIDENT

On Monday, at her home at Campbellsport, occurred the death of Mrs. Caroline Fleischmann, aged 56 years, a former well known resident of the town of Kewaskum. A stroke of paralysis is attributed as the cause of her death. Mrs. Fleischmann was born on January 13, 1870 in the town of Kewaskum. On April 18, 1892 she was married to Mr. Fleischmann. Shortly after their marriage they lived in the town of Ashford, later moving to Kewaskum and then to Marshfield, and then to Campbellsport. Besides her husband, she leaves to mourn, four children, Alex F. of Chippewa Falls, Sister M. Plato of Sacred Heart, Milwaukee, Mrs. Alice Weber of Campbellsport and Edna of Perth Amboy, N. J., three brothers, Judge and Attorney Fellenz of Fond du Lac and John C. Fellenz of New London, and three sisters, Margaret and Rose Fellenz and Mrs. H. J. Weld of Campbellsport. The funeral was held on Thursday at 9:30 a. m. Rev. B. July officiated. Burial was made in the Union cemetery.

YOUNG COUPLES JOINED IN WEDLOCK

TALK-WITTKOPP WEDDING
The Dundee Lutheran church was the scene of a pretty wedding, Monday, at 7:30 p. m., when Miss Frieda Falk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aug. Falk of Dundee became the bride of Edwin Wittkopp of Plymouth. Rev. Carl Aeppler performed the ceremony. The bride was given by her father August Falk, and the wedding march was played by Mrs. Carl Dins. The couple were attended by Mrs. Ray Wittkopp as maid of honor; Amanda Falk, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid. Raymond Wittkopp, brother of the groom, was best man and Lester Engelmann, was usher. Evelyn Tuttle, a niece of the bride and lone Wittkopp, a niece of the groom, were flower girls. Milton Falk, a nephew of the bride and Elanor Hintz, also a nephew of the bride, were ring bearers. Adeline Hafemann and Lavern Hintz, a niece of the bride, were ribbon bearers. The bride wore a white silk dress and veil in fan effect. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and baby breath. The maid of honor wore a pink crepe dress with silver over lace, and the bridesmaid wore a blue flat crepe dress. The ring bearers were dressed in salmon colored suits and the flower girls wore white silk dresses. After the ceremony about 150 guests were entertained at a reception at the home of the bride, where a wedding dinner was served. The couple will be at home at Plymouth, after October 15, where the groom is employed as a truck driver.

ULLRICH-HAUG WEDDING

Miss Esther Haug, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Haug of Barton, and August W. Ullrich, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Ullrich of Campbellsport were married at St. Leo's church in Milwaukee on Wednesday, September 29, at 7 o'clock in the morning. The sacrament was dispensed by Rev. P. Theisen during a nuptial mass. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Anton Ullrich, the former a brother of the groom. A wedding breakfast for the bridal party was served at the home of John Ullrich, also a brother of the groom, at Milwaukee. The bridal party then left for Barton, where they partook of a wedding dinner at the home of the bride's parents. Later in the afternoon the newly weds left for Campbellsport, where a reception and supper was given them at the Bernard Ullrich home. Their residence will be at Milwaukee, where the groom is working at carpentry.—West Bend News.

BOECKLER-MARCHANT WEDDING

On Tuesday, October 12, at 10 a. m., at the Reformed church at Campbellsport, occurred the marriage of Rose M. Boeckler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Ferber to Wayne A. Marchant of Peebles, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Marchant of Rosendale. Rev. Wm. Zenk performed the ceremony. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. William Ferber, the bride's parents. The bride wore a blue silk duvetyne dress and carried a Colonial bouquet of Columbia roses. Mr. and Mrs. Marchant left the same day for a wedding trip to northern Wisconsin and Minnesota. They will reside at Peebles.

GRAND PRIZE CARD PARTY AT ST. MICHAELS

The first of a series of card parties given under the auspices of the Christian Mother's Society of St. Michaels congregation at St. Michaels, will be held next Wednesday evening, October 20th. The society members extend a most cordial invitation to the whole community and will award prizes for the following games: Skat, schafkopf, 500, cinch, buncio, and rummy. Playing to begin at 8 o'clock. A fine door prize will be given away to the one holding the lucky number.

At 11 o'clock the committee in charge will serve a fine lunch to all the guests in the dining hall. In connection with the card party the ladies will conduct a booth where every number drawn will win a valuable prize. All will be done to make everybody feel at home and comfortable. Therefore come ALL, old and young. Bring your friends, pals and neighbors. A hearty welcome to one and all.

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE

The ladies of the Holy Trinity congregation kindly request that all articles donated to the bazaar be brought to the school hall on any of the following dates: Friday, Oct. 22 from 7 to 9 p. m. Saturday, Oct. 23 from 7 to 9 p. m. Sunday, Oct. 24 immediately following high mass or after 2 p. m.

NOTHING COULD BE SLICKER

YOUNG MAN SLUGGED BY HIGHWAYMEN

While driving on Trunk Highway F, four miles west of Cascade, Edward Wittkopp, Plymouth was slugged into unconsciousness and robbed of $183, by two highwaymen who waylaid him. The money taken from the young man was to have been used the following day on a shopping tour by Wittkopp and his prospective bride for the purpose of buying furnishings for the home they are to establish. The holdup occurred last Friday, when Wittkopp was driving towards Cascade, was proceeding at a very slow rate of speed up a hill. Two men sprang on the running boards, one from each side, and when their command to halt was disobeyed, one of them pulled out the "choke," killing the engine. The other opened the door of the coupe, grabbed Wittkopp by the clothing and struck him over the head as he was being dragged from the machine. Both his head and chest showed the effects of severe contusions when he reported the affair to the authorities.

