SENATE REFUSES TO ADMIT SMITH, VARE

Bitter Fight Ahead for Senators-Elect Is Predicted as Congress Opens.

Washington.-With the presentation of President Coolidge's message, the refusal of the senate to admit Senators-Elect Smith of Illinois and Vare of Pennsylvania, and with the complete organization of both branches, the Seventieth congress is in session, promising an especially bitter fight against the two new senators. It is predicted that adjournment will be taken for the holidays without finai action on the case of the senators-elect. It has been decided by the Democratic senators that the Vare and Smith cases should not be considered as a party issue.

Washington .- The United States senate curtly told Frank L. Smith, Republican senator-elect from Illinois, and William S. Vare, Republican senatorelect from Pennsylvania, to "stand aside" when they appeared to take the oath of office at the opening of the Seventieth congress,

The senate leaders decided in private conference to make it a longdrawn out agony for the Dwight banker and farmer and the Philadelphia politician.

At the opening session Senator George Norris, Republican from Nebraska, offiered a resolution summarily and instantly refusing Smith and Vare membership in the senate, After Mr. Coolidge's message had been read, there was offered, as a substitute for the Norris resolution, a resolution that the accused men be allowed to take the oath of office-and their seatsand that the charges against them of corrupt election practices be referred to the committee on privileges and elections.

Amid much bandying of compilments between opposition leaders and by a majority of 38, Nicholas Longworth of Ohio was re-elected speaker of the house. The total vote was 417, Longworth receiving 225, and the minority leader, Finis J. Garrett of Ten-

The swearing in of the house membership then proceeded without interruption until the Pennsylvania delaga. tion appeared before the speaker's rostrum, whereupen Minority Leader Garrett sought to exclude Representative-elect Beck from this formality.

Chairman Snell of the rules committee announced that Mr. Beck would stand uside temporarily until the swearing in had been completed. This formality over, Chairman Snell moved that Beck be sworn whereupon Mr. Garrett presented his resolution attacking the eligibility of the new Pennsylvania member. Garrett's objection to the oath being administered lost by a vote of 243 to 157.

In the caucus of the Republicans which followed adjournment of the house, a vigorous but unsuccessful fight against the placing of Representative-elect Estep of Pennsylvania on the ways and means committee was waged. Representative Walter Newton, of Minnesota, led the opposition attempting to overthrow the action of the committee on committees by contending that major assignments should not be given to new members and that the Northwest section was subordinated to Pennsylvania in committee places. The final vote on the committee's selection was unanimous.

10WA FIRST IN LIVE STOCK SHOW HONORS

32 Championships and 89 Ribbons Give State Big Lead; Ohio Is Second.

Chicago.-The state of Iowa "stole the show" in the final sessions at the International Live Stock exposition, according to a compilation of honors.

Iowa won premier honors with thirty-two champienships and eightynine ribbons, several lengths ahead of Ohlo, its nearest competitor, which had fifteen championships and forty ribbons.

Montana was away in the lead in the hay and grain division and placed with high honors in the cattle division. Canada carried off more than 50 per cent of the sheep prizes and the championship in Clydesdale horses.

The live stock ranking of states and provinces of North America is: Iowa, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Ontario, Pennsylvania, Michigan, New York, Vermont, Missouri, California, Kentucky, North Dakota, North Carolina, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Kansas, Montana. Tennessee, Wyoming, Idaho, Alberta, Manitoba, Nebraska, South Dakota, Saskatchewan, Utah, Massachusetts, West Virginia, Washington and Colorado.

One of the features of the show which attracted much attention was Samuel Insull's texhibit of Suffolk horses, from Hawthorne farm, near Libertyville. Other entries in this class were from W. J. McCallum, Regina, Saskatchewan and Brampton, Ontarie, and Alexander MacLaren, Buckingham, Quebec. Each had ten horses in his exhibit.

Canadian Clydesdales swept the boards in the draft horse divisions including the winning by Sansovina, nominated by John Sinclair of Congress, Sask., of the grand championship among stallions.