DEATH OF M. TRUMER SHOCKING

As a result of burns received last Wednesday, Sept. 22nd, when an oil lamp exploded at the railroad depot at Cherry, Ill., Mark M. Trumer, a former town of Rubicon boy, and a brother of Mrs. Frank Haupt of this city, passed away at the Peru hospital, Peru, Ill., Sunday evening, Oct. 3, at 10:30 o'clock. Mr. Trumer, who was a night agent and telegraph operator at the depot at Cherry attempted to straighten a chimney on an oil lamp when it suddenly exploded and threw burning oil over his clothing and lower limbs which burst into a mass of flames. Mr. Trumer succeeded in putting out the fire with his hands and crawled to the telephone to call for help. Having called a doctor he crawled to another room to a chair from which he was unable to move again. The doctor arriving found the depot dark and locked, returning to his home thinking he misunderstood the message. Mr. Trumer was unable to move so as to open the door. He was discovered the next morning by a person who attempted to gain entrance to the depot. Medical assistance was immediately summoned and he was removed to the hospital at Peru. Mr. Trumer was 34 years of age. He was married to Mrs. Frank Haupt and they have two children, a son and a daughter. He was a member of the Trinity church at Cherry. He was a very kind and generous man and his death is a great loss to his family and friends. He is survived by his wife and two children. Burial will be held at the Trinity church at Cherry on Monday, Oct. 11, at 10 o'clock a. m. The funeral will be held at the Trinity church at Cherry on Monday, Oct. 11, at 10 o'clock a. m. The funeral will be held at the Trinity church at Cherry on Monday, Oct. 11, at 10 o'clock a. m.

CELEBRATE DIAMOND WEDDING ANNIVERSARIES

Mr. and Mrs. Gerhard Vandergrind, of Campbellsport, celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary at their home on Thursday, with about forty relatives and friends in attendance. The aged couple are the parents of eleven children, all of whom are living.

MILWAUKEE RIVER VALLEY LEAGUE

The following are the results of last Sunday's games in the above named league.

Cedarburg forfeited their game to Mequon on an umpire's decision, and Saukville lost to Waubesa.

The schedule for next Sunday is the sensation of the season. Thiensville will be obliged to meet Belgium to play off a protested game as ordered by the league board of directors. The game will be played at Grafton, the best diamond the league affords. Especial interest attaches to this game for the reason that should Belgium win there will be a tie for the pennant between Grafton, Belgium and Thiensville. The game is to be played over because the board of directors decided that it would be unfair to allow the protested game to one team or the other under the conditions, and of course the public will want to see the results. Not following the usual practice of one umpire, the game will be decided by Henry Rilling of Grafton, umpiring behind the catcher and Mr. Chas. Schweitzer base umpire. Mr. Schweitzer umpired the original game between the teams that led to the protest. A cordial invitation is extended to the base ball fans of the county. Remember Sunday at Grafton, game called at 2:30 sharp.

The schedule of all other teams has been filled and the rating of average of all teams will again be given after the pennant decision.

CELEBRATE 25th ANNIVERSARY

The twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. August Buss was joyfully celebrated at the local Opera House on Saturday evening, October 9th. About one hundred guests attended the event and extended their heartiest congratulations, accompanied by beautiful as well as useful gifts. The evening's program of entertainment was dancing. At eleven o'clock a delicious luncheon was served by the hostess and some of her relatives. Those who attended the celebration from afar were: Mr. and Mrs. Ernst Haentze and son Arthur, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Ferdinand and son George, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Meyers, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schroeder and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Schroeder, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Schultz, Mr. and Mrs. William Gureth and Mrs. Christine Puls, all of Fond du Lac; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Buss of Sheboygan, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Buss, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Thei, daughter Dorothy and sons Alfred and Arthur and lady friend, Mr. and Mrs. John Buss of Plymouth, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Ulrich and Frank Buss of Cascade, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Schierhorst of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Klumb of Kohlsville, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Weber and daughter Margaret and Mrs. Louise Sangster of West Bend, Mrs. Augusta Lau, daughter Eleanor and son Andrew of Kohler. Besides those from afar many relatives from Kewaskum were in attendance. A three piece orchestra consisting of Walter Buss, Margaret Weber and Leonard Oelhofen of West Bend furnished the music. The Statesman joins the many relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Buss in wishing them many more years of happy wedded life.

PREPARATIONS FOR BAZAAR NEARLY FINISHED

Everything will soon be in readiness for the big bazaar to be held at the Holy Trinity school hall on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon and evening, October 26 and 27th. Every effort has been made by the ladies of the congregation to make this a most enjoyable affair, and they wish to extend to everyone a most cordial invitation to come and attend same on both days. Arrangements have been made for various attractions and there won't be a dull moment. Any donation which you still have in mind will be gladly accepted. An elaborate chicken supper will be served on both days from 5 to 8 p. m. Come! Bring your neighbors—bring your friends. Bring them here from far and near. Everybody welcome—everybody come.

SOME FAN

When it comes to being a real base ball fan, T. J. Slattery, of Adell, can surely consider himself as being one of them. Mr. Slattery, drove to St. Louis alone, last week, to witness the world series base ball game, between the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Yanks. He had to wait in line from six to nine hours every day to get his tickets. On his way he traveled through Beardstown, Ill., which was the scene of a bad flood, where he found a large number of bridges washed out, but this even failed to stop him from seeing the games.

DOUBLE WESTERN SUNDAY EVENING

"THE DEMON"
Two mysterious shots on two different occasions save the life of Dane Gordon, the young hero of "The Demon," Blue Streak Western, starring Jack Hoxie, which comes to the Opera House tomorrow, Sunday.

The first shot comes as Gordon is leading a sheriff's posse into Slocum Valley in pursuit of a band of outlaws who have been destroying the property of ranchers. The entrance to the valley is through a narrow pass which the outlaws had mined. The signal for the firing of the mine was to be one shot fired when Gordon and the posse arrived at the entrance. Just as the posse was about to enter the valley a shot rang out. The outlaw left behind to explode the dynamite, thinking it the signal, fires the charge. It is premature and the posse enters unharmed.

The outlaws are captured, with the exception of their father, "Bat" Jackson. Gordon pursues him. Jackson waits in ambush for the oncoming Gordon. Gordon's life seems to be nearing its end, for the hidden Jackson has him covered and is just about to shoot when another mysterious shot rings out and "Bat" drops mortally wounded. Who fired these timely shots is cleverly concealed until just before the picture ends.

BIG FOREST BLAZE IN ACCORD PICTURE
A huge forest fire, which demolished an era of several hundred square miles provides a realistic setting for some thrilling scenes in "The Scramplin' Kid." Universal Blue-Streak western starring Art Acord, to be shown at the Kewaskum Movies. The fire which appears in the picture was a real one, and occurred in the forests near the Panamint mountains in California. The entire company rushed to the scene of the fire to get the scenes, then helped forest rangers extinguish it for more than a week. Clifford Smith directed the picture.

52nd ANNIVERSARY SALE

Next week Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, October 20, 21 and 22, the L. Rosenheimer firm will hold their 52nd anniversary sale. This year's sale promises to be bigger and better than ever before. On Wednesday, Oct. 20 is ladies day, at which a special invitation is extended to all the ladies. Large circulars were printed in this office this week, giving full details of the many articles on sale and the big bargains offered. The circulars were mailed to every home for miles around, read them over carefully, pick what you want to buy, then come early and have your choice. Remember this sale is the one big event of Washington county, at which hundreds of people from all over come to take advantage of the big bargains offered. Additional help has been engaged to accommodate you. Don't forget the dates, come early and avoid the rush.

Lydia of the Pines

By HONORÉ WILLISIE

(Copyright by Frederick A. Stokes Co.)

STORY FROM THE START

Lydia, with her baby sister, returned from play to the family home of her father, Mrs. Lydia of Lake City. Her father's friend and her own dearest friend, John Levine, visited her. John Levine, who it is true the Indians on a nearby reservation were moving in order that the white men might have this land. The next day Lydia, Patience and companion went to the lake, as usual. Lydia gave her book to Amos, and Amos her book to Lydia. Lydia gave her book to Amos, and Amos her book to Lydia. Lydia gave her book to Amos, and Amos her book to Lydia.

CHAPTER VI

The Cooking Class

Lydia with puffed lips and big, wet eyes stood quietly beside Miss Towne.

"What you giving us," said Kent.

"My favorite color," Lydia said.

"Red's all right," Olga teased her head, "but that dress! She ought to know better. A five-cent piece cloth would have been better'n that."

Kent was truly enamored of pretty Olga but he looked at her angrily.

"You girls make me sick," he grunted and started dodging among the dancers, across the room to Lydia's side. Olga stood pointing.

"What's the matter?" asked Charlie Jackson.

"Oh, I just said Lydia's dress was a fright and Kent went off mad," Charlie in turn stared at Lydia.

Kent in the meantime was grinning at Lydia amiably.

"Hello, Lydia! Want to dance?"

"I can't. Don't know how," replied Lydia despondently.

"Easy as anything. Come on, I'll teach you."

Lydia seized Kent's lapel with fingers that would tremble slightly.

"Kent, I don't stir. My back breadth don't match and my skirt hangs awful."

"Oh, shucks!" replied Kent, angrily.

"You girls are all alike. Red's my favorite color."

"Mine too," said Charlie Jackson at her elbow. "What're you two arguing about?"

"Her dress," gawwled Kent. "I don't see anything the matter with it, do you?"

"Nope, and it's on the prettiest girl in the room, too, eh, Kent?"

"You bet," returned Kent, believing, though, that he lied, for Olga was as pretty as a tea rose.

Lydia flushed and gasped.

"If you won't dance, come on over and have some lemonade," suggested Kent.

"If I sit in the window, will you bring me a glass?" asked Lydia, still mindful of the back breadth.

"You take her to the window and I'll get the lemon," said Charlie.

Kent led the way to the window-seat. "You're a good old sport, Lydia," he said. "Charlie'll look out for you. I gotta get back to Olga."

He returned to make peace with the pink organdie. She was very lovely and Kent was having his first flirtation. Yet before he went to sleep that night the last picture that floated before his eyes was of a thin little figure with worn mittens clasped over patched knees and a ravished child's face looking into his.

Charlie Jackson sat out two whole dances with Lydia. Their talk was of Adam and of fishing. Lydia longed to talk about Indians with him but didn't dare. Promptly at ten, Amos appeared at the front door.

Lydia's first party was over. Amos and old Lizzie were charmed with Lydia's description of it and were sure she had had a wonderful time. But Lydia felt that the dress had made of the party a hideous failure. She knew now that she was marked among her mates as a poverty-stricken little dove whom popular boys like Kent and Charlie lifted.

And yet because life is as kind to us as we have the intelligence to let it be, it was out of the party that grew slowly a new resolve of Lydia's—to have some day as pretty hands as well-shod feet as Olga and Hilma and Cissy, to learn how to make her dresses so that even the composing of an organdie might not be beyond her.

John Levine was running for sheriff on the Republican ticket. He was elected early in April by a comfortable majority and invited Amos and Lydia to a fine Sunday dinner in celebration at the best hotel in town.

Lydia's life was so different from that of any of the children that she knew, that growing into adolescence with the old head of play disappearing, she fell back more and more on resources within herself. This did not prevent her going faithfully once a month to call on Margery Marshall. And these visits were rather pleasant though otherwise, Margery was going through the paper doll fever. Lydia always brought Florence Dombey with her and the two girls carried on an elaborate game of nurse-believe, the intricacies of which were entirely too much for Elviry Marshall, sitting within earshot.

Amos' garden was a thing of beauty. Its trim rows of vegetables were bordered with sunflowers, whose yellow heads vied in height with the rustling ears of corn. Amos had a general pride toward life. He had a vague unexpressed belief that because he was a descendant of the founders of the country, the world owed him an easy living. He had a general sense of superiority to his foreign-born neighbors and to the workmen in the plow factory.

But in his garden, all his grudges disappeared. He always felt nearer to his wife, in the garden. She, too, had been bred on a New England farm. He always felt as if the fine orderliness of the rows was for her.

Lydia greatly preferred weeding the garden to cleaning the house. Indeed the contrast between the fine garden, the well kept patch of lawn and the disorderly house was startling.