Lady Price, shown by the Experiental farm, Indian Head, Sask., was awarded the grand and senior championship for Clydesdale mares.

Ontario sheep breeders carded off the bulk of the honors in classes for a number of variety of sheep. Col. Robert McEwen of London, Ont., won the grand championship on carload lots of sheep and H. M. Lee of Highgate, Ont., made practically a clean sweep in the Lincoln sheep awards. Humphrey Snell of Clinton, Ont., repeated his achievement of last year in winning the championships in the classes for Leicesters.

At the auction sales many of the show animals changed hands. The Shorthorn average under the hammer was $596,75, while Herefords averaged $489.23 and Angus-Aberdeen $286.67. Fifty-one bulls of the three breeds realized an average of $617.45. and the ninety-nine head of cattle sold at three sales averaged $455.75.

Resistances Vary With Temperature

Why Certain Length of Wire Will Show Variation as Current Flows.

Many fans cannot understand how an all wire-wound resistance can vary with temperature. They do not grasp how a certain length of wire possessing a known value of resistance will show a variation while current is flowing through the wire.

To comprehend this phenomena certain actions must be visualized. The first is the molecular construction of the wire. It is not necessary that one know the exact position of the molecules-simply imagine any definite

Now, this formation of molecules results in the wire possessing a certain value of resistance per inch, foot or mile of wire. If the molecular structure of the wire is altered, the resistance for that inch, foot or mile of wire is changed. The more the structure is varied, the greater the change in resistance. When current is caused to pass through wire the action of the current is to heat the wire, the heat generated being dependant upon the amount of current flow. The action of the current not only heats the wire, but, in heating it, it changes the molecular formation with the result that the resistance of the wire changes.

It must be understood, however, that the molecular structure is not always altered by the heat generated in the wire. That is the elements comprising the wire may have such molecular formation that within certain limits of heat, these formations will not change appreciably, with the result that the resistance of the wire does not change with increase in temperature. Such a wire is said to possess negligible temperature coefficient and the resistance gemains practically constant over a certain range of applied watts. Such resistances are best suited in battery eliminators and electrified receivers where constant resistance is necessary under various loads.

Volume Control Now Must Have Attention

Sometimes the variable high resistance may be shunted across the antenna and ground binding posts such as the standard type clarostat or the clarostat volume control, a simple and undistorted volume control is obtained for any receiver. The resistance range must be from practically zero to several million ohms in the case of the resistor placed in the antenna lead. which appears to be the better of the two arrangements.

Determining Polarity Explained by Engineers

Two simple methods of determining battery or power supply polarity are given by Fada radio engineers. In most technical discussions of the subject the salt water test is mentioned. but the "potato test" is not generally referred to. Because of the coming o. the power units into general use this information is important Polarity is in the differentiating be tween the positive and negative poles.

The potato test is as follows: Slice an ordinary potato in halves and insert two bare wires about half an Inch into the raw potato about an inch apart. The negative wire will discolor the potato, the positive will

The sait water test is one of the usual methods of determining polarity and is very easy. Make a saturated solution of salt water with the ordinary table salt in a drintir; glass. Insert in the fluid the bare ends of the two wires about an inch part, The current flowing between the two will set up the action known as electroly sis and bubbles will rise from the neg utive wire.

Secret Transmission Is Invention of Italian

The great desideratum of privacy or secrecy in radio transmission is said to have been secured by an invention of Professor Majorana of the University of Bologna. In communication to the Royal academy at Rome he announces the success of his experiments in this direction, and it is reported that his system has worked satisfactorily between Bologna and a receiving station ten kilometers distant. The method employed by him is not fully disclosed, but it is said that it involves the use of ultra-violet

Next day, after a night spent with "Auntalmiry, Gay finds the picture has been taken from the cottage. "Rand" Wallace, wanderer, and considered something of a "black by the Islanders, expecting to find "Auntalmiry, prises Gay at household tasks. She likes him at once.