One afternoon in August, clad in her bathing suit, now much too small for her, she was working in the garden, when a voice behind her grunted: "Eat!"

Lydia jumped and turned. The old squaw of two years before stood before her. She was as pitifully thin as ever. As she stared at the ugly old Indian, Lydia's throat tightened. She seemed to feel baby Patience's fingers clinging to hers in fear.

"Want some vegetables?" she asked, motioning toward the garden.

The squaw nodded eagerly and held up the dirty apron she was wearing. Lydia began slowly to fill it, talking as she worked.

"Where do you live?" she asked.

The Indian jerked her gray head toward the north "Big Woods."

"But that's twenty miles. It must take you a long time to walk it. Poor thing!"

The squaw shrugged her shoulders. Lydia stared at the toothless, trembling old mouth, liddens with wrinkles, then at the gnarled and shagging old hands.

"Haven't you anyone to take care of you?"

"All sick—boy sick—man sick—girl sick. All time sick, all time nothing to eat."

"But won't some other Indian make you a garden, a little one?"

Again the squaw shrugged her shoulders. Her apron was full now. She produced a string from inside her waist and tying the apron up baglike, she slung it over her shoulder. Then she gave Lydia a keen glance.

"Friend," she said, briefly, and turning, she tottered painfully out of the gate.

Followed by Adam, Lydia walked thoughtfully out upon the little pier Amos had built. It was hard to understand how the Indians with all their rich pine land could be so poor. She resolved to ask her father and Levia about it and turned a somersault into the water. She swam about until tired, then turned over on her back to rest. Lying so a shadow drifted across her face and she raised her head. A gray birch bark canoe floated silently beside her. In it, in a gray bathing suit, sat Charlie Jackson.

"Goodness!" exclaimed Lydia. "How in the world do you do it so quietly, I don't see. Come on in. It's as warm as sun."

Charlie slid his canoe to the pier and in a moment was floating beside Lydia. She took a deep breath, let herself sink and a moment or two later came up several yards beyond him. He did not miss her for a moment, then he started for her with a shout. A game of tag followed ending in a wild race to the pier.

"You certainly are a little sunfish in the water," panted Charlie, as they sat with feet dangling off the pier.

"Ought to be, I'm in it enough," returned Lydia. "Charlie, there's a poor old squaw came here today. What's the matter with the Indians? Why don't they work?"

Charlie's mouth twisted in a sneer. "Why don't they work? Why don't the whites give 'em a chance? Dirty thieves, prowling round like timber wolves. Ask Dave Marshall. Ask that gunshooting crook of a Levine. Don't ask me."

"Lydia's not a crook," shouted Lydia. "He's my friend."

The sneer left Charlie's face and he laughed. "Your friend is he, little sunfish!"

"Yes," said Lydia, furiously. "He gave me Adam," hugging the dog's ugly, faithful head. He immediately tried to sit in her wet lap. "And he's done as much for me as my own father."

"If he's your friend," said the Indian gently, "I won't speak against him to you again."

Lydia instantly was mollified. Charlie was so old and so young! He was so different from Kent that staring fully felt his alien race.

"I must go in and dress," she said. "It's time to get supper."

Charlie nodded and untied his canoe.

"Daddy," Lydia said that night at supper, "why should Mr. Marshall and Charlie Jackson both say Mr. Levine is a crook?"

Amos ate a piece of bread meditatively before replying. "Any man that goes into politics in this country leaves his reputation behind him. You and I'll never have a better friend than John Levine."

Lydia nodded. She was only a child; after all, and still retained implicit faith in the opinion of those she loved. She went back to school that fall full of interest and importance. She was a sophomore now and very proud of the fact that she knew the ropes. Her arrangement with Billy held for his second-year books. With much pinching of the grocery money, Lizzie had achieved two new galatea sailor suits and so while she felt infinitely inferior to the elaborately gowned young misses of her grade, Lydia was not unhappy.

She planned a real feast for Thanksgiving. She negotiated with Billy Norton for the exchange of two pounds of fudge for a brace of wild duck. The Saturday before Thanksgiving, she gave the house its usual "lick and promise" and then started out with her skates to enjoy the first ice of the season.

She had a glorious morning. There was no snow and the lake had frozen crystal clear. The air was breathless. As she skated she chanted, to improvised tunes; bits of verse.

She hunted through Scottish mountains and moors, she whirled from Ghent to Aix and still high-hearted and in the land of visions, took off her skates and entered the house. She banged the door, then stood for a moment staring. Elviry and Margery were seated before the living room stove, while old Lizzie sat on one edge of Amos' arm chair eyeing the two intelligently.

Margery was wearing a new fur coat. Her beautiful black eyes looked out from under a saucy fur-trimmed hat with a scarlet curl on the side. Elviry wore black broadcloth with fox collar and muff. Lydia, in a remodeled coat of her mother's, and her old tan and mended mittens, recovered from her surprise quickly.

"Hello," she said. "When did you come? This is the first time you've ever been in our house, Mrs. Marshall, isn't it?"

"Yes," replied Elviry, "and," with a glance at Lizzie, "I wouldn't be here now if Mr. Marshall hadn't made me."

"Oh, mamma," protested Margery, "I wanted to come."

"You hush up, Margery! What I came for is that Mr. Marshall would like to have the three of you come to our house for Thanksgiving dinner."

Lydia suddenly giggled. "Don't worry, Mrs. Marshall, we can't come. We're going to have company ourselves for Thanksgiving."

Elviry gave a huge sigh of relief. "Well, that's too bad," she said. "We're going to have a grand dinner, too."

"So are we," retorted Lydia.

"How's Florence Dombey?" asked Margery. "Mamma, can't I stay and play with Lydia a while?"

"Well, stay a few minutes," said Elviry, loosening her furs and settling back in her chair. "It's a real small place, Lizzie, but you can do so little work now, I s'pose it's just as well."

Lydia had produced a pasteboard shoe box of paper dolls which she gave to Margery. She cuddled Florence Dombey in her arms and gave one ear to Margery's questions as to the names and personalities of the paper dolls, the other to Elviry's comments.