The days flew away like enchanted things. Gay had never been so happy, although she neglected her sacred canvases and brush. How could she work with Rand sprawling in the window-seat at her side, brown hand touching her hand, gray eyes holding her eyes? Every day he worked faithfully on the Bo's'n, Bemis' yacht. worked very hard for a few hours to spare himself more time to be with her, appearing at the Lone Pine every morning promptly at eleven o'clock. the hour of her late breakfast, which was breakfast and luncheon in one "So this is how one lives on nothing a year," she said to him one day, laughing. "Well, I am relieved, I know at least that you will never

The next morning he handed her a pound of the best coffee obtainable at the Pier grocery store. He was very "I may be low, but I have my pride," he said. "My coffee! And when it is gone, kindly notify me. More will be forthcoming."

"Don't forget the electricity," she reminded him gayly. "It must be a nickel a week."

And laughingly she accepted the dingy coin he selected carefully from a handful to give her.

Every day he went up the slope to the Lone Pine at sunset, that sweetest hour of the day, and sat with her in the window-seat on the west, looking down to the bay where the sky burned with fresh-blown gold and flame and amethyst, burned fiercely for a white before it paled to smoking embers, pastel shades of rose and violet and cream. And when the embers had faded to gray ash, they went into the woods, and walked up and down beneath the trees that gossiped to one another above them, and breathed deeply of the intoxicating spices of the forest-pine, and spruce,

At that hour they never talked, but wandered slowly here and there, stumbling sometimes over the twisted old roots of trees or fallen logs, slidthe over treacherous rocks, holding hands like children, smiling at each

One night they lingered long in the forest, so that dusk was blackening the shadows when they turned up behind the Little club, ir that pathless hit of the wood. As they went on. laughing softly, and stumbling, suddealy, without a sound, they came up to one who was walking toward them. swiftly, surely, toward the shore.

All feet fall softly on the thick pillowing of pine needles and dry mosses, but those feet that came to meet them nade no sound at all. As they came together, Gay looked up. with keen but friendly interest to see who walked in her-enchanted wood at nightfall, and then she caught her breath with a sudden startled intake.

The face that she saw in the dusk was sharply familiar, unmistakable, a thin little face that showed yellow in the gloaming, like yellow parchment, with narrow, sloping a mond eyes, and beneath one of them a faint shining mark, like a seam in the parchment, where a scar seared the flesh, the face of a yellow, little old Chinaman.

In the dusk, as she had seen it before, she saw it again, and in the fraction of a moment, the dusk received him again, noiselessly, as it had received him before.

Gay had not by any means forgotten her first night on the island: when she lay alone in the cottage on the fringe of the woods in her great exhaustion of mind and physical wearlness; when, sleeping, she had seemed to feel a gaze upon her, and stirred to see, or think she saw, the thin yellow face in the gloaming; and had turned again to her sleep, saying dreamily it was but a dream. She had, however, made inquiry casually, and had been told there were no resident Chinese on the Island, but that, on rare occasion, one came on errand from Portland, for the delivery of packages, perhaps, or a day's work. It was only as in a dream that she had remembered the face. But now, with sudden fear, Gay knew it was no dream. She waited for Rand to come up to her.

Although Gay realized that the Females Wallace, as he affectionately called them, must no doubt long since have told Rand the story of the affair in the cove as they knew it, he had never referred to it by word or by suggestion. It was that innate courtesy, that delicate New England reserve, which held sacred from refer-

There was no sound from the wild growth of brush that lay so thickly about them, no faintest crackle of dried, dead, crumbling needles of pine, but as Gay finished speaking, a dark shadow slipped away, almost from beneath her hand, slipped away, shadow ike, and melted with the other snadows. And neither Gay nor Rand suspected one shadow more or less among the many on either side.

Even when the Bo's'n was ready at ast for the trip down the coast, Rand put off his departure as long as he could, and when further delay was impossible, he sent his bags aboard, and with all in readiness for sailing, with the two men chosen for his crew aboard, he slowly climbed the bill for a final breakfast with Gay at eleven o'clock.

Gay was very wistful, very sad. She could not eat, although the breakfast tray for two was most enticingly arrayed. Over her cup of coffee her eyes clung to Rand's eyes, very large, very deep, darkly troubled.