"It ain't so small," sniffed Lizzie. "It's bigger'n anything you ever lived in, Elviry, till Dave sold enough lumber he stole from the government to start a bank."

"Lend, Lizzie, don't be so cross," said Elviry. "I s'pose you've heard the talk about John Levine? He's getting in with that halfbreed crowd up on the reservation that the Indian agent's such friends with. They say Levine's land hungry enough to marry a squaw. He's so dark, I wouldn't be surprised if he had Indian blood himself. Land knows nothing would surprise me about him." They say he's just naturally crooked."

Lydia and Florence Dombey suddenly stood in front of Elviry.

"Don't you say such things about Mr. Levine," said Lydia slowly, cheeks bright, eyes as blue as Florence Dombey's.

"Well," exclaimed Elviry, beginning to pull her furs up, "I don't seem to be able to please you two with my conversation, so I'll be going. Margery, get up off that dirty floor. I never cared much about Amos' wife, she was too proud, but at least she was clean. She'd turn over in her grave if she knew what this house looked like. Come, Margery, the horse will be cold, standing so long."

Lizzie opened her mouth to speak but Lydia shook her head, and the two stood in silence, watching the departure of the visitors. When the door had closed Lizzie burst forth in an angry trade, but Lydia only half listened. She looked slowly around the living room, then walked into the dining room and thence into the kitchen. She opened the pantry door and stared at the dust and disorder, the remnants of food, the half-washed dishes.

She came slowly back into the living room. Old Lizzie was replenish-ing the stove, still muttering to herself. Lydia observed for the first time that her apron was dirty. Thinking it over, she could not recall ever having seen Lizzie with a clean apron. A deep sense of shame suddenly enveloped Lydia.

"Oh, I wish someone had taught me," she groaned. "I wish mother had lived. Everybody has to go and die on me! I s'pose Lizzie and dad'll be next. Adam helps to keep the house dirty. There's dog hair everywhere."

"Don't you get worked up over Elviry Marshall, child," said Lizzie. "I hate her," exclaimed Lydia, "but what she said about the house is true. Anyhow, I've learned how to clean pantry shelves, so here goes."

She tied one of Lizzie's aprons round her neck, pushed a chair into the pantry and began her unsavory task. It was dusk when she finished and led Lizzie out to observe the shiny, sweet smelling orderliness of the place.

"Land, it does make a difference! If the rheumatiz didn't take all the ambition out of me, I'd keep it that way for you," said the old lady.

"I'll do it, every Saturday. Gosh, I'm tired!" groaned Lydia, throwing herself on the living room couch. "Lizzie, give me some of your mutton tallow to rub on my hands. The cooking teacher says it's fine for hands."

The highly satisfactory Thanksgiving feast was eaten and praised. The dishes were washed and set away in the immaculate pantry, and Amos and John Levine were smoking by the fire.

"Seems to me this room looks all slicked up," said Levine.

Amos nodded. "Lydia's coming along. Place was like a cyclone this morning for an hour, but the result pays. She's growing like her mother."

"She's only a child, and small for her age at that," said John. "It's a shame for her to work so hard."

"I know it," answered Amos, "but what can I do? On a dollar and a half a day—I swan—"

There was a rap on the door. Lizzie admitted Dave Marshall and Margery.

"Out for a tramp as a digester," explained Dave. "Come to call on my friend Lizzie. I ain't seen her for ages."

He and Levine nodded to each other. Amos shook hands and Dave kissed Lydia, catching a dark curl on Levine's face as he did so.

"Let's play paper dolls," said Margery, as soon as she had pulled off her coat.

"You play 'em," replied Lydia. "I'm awful tired."

"Why should a baby like you be tired?" inquired Marshall, pulling her to his side as he seated himself in Amos' armchair.

"If you'd tasted our dinner," said Amos, "you'd know why she and Lizzie should be half dead."

"I wish I could 'a' tasted it," replied Marshall. "Have a smoke, friends?"

"Come, John, come," said the stout banker, banteringly. "This is a legal holiday and you and I at least agree on Lydia. Let's stop war for the day, eh?"

Levine's sallow face hardened, then he caught Lydia's side gaze on him as she stood beside Marshall. It was such a transparent, trusting gaze, so full of affection, so obviously appealing to him to "be nice," that in spite of himself he grinned and took a cigar.

Amos settled back with a sigh of satisfaction. He enjoyed company and had had no one but John since his wife's death.

"Come! Lydia!" came a call from the lake shore.

Lydia ran to the kitchen door, Charlie Jackson and Kent were skating up to the bank.

"Come out for a while," cried Kent. "I can't. I've got company. Come on up and get warm," returned Lydia. The two boys slipped off their skates and came up to the cottage. Kent needed no introduction, and Lydia made short work of Charlie by saying to the assemblage at large, "This is Charlie Jackson. Come on up by the snow, boys."

"Hello, Marg," said Kent. "What you doing?"

"Paper dolls," returned Margery from her corner, without looking up. Charlie Jackson stared at the beautiful little black head bent over the brightly-colored bits of paper with interest.

Amos took up the conversation. "If we could get a Republican congress, that block of pine and black loam twenty miles north would be given to its rightful owners."

"Meaning the full bloods, I s'pose," said Levine with a short laugh. "Yes—full-blooded whites," returned Amos.

Charlie Jackson suddenly threw back his head and roared.

"I'm a full-blooded Indian," he said, quietly. The three men looked at him as if they saw him for the first time.

"Well, what of it?" asked Marshall, shortly.

"This of it?" said Charlie, tensely, "that you whites with your Constitution and your Declaration of Independence are a lot of liars and thieves."

Marshall turned purple, but John Levine spoke quickly. "Easy there, my boy! You're talking of things you don't understand."

"Oh, but he does," interrupted Lydia eagerly. "Government 'arives their just powers from the consent of the governed.' We had it in school. It must mean Indians, too."

John Levine laughed. "There you have it. And Charlie is right, we are liars and thieves, but we have to be. Might is right in this world."

"Speak for yourself, Levine," cried Marshall.