"Rand, please eat," she begged You will be very hungry before night! Eat, please eat!"

"Gay, I can't. For the first time in my life, my appetite was all filled up before I began. I hate to go and leave you. Gay, you aren't thinking of going away the first of September, are you? "The weather! Are you staying for the weather?"

Gay shook her head. No-for Rand stood up suddenly, and Gay too, rose slowly. Hand in hand they crossed the pleasant room to the door that opened down upon the bay where the Bo's'n waited for Rand, to take him away. "I kissed you when I came the first time," he said softly, "wouldn't it rather 'urt your feelings if I went away-less affectionalely?"

Gas nodded. "Terribly. I should think you didn't like it." Rand took her in his arms, and kissed her, not once, but many times. "Were you ever in love before Rand?" Gay asked softly. "Well-yes," he admitted hesitat ingly. "Er-weren't you?"

"Well - yes," she acknowledged. smiling faintly. "But never like this. Rand, never like this."

Her cool, firm, slender fingers ca ressed his hair, touched his lips, cradled the curve of his chin.

"Rand," she whispered. "Rand." At three o'clock, with smiling tremulous lips, and tears streaming down her face, but laughing, Gay stood in the highest window of the Lone Pine. and blew a kiss to the wind as Rand turned the Bo's'n east, to sea.

With the first of September came the breaking up of the sum.ner colony. Gay was grateful for the sitence after the clamor of young voices. twanging ukuleles, whining saxophones. Adorable, waiting alone at the top of the hill, for Rand to come! If sometimes she was troubled by a vague presentiment, a prophetic suggestion that all her future life would be something like that, waiting for Rand, she stilled it resolutely. She felt that it was doubly sweet to be alone in awaiting his return, that of all the summer colory, she alone remained, waiting. There was a point high on the rocks to the east of the Little club where she often sat by the hour, chin in hand, gazing dreamily off to sea, Rand would not return that way. He would come by fastest State-of-Maine express, but it was the way he had gone, and so intrigued her fancy.

Chin in hand, eyes misty with dreams, thoughts far away to sea in the south, she sat one day when a voice called up to her from a lower place among the rocks.

"Miss Delane! May I come up?" Gny turned quickly, and her eyes contracted wonderingly. She smiled. It was the man she had directed to the landing on the fateful day of her discovery in the cove.

"Come up, by all means," she said

And as he came up, climbing carefully and with a caution that spoke of little custom, she gave him her hand in greeting. "How in the world did you know my name?" she asked interestedly. "Oh, Gay Delane! It was on your sketch book that day. Do tell me-1

-whatever came of it all? Did the police trace him? Did you ever get back the little sketch, and-"

Very briefly she told him of the disappearance of the sketch.

"Are-are you sure?" he asked doubtfully; almost, it seemed to her, quizzically. "It seems-very-well, unnatural, you know. Why, nobody knew about it- Didn't you drop the book? Couldn't it have fallen out? It seems-"

"Now, don't you think I am crazy," she said with some heat. "Everybody else does. But I am trusting you to trust me." "I will trust you," he said quickly,

"I do. It was bad luck all the way round, and I'm sorry. I wish I had taken the sketch from you by main force. I hate that worst of all, losing the sketch. Do you remember the hand-very fine-" "Don't," she said. "Don't talk of

It. I should have done something for that poor boy-but what could I do!" "Don't think of it. Let's talk of something else.-Are you remaining long on the island? It seems very quiet here now. The summer people have gone, have they not?"

in spite of her best efforts, feeling the curious interest of his eyes, and his words, Gay felt ber face tlush for her lingering.

"I was worn out," she explained quickly, "I had to have a long rest. shall stay a little longer-a week or two perhaps. While the weather is nice. I like it better now the summer crowd is gone. Just the pice, good, religious natives are left. And me. I like it. But I did not expect to see you here again."

"I wish I could say I had come only to see you," he said, "but I am afraid I dare not go so far. As a matter of fact, I have fearned that they are anticipating rather a land boom around here in the next two or three years. and my partner and I are hoping to pick up something for a song, and sell it after a bit for a-well, a grand opera. I am scouting out the land."

"How interesting. How very interesting!" Gay stood up suddenly. "You offered me tea before, and I refused. I am bolder now, Will you tea with me? And tell me about it."

They passed back over the rocks and into the woods, skirting the Little club, in silence. "I shall have to take a peep at some of your private papers, I think," Gay said smilingly, as she led the way into the Lone Pine. "Or shall I call you

"Ingram, Ronald Ingram-I beg your pardon. I seem to feel that 1 know you so well I quite forgot you "Well, Mr Ingram, welcome to the Lone Pine. There is something about you-something New Yorky - that makes me tingle for Times square." They were chatting companionably over their tea, chatting of work, of aims and interests, the big things of life, when Auntalmiry came to the door. She came intentionally, knowing there was a guest; Gay knew that at once, realized it with a vague resentment, although knowing it was not like the little old woman to intrude. She was dressed for the occasion, in her best black Sunday silk, with her coral cameo at her throat. There was a flush of excitement in her cheeks, and as she stepped into the room, not glancing at Gay, she swept Ronald Ingram with an eager breathless gaze.

"Oh, Mrs. Bridges, this is Mr. Ingram," Gay said lightly, "Mrs. Bridges, for company," she explained laughingly. "Auntalmiry to all us home-folks. Sit down, Auntalmiry; tea's nice and hot."

"Yes-yes, I will." A little later Mr. Ingram went away with many warm and pleasant words, and with a last light lingering touch on Gay's hand. Their eyes met, understandingly, as they smiled farewell. When Gay returned to Auntalmiry she was sitting wilted slightly in the chair, and her face was sad.

"Gny, you will excuse me, won't you? For coming like that, when you had company. I saw him on the plazza-a stranger-and I thought maybe Buddy had come."

"Buddy? Do you mean Rand?" "No. Buddy-my son, Buddy"

"Auntalmiry, your son! Have you a son? Oh, I didn't know you had a son. Why didn't you tell me?"

"Yes, Buddy, my son, I didn't tell you, dearie, because-we aren't like that, We just hold things in our nearts, sad things, and say nothing. The glad things, too, perhaps, too n.uch. Chief Executive Deals With Prosperity and Peace in Message to Congress.

Washington.-The text of the President's message, in part, delivered to congress, follows:

It is gratifying to report that for the fourth consecutive year the state of the union in general is good. We are at peace. The country as a whole has had a prosperity never exceeded.

Wages are at their highest range, employment is plentiful. Some parts of agriculture and industry have lagged; some localities have suffered from storm and flood. But such losses have been absorbed without serious detriment to our great economic struc-

Stocks of goods are moderate and wholesome caution is prevalent. Rates of interest for industry, agriculture and government have been reduced. Savers and investors are providing capital for new construction in industry and public works. The purchasing power of agriculture has increased.

If the people maintain that confidence which they are entitled to have in themselves, in each other and in America, a comfortable prosperity will

Stern Self-Denial Is Urged.

Without constructive economy in government expenditures we should not now be enjoying these results or these prospects. Because we are not now physically at war, some people are disposed to forget that our war debt still remains. The nation must make financial sacrifices, accompanied by a stern self-denial in public expenditures, until we have conquered the disabilities of our public finance. While our obligation to veterans and dependents is large and continuing, the heavier burden of the national debt is being steadily eliminated. At the end of this fiscal year it will be reduced from about $26,600,000,000 to about $17.975,000,000. Annual interest, including war savings, will have been reduced from $1,955,000,000 to $670,000,000.

The sacrifice of the people, the economy of the government, are showing remarkable results. They should be continued for the purpose of relieving the nation of the burden of interest and debt and releasing revenue for internal improvements and national development.

Not only the amount, but the rate. of government interest has been reduced. Callable bonds have been refunded and paid, so that during this year the average rate of interest on the present public debt for the first time fell below 4 per cent. Keeping the credit of the nation high is a tremendously profitable operation.