"Levine," exploded Charlie. "Are you Levine? You're the man then that my sister—" His voice rose to a shout. "I'll beat the face off of you right now."

And he made a sudden spring for the astonished Levine.

That a man may be harsh, even unscrupulous, in a business way, and infinitely tender to one he loves, is made apparent as the story unfolds.

Tattoo Hogs to Trace Diseased Stock

Tattooing of hogs has been found to be an inexpensive and practical method of tracing live-stock diseases and protecting the public against impure meats, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. The hogs are tattooed by tapping them on the back with an instrument containing a marker made of phonograph needles which leaves an indelible impress. When the hogs reach the market it is easy to identify owners of tubercular stock.

1925 Yearbook Is Distributed

Volume Discusses Fruit and Vegetable Industry and Statistics.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The 1925 Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture, which is the fifth and last of a series inaugurated under the direction of the late Henry C. Wallace, is now being distributed. The preceding volumes of this series, which deal primarily with the economic aspects of agriculture, have covered in a comprehensive manner the subjects of live stock, grains, dairy products, tobacco, forestry, forage resources, fibers, land utilization and road tenure, highways, credit, taxation, the poultry industry, and the weather forecasting.

The present volume discusses the fruit and vegetable industry, contains the secretary's annual report to the President, and more than half of its 1,500 pages are given over to agricultural statistics.

Agriculture Harassed.

"In the five years covered by the series of yearbooks now concluded," said Secretary Jardine in announcing the 1925 volume, "American agriculture has been harassed as never before. Farmers have been handicapped by disparities between the prices of things they have had to sell and the things they have had to buy. They have been faced with urgent crop readjustment problems and with a decrease occasioned by overstocked and demoralized markets. The economic studies contained in this series of yearbooks were expressly intended to assist farmers in coping with such problems and difficulties. There is reason to believe that they have accomplished this subject. Although the

Testament Reading Timed

It required 69 hours and 20 minutes of constant reading for members of the First Methodist church at Ucaipia, Calif., to finish the Old and New Testaments, says the Pathfinder Magazine. This is 10 minutes better than last year's time. In 1925 the Seventh Day Adventists in Boston read the Bible aloud in 55 hours and 47 minutes.

COMMUNITY TREE PLANTING FOUND MOST SATISFACTORY

Greatly Enhances Looks and Comfort of Roads.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Suitable tree planting along public highways, which greatly enhances their appearance and comfort, is most satisfactorily done by the community as a whole rather than by individuals, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Interest in country highways in the United States has increased rapidly during the last few years. The greater interest in rural roads is due largely to the growing automobile traffic, a large part of which is pleasure driving in which the most beautiful routes are naturally sought.

While a few states have good laws providing for such planting, the remainder have either indifferent ones or none at all, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1481-F, "Planting the Roadside," just issued.

The traveling public has as much interest in the appearance of the road as a whole as the adjoining property holder. Furthermore, it is usually difficult to get each property holder to approve and act on a given plan. For these reasons, says the department, it is best to place the planting and subsequent care of roadside trees in the hands of a public body representing some such division as the

FARM NOTES

Crop reports indicate a big world production of rye, wheat, and oats.

Cows that will freshen this fall will pay later if you give them good care now.

Putting each sow to herself rather early after being bred is a safe rule to follow. They get used to being alone and are satisfied. At farrowing time the pigs will come, generally in good-sized litters and well developed.

The old-fashioned milk cow must go; cow-testing associations are weeding her out.

When all the cows have had the tuberculosis test, then all the world will be doubly blessed.

Some farmers say that personal preference is the first factor to consider in choosing a breed of swine to raise.

If your farm grew paintbrush and daisies this past season, it probably needs lime. Fall is a good time to spread it.

Records and accounts are as important on a farm as they are in a whole sale grocery business. Are you keeping a set of accounts?

It wasn't all luck—the fellows who had big wheat yields this year probably watched the fly-free dates for seedling fall.

Tighten the hoops, patch the openings, and fill the cracks and crevices of the silo with paint. It may save a lot of ensilage later.

McCormick-Deering Engines

With the sturdy, rugged McCormick-Deering Engine pumping the water, running the washing machine, etc., you know the work will be done. And without the engine overheating or running up the operating expense. Every part of the McCormick-Deering is built for steady, important work. Dirt, sand and trash mean little to the McCormick-Deering, as the crank-case is enclosed. The cylinder is removable; in case of wear a new one can be inserted at low cost. The large water hopper permits a generous supply—no overheating.

In Good Times.

Oh, yes; the sky is usually bright and things, generally, look rosy in good times.

—But, too often, we forget that the good times are not permanent. They are not like death and taxes—always with us.

In good times, it is well to look ahead and prepare for those times that may not be quite so good; to conserve our energies and our earnings to the end that, though times, generally, may not, in some future day, be good, no time will find us unprepared.

A savings account is the best of all guarantees against the times that are not so good. Start it now with this strong bank.

THIS WOMAN'S BATTLE

Wins Against Ill Health

"At times I was hardly able to do my housework," writes Mrs. Margaret Wallace of 1547 Safford Ave., Columbus, Ohio. How many women have found themselves in this same condition! How many women have fought bravely on day after day, cooking, washing, ironing, doing the dishes, and keeping the house clean, when they were in a weakened condition and had not sufficient strength to perform these duties easily and properly!

When Mrs. Wallace was experiencing great difficulty in carrying on the daily tasks, a friend advised her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she gave it a fair trial. "I just can't give enough thanks to it," she writes. "Now I can eat anything at all and I am feeling better than I have for years. I shall never be without your medicine again."

A woman who is fighting for her health and her family's happiness is a valiant soldier. She wages her battle in her own kitchen. She has no thrilling battles to cheer her on, no waving banners.

Many other women tell us, as Mrs. Wallace did, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was their faithful ally in the struggle for better health.

Youthful Rider in Luck

A pony ridden by Ray Stoen, thirteen, was killed by electricity at New Castle, Pa., but the boy escaped injury. As he rode by a pole, the youngster says, his pony fell and he jumped off. He went to get help, thinking that the pony had tripped, but the men who went to assist found that the body of the pony was charged with electricity. It is believed that the saddle and the boy's rubber-soled shoes acted as insulators and saved him from death.