.The immediate fruit of economy and the retirement of the public debt

The annual saving in interest between 1925 and 1929 is $212,000,000. Without this no bill to relieve the taxpayers would be worth proposing.

leave our government revenues where they are not oppressive. Exemptions have been increased until 115,000,000 people make but 2,500,000 individual taxable returns, so that further reduction should be mainly for the purpose of removing inequalities.

The secretary of the treasury has recommended a measure which would give us a much better balanced system of taxation and without oppresston produce sufficient revenue. It has my complete support.

Probable Surplus Small.

Unforeseen contingencies requiring money are always arising. Our prob-

The people ought to take no selfish her eyes, the flush died in her cheeks. attitude of pressing for removing moderate and fair taxes which might produce a deficit. We must keep our budget balanced for each year. That is the corner stone of our national eredit, the triffing price we pay to command the lowest rate of interest of any great power in the world. Any surplus can be applied to debt reduction, and debt reduction is tax reduc-

Under the present circumstances it would be far better to leave the rates as they are than to enact a bill carrying the peril of a deficit. This is not a problem to be approached in a narrow or partisan spirit. All of these who participate in finding a reasonable solution will be entitled to participate in any credit that accrues from it without regard to party. The congress has already demonstrated that tax legislation can be removed from purely political consideration into the realm of patriotic business principles.

Any bill for tax reduction should be written by those who are responsible for raising, managing and expending the finances of the government.

For National Defense. Being a nation relying not on force, but on fair dealing and good will, to maintain peace with others, we have provided a moderate military force in a form adapted solely to defense.

It should be continued with a very generous supply of officers and with the present base of personnel, subject to fluctuations which may be temporarily desirable. The five-year program for our air forces is in keeping with this same chief function in serving agriculture. The Mississippi Disaster, For many years the federal government has been building a system of dikes along the Mississippi river for protection against high water. During the last season the lower states were overcome by a most disastrous flood. Many thousands of square miles were inundated, a great many lives were lost, much live stock was drowned, and a very heavy destruction | to you." of property was inflicted upon the inhabitants.

The people in the flooded area and their representatives have appreached this problem in the most generous and broadminded way. They should be met with a like spirit on the part of the national government.

No required relief should be refused. An adequate plan should be adopted to prevent a recurrence of this disaster in order that the people may restore to productivity and comfort their fields and their towns.

Legislation is desirable for the construction of a dam at Boulder canyon on the Colorado river, primarily as a method of flood centrol and irrigation. A secondary result would be a considerable power development and a source of domestic water supply for southern California.

The miners themselves are now seeking information and action from the government which could readily be secured through such a board.

It is believed that a thorough investigation and reconsideration of this proposed policy by the congress will demonstrate that this recommendation is sound and should be adopted.

It has been suggested that the various governmental agencies now dealing with veterans' relief be consolidated. This would bring many advantages. It is recommended that the proper committee of the congress make a thorough survey of this subject, in order to determine if legisla-

It is the policy of the United States to promote peace. We are a peaceful people and committed to the settling of disputes by amicable adjustment rather than by force. We have believed that peace can best be secured by a faithful observance on our part of the principles of international law, accompanied by patience and conciliation, and requiring of others a like treatment for ourselves.

We should centinue to promote peace by our example, and fortify it by such international covenants against war as we are permitted under our Constitution to make.

Horse Saved Companion

The spectacle of a young horse towing an old companion through the flood waters near Burlington, Vt., was witnessed by refugees on higher ground, according to an Associated Press dispatch. As the horses struggled, the old horse finally began to falter, slowed up and started to sink. The young horse, swimming beside him, paused as if uncertain what to do. Suddenly the black head reappeared above the crest of the flood and the old animal set his teeth in the young gray's mane. With a mighty tug the young horse started again for the bank, towing his exhausted companion. At last he reached shallow water and human friends drew both animals ashore.