I love girls and I love women. I love them from the time they are old enough to walk until their hair is whiter than snow. I love them collectively and I love them individually, and I do not think anything they might do could keep me from loving them.

Because of my adoration some critics say that the girls and women in my books are too good, too beautiful, too ideal for flesh and blood. I tell them there have been many good and beautiful and ideal women in the world, and that it always will be filled with them, just as it is filled with lovely flowers and singing birds and sunny skies.—James Oliver Curwood in Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan.

How Air Pressure Acts on Reception

Fair and Bad Weather Theory Right and Wrong, Says Expert.

The exact manner in which radio transmission and reception are affected by the weather still remains largely in the realm of uncertainty, but the popular belief that bad weather means poor reception, and fair weather good reception, is correct in principle, but frequently wrong in specific application.

Under any circumstances, it is not believed that any relief from the present ether congestion will be obtained until after congress assigns control to some government body or commission. Additional wave-jumpers are expected to make their appearance every week and new stations are arriving on the air at an average rate of 15 a month.

In addition to the work of persuading stations from leaving their assigned frequencies that is being carried on by the National Association of Broadcasters, the National Better Business bureau is conducting a survey of ether conditions, following the receipt of a number of complaints from listeners and stations in all parts of the country.

RADIO WAVES

Radio advertising rates are about $400 an hour for a station in New York city. Stations elsewhere charge in proportion.

The Radio corporation has no stations in foreign countries, but works through stations owned and operated in those countries.

A single radio advertising program (Ever Ready Hour) is reported to cost the company $100,000 a year. While we are considering national broadcasting, international broadcasting is knocking at our doors.

Congressional legislation contemplates pending governmental control of transmission of power and "movies" by radio.

Until a year ago a 5,000-watt station was practically unknown. Now we have a dozen of them, and are beginning to flirt with the 50,000-watt stations.

About 2,000 American ships are now equipped with wireless. It is predicted to be only a question of time until some one invents a static filter and our troubles will all be over.

With a farm population of 455,204, West Virginia has only 1,741 radio sets. Don't try to solder with a red-hot iron; it can't be done. Wait until the tool loses its cherry glow and then work with it.

Battery Wires Should Be Well Insulated

It is particularly important that the battery wires and all accessories connected to them be well insulated in all sets, as the batteries generate the strongest currents. The higher the voltage of the batteries the hotter must the insulation be, as high voltage causes more of a strain on insulators than low voltages. Bare wires, or wire covered only with thin layers of cotton or silk, should never be used between the "A" and "B" batteries and the set binding posts, as the weak insulation is likely to wear away and to cause a disastrous short circuit of the batteries which will manifest itself in the form of brilliant pyrotechnics and perhaps a few momentary flames.

Exploiting the latest slant-back draped crown is the girlish felt hat shown in the center. It is in Lanvin green with a grosgrain banding in the now-so-much-talked-of jungle green.

Again the soft brim is apparent in the model to the left below, and it is ribbon bound, this being a feature of so many of the fashionable felts.

One of the whims of fashion is for the hatband carried out in two or three tones. Felt hats often match shoes and handbags in their coloring.

Tiered Frocks
The smartest frocks for immediate wear are made of plaid tulle and have four platted tiers applied in a diagonal line on the skirt. Sleeves are long and there is a narrow scarf collar.

Madras Suiting Frocks
Sports frocks of striped madras satins are generally worn by women at the smart resorts. This material is also used for children's frocks in two-piece style.

New Sweaters
New sweaters which are very smart in pastel colors are knitted in an openwork mesh and have the round mesh and round neckline that distinguish them from last season's models.

FELT HAT STAGES COMEBACK; PARIS THINKS WELL OF PLAID

LIKE certain favorite players who perennially announce a "positively last appearance" the felt hat is successfully staging another "farewell performance." But is it "farewell"? Not from present indications. Rather is the felt hat endeavoring itself to its audience even to a greater degree than heretofore, in that it is presenting an entirely new and varied program in which artful creased crowns and cunning rippling brims are playing leading roles.

Of course when it comes to dressy millinery for dressy occasions, the mode is very explicit in that regard, insisting on a more ornate and elaborate styling than we have been accustomed to for many seasons past.

Variety in Felt Hats.

For practical wear, youthful, novel and becoming types, such as the picture shows, are quite the proper thing. There are points of outstanding interest in each of these models so carefully selected as representative of the mode. An evolution of the old-time cloche, but in softer effect, describes in a measure the first little hat. There is too inevitable a crease in the soft crown and there is also the stylish trim of grosgrain ribbon.

Perforated felt gives us something new to think about. An effective pattern is worked out on the tall model.

Two Handsome Versions of Plaid Mode.

dress and for the lining of the top-coat which itself is developed of either solid-colored velvet or cloth. Black and white plaid wools are especially featured in smart coatings. These are offset with trimmings of furs blended to the color effect of the cloth. Often the plaid presents a salt-and-pepper effect over its surface.

Ombre plaid is the very newest fabric sensation. It is especially effective in the heavy worsted materials. For instance a brown, green and beige plaid will be very dark at one edge of the cloth, grading into pale coloring at the other. The climax of elegance in these ombre plaids is reached with the interweaving of gold and silver threads.

Indifferentism
My friends were arguing about grapefruit. One said it grew on trees, another that vines produced it, still another that it grew underground like sweet potatoes. They appealed to me. I had to defend my ignorance. Shrugging my shoulders, I said: "What is it to me? I believe in letting nature take its regular breakfast course."—Kansas City Star.

United States Hospitals
There are 6,806 hospitals of all kinds in the United States, with 92,065 beds, of which 629,362 are constantly in use. In addition to these there are 34,511 bassinets, or baby cribs, for newborn infants. Thus 60 per cent of all hospital beds in the United States are constantly filled. It has been found that there is one hospital bed for every 141.5 inhabitants. The five states having the largest hospital facilities are New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, California and Massachusetts. At the end of the list are Delaware and Wyoming.