Toy Balloon Went Far

A tiny toy halloon made a 300-mile air "hop" in three days. The craft took the air one Saturday night, according to its owner, O. C. Inman of Nashville, Tenn. Inman tied a slip of paper to the balloon asking the finder to write to him. After a week had gone by, Inman received a tetter from Hubert Mitchell of Lavonia, Ga., 300 miles away. It read: "I found a balloon about one mile out of Lavonia one afternoon with your address on it. It had a small hole in the bottom and looked as if it had been melted by heat. It came down at sundown in a pasture."

Japanese are very fond of soft drinks and ice cream, and the setting up of soda fountains is increasing each year, according to Halleck A. Butts, Tokyo, commercial attache. It is believed that there are about 25 to 30 soda fountains in Tokyo alone. Although this seems to be a small number in comparison with the number in operation in an American city of the same size, it shows a large gain within the last two or three years. Most of the soda fountains in use at present are of American make.

This being very much of a black and a white season in Paris, it follows that black satin styled with utmost simplicity has become the idol of fashionables for daytime wear. The model in the picture is a representative type of all that is best among high-class costumes. Notice that the skirt is tiered and then draped at one side, which is a very popular styling this season.

The other charming gown is beige and it accents the effectiveness of crepe satin used in reverse. This girlish model is two-piece and its satin (shiny side out) skirt has just enough of a flare to be stylish. The blouse cleverly alternates the luster and the

ATWATER KENT RADIO

Tremendous saving in the world's finest radio

EVEN before these new 1928 low prices were announced, Atwater Kent Radio was overwhelmingly preferred in rural homes.

NOW the always moderate prices of Atwater Kent ONE Dial Receivers and Radio Speakers are still lower. NOW the radio that most farm families prefer, as proved over and over again by their words, is within the reach of thousands and thousands of families who still thought the prices of really good radio were a little high.

Universal demand has enabled the largest radio factory to put the economies of big production into effect. At the same time our radio has been greatly improved in performance.

Much better radio-at much lower priceswith Christmas just ahead! Let the nearest Atwater Kent dealer show you.

Scheduling of the race, which marks resumption of athletic relations beween the upstate institutions in every major sport except football, was made known when the American Rowing association, comprising representatives of all the Eastern colleges which support crews, met to arrange schedules for 1928.

Unique Coaching Plan

Penn's football coaching system apparently believes in using all the inventions possible for efficiency. WHITE SOX END SEASON OF WOE

Schalk's Team Followed by Misfortune From Start of Training Season.

If there was one team in the mafor leagues which was glad when the 1927 baseball season ended it was the Chicago White Sox.

Although some teams finished farther down than Ray Schalk's outfit, there are few of them that experienced the misfortunes which befell the White Sox. To begin with Johnny Mostil, known to ball players as Melancholy John, and one of the best outfielders in the business, was seized with one of his fits of melancholy in the spring and an attempt at suicide climaxed it. Shortly after the season got under way Schalk's pitchers hit a fine stride and things looked rosy-but not for long, the reason being that the team couldn't hit. The Sox hit their batting slump around June 1 and despite every possible maneuver by Schalk, it may be said that the Chicago team never got out of that slump. Then came an avalanche of ball games lost by one run. Naturally the

> 6822 Deaths from Whooping Cough

Whooping cough is the most neglected of children's diseases, and one of the most dangerous. There are 6822 deaths reported in a single year in the United States from this disease. There is no cure for whooping cough, it usually runs its course, but relief can be given and its duration shortened. A few drops of Dr. Drake's Glessco will relieve the most violent paroxysms of coughing, and given regularly it will lessen the severity of the attacks and bring quicker recovery. The income from your dairy herd depends entirely upon the productiveness of your herd. Carry along a bunch of non-producers and they will eat up the profits from the producers. It is not our intention to dwell on the subject of more dairying, but rather better dairying. If it is possible for our patrons to derive more profit from three-fourths of their herd, than from the entire herd we believe it is good business for them to do so. Certainly it is not profitable to feed a bunch of boarders that eat as much hay and grain and require as much care, as the good ones of your herd. There is only one sure way to find out which are your real producers, and that is by having your herd tested regular. ly. Join a testing association.