Radio in Polar Regions
The MacMillan expedition to the polar regions had radio for its only means of communication. Using low power and short wave lengths, the Hawaiian communicated with several stations in the United States while the ship was frozen in thousands of miles away. Broadcasting concerts from the United States stations were heard during the long, dark nights of the Arctic zone. The call letters were WNP, the slogan was Wireless North Pole, and the power was about 500 watts.

Mrs. Scovill Speaks

While I have taken Dr. Pierce's medicines at different times and they always were first class, I can especially speak of the 'Favorite Prescription,' having taken it as a woman's special tonic, and it was excellent.

On his recent visit to America, Dr. French designer of feminine apparel, was asked for his recipe of a successful gown. He replied: "In this day and age there is but one formula: Never leave off tomorrow what you can leave off today."

Laws and ordinances in the United States exceed 2,000,000, and a New York policeman must know 16,000 statutes.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS

Melt all bits of laundry soap and use for dishwashing, so that none is wasted. A soap shaker is liked by many housewives as it uses the small bits of soap otherwise wasted.

Embroidered pillow slips will last much longer if they are turned at night for sleeping on the wrong side. Many prefer a small pillow at night using plain slips, then the day pillows are always fresh.

When using a flat-topped oven on the gas stove keep a pan of hot water heating for various uses and warm all the dishes for the meal on top of the oven.

Save any left-over fruit juice. It is good for drinks, jellies, and added to a cornstarch mixture makes a good pie filling, for an emergency. Cover with a meringue and it will make a most appetizing pie.

A few sprays of cedar are fine for cleaning old irons when ironing. They are also good to wrap in with furs to keep the moths from troubling them.

Now that wild duck is in season, for those who have never dressed any it will be well to remind them after picking off the coarser feathers and any down that is wanted for pillows, to dip them into a basin of melted paraffin, not too hot, seeing that all is well covered, then hang to cool and harden. The paraffin may be peeled off, taking with it every tiny pin-feather, leaving the flesh clean.

Good Things to Eat

When serving consommé or light soup the following is especially good:

Bread Rings-Cut bread into rings with a doughnut cutter, after cutting the slices one inch in thickness. Brush each with butter, sprinkle with grated cheese seasoned with cayenne. Put into a moderate oven to melt the cheese and brown the rings. Serve on lace-paper covered plates.

Almond Cakes-Cream one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add one-half cupful of sugar gradually, beating well, then add the yolks of four eggs, well beaten, one-fourth of a cupful of milk and seven eighths of a cupful of flour mixed and sifted with two teaspoonsful of baking powder. Beat thoroughly and fill small paper cases two-thirds full of the mixture; sprinkle with shredded almonds and powdered sugar, place in a shallow baking pan and bake until brown.

Apricot Coupe-Drain a can of apricots and cut into small pieces. To the syrup add one-half cupful of sugar and let simmer three minutes. Add apricots and cook until the syrup is thick. Half-fill glasses with vanilla ice cream, put in a teaspoonful of apricots, cover with ice cream and garnish with strips of angelica and a few bar de cue currants.

Coconut Macaroons-Take one tablespoonful of butter, add one beaten egg, one and one-half cupfuls of nut-meat, put through the meat grinder, browned and ground, one-half cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of coconut. Mix well, drop by spoonfuls on buttered sheets and bake in a moderate oven.

Liver With Onion Sauce-Drudge thin slices of liver with seasoned flour and fry brown in pork fat. Place the liver on a hot platter. Fry a cupful of chopped onions in the fat until a light brown. Add a tablespoonful of vinegar and pour over the liver. Cold boiled rice served with sliced mushrooms and cream makes a good and simple dessert. Hot rice served with a hot chocolate sauce is another dish well liked.

Popcorn Macaroons-Take one cupful of freshly popped corn, put through the meat grinder, add one cupful of walnut meats also ground. Beat until stiff the whites of three eggs, add gradually one cupful of powdered sugar, beat well, add the nuts and corn and a little salt. Drop by spoonfuls on baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven.

Banana Salad-Cut nice ripe fruit into halves lengthwise. Lay on hot towel, cut-side down, cover with finely chopped nut meats and serve with a good rich salad dressing.

EDEN PIONEER DEAD

Mrs. Ann Flood (nee Lloyd), a pioneer resident of the town of Eden died at her home on Monday at 7 p. m. Deceased was born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. In 1864 she was married to Peter Flood. This union was blessed with ten children, three of whom preceded her in death. The funeral was held on Thursday at 10 a. m. with services in St. Mary's church, Eden. Burial was made in the congregation's cemetery.

TRUTH IN ADVERTISING!

Bill Nye, the humorist, had a cow to sell, the story goes, and advertised her as follows: "Owing to my ill health, I will sell at my residence, in township 19, range 18, according to the Government survey, one plush, raspberry cow, aged eight years. She is of undoubted courage and gives milk frequently. To one that does not fear death, in any form, she would be a great boon. She is very much attached to her present home with a stay chain, but she will be sold to anyone who will agree to treat her right. She is one-fourth shorthorn and three-fourths hyena. I will also throw in a double-barrel shotgun, which goes with her. Her name is Rose. I would rather sell her to a non-resident." The truth in dairying is that we must ever lastingly try to do better. There must be no falling off in quality or purity of milk. Building a good milk house supplied with plenty of cold water is the best investment for the dairyman to keep up quality and price.

Following is a list of those who have built new milk houses or remodelled their old ones:

Unseen Sources of Long Life

The basic sources of automobile value are not always apparent to the eye.

A motor car, like a house, may LOOK a great deal more substantial than it really is.

Because of this difficulty, more and more thousands are turning to Dodge Brothers product for insurance against disappointment.

The years have proved, and each year proves anew, that Dodge Brothers are as deeply concerned with the UNSEEN goodness of their motor car as with the seen.

The mileage it will deliver, the safety it will provide, the expense and trouble it will save the owner over a period of years, are quite as important to Dodge Brothers as the more obvious details of equipment and style.
